MINERS ARE ENTOMBED

Two Hundred and Thirty-Four Lives Snuffed Out

EXPLOSION OF FIRE DAMP

Wrecked Entrances to Mine In a Wyoming Town and Buried Alive Those Who Were Not Killed Outright—Mine Was Dangerous

Hanna, Wyo., July 1.—An explosion of fire-damp in Mine No. 1 of the Union Pacific Coal company at this place snuffed out the lives of 234 men, injured scores of others, and caused the destruction of a vast amount of property.

The explosion completely shattered the timbers of the main shaft and numerous entrances, filling the working with debris, and those of the miners that were not killed outright by the explosion were buried alive. The explosion was heard for many miles around and attracted people from the adjoining settlements. Huge timbers and railroad iron were hurled 300 feet from the mouth of the shaft.

Horses and scrapers were put at work hauling debris from the shaft. The work is progressing slowly, owing to the narrow space in which the rescuers are compelled to operate. A party of rescuers reached four mules that were alive and this caused renewed hope. It is a faint hope, however, for experienced mine bosses and miners say that when the imprisoned men are reached all will be found dead. Some of the miners who escaped say they saw 20 dead bodies in entry No. 17. They reported that many of the men were crazed by the explosion and ran hither and thither in the mine. Many of these could have escaped but they lay down, buried their faces in their hands and gave up the fight. Of the 234 dead about 175 were married and had large families. About 100 were Finlanders, 50 were colored and the others were Americans.

Two hundred and eighty-two men went down in the mine at 7 o'clock in the morning and only 48 have been accounted for. Of this number two are dead. The rescuers were unable to penetrate far into the mine, as it was necessary to make another opening to permit fresh air to reach the lower levels.

The Hanna mines are among the best on the Union Pacific system, being established in 1878. The town was named for Senator Mark Hanna when he was a member of the Union Pacific company. Mine No. 1 is practically a new property. It has 26 entries, 15 miles of workings and a main shaft 1½ miles in length. The mine has been recognized as a dangerous property for some time on account of the large amount of gas, but the system of ventilation has been so good that an accident was not anticipated.

Shoe Manufacturer Missing

Haverhill, Mass., July 1.—Edwin F. Lang, one of the best known shoe manufacturers here, left home, ostensibly for a day's outing, last Wednesday. Two days later Mrs. Lang received, she says, a letter from him in which he stated that he had left Haverhill for good. The firm of Lang & Bertsch was the first to give up the Boot and Shoe Workers' stamp during the recent labor troubles here.

Forbes Knocked Out

Memphis, July 1.—Johnny Regan of St. Louis last night defeated Clarence Forbes of Chicago in the seventh round of what was to have been a 20-round go. The contest was held on the Mississippi river in a floating arena. In the sixth round Forbes became groggy. He was floored for the count in the seventh and his seconds threw up the sponge.

Relief For President Schwab

New York, July 1.—Reports prevalent for months past that Charles M. Schwab would retire from the presidency of the United States Steel corporation culminated in the appointment as assistant to the president of W. E. Corey, president of the Carnegie Steel company, in consequence of the continued ill-health of the president.

Wholesale Poisoning of Children

A RIPE OLD AGE

Prominent Men Take Part In Lancaster's 250th Anniversary

Lancaster, Mass., July 1.—With exercises befitting the dignity of its advanced age this town celebrated the 250th anniversary of its incorporation. Within the borders of the town were two United States senators, Senator Hoar of Massachusetts and Senator Fairbanks of Indiana, and the governor of the commonwealth. There were also numerous other men who have won fame outside Lancaster, but who still call the beautiful little Worcester county town "home."

After literary exercises a procession to the banquet tent was formed. In the lead was a band. Following it came the firemen and veteran soldiers of the town. Next came the governor and Rev. Dr. Bartol, following these in order were Senator Hoar and Senator Fairbanks, Rev. D. B. Scott, Rev. John J. O'Keefe, President Adams and Samuel Abbott of the Massachusetts Historical society, Stephen Salisbury and others of the American Antiquarian society, delegates from the Historic Genealogical society, representatives of Bolton, Harvard, Leominster, Boylston, Berlin, Sterling and Clinton, officers of the day and invited guests. Attorney General Parker presided at the banquet. Among the speakers were Governor Bates, Senator Hoar, ex-Governor Boutwell, Henry Nourse, Senator Fairbanks and others.

After the banquet in the tent the visitors again congregated at the town house green to listen to a band concert. The celebration was brought to a close by an elaborate display of fireworks.

Made Too Many Arrests

New York, July 1.—Summons have been issued by Magistrate Breen for Police Inspector Smith, Captain Hogan and two patrolmen to appear in court and explain the 575 arrests made in a poolroom raid last Friday. The 575 arrests were made on warrants for less than 25 persons and it is contended that the police had no right to arrest more persons than they had warrants for. The hearing was set for Tuesday next. Commissioner Green announces that he has sent a formal letter to Inspector Smith, in which he says he disapproved of the wholesale arrests.

Killed by Discharged Employe

Austin, [illegible] 1.—Frenzied by supposed wrongs, W. G. Hill, a former attache of the state comptroller's office, entered the private office of Comptroller Love and killed him by shooting him twice. As Hill turned to flee he was intercepted by Chief Clerk Stevens and in the scuffle Hill's revolver was exploded. The bullet entered Hill's abdomen causing death. Hill had been an employe of the comptroller's office for 10 years preceding Love's term of office. He was discharged by Love when the latter took charge.

"Brimstone Corner" May Be Sold

Boston, July 1.—The Park Street church members last night voted to delegate all power to the Park Street society to improve or sell the church property. This means that the property may yet be converted to business purposes. The Park Street church was sold several months ago to a syndicate of real estate men for $1,250,000, but there was such a protest against abandoning "Brimstone corner" to secular uses that the syndicate relinquished its undertaking.

Hot Battle of Featherweights

San Francisco, July 1.—Benny Yanger, the Chicago featherweight, and Eddie Hanlon of California fought 20 rounds to a draw here last night. From start to finish the boys were at it hammer and tongs, first the one and then the other getting the honors. Both showed great recuperative powers, as well as ability to take punishment and when the battle ended they were fighting like demons. The referee had difficulty in separating them.

Schooner Struck Iceberg

North Sydney, N. S., July 1.—The American schooner George Parker has arrived at St. Johns for repairs. She was in collision with an iceberg, had three feet of planking above the water line stove in and forefoot and stem plate badly damaged. She has 20,000 pounds of halibut aboard.

SHIP TRUST INSOLVENT.

Judge Kirkpatrick Will Appoint One or Two Receivers Today.

Newark, N. J., July 1.—Judge Kirkpatrick announced to counsel representing complaining bondholders of the United States Shipbuilding company that he had read all the papers in the case and had decided that the corporation is insolvent, and that its directors had failed to take proper steps to protect the bondholders, and seemed to be without ability to raise funds. "Therefore, in the interest of the bondholders, both those who appear as complainants and all the others, I shall appoint receivers. I will hear counsel as to whom they may desire to name."

Charles C. Deming for the defendant corporation asked if it was not possible to postpone consideration of the actual appointment, but both Samuel Untermyer and H. V. Lindabury objected. It was finally agreed that the order should be signed immediately, and that counsel would have until today to agree upon a suitable person for appointment, but if no agreement is reached the court will name the receiver.

Judge Kirkpatrick's opinion enters very fully into the merits of the controversy. After showing that the corporation is without funds; that the directors are unable to raise money upon the corporation credit to meet maturing obligations, and that it is therefore insolvent, the judge goes on to say:

"It would appear that the directors of the company have abdicated their powers, and that the company is drifting along without any guidance. Not only are the directors not striving to relieve the company from embarrassments, but they are advising the stockholders to submit to numerous extortions to procure present funds and threatening foreclosure to those bondholders who refuse to relinquish the security of their mortgage. These people are entitled to the protection of the court and that protection can only be had by the interference of the court and the appointment of a receiver."

Referring to the affidavits filed by the directors the court says.

"If taken literally they would have a tendency to mislead the court. As, for instance, Mr. Gary admits the truth of the statement attributed to him in the complainants' bill, that the bills payable of the shipbuilding company maturing between now and Aug. 1 next, independent of maturing accounts current, are $410,021.14, but says that liability arises from an endorsement of the notes of the constituent companies, and that all of the maturing and pressing accounts in the bill, and mentioned in his statement therein referred to, are obligations incurred by the constituent companies and are not acts chargeable to the United States Shipbuilding company, or that it is liable for them, and adds that there are no notes or bills payable against the United States Shipbuilding company.

"Mr. Hyde, the vice president and general manager of the Bath iron works, whose affidavit is also annexed, says that in order to carry on the ordinary business of the company, which is one of the constituent companies of the defendant corporation, they have been obliged to borrow money from local banks on their promissory notes, bearing the endorsement of the United States Shipbuilding company."

Counsel argued for nearly three hours over the form of the order and finally agreed upon terms which will give the appointee or appointees, who will be named today, absolute authority over the trust property and the properties of the subsidiary companies.

Chicago House Takes Boston Bank

Boston, July 1.—Following close upon the consolidation of the First and Massachusetts National banks comes the news that the old and conservative Mt. Vernon National bank has changed hands. Good Afternoon

From a sentimental standpoint "Presidents Square" would be a good name for the streets about the First church, but "City Square" is better from a business standpoint. City Square is not confined to the immediate neighborhood of the church but includes most of the business centre of the city. In a city it does not sound well to speak of going to "the Centre" as was once in vogue. Presidents square is too long, and would be curtailed to "the Square" as formerly.

The suggestion of the playground at Atlantic for the new school lot, and the old school lot as a playground meets with some favor. It is recognized that a handsome school house near the station will improve the appearance of Atlantic. The tendency of all the residents of Atlantic is toward the depot, and to go in the opposite direction seems longer even if it is not. Then in the winter the roads near the depot will be broken out quicker than the streets around Faxon road. Undoubtedly the playground lot is the most central and most accessible. The area of the school lot is about 67,759 square feet, and of the playground about 123,000 square feet.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Ours is a goverment of liberty by, through and under the law. No man is above it, and no man below it. The crime of cunning, the crime of greed, the crime of violence, are all equally crimes, and against them all alike the law must set its face. This is not, and never shall be, a goverment either of a plutocracy or of a mob. It is, it has been, and it will be, a goverment of the people; including alike the people of great wealth, the people who employ others, the people who are employed, the wage-worker, the lawyer, the mechanic, the banker, the farmer; including them all, protecting each and every one if he acts decently and squarely, and discriminating against any one of them, no matter from what class he comes, if he does not act squarely and fairly, if he does not obey the law.—President Roosevelt at Butte, Montana.

☞ Thrones are secure, nowadays, only where monarchs conduct themselves with discretion and with a regard to public interest. The King of England, the Emperors of Germany, Austria, and Russia, the King of Italy, and the Queen of the Netherlands, are marked examples of rulers who serve public interest with fidelity, and avoid doing that which would alienate or antagonize the people over whom they reign. Alexander's position in Servia was like that of some strange adventurer, temporarily exercising power as dictator over some so-called republic of Latin America, rather than like that of a stably placed constitutional sovereign.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Reviews of Reviews.

—An Englishman has found a most unique use for electricity; he has produced an electric pickpocket alarm.

INTIMIDATION CASE.

The cases of Charles L. Bean, secretary of the Carpenters Union, for intimidiating two workmen of W. F. Stedman, was heard this morning.

Mr. Stedman was the first witness. He testified that he met Bean near the National Sailors Home and showed him letters written to Peter Swanson and Fred Johnson which Bean admitted having written. Asked Bean what he meant by ordering my men out, he said he had not ordered them, but had requested them to leave. He expected they would leave if they were good union men. Asked him if they refused if they would have to leave the union, he replied that is the size of it. The letters were offered; in substance they read.

It was reported at the last meeting that you had gone to work for W. F. Stedman. It was voted that I write you to ask Mr. Stedman to sign our agreement. If he does not you are requested to leave his employment.

This letter was signed by C. L. Bean, as secretary. One of these was sent to Peter Swansen, and the other to Fred Swanson.

Peter Swanson testified to receiving the letter and to leaving the job as the union requested. Witness did not remember that he had told counsel for the government that if he did not leave Mr. Stedman's employ he expected something would happen. Witness said he was guessing when he left Mr. Stedman and when he was in counsel's office.

Fred Johnson worked for Stedman for six years. Left him May 28 in consequence of letter received from C. L. Bean. Had no talk with Bean.

W. F. Stedman recalled said he was present in counsel's office when Swanson stated that if he did not leave Mr. Stedman's employ he expected something would happen.

No testimony was offered by the defendant.

Hewitson Associates.

The Edward Hewitson Associates held their last meeting at the residence of Gordon Gannett Tuesday evening. The meeting was called to order by the president and the secretary's and treasurer's report was read and accepted. Mr. Gannett gave a brief outline of the work and success of the club for the past season for the benefit of those members who had been absent. He expressed the desire that the club would cooperate in making the coming year a success, and hoped to have the helpful services of Mr. Follett another year. After the business meeting, as no speaker had been secured, President Gannett called for impromptu speeches from members of the club who had been away at college during the year. They succeeded in entertaining the company with personal experiences. After enjoying social intercourse, singing college songs and playing games, the young men were invited to the dining room to partake of frappe and cakes. The meeting adjourned at ten o'clock.

Member of Choir.

Jennie Maria Anderson, daughter of Mr. John W. Anderson of 11 Centre street, died this morning at 8 o'clock at the Baptist Hospital in Boston. She was born in Finland, Sept. 4, 1887, and has been in Quincy since she was one year old. She has been organist of the Sunday school of the Swedish Congregational church for the last two years.

The funeral services will be held in the church on Garfield street, Thursday at 4 P. M. Rev. Aug. Swanstrom will conduct the services, and the choir, of which she was a member, will sing. The pallbearers will be six young girls from the Sunday school.

Ladies Day.

The Norfolk Ministereal Association of the Congregational Churches observed ladies' day Tuesday at Randolph. Rev. E. N. Hardy of Quincy was moderator of the meeting. The exercises consisted of a sermon by Rev. L. P. Ettwood of So. Weymouth, a paper on the "Mission Work of the Young People of the Churches" by Mrs. H. E. Brace of Stoughton; and an address on "The Union of the Denominations" by Rev. J. H. Hamilton of Cambridge. The literary exercises were followed by a dinner and a trolley trip to Blue Hills.

Pupils' Recital.

On Monday aftrenoon, Miss Ella Ames Horton of Atlantic gave a pupils' recital at her Boston studio, 123 Tremont street. Pupils from Atlantic, Waltham, South Boston, and East Braintree took part. Without exception the work was well done, and mention should be made of the fact that the majority of the pupils played without notes, which shows the careful training by Miss Horton, and the interest manifested by her pupils.

THE CITY NINE.

The Merrymounts Will be Up Against It on the Fourth.

The Merrymounts hesitated some upon the proposition to play the city employes nine on the morning of July 4, as they thought it would be too much one sided, but when the makeup of the nine is looked over carefully it will be readily seen it is no mean team that they will be up against them.

Measurer of Grain, H. E. Crane of Amherst, will play third.

Councilman Hughes, formerly of the West Quincys and St. Marys, an all round athletic, will be at short.

The battery will be the strong point of the team. Officer Frank E. Burrell, whose fame as a ball player is known far and wide, will catch, and Councilman Reardon, formerly of the West Quincys and Institutes of Weymouth, will pitch.

City Engineer "Ham" Flood will substitute, and Jed Gleason will keep score.

Mayor Bryant will umpire the game.

ATLANTIC SCHOOL.

A Graduate Who Would Enlarge Present Building.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

The location of the new schoolhouse is creating no end of discussion. One of the recent suggestions, is that the building be near the Atlantic station. Such a proposal could only come from one who has never tried to read aloud while a train is thundering by.

The requisites for healthful minds and bodies of school children are green grass, fresh air and peaceful influences. The Atlantic playground is barren as Sahara, the air polluted by cinders and smoke from the cars, the atmosphere surrounding it distractiug in every sense.

During school hours it would be a question which could be heard, the rattle of the trains, the whizzing of the electric cars, or the recitations of the pupils. At recess, how easy for a child to run to the track—especially the younger ones.

Of course the teachers in the Quincy school are known to be exemplary, and yet what a temptation to glance out of the window and wonder what Mrs. So and So could possibly be going off at that hour for, and how Mr. X could afford to loaf when he had such a family. Not that the teachers are over curious, but natural curiosity cannot withstand some things. Where a teacher has nothing to see but the pupils, so much the better for the pupils. A school house has no right to be near a station; the distance between them cannot be too great for the benefit of the scholars.

As for the lot on Faxon road it is surprising that no father of children living over the bridge has entered a complaint. That location is anything but central. And what a handy place for the beach. One could not blame a truant on a hot day at high tide.

Take it all in all, where is there a better site for the school building than where it is at present? It has stood many, many years and turned out as bright and promising pupils as any school in Quincy. The situation is high, the surroundings pleasant, the location unquestionably central.

The spirit of change which enters every civilized community sooner or later, should not enter it except for the good of the ward at large. Why not take the money appropriated for building a new structure and fix up the old one? Let the grounds be laid out for games which will be an incentive for children to hurry to the school yard from their homes instead of loitering on the street until the last second. And what is the matter with a gymnasium? The boys and girls are none too young to strengthen their muscles, and let love of sport supplant their love of mischief.

With an enlargement and some remodeling, the old school house will stand for many years to come. If Quincy is willing to appropriate money to Ward Six, why not take a little now and wait until the ward really stands in need of the rest before taking advantage of its help. Graduate.

No Quorum.

Lack of a quorum, prevented the regular meeting of the School Committee from being held Tuesday evening. Several of the members of the committee are out of town.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The historic mansion on the Place des Vosges, Paris, in which Victor Hugo spent the most active years of his life, has been formally presented to the municipality of Paris by kin of the great author. The event attracted widespread interest in literary circles.

The Congregational Education society has voted to purchase, at a cost of $6600, nine acres of land just outside of the city limits of Atlanta, Ga., for the site of a theological seminary.

An electric car struck and killed an unknown man who was lying on the track at Methuen, Mass.

Cost Gas Company Quite a Sum

Boston, July 1.—Settlements of claims growing out of the so-called subway explosion on March 4, 1897, have been finished and the aggregate is $475,063.12. The statute of limitation prevents the bringing of further suits. The total amount of the damages claimed by the entire corps of litigants considerably exceeded $2,000,000 and the aggregate amount paid out in settlement is less than one-fifth. The gas company was found to be alone to blame. In the explosion several persons were killed, scores hurt and much property damaged.

Partial Prohibition

Bangor, Me., July 1.—The principal hotels, some of the leading retail liquor dealers, and one wholesaler closed their bars last night and it is announced that they will remain closed indefinitely, the proprietors not caring to take the risk of getting jail sentences at the August term of court, which they consider will certainly follow the renewal of their United States special tax stamps. The majority of the retailers will continue in business and there is no prospect of a drought until the sitting of the grand jury in August.

Failure Was Unlooked For

Boston, July 1.—Charles A. Gleason, who has been proprietor of the Hotel Somerset since it was built, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $150,666.43, with no assets. The failure has created a great deal of surprise among Boston hotel men. Nearly all the state and city guests for the past three years have been entertained at the Somerset. The grand ball room in the hotel is considered to be one of the finest in the country.

—A town meeting was held in Milton Tuesday evening when $4,000 was appropriated for water extensions.

CITY BREVITIES.

The humidity today is oppressive.

Mrs. Dexter Remick and niece, Ella, returned yesterday from a week's visit to Worcester.

Mr. Fred Belding of Rockville, Conn., is the guest of Mrs. A. E. Linnell of Davis street, Wollaston.

Today is warmer than last Saturday —86 degrees at noon. May 10 has been the only warmer day this year.

Miss Bessie Drew of Walker street started Wednesday for Hyannis Normal school where she will take up special studies during the summer.

Word has been received from Albany, N. Y., of the marriage of Lillian I. Flowers of Quincy to Mr. Charles H. Deaver of Baltimore, Maryland.

Mrs. Jared T. Thomas has closed her house and gone to Cohasset for the summer months. She will also go to Rangely lakes with a party of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Graham and daughter Florence, who have been visiting friends in Wollaston, have returned to their home in Greenville N. H.

F. W. Bent of Copeland street, who is agent for Quincy, is giving daily exhibitions of a buckboard automobile which is easily operated and costs little money.

For the seven years previous to 1903 there has always been 90 degree temperature in June and in one year 98. The highest noon temperature in the June just closed was 85 degrees. The lowest noon temperature was 54, one degree below the seven year record.

The owners of the motor-cycles, who use Walker, Botolph and Clive streets for a race track afternoon and evening might choose another course once in a while for a change. The residents of the several streets mentioned are glad to see the riders enjoy themselves, but they want others to see them enjoy themselves, too and hear them. It is an unselfish desire.

Double Birthday Party.

Tuesday afternoon there was held a unique birthday party of uncle and neice. The uncle being Master William T. Dunbar, aged 6, and the niece Miss Esther M. Miller, aged 3, both birthdays occurring June 30. The party was held at the home of Miss Esther's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Miller, on Franklin street, from 3 to 5. It goes without saying that when twenty or thirty children get together they will have a good time—such was the case; refreshments and games caused the time to slip off all too quickly. Many tokens of love were presented to the pair by their little playmates and older ones.

Kindness Appreciated.

A few nights ago residents not a thousand miles from Foster street, were unable to sleep on account of the tramping, kicking and squealing of horses in a nearby boarding stable. About 1.45 A. M. the disturbance became unbearable and a well known young lady kindly went out and summoned aid, and but for the timely assistance rendered, a number of the animals would have undoubtedly been seriously injured, as it was learned that eleven horses out of fourteen had free range of the building. As it turned out, however, owing to the timely aid rendered, but three of them received any injury and those only slight scratches. Good for the young lady.

County Hearings.

The Norfolk County Commissioners gave a hearing at Dedham on Tuesday on alterations and improvements of Sandy Valley road between Dedham and Westwood, and also on relocating Common street between Dedham and Needham. Considerable opposition developed on the former, and there was one estimate that the work would cost $15,000 to $20,000. The expense of the second improvement was guaranteed by Samuel D. Warren, and there was no opposition.

NOT FR. MURPHY.

Will Not Leave Neponset Church to Come to Quincy.

The report that Rev. Timothy J. Murphy of St. Anne's church at Neponset would become pastor of St. John's church in this city is denied. Fr. Murphy's name was favorably considered, and he could have had the appointment if desired. On Tuesday the authorities of the archdiocese decided that Fr. Murphy should remain at Neponset.

The Quincy parish will probably be divided, and it is proposed that Rev. J. P. Cuffe shall be pastor of the Sacred Heart church at Atlantic, Rev. Matthew McDonnell of Neponset pastor of St. Frances church at Braintree.

Many would have been pleased to have Rev. J. P. Cuffe appointed over the Quincy parish, and it is among the possibilities now that Rev. T. J. Murphy is not coming. Fr. Cuffe has been with the Quincy parish since 1882.

Lawn Party Postponed.

The Day Nursery lawn party at the residence of Mayor Bryant will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening. The early morning being rainy, the grounds were so wet that the ladies could not make the proper arrangements. The committee was also advised by the weather man on Blue hill that today would be showery, which would be disastrous to Chinese lanterns which will be used extensively for illuminating. It promises to be a grand lawn party tomorrow.

TO FLY LIKE A BIRD.

English Genius Invents a Winged Mechanical Air Ship.

Despite manifold discouragement in high places T. Hugh Bastin of Brixton, England, with the indomitable courage of the inventor who is assured that he has mastered a great problem, has succeeded in bringing very near to perfection a winged mechanical air ship, says the London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press.

He has superseded his small model of 1901 by one of very considerable size whose powers of mechanical propulsion on the bird's wing principle, without the aid of any balloon attachment, are placed beyond a doubt, and the new air ship will probably make its first public flight at the forthcoming great exhibition at St. Louis.

The machine consists of a cylinder which for practical purposes will be from thirty-four feet to forty feet long and will contain two saloons each eight feet square fitted with two pairs of wings which by means of a differentiating crank are capable of reproducing every movement of the natural wings of a bird.

Each wing of Mr. Bastin's model can be controlled separately, and one man working at one lever can regulate every requisite movement of soaring, steering, flying, hovering or descending. The motive power is supplied by a petrol engine, and propulsion is achieved by the air resistance to the beats of the wing.

The model is a twelfth part the size of the air ship which when the necessary funds are forthcoming he hopes to build. Shaped cylindrically, it has a pointed nose and tail, while all the weight is below the wings, thus maintaining the equilibrium. The two pairs of wings are exactly the same in size, and neither of them approaches the extremities of the ship's body. When they are set beating the model needs two men to hold it back.

The little air ship has made a flight round the workshop, and the inventor is confident that his full sized air ship will when completed be able to attain a speed of from 150 to 200 miles an hour.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Cakes will not stick to their tins if placed on a damp cloth when removed from the oven.

The toughest fowl can be made eatable if put in cold water—plenty of it—and cooked very slowly from five to six hours.

The addition of a tablespoonful of cream to brown gravy makes it deliciously rich. It is also a desirable ingredient in beef tea.

The water in which rice is boiled is too valuable to be thrown out. Add tomatoes to it and make a soup for the next day's luncheon or dinner.

Water for boiling fish should always be at the boiling point before the fish is put in. Salt and a few teaspoonfuls of vinegar should also have been added.

To broil salt codfish soak the fish to remove the salt, dry with a cloth, broil over a clear fire for ten or fifteen minutes. When cooked pour melted butter over it and serve hot.

Better than baking pie crust inside the tins and pricking to prevent puffing is to turn the tin upside down, fold the crust over it and bake thus. Turn the crust upon an earthen plate and fill with lemon or any soft filling desired.

Garnishing Dishes.

One thing should be remembered—it is not art to disguise a dish beyond recognition. Fish should appear as fish and meat as meat, and the guests should be able to tell at once what is served to them. Cold dishes lend themselves more readily to garnishes than hot dishes. For cold meats aspic jelly is always acceptable and easily prepared. It may be made of water flavored with beef or chicken extracts, seasoned, cleared and stiffened with gelatin. Boiled or fried potatoes make an excellent garnish for fish with the addition or parsley and lemon. Hard boiled eggs are suitable accompaniments for boiled fish or molded spinach. The small vegetables, such as peas and beans and carrots and turnips, cut in small pieces, are appropriate with meat. To use cauliflower, macaroni, brussels sprouts or asparagus as a garnish is a mistake. Rice is used to advantage as a border for creamed meats and vegetables. Parsley, lettuce, celery tops and cress are in order with many dishes.

Material and Dressing.

Women are charged with extravagance in dress unjustly. The best taste would prescribe simple gowns of good material, but such apparel is not the most inexpensive. On the contrary, it is more costly to get such gowns than to buy more elaborate dresses. This makes a real difficulty in the way of the woman who would dress tastefully on limited means. Good material is the sine qua non of tasteful dressing, and good material is expensive. Simplicity in dress is thus inevitably costly, and, since it is at the same time the mark of good taste, women have a problem before them. It seems a paradox to say that simplicity and expense go together, but it is the fact, and it may explain in a way the charge of extravagance against American women in the matter of dress.—Chicago Tribune.

A Way to Save Tired Feet.

If people who are troubled with tired feet could know the relief that comes from the use of cushions placed in front of the table where they stand when dishes are washed or vegetables prepared they would provide themselves with one or more of these pads at once. They may be made with several thicknesses of old cloth, bagging, carpet lining or horse blanket stitched together and covered with old carpet or drugget, the edges turned in and overhanded and the whole then tacked like a comfortable. Hang it up by two loops when not in use to keep the edges from curling up. In fact, to prevent this it is not a bad plan to have it oblong in shape.

Little Things In the Sick Room.

When the little one is ill the first thing is to make the sufferer comfortable. See that his pillow is not too high and is often shaken smooth; that the sheets are not crumpled and are well tucked in at the foot of the bed. Even in health no one can be comfortable with the bedclothes untucked and working up about the ankles. How much greater is the discomfort when one is ill and the grasshopper is a burden and the rose leaf a weight! The same thing applies to the nightgown. See that it is pulled down under the child. It will not stay down, but the operation can be repeated often without injury to mother or patient.

Candy.

A little pure candy after lunch or dinner is not only uninjurious, but it aids digestion. Between meals on an empty stomach it is simply pernicious and would eventually ruin the stomach of the strongest person. Mothers who let their children eat candies and other sweets between their meals certainly err from ignorance, for they would not willingly let them do a thing that would ruin their health. The fact that a child has a strong constitution does not insure her against chronic dyspepsia when she is growing.

Teaching Young Children.

It is a positive fact that one hour a day, even less in the very beginning, devoted to teaching a young child at home will enable him at the end of a year to outstrip his little playmate who during the same period has been forced to spend five hours a day confined in a classroom crowded to its fullest with children kept at an unwavering dead level. In addition to this, his lessons will be of never failing interest, because they are presented more intelligently and are exactly measured to his capacity.—Household.

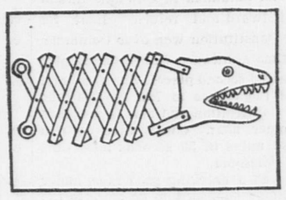

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

THE DARTING DRAGON.

An Amusing Toy That Any Clever Little Boy Can Construct.

The darting dragon is a clever toy out of which you can get a good deal of fun. If you have a sharp knife and some pieces of thin wood you can make the dragon yourself, and that will be interesting. As a rule, a boy gets more pleasure out of a toy he makes himself than he does out of one that is bought for him. Try this one and see if that is not so.

To make this amusing toy get a number of pieces of thin wood, each one three or four inches long, half an inch wide and not much thicker than the wood of a cigar box. Arrange them as in the picture, pivot them with a short nail with a large head and arrange the dragon (made out of a large piece of thin wood) as shown. By putting the thumbs into the hole shown at the other end and working these handles as you would a pair of scissors the dragon will dart back and forth. The end pieces, or handles, must be large enough to permit of making the holes for the thumbs, as shown. A body to the dragon may be made of light colored cloth or calico. The nails for the pivots must be malleable, so they will bend over after being driven.

How a Rose Was Named.

Many flowers owe their names to famous people. Among the number are the dahlia, named for Dahl, a Swedish florist; the magnolia, for Magnol, a celebrated French botanist, and fuchsia, for Fuch, a distinguished German savant, but there is only one instance known when a man and a flower received a title at the same moment.

This is how it happened: When Niel, a brave French general, was returning from the scene of his victories in the war between France and Austria he received from a peasant, who wished to honor the hero, a basket of beautiful yellow roses. One of the stems, which happened to have roots clinging to it, the general took to a florist in Paris, in whose care it remained until it became a thriving bush covered with blossoms.

Niel then took the plant as a gift to Empress Eugenie. She expressed great admiration for the exquisite flowers, and on learning that the rose was nameless said significantly: "Then I shall name it. It shall be 'the Marechal Niel.'" And at the same moment she bestowed upon the astonished general the jeweled baton that betokened his promotion to the high office of marechal of France.

Homemade Crokinole Game.

Take a table two and a half feet across. With chalk draw a tiny circle the size of a dollar, and around that draw three other circles, each about three and a half inches apart. The center spot counts 20, the circle around it 15, the next one 10, the outer one 5. Each side takes about fourteen checkers, flipping them in turn, one at a time, with the thumb and middle finger toward the center. The object is to keep your men in the middle circle. To knock your opponent's checkers off the board with your own you must always shoot from the outer ring. At the end of the game the men in the same circles are matched and the remaining ones are counted. One hundred, 300 or 500 constitute a game. Each player tries to place his men in the smaller center ring. If you shoot too hard and your man goes clear off the board it is held by your opponent till the next game. It is fair to knock your other men toward center with the checker in hand.

Going to Do For Mother.

It is difficult to be patient with a boy who boasts that he is going to do so much for his mother "when he's a man" and who will not even do so much as study his lessons for her now. The present work, whether it is adding a column of figures, or building a fire, or doing an errand, is the work that is the true test of love. People who do not do their best today will not do it tomorrow. Do not forget that today is yesterday's tomorrow. How have you fulfilled yesterday's promises?

A Little Mixed.

At the examination of the lowest class the pupils were asked, "What are the three chief occupations of Michigan and how are they carried on?" One pupil wrote as follows:

"Apples, potatoes and celery. They are carried on wagons."

Came In Itself.

A mother once said to her little son, who always forgot to wipe his shoes on the door mat, "Harry, did you bring that mud into the house?"

"No, mamma," replied Harry. "It just stuck to my shoes and came in itself."

The Rooster.

The rooster was flapping his wings and crowing, and Bert turned to grandma and asked:

"What makes the rooster fan himself before he crows?"

ONCE AGAIN RELIANCE

Beats Her Competitors In Prettily Sailed Contest

HOT BRUSH WITH COLUMBIA

In the Beat to Windward, Which Kept Both Racers Busy Tacking—New Boat Shows Up Well In Old Defender's Favorite Weather

Newport, July 1.—Reliance scored another decisive victory over Constitution and Columbia in a 15-mile thrash to windward and return. Boat for boat, Constitution won over Columbia, but time allowance will probably give the latter second place. The new craft sailed the course in 7m. 2s. less time than Constitution and 8m. 1s less than the older boat. Constitution covered the 30 miles in 59 seconds less time than Columbia.

It was a cracking good race, under conditions supposed to be more to the liking of Columbia than either of the other boats, but Reliance again proved herself to be the better boat, both to windward and running dead before the breeze. Only during the first five miles of the race was there any doubt about the result, and while this distance was being sailed there was a battle royal between Reliance and Columbia, which resulted in the former establishing a commanding lead. From Point Judith to the windward mark the new boat sailed steadily away from the others, and coming down the wind with sails spread she outran them both in splendid style.

The race was sailed in a breeze of from 10 to 12 miles' strength and after Point Judith had been left behind on the way out to the weather mark, a long rolling sea was met. Reliance dipped deeper into the waves than did either of the other boats, but it had no retarding effect upon her speed. On the contrary, the new craft seemed to like the water, for it was at this point she walked away from her opponents the fastest. Columbia also gained over Constitution in the rough water going to windward, outpointing and outfooting the latter.

The race was started promptly on time. Once more in the fight between Reliance and Constitution for the coveted berth at the start was Columbia overlooked and again Morgan steered his ship in such splendid style that he placed her between the lightship and Reliance on the latter's weather quarter at gunfire. The advantageous position gained by Columbia at the start over Constitution retarded the speed of the latter for several miles.

Constitution tacked to port across the line and Columbia immediately came about on her weather bow. Reliance held along on her starboard hitch until well to windward of the Columbia's wake, then Captain Barr hove her about and all three yachts stood over toward the Narragansett shore. They worked in toward the pier, where smoother water and a better slant of wind was found. Reliance at once began to work out still further to windward, at the same time footing a trifle faster than Columbia.

Constitution was the first to come about and Columbia followed suit a few seconds later. Reliance came about a minute and a half later. From that time on, until Point Judith light was reached, there was a pretty fight between Reliance and Columbia. Columbia strove to get out from under the lee of Reliance, but Captain Barr met tack with tack, all the time widening the distance between his craft and the oldest boat. Fifteen times Columbia was swung about, while the Reliance tacked 11 times, but finally the pair were so far inshore that they could not in safety go further, so all three tacked to starboard and drove out beyond the point in a freshening breeze and tumbling sea.

Once clear of the point, the two leading boats tried a few more hitches with each other to the westward. Then Columbia gave up trying to take the lead and devoted energies to beating Constitution to the outer mark. This she did, Reliance sailing away from the pair all the time.

Spinnakers and balloon jibs were broken out after rounding and Reliance gained steadily on the home leg, increasing her lead over Columbia by 2m. 3s. and over Constitution by 1m. 41s. Constitution picked up slowly on Columbia running before the wind, and at Point Judith had worked up abreast of the old cup defender. Before the finish line was reached Constitution crept past Columbia and crossed the line seven seconds ahead of her. Summary:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time.
Reliance	11:45:06	3:00:44	3:15:38
Consti'n	11:46:01	3:08:41	3:22:40
Columbia	11:45:09	3:08:48	3:23:39

QUESTIONABLE METHODS

Adopted by a Boston Policeman Result In His Dishonorable Disharge

Boston, July 1.—At roll call in the Hanover street police station last night Patrolman Frank Dingee was dishonorably discharged for being off his beat and neglecting his duty. Dingee's case has attracted much attention. In a case in the municipal court growing out of a liquor raid in which he took part, Dingee testified that he and another patrolman had been in the house on several occasions and that on their last visit had seen 15 rounds of drinks served and had drank themselves. There were women present.

Judge Burke scored Dingee severely, saying that he must have been muddled, and refused to accept his testimony. He said he would rather discharge every person brought before him on similar charges if conviction was expected on such testimony. The woman was convicted, however, and fined $50, as Sergeant Manning testified to finding 17 quarts of champagne and a quantity of other liquors.

Police Commissioner Emmons took up the case. Meantime charges of neglect of duty had been preferred and Dingee was given a hearing and found guilty. His court testimony also was given consideration.

Failed to Keep Suicide Agreement

New York, July 1.—Rudolph Esmarch is under arrest at Hoboken, N. J., on the charge of manslaughter, having failed to live up to a suicide pact. Charles Borowsky, a life-long friend of Esmarch, committed suicide. Esmarch met another friend, Jacob Roelleo, at the dead man's house, where the two agreed to follow their companion. They met in a saloon and, borrowing two glasses, retired to a rear room. A few minutes later Esmarch came out with carbolic acid in the glass, remarking: "The other man took his; I did not." Roelleo died an hour later. Esmarch was held for the grand jury.

Borax Boarders Get a Rest

Washington, July 1.—The first of the series of experiments to test the effect of preservative chemicals used upon foods concluded with dinner yesterday. The experiments began last December, and have proceeded continuously ever since, under the prsonal direction of Dr. Wiley, chief of the chemical bureau. The preservatives used thus far are borax and boracic acid and it is the intention to continue the investigation after a rest of three months. Dr. Wiley would not give out the results obtained.

Fire Indirectly Caused a Death

Salem, Mass., July 1.—A fire in the shoe stock factory of William F. Carney & Co. last night caused a loss of $15,000. As engine 3 was responding to the alarm Charles H. Stanton came up Essex street on his bicycle. One of the steamer's horses struck the bicycle, throwing Stanton to the ground. The engine wheels passed over his head and he was dead when taken into a nearby physician's office. Driver Flynn of the steamer was not aware there had been any accident until told of it at the fire.

MISS GODDU'S DEATH

Will Result In Charge of Murder Against Lamonthe If Apprehended

Lowell, Mass., July 1.—Miss Georgiana Goddu of Winchester, who was shot by Joseph E. Lamothe Sunday night, died at St. John's hospital in this city. Her parents, brothers and sisters were with her at the time.

If Lamothe is apprehended he will now be charged with murder. As yet no clew of any value as to the whereabouts of the fugitive has been secured, but the police scout the idea that he has committed suicide. It has been learned that Lamothe was born in Providence and brought up in Lowell, the adopted son of L. P. Lamothe. He was educated in the public schools, went to college in Canada and worked in Lowell as a clerk from 1899 to 1901. Then he went to Worcester and afterward to Boston.

Christian Science Church Officers

Boston, July 1.—The regular business meeting of the Christian Scientists was called to order by the president of the association, John W. Reeder. A hymn written by Mrs. Eddy was sung, followed by scriptural readings and from the Christian Science textbook. Then came a period of silent prayer followed by a repetition of the Lord's prayer, after which came the announcement of the officers of the ensuing year. The only new officer was Rev. Irving C. Tomlinson of Concord, N. H., who was named as president to succeed Mr. Reeder. Clerk Johnson of Boston and Treasurer Chase of Fall River were re-elected. These officers then gave reports, after which there were reports from the field, the meeting closing with singing.

OUTDOING EXPECTATIONS.

Wonderful Success of Chas. C. Hearn's Half-Price Sale of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific.

We are always glad to print in the Quincy Daily Ledger a story about a remarkable success achieved by advertising, and especially so when the article advertised is one of superior merit.

Not so very long ago Chas. C. Hearn, one of Quincy's most enterprising druggists, succeeded in getting the Dr. Howard Co. to allow him to sell their Specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, as an introductory offer.

The results of this advertising have been phenomenal, and there has been hardly a week without Chas. C. Hearn being obliged to order fresh supplies.

Chas. C. Hearn in commenting upon the great success that followed the adoption of his suggestion, not only in Quincy, but in other places showed the Ledger a letter from D. F. Davis, of Barre, one of the best known druggists in Vermont. Mr. Davis wrote: "The success of Dr. Howard's Specific in our city is wonderful. I received my first consignment the last of July, and since then have sold hundreds of packages, and cannot get it fast enough to keep my customers supplied. I have not had a single bottle returned, although I have guaranteed every one, and have heard nothing but praise of its merits. This is a record unsurpassed by any remedy that I have sold in the twenty-five years I have been in the drug business."

Chas. C. Hearn does not know how much longer he will be able to continue selling Dr. Howard's Specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, but will as long as his present supply holds out. Some of his customers have said they would pay a dollar a bottle rather than be without it. 20-24-27-1

THE ZIONIST MOVEMENT

Why Davitt Advocates It For the Repatriation of Jews.

A REMEDY FOR PERSECUTIONS.

Well Known Writer Says Plan of Zionists Boldly Faces Terrible Problem of Russian Jews With a Rational and Courageous Solution. Hebrews More Feared, He Claims, Than Hated by Average Russians.

I have returned from Russia a convinced supporter of the Zionist movement for the repatriation of those Jews of Russia and other countries who are willing to return to the parent land of their race, says Michael Davitt in the New York American. It is absolutely hopeless ever to expect the Russian people or government to admit the Jews to the rights of nationality or citizenship. The negro of the south will be welcomed much sooner on a level of equal social equality to the dining rooms of the ex-slave states.

The average Russian fears the Jew more than he hates him. He is infinitely more resourceful in all the business and civil walks of life than the landowning or land working Russian, while in intellectual equipment he possesses a decided advantage over men of the ruling race. These facts will not be denied even by educated Russians. One of these, a noble of distinction and a man of broad views, said to me when discussing the problem of the Russian Jew: "What can we do with these people? I am opposed to their persecution and feel the shame which the Kishineff horrors have brought upon the name of Russia. But if we do what you urge, if we allow them to spread over the country and open up to them access to the offices of municipal and imperial administration, why, my dear sir, their racial ability and capacity would enable them to control all our departments within ten years."

This is the reflex of the Russian official mind. The same view pervades all the lower grades of civil employment—policemen, customs officers, post office and telegraph services, and so on. And when to this feeling is added the conviction which was expressed in every conversation I had with representative Russians from Odessa to Warsaw that socialism was a Jewish importation, that young Jews are its most dangerous if not its only effective propagandists within the empire, it can at once be seen how futile will be the efforts which will seek to obtain equal rights or free citizenship removed from oppression for the Russian Jew even within the pale of legal domicile.

The Zionist movement is a necessity of the situation. It boldly faces the terrible problem of the Russian Jew with a rational and courageous solution. He cannot hope ever to live safely and in peace in Russia without rights and protection which he will not in our day receive.

Other European countries or America cannot reasonably be expected to open wide the gates of immigration to 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 poor Hebrew workers. Where, then, are they to go if their persecution is ever to cease?

The parent land of Palestine offers them a shelter and perhaps a limited autonomy under Turkish suzerainty provided the combined influence of sympathetic public opinion and the intercession of the great powers could enable the plan of the Zionist movement to be put in operation. It ought to be with the present ruler of the Turkish empire a question of money only, along with a concerted agreement between the leading European governments and, it is to be hoped, that of the United States. And as the recent savage recrudescence of anti-Semitic feeling must necessarily awaken interest and sympathy for the victims of this barbarous spirit the remedy advocated by the Zionist leaders must receive a wider attention than has yet been given to it in either Europe or America.

The press of the United States can render powerful help in this direction, and I most earnestly press the cause of the repatriation of the Russian Jew.

SWIFT TRIP IN MILL RACE.

William Ingalls, a stone mason, tripped on a rope while at work at the Niagara mill gate in Lenox, Mass., the other day and fell into the swift current of the race way, swollen by the full tide of the Housatonic river, says the New York World. He was carried 250 feet down the race, through the wheel pit of the mill, into the tail race and then across the river, and came out alive.

The hundred workmen who saw the accident say he made the journey of a quarter of a mile in less than a minute. In his perilous journey Ingalls dropped fifteen feet into the wheel pit and was dashed against a wall of solid masonry at an angle of 60 degrees. When Ingalls realized what he had been through he fainted.

Incident of the Kansas Flood.

Belonging to a family in North Topeka was a cow which had been made much of a pet by the children. When the recent flood came the nine-year-old boy of the family ran to the barn to liberate this cow, says the Kansas City Journal. The next moment the agonized father and mother saw the boy swept away holding to the rope around the neck of the cow. For four days the family were marooned in the house. All this time they mourned their boy as lost. But he was not lost. He managed to mount the cow and she carried him four miles to the bluffs, swimming and wading.

STILL FURTHER PROOF

That Reliance Is Faster Than Her Competitors

THIRTY MILES IN 3:04:27

All Three Racers Fairly Flew on the Run Home, the Speed of the 1903 Boat Exceeding That of Most Steamboats, Covering Fifteen Miles In an Hour and Eleven Minutes

Newport, R. I., July 2.—The three American cup yachts raced again over a 30-mile windward and leeward course and once more the Reliance demonstrated her superiority over Constitution and Columbia.

The time of 3:04:27 made by Reliance betters the new cup course record of 3:09:53 made on Monday by the new boat. Constitution came within four seconds of the time made Monday and the old defender was but 25 seconds behind it.

Not only was the beat to windward made in remarkably fast time by all the contestants, but in the run home, with spinnakers and ballooners pulling like mad, the three sloops fairly flew. Reliance again excelled Constitution at this kind of sailing, covering the 15 miles in 1:11:04, better speed than most steamboats can make. Constitution outran Columbia but very little.

Sir Thomas Lipton watched the race closely from the Erin. He kept his glass on Reliance every minute and when the boats finished started back for Sandy Hook.

Barring a slight haze, the conditions for racing were perfect at the start and steadily improved as the afternoon wore on. The wind had about eight miles' strength in it at the start, but before the windward mark was reached it was blowing at from 15 to 18 miles an hour and held thus until after the boats finished. When the race began there was a long easy swell, but with the increase of wind off Point Judith the yachts had to beat through a smashing chop. Reliance made fully as good weather in the short waves as did the other two, riding them easily and without having the wind knocked out of her sails. The new boat also carried her sail better, hanging on to her baby jibtopsail until the weather mark was rounded, while Columbia and Constitution lowered theirs soon after passing Point Judith whistling buoy.

Constitution got the start on the others. Captain Barr went after Columbia when the preparatory gun was fired and paid no attention to the movements of the other sloop. The result was that Constitution went over the line 15 seconds after gunfire and at that time Reliance and Columbia were running down to the line from up to windward of the committee boat. Columbia did not get away until several seconds after the handicap gun at 1:17.

Captain Rhodes berthed his charge on the weather bow of Reliance and held that position nearly over to the Narragansett shore. In the lee of the land smoother water was found and Reliance quickly pulled through the lee of her rival. Constitution then tacked to starboard and getting Columbia under her lee, kept her there until well out beyond Point Judith. The three yachts made short hitches down the shore, Columbia trying hard to get out from under Constitution and Reliance coming about every time the latter did to keep her nearest rival bothered.

Once clear of Point Judith Reliance sailed away from the others in splendid style, while Columbia, getting her wind clear by taking a long hitch to the westward, gained considerably on Constitution before the weather mark was rounded. Both Reliance and Constitution had to take a short hitch port to reach the mark when abreast of it, but Columbia luffed around prettily.

Summary:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time
Reliance	1:16:12	4:20:39	3:04:27
Consti'n	1:15:15	4:25:12	3:09.57
Columbia	1:17:00	4:27:16	3:10:16

Hanna's Partners Interested

Cleveland, July 2.—The sale of the property of the Aultman-Miller company of Akron, manufacturers of harvesting machinery, has been approved by United States Judge Wing. The plant was sold to Judge W. A. Vincent of Chicago for $640,000 cash. Three of the directors are business partners of Senator Hanna.

Bad For Fishermen

Halifax, July 2.—Advices from St. Pierre, Miq., say that the French fisheries on the Grand Banks this season have so far resulted in comparative failure. Up to a week ago the larger vessels of the fleet did not average 350 quintals each, and the season is now too far advanced to make up the deficit.

Pensions For Regicides

London, July 2.—The Odessa correspondent of The Standard says a report is current there that King Peter of Servia has appealed to the czar and the Emperor of Austria not to press their punitive demands. He proposes to banish the criminals on military pensions.

South Carolina Negro Lynched

Columbia, S. C., July 2.—Charles Evans, a negro who was charged with attempting to assassinate Mr. Phillips and his daughter at Norway on Sunday night, was hanged and his body was riddled with bullets at that place last night.

Caught In Copper Slump

Boston, July 2.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed here against Albert B. Potter and Albion B. Turner, transacting a stock brokerage business under the firm name of A. B. Turner & Bro. The petitioners are three customers of the concern, each having an open account. The firm made an assignment for the benefit of creditors on March 3 of this year to their attorney. The firm's embarrassment was due, it is alleged, to a slump in the market price of copper stock.

Objected to Change of Schedule

North Adams, Mass., July 2.—The 200 weavers in the new weaver shed of the Arnold Print Works company were locked out because of their refusal to work one hour overtime for five nights this week, in order to make up time for the closing of the works all day on the Fourth. Later they decided to return to work in accordance with the schedule for the week. The company agreed in the future to give the operatives one week's notice of changes in the schedule.

Glass Tore Blood Vessels

Newport, R. I., July 2.—Jeremiah Reagan and John Kerr, with other steamboat Pilgrim employes, were at the table in a boarding house here and during a discussion Reagan uplifted his drinking glass and brought it down on Kerr's forehead. The impact of the blow shattered the glass and drove fragments into Kerr's flesh, tearing blood vessels. Others interfered and drove Reagan out and the police have been unable to find him. Kerr is very weak from loss of blood.

Didn't Hire Women In Canada

Portland, Me., July 2.—The hearing in the case of Frank Lloyd, charged with a violation of the alien contract labor law, which was continued from last week, was finished before Commissioner Bradley here and Lloyd was discharged. Annie and Rhoda Tapley of New Brunswick, two young women whom Lloyd was accused of hiring in Canada to work in Lowell, stated that they were hired in this country and the commissioner discharged Lloyd.

Kick Caused Boy's Death

Boston, July 2.—Efforts are being made by the police to find the man who is said to have kicked in the abdomen Joseph Letzing, 9 years old. A sister of the child says that she and her brother were walking on Dudley street, singing, when a man came along and told them to stop their noise. They did not heed him, and then, it is said, the man kicked backwards, striking the boy, from the effects of which he died.

NO BACKWARD STEP

President Intends That Russia Shall Receive Jewish Petition

Washington, July 2.—The state department authorizes the following statement:

"At the state department it was stated by a high official in the absence of Secretary Hay that the delay in forwarding the petition of the American citizens of the Jewish faith as to the ill-treatment of their co-religionists in Russia was solely due to the delay in furnishing the address to the state department by the petitioners. The state department would, of course, pay no heed to any statement purporting to emanate from the Russian government unless such statement were made officially in some form or other to our own government.

"The state department has been scrupulously careful to act only in accordance with all the requirements of official propriety, but within the limits thus laid down it will most certainly not hesitate to give expression to the deep sympathy felt not only by the administration, but by all the American people, for the unfortunate Jews who have been the victims in the recent appalling massacres and outrages.

"In this connection it was pointed out by another official that it seemed somewhat strange, to say the least, that the Russian government should choose this particular method of making a statement to the American people at the very time when, by methods which are certainly the reverse of friendly to the United States, it has sought to make China join in breaking the plighted faith of all the powers as to the open door in Manchuria, and has endeavored to bar our people from access to the Manchurian trade."

Hanna Mine In Flames

Hanna, Wyo., July 2.—The information is received from an experienced miner and firefighter who penetrated the mine to the 16th level that the workings below the 17th level are a mass of flames and where it was believed the rescuers would reach the bodies of the entombed miners. This is taken as an indication that the rescuers realize the fruitlessness of future attempts to reach the entombed miners below the 17th level. Added to the horrors of the fire which will doubtless destroy the underground workings is the danger of another explosion which may occur at any time. The situation is decidedly grave.

Contract Awarded to Herman

Washington, July 2.—Postmaster General Payne has awarded the contract for printing the money order blanks of the government to Paul Herman of Rutherford, N. J. Herman was the lowest of 14 bidders and the award of the contract, which involves the payment of between $300,000 and $350,000 during the next fiscal year, will effect a saving of nearly $45,000 in the four years' contract. Superintendent Metcalf of the money order bureau was dismissed some days ago on the charge of indiscretion in seeking the withdrawal of Herman as a bidder in favor of the present contractor.

BIG SHOE FIRM IN TROUBLE.

The Financier Among the Missing Since June 15—Expert on the Books.

Boston, July 2.—There is much speculation among the boot and shoe manufacturing interests of this and neighboring cities, as well as certain banking institutions of Boston, as to the present whereabouts of Elmer E. Leavitt, the financial member of the firm of Lamkin & Foster, which recently failed and was afterward petitioned into insolvency. No member of the firm, which, in addition to Leavitt, is composed of Charles A. Mooar, Madison M. Baker and Alfred S. Foster, has seen Leavitt since he left the Boston office on June 15, claiming that he was going home on account of illness.

His home is at Medford, and since the crash to the firm came on June 23, when some seven or eight of the largest creditors had writs of replevin served on the concern, and others brought heavy attachments, associate members of the firm have called at the house of Leavitt in an endeavor to see him, but in each case have been refused admittance on the ground that Leavitt was too ill to see any one.

As far back as 1886, when W. C. Lamkin was a member of the firm, Elmer E. Leavitt was the financial man of the concern, being recognized as a first-class bookkeeper and financier. Since he entered partnership in the present firm, 6½ years ago, he has had sole charge of the financial interests of the business, and his associates say that if he had only kept them informed as to the financial condition of the concern the present trouble would never have happened.

When the firm of Lamkin & Foster saw the impending trouble it was anxious to make an assignment to one of its biggest creditors, but when the matter was brought to the attention of the Exchange and Union National banks, each of which held about $50,000 worth of accommodation paper of Lamkin & Foster, they refused to allow the assignment to be made, and as a result there followed the petitions in insolvency, in which the firm acknowledged that it owed $51,000 more than its assets, and was insolvent. The reason given why the banks would not allow the firm to assign was that they did not want to give Leavitt a chance to sign off, thereby taking from them whatever prospects they might have for legal action against him.

As financial man of the concern he made all of the dealings with the banks and floated such paper, etc., as was deemed necessary to assist the firm to conduct its business. On Jan. 1, according to law, Leavitt made a statement to the banks, and since that time the other members of the firm have been trying to get Leavitt to give them a statement as to the financial standing of the concern. Up to the time of the collapse they were unable to do this, and since the examinations of the expert bookkeepers it has been found that instead of having about $200,000 on the right side of the ledger, as was generally supposed, there is a deficit of nearly if not fully half that sum. The examination of the accounts has not been completed, but it probably will be finished within a few days.

The first intimation that the firm had that there was trouble was the day after Leavitt had gone home sick. Then the members found that the following day they must meet a note for $12,000. Investigation showed that there was only about $10,000 in cash to their credit in the bank. It was then that they asked the bank to recommend an expert bookkeeper to them. Even at that time Messrs. Mooar, Parker and Foster thought they could find a balance of at least $200,000 to the firm's credit, as it was known that the concern had done the best business in 1902 of any year in its history. It was after the expert bookkeeper began his work that the discouraging yet interesting developments became known. There was then no other alternative but for the firm to fail and either assign or go into insolvency.

The members of the firm have not seen the statement which Leavitt made to the banks in January, but the banks have told them that if the statement was correct at that time, such a state of affairs as exists at present could not possibly have arisen.

Good Afternoon

Other trusts besides the ship trust, which expect to pay dividends on watered stock, will probably, sooner or later, meet with the same fate as the ship trust which went into the hands of a receiver Wednesday. It is the promoters of the schemes only who are benefitted, and they usually expect more profit at the reorganization.

A New York letter says: "Something like a bad case of financial fright has overtaken trust promoters of this financial centre. The average of trust organizations in the first six months of the last two years was about $2,500,000. The total this year will not be one-half of that.

"Trust promoters admit frankly that they have been warned off by the banks. We have been told to go out of business, one of the most sucessful promoters said bitterly to a crowd of sympathizers in Broad street.

"The talk of receiverships is spreading. Leaving out the steel, sugar, railroad and oil trust, the others are coming in for all sorts of receivership talk. The trouble is to guess where the bolt will strike next.

"And the suggestion which has startled a good many of the promoters more than they are willing to admit is that the department of commerce will do what it can to aid in putting the insolvent trusts through the courts.

"The talk of the dissolution of the ship-building trust is coupled with talk about the shipping trust, the cotton yarn trust, the the paper pulp trust, the rubber trust, and a number of big textile and machinery mergers."

The end of the trusts may come sooner than most people expected.

Atlantic readers would probably be disappointed if there was not a daily letter in the Ledger on the location of the proposed schoolhouse. We hope they may have a new one every day. Interested citizens are invited to express their views.

Clements—Phelps.

Miss Abbie L. Phelps, who for many years has been one of the pleasant compositors in the Patriot office, has gone and got married. That is the way with the nice girls, when they learn to set type in good shape there is someone who falls dearly in love with them and carries them off.

Miss Phelps got acquainted several years ago with a clever boy who worked at that time in the Patriot office, and watching his upward career carefully she decided he was just the man of her heart, and on Tuesday last, June 30, John M. Clements and Abbie L. Phelps were united in the holy bonds of wedlock.

They will be at home to their numerous friends at 37 Freeman street, Norfolk Downs, after September first.

PICKPOCKET CASE.

The continued case of James Feeney, James Devine and Joseph Sullivan, alias Joseph Harris, for robbery from the person of James Townsend at Holbrook, was heard before Judge Avery in the district court this morning.

James Townsend, the victim of the pickpockets, testified that on June 20 he took the 11.42 train from Boston for Holbrook. When the train reached South Braintree Devine came and sat with him and talked to a man across the aisle. A little later Feeney came up and turned the next seat over so that he faced him. Others of the party were in the seat back of him.

When the train reached Holbrook he got up and took a bundle from the rack and attempted to get off the train. The crowd then surrounded him and began to push him back and forth, then Feeney said all right and they separated and he went out.

As soon as he left the train he missed his pocketbook containing $17 in money, a 25-ride book between Holbrook and Boston, and a 10-ride ticket between South Braintree and Holbrook.

He got onto the train again and accused the men of robbing him, and wanted the conductor to have them arrested. They called him hard names when the train reached Montello, Feeney and Devine left the train and he followed them toward Brockton. He finally lost them. The next time he saw them was in the toombs in Boston.

Joseph Sullivan one of the defendants testified that he lived at 123 Bridge street, East Cambridge. On June 20 he was at home all day and did not get up until between 3 and 4 o'clock that afternoon. His business was that of a collector for his father.

James Devine, another of the defendants testified that he was a painter and lived at 18 Holman street. He had been ill and on June 20 he was in bed all day. Upon cross examination he admitted that he had been convicted in January 1899, August 20, 1897. May 17, 1901, and Dec. 8, 1894, all for larceny.

James Feeney the third of the trio did not testify and offered no defense.

Counsel for the defense was arguing the case when the Ledger went to press.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There are to be no more rocking chairs on board the warships of the American navy. The statement that there has ever been any is a surprise. It was supposed that the sailors were rocked in the cradle of the deep, and no landsman imagined that rocking chairs formed part of the equipment of the navy, but so it is. Each battleship now carries 350 tons of fittings that may be classed as luxuries, not all rocking chairs to be sure, but things that might be dispensed with. They have been added at the expense of a sacrifice of machinery weights. A change is to be made, and the officers of the navy will be obliged to deny themselves of some of the pleasures they have enjoyed. Emperor William boarded the Kearsarge at Kiel, and requested the privilege of examining the ship. Admiral Cotton should have denied him in tactful language, but the right words did not occur to him at the moment, and the Kaiser made a thorough inspection. There was no new device that he did not see, and as the visit was not actuated by curiosity, but by a desire to see what is the latest thing in warship construction, he probably profited by the permission. Whether he noted the luxuries or not is not stated, but he probably did, and noted them as something the German ships can do without. To an old salt who sailed the seas in the 50's, the modern ship is a curiosity. If Jack could have had the soft billet that the men in the present navy enjoy he would have thought himself in a sailor's heaven. Everything has advanced, and why not the navy. People on shore would not care to live as they did half a century ago, and what the style of living will be in 1953 the imagination hesitates to describe.—Lynn Item.

Sunday School Picnic.

Although the weather Wednesday morning was rather inclement, nearly one hundred of the Sunday school of the First church participated in the annual picnic at Houghton's pond. During the day there was a series of sports, consisting of fifty and a one-hundred yard dashes, three-legged race and potato race. Suitable prizes were given the winners. The children also had their fill of boating and there was lemonade, ice cream, peanuts and bananas.

N. E. A. VISITORS

Many Teachers from Distance Expected in Quincy.

To View Our Historical Places.

John O. Hall, Jr., Chairman of Local Committee.

The committee appointed by the Teachers' Association to make arrangements for the reception and entertainment of visitors of the N. E. A. to Quincy during convention week have completed their preliminary work and will now await the coming of the guests.

By agreement with the central excursion committee the railroad trains arriving in Quincy at 8.49 A. M. and 1.49 P. M. will be met by a corp of local guides who will show visitors wearing the N. E. A. badge the principal and most accesible points of interest.

In addition to the guides, who will be High school and college boys well acquainted with the city, two members of the committee will be on duty each day from Tuesday to Saturday, no visitors being looked for on Monday the opening day of the convention.

Visitors will be taken first by trolley cars to the Adams birthplaces on Franklin street. Through the courtesy of Mr. C. F. Adams and Mr. Spear, of the Historical Society, all visitors wearing the N. E. A. badge will be admitted to the John Quincy Adams birthplace free of charge. In the absence of Mr. Spear, the custodian, the house will be in charge of Miss Mary W. Holden, a member of the committee.

After the birthplaces have been inspected return will be made to the Square and the church and tombs of the Presidents will be visited.

A visit will be made, if there is time, to the site of John Hancock's birthplace. The Academy will be open so that visitors may see the notable portrait of the founder of the school. Cars will then be taken on the Washington street line to the Fore River shipyard, which will be open, through the courtesy of President T. A. Watson, to all N. E. A. parties accompanied by the local guides.

It is difficult to form any idea of the number of visitors to be expected. There may be only a few, but the chances are in favor of considerable numbers and the committee are making preparations to be on the safe side in the matter of guides and transportation. The School Committee room will be open each day of the convention as a rest room.

The following are serving on the Teachers' Association committee, J. O. Hall, Jr., Chairman; Miss Mary W. Holden; Miss Carrie A. Crane; Miss Gertrude A. Boyd; Supt. F. E. Parlin, Mr. J. M. Nowland, Mr. T. B. Pollard, and Mr. Charles Sampson.

Flowers for Sick.

Wild and cultivated flowers, in large or small bunches, to be left at the basement door of the Unitarian chapel Friday morning of each week between the hours of 8 and 9.30, are solicited by the Quincy Flower Mission Workers.

The flowers are carried to Boston, free of charge, by the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R., and there taken, free of charge also, by the Armstrong Transfer Company to Bulfinch place chapel, where one branch of the Mutual Helpers Flower Mission have its headquarters.

From this centre the flowers are for the most part carried about in person by the devoted women who have for years been in charge of mission work in that part of Boston, and are left at the homes where sickness and sorrow and a dearth of the pleasant things of life makes the bright blossoms most welcome.

The Lawn Party.

If a hot day is needed to make a lawn party a success, that at the residence of Mayor Bryant this afternoon and evening should be an unqualified success. It was a happy thought of Mrs. Bryant in postponing the party yesterday when the sky gave indications of rain and the observers at Blue Hill said there would be showers all day. This morning the sun came out hot, and the ladies who went to Frogmore to prepare the grounds for the event found them in perfect condition. The large spacious grounds, always beautiful, never looked more so than today, and everything points to a great financial success.

CITY BREVITIES.

The work of slating the roof of the Washington school house has commenced. J. G. Thomas is doing the work.

Rev. Edward Norton will supply the pulpit of the Memorial church, Atlantic, during the absence of the pastor in Europe.

In this issue will be found an important announcement of Charles M. Jenness, who will sell at auction his entire store of hardware, sporting goods, etc.

Flowers to be distributed among the sick poor of Boston will be received every Friday morning between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock in the chapel of the Unitarian church. All flowers will be gratefully received.

Residents around Walsh's Corner are commencing to be alarmed at the reports that are being circulated, that ten sticks of dynamite have been stolen from one of the quarry powder houses, evidently to be used in celebrating the night before the Fourth. This is carrying the game too far and the police should see that it is stopped.

The Young Ladies' club M. G. R. of Quincy Point held a very pretty lawn-party at the former residence of Hon. John Shaw, Wednesday evening. The grounds were beautifully decorated with lanterns, while dancing was enjoyed from 8 until 10. During the evening fruit punch was served which was a credit to the young ladies who made it.

Full Rigged Floral Ship.

The funeral of John W. Vincent, foreman of the carpenter department of the Fore River Engine Co., was held Wednesday from his late residence, No. 737 Washington street. Rev. Leon H. Austin conducted the services which were attended by many of the employes of the Fore River Co. Among the many floral tributes was a full rigged ship, the body of which was composed of carnations, roses, hyacincths and ferns, and the masts of immortelles. On the bow were the words "We mourn our Commander" from the employes of the Carpenters' department. There was also an anchor of roses, carnations asparagus and ferns from the other employes at the works. The burial was at North Weymouth.

A BETTER OFFER.

To the Editor of the Daily Ledger:—

As a property owner and taxpayer of Atlantic school district, permit me to object strongly to the proposed location of a lot of 50,000 square feet of land on the corner of Faxon road and Squantum street, for three good and sufficient reasons.

1—It is an unsuitable and most inconvenient location for the purpose, being at the extreme corner of the school district, distant from the centre of population and in part low, marshy, and requiring costly filling at public expense.

2.—It is proposed to pay for the lot several times its cash value. In my judgment it would not bring five cents a foot at public auction. It is a part of a tract of over 27 acres, or say one million, seven hundred thousand square feet of land assessed for $11,000, viz. 21 acres of upland, assessed for $10,000, and 6 acres of marsh, assessed for $1,000, an average of a little more than one cent per foot. Now for one and one-fourth acres of this land it is proposed to pay $7,600, or more than 15 cents a square foot.

3.—The proposed lot is far from the station, off the line of the electric road, far from Hancock street, distant from the centre of population—less desirable and convenient than the present school house site.

I am not anxious to sell my own land, but in order to promote the public interest I am willing to sell the city of Quincy 50,000 square feet of land on three forty-foot streets, viz: Sagamore avenue, Prospect street, and Walker place, on the line of the electric road, opposite the playground, only 300 yards from Atlantic station, near Hancock street, in the centre of population, for $7,500 or 15 cents a square foot, for the purpose of a schoolhouse.

This land is assessed for over 14 cents a square foot, I hold it for sale at retail as building lots at 25 cents a square foot. But for a public purpose and to promote the general welfare I am willing to sell it at 15 cents, the same price asked for the outlying lot on Squantum street. Henry B. Blackwell.

45 Boutwell street, Dorchester.

Why Personalities?

Dr. Peirce of the School board regrets that the Ledger did not publish at length the remarks made by President Alden of the City Council at the public hearing on the school lot question at Atlantic last week to show provocation. Up to that time, he says, no personalities had been indulged in.

President Alden was referring to the opposition to the proposed new school lot and among other things said: This man from Norfolk Downs, who has been on the School board for six years, what has he done in that time but to find fault? He is a man without chick or child. He lives with his parents.

Dr. Peirce took this to be an insinuation that he was supported by his parents, and rising to his feet asked if it was any detriment to a man to have a widowed mother and have her live with him.

Shift In Banana Trade

Kingston, Ja., July 2.—Jamaican Colonial Secretary Olivier, who is now on a visit to the United States and Canada, reports that Costa Rican bananas are ousting the Jamaica fruit from the American market. This report has created considerable perturbation among the planters here, as the preservation of the American market is absolutely essential to the prosperity of Jamaica.

Fighting Big Corporations

Cleveland, July 2.—Mayor Johnson's fight to compel large corporations to pay additional taxes was reopened when County Auditor Wright announced that he had added $2,787,254 to the collectible taxes of five public service corporations. The action of the county auditor was taken in defiance of the recent instructions issued by State Auditor Guilbert.

International Auto Race Today

Ballyshannon, Ire., July 2.—It is a fine morning for the international automobile race. L. P. Moers, the American racer, was the first to arrive at the starting point here. He expressed his dissatisfaction with the treatment of the roads, where in some places the oil used to lay the dust lies in pools, while elsewhere the motors raise clouds of dust.

Thirteen Thousand Miners Idle

Birmingham, Ala., July 2.—Thirteen thousand miners who are members of the United Mine Workers of America in this district have suspended work, the old wage contract having expired June 30 and a new contract not having been agreed upon. No formal strike has been declared, the situation being referred to as a suspension.

Lang May Not Return

Haverhill, Mass., July 2.—No tidings of the whereabouts of Edwin F. Lang, the missing shoe manufacturer, have been received here, and it is believed that he has left the city for good. Neither his wife nor his partner, Russell W. Bertsch, has made any attempt to locate him.

PRETTY WEDDING.

Daughter of Maine and Quincy Man Married.

A very pretty home wedding took place Tuesday evening, at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Margaret Sutherland of 55 Holmes street, Norfolk Downs, when her son, Mr. Austin Annand Sutherland, was united in marriage to Miss E. Helene Veazie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis C Veazie of Islesboro, Maine. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Todd recently of the Presbyterian church of Quincy.

Mr. Fred Sutherland, brother of the groom, served as best man, and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Evalina Veazie of Wollaston. The usher was Mr. Morris of Everett, cousin of the bride.

The bride was becomingly gowned in mousseline de soie, trimmed with chiffon and lace, and with medallions of lace and pearl ornaments on corsage. She wore a veil caught up with lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony a reception was held from six to eight o'clock, and the bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Sutherland, mother of the groom and Mrs. Warren Hibbard of Roxbury, sister of the bride. Supper was served after the reception.

The house was tastefully decorated with palms and ferns and the bride and groom were generously remembered with many beautiful gifts, including a large sum of money.

Guests were present from West Somerville, Everett, Boston, Randolph and Roxbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland left on the nine o'clock train for a wedding trip and will be at home to their friends after Sept. 1, on Tuesday, at 55 Holmes street, Norfolk Downs.

Crop Report.

In its crop report for June, issued July 4, the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture include the following summary of crop conditions in Massachusetts, compiled from a careful study of the reports of about 170 correspondents.

But little damage is reported from insects, the cold, wet weather having held many species in check to a considerable extent. Potato bugs are the insect most commonly reported, but are not as plentiful as usual. Onion maggots appear to be somewhat more prevalent than usual and tent caterpillars less so.

Indian corn has seldom been in as unsatisfactory condition at this time of year. It is reported as small and backward and turning yellow in many instances. The severe draught of May prevented good germination of the seed and it came up poorly, many fields having to be replanted, consequently showing a poor uneven stand. Since the drought was broken the excessive rains and cool atmosphere have kept it at a standstill. Much warmer weather is needed to bring the crop forward satisfactorily, but with a favorable season a reasonably good crop may be secured. The acreage shows a slight general increase for the State at large. Ensilage corn has not been planted in many instances, owing to unfavorable weather for preparing the soil.

Haying had not begun at the time of making returns, the dull, rainy weather preventing. The heavy rains have started grass growing well and a great improvement in the crop is indicated.

The strawberry crop has been nearly a failure in most sections, being first injured by frost, then much shortened by drought, while the rains came at a time to rot a large proportion of the crop on vines. Prices have generally ranged high for such berries as could be secured. Raspberries, blackberries and currants promise well.

Pears, cherries and plums promise only light crops in the aggregate, and there will be practically no peaches. Apples set well for a non-bearing year and there are few complaints of there dropping badly. Wild berries promise well.

This report, containing much other matter of value, can be obtained on application to the State board of Agriculture, Boston and those desiring it may have their names placed on the mailing list to receive the bulletins regularly.

Fireworks.

The city of Boston will give fire works displays on the night of the Fourth on Boston Common, Franklin Field, grounds of the Boston Nationals, Gibson playground, Marine Park, North End park and Nevins Hill, Brighton.

BODY RECOVERED.

Found Floating of Peddocks Island This Morning.

The body of Edward Williams the 19 year old young man who was drowned off Houghs Neck, June 8, was found floating off Peddock's Island this morning by Merton Lewis and William Norteman, who were out fishing. They towed the body to Houghs Neck where it was given in charge of Undertaker Hall.

On the day in question Talbot and Williams went out in a racing dory owned by Williams' uncle. A gale was blowing at the time. When off Peddock's, Williams, who was sailing the boat, shook out one of the two reefs. This was more than the boat could carry and she took in water. Then the ballast shifted, and the boat capsized and sank.

Both boys were good swimmers and struck out for Peddock's. Talbot began to grow weak, but Williams shouted to him to keep up his courage as a boat was coming to the rescue.

D. W. Duncan and a man named Fritz were at Peddock's Island and saw the accident and immediately went to the rescue. They went between the two boys and Talbot was hauled on board. A rope was thrown to Williams but he was too weak to grasp it and before the rescuers could reach him he sank.

Owing to the high wind the rescuers had to put in to City Point, Boston, in order to make a landing.

Several attempts have been made since then to recover the body of the Williams boy, but it could not be located.

Choir Boys' Concert.

The choirs of St. Chrysostom's, Wollaston, and Christ church, Quincy, repeated their concert in the Town Hall, Cohasset, Wednesday evening to a full house and an enthusiastic one. Besides Miss Marguerite Morse, Mrs. Sigrid Lunde Souther of Brookline, who is spending the summer in Cohasset, very generously gave her services to the boys and sang with exquisite taste a group of four songs.

Although the night was a hot one, the choruses and solos were sung with a snap and go to them that made encores imperative.

Mrs. Edward A. Stevens of Cohasset accompanied admirably the soloists, and Master William Weston the choruses.

The choirs will go into camp at Egypt next Monday.

With the exception of the Sunday morning services at Christ church, when the choir will sing during July, last night's concert closes the work of choir master Snyder and his very excellent choirs until September next.

Recital.

The twentieth semi-annual recital, given by the pupils of Mrs. Levi H. Turner was held at her home, No. 463 Hancock street, on Tuesday evening, June 30. The crowded house was of itself an eloquent expression of the popularity of these entertainments, and none were disappointed upon this occasion. The piano selections were from the best composers, adapted to the varying ages of the pupils, and were rendered with surprising grace and skill. These young people made the listeners feel that they understood the spirit of their work, and though young and modest as to ability, reflected both their thorough instructions and their own diligence.

The artists were Miss Hattie Tilton, Master Charles Staples, Miss Iva Briggs, Master John Hayes, Miss Grace Milberry, Master Clifford Fratus, Miss Mabel Sherwood, Master Arthur Hall, Miss Frances Mansfield, Miss Irma Douglas, Miss Helen Saunders, Mrs. Walter Coombs, Miss Mona Macgergory, Miss Sybil Bugbee, Miss Hazel Jones, Miss Ruth Cahill, and Miss Ethel Kinnear. There were also songs by the class.

Stuck on the Ways.

At high water Wednesday afternoon, says the Herald, another unsuccessful attempt was made to release the schooner Elizabeth T. Doyle, which stuck on the ways at John M. Brooks' yard, Harbor View, East Boston, on Saturday when an effort was made to launch her. The tugs Dolphin, Samuel Little and Startle pulled on the schooner for some time on the top of high water yesterday, but failed to budge her. The builder has now decided to remove the running ways from under the vessel and re-grease them. The work of getting her into the water will be delayed until the end of the week.

The attention of the City Council has been called to the condition of South Walnut street, and Councilman Bass will probably be anxious for a report now. He was driving through the street Wednesday evening and found it flooded. As there were islands here and there he thought the water was shallow and attempted to drive through, but got into a hole and smashed a wheel.

POISON IN PANCAKES

Woman Said to Have Confessed to Trying to Kill Husband

Sandgate, Vt., July 2.—Mrs. Philander Moffat of this place has been arrested by Sheriff Wilson on the charge of attempting to kill her husband by poisoning. Joseph Mears, who was arrested and sentenced to 15 years in state prison on that charge, now appears to have been only an accomplice. Mears was first tried in June, 1902. The jury disagreed at that time. He was again brought up for trial last winter. He was convicted and senteuced.

Additional evidence has since come out which led to the indictment of Mrs. Moffat. Mears was brought over from Windsor and testified against her. Mrs. Moffat returned home this week, after some absence for some time from the state, and Sheriff Wilson at once arrested her and took her to Bennington.

It is said that she made a confession to Sheriff Wilson, giving her love for Mears as the cause of the attempt on the life of her husband. It is said that Mears purchased the poison and Mrs. Moffat put it in some pancakes which she made for her husband. Her trial will he held in Bennington in December.

LEADERS DO NOT AGREE

On Tariff Policy In Iowa Republican Platform

BOTH WINGS CLAIM VICTORY

Expect and Desire Roosevelt's Nomination—Faith In Principle of Protection Reiterated and Reciprocity Policy Indorsed

Des Moines, July 2.—The ticket: Governor, A. B. Cummins; lieutenant governor, John Harriot; supreme judge, C. A. Bishop; railroad commissioner, D. J. Palmer; state superintendent of schools, F. J. Riggs.

The Republican state convention nominated the foregoing ticket and adopted a platform. Harmony marked the proceedings of the convention, but after the ticket had been completed and the platform adopted, speeches were made which indicated that the Republican leaders of the state are not entirely agreed as to the details of tariff policy. The tariff plank adopted was prepared by Senator Allison after conferences with representative Republicans of the state. No objection was made to it in the committee on resolutions nor upon its presentation to the convention. Governor Cummins, in his speech accepting renomination, approved the platform in its entirety, but announced that he would continue to hold to all the views expressed in his speeches within the past two years.

Senators Allison and Dolliver endorsed the platform as a correct statement of Republican principles, but Congressmen Lacey and Cousins spoke in opposition to the tariff changes.

While the action of the committee was harmonious both wings of the party are claiming victory. Governor Cummins and his supporters say that the tariff contains, in substance, all that is found in last year's plank, while the "stand patters" are congratulating themselves upon the elimination of the "shelter to trusts" clause, which attracted so much attention to the Iowa platforms of 1901 and 1902. There were but two contests involving the questions of relative strength of the two wings of the party and these ended with honors even.

"The stand patters" secured control of the committee on resolutions by a vote of 6 to 5, but in the committee on permanent organization the Cummins men controlled and elected I. R. Kendall permanent chairman. Kendall received six votes against five for Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who was put up by the "stand patters" as a candidate upon whom all should be able to agree.

The platform congratulates the nation of the present era of prosperity, commends the administration of Governor Cummins, rejoices in Iowa's leadership in national affairs, favors good roads legislation, endorses the Louisiana purchase commission, commends entirely and without reservation the administration of President Roosevelt, and "in common with the Republicans of the entire nation, expect and desire his unanimous nomination as his own successor."

Senator Allison's tariff trust plank, which was adopted by the convention, says:

"We reiterate our faith in the historic principle of protection. Its vindication is found in the history of its success and the rapidity with which our nation's resources have been developed and our industrial independence secured, and we heartily renew our pledge to maintain it.

"Tariff rates enacted to carry this policy into effect must from time to time be changed to meet the varying conditions incident to the progress of our industries, and their changing relations in our foreign and domestic commerce. Duties that are too low should be increased, and duties that are too high should be reduced.

"We endorse the policy of reciprocity as the natural complement of protection. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade, and secures our own markets for ourselves; reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for our surplus.

"We approve the treaty with Cuba, recently ratified, as conferring substantial benefits upon both countries, and urge that the remaining steps necessary to make it effective be promptly taken.

"We believe that the large corporations commonly called 'trusts' should be so regulated and supervised both in their organization and operation that their evil tendencies may be checked and their evil practices prevented. In many instances they are efficient industrial instruments and the natural outcome of an inevitable process of economic evolution. We do not desire their destruction, but insist that they shall be so regulated and controlled as to prevent monopoly and promote competition and in the fullest measure subserve and advance the public good.

"The patriotic and resolute course of the President of the United States in his recommendations to congress upon this subject of the further regulation of interstate commerce commands our confidence and admiration and recent legislation of congress in harmony with his recommendations meets our hearty approval."

THE GODDU SHOOTING

Supposed Letter From Lamonthe Giving Alleged Details of the Affair

Boston, July 2.—A letter believed to have been written by Joseph Lamothe, who is wanted in Lowell for the shooting of Miss Georgianna Goddu last Sunday, and which was mailed in the Charlestown district, Boston, about midnight Tuesday, has been received by the Boston Globe in which the writer, who signs himself "L," claims that Miss Goddu was shot by herself while struggling to get his revolver.

The handwriting in the letter is identical with that of Lamothe's handwriting while he was working in this city. For the first time, it appears, presuming the letter to tell the facts, that a serious quarrel occurred on the lawn in front of the house of Dr. Henotte, in Lowell, where the shooting occurred.

The writer says there was a struggle between Miss Goddu and himself; his victim attempted to take away from him a pistol which he had in his coat pocket. He says the pistol was discharged in the struggle and the bullet struck the girl.

He also declared that he had no recollection of the shooting of Dr. Payette, who ran to the assistance of Miss Goddu. He declares that the first he knew that Dr. Payette was shot was when he read it in the story of the tragedy.

The letter ends with these words: "These lines, Mr. Editor, are written by a man who will be dead when they reach you. They are perfectly true."

Shipbuilding Company Receiver

Newark, N. J., July 2.—James Smith, Jr., was appointed receiver of the United States Shipbuilding company by United States District Court Judge Kirkpatrick. The decree directs the receiver to take over all property of the company and to immediately assume the management and operation of said property. The concluding paragraphs of the decree contain the usual restraining phrases which forbid the defendants to sell, transfer or dispose of any of the property or from interfering with the management of the receiver. The final paragraph orders that all creditors and others be restrained from instituting or prosecuting suits at law or in equity without leave of this court.

Complaint From the Congo

Washington, July 2.—Because Presbyterians in the Congo Free State claim they do not enjoy all the religious liberty coming to them under the provisions of the Berlin treaty, representative Presbyterians called at the state department and left a statement of the facts with the request that the Washington government take up the matter with Belgium and call her attention to the reported violations of the Berlin treaty. The course of the department is not yet indicated.

"Postoffice Physicians" Out

Washington, July 2.—Postmaster General Payne has issued an order abolishing the position of physician in postoffices at the close of business June 30, 1903. This order wipes out a small list of officials whose employment, without specific authority of law, has caused wide discussion in connection with the postoffice investigation. Some, at least, of these offices paid $1700 a year and were sinecures.

More Queer Deals Unearthed

St. Louis, July 2.—Circuit Attorney Folk has information which may lead to the indictment of eatern capitalists for bribery in connection with the transit bill, which was passed by the Missouri legislature in 1899, and which made possible the consolidation of the street car lines in St. Louis, save the suburban. It is reported that they authorized the expenditure of $150,000 to consummate the deal.

Speculation as to Corey's Successor

Pittsburg, July 2.—The promotion of President Corey of the Carnegie Steel company to be assistant to President Schwab of the United States Steel corporation is the subject of general comment in iron and steel circles. There is considerable speculation as to who will be the successor to President Corey if it is necessary for him to retire from the position he now holds with the Carnegie company.

Kramer Gets Fat End of Purse

Pittsburg, July 2.—Frank Kramer won the six-day bicycle race here last night after one of the most exciting finishes ever occurring in local bicycle racing. The time for the last lap was under 18 seconds—the previous track record. Each team covered 284 miles. A purse of $2500 was divided, Kramer taking 30 percent.

Election Frauds Charged

Chicago, July 2.—The grand jury has voted true bills against Alderman Brennan, H. E. Kent, C. A. McCarle, H. B. Sherman, Harry O'Donovan and J. J. Kelly in connection with the 18th ward election frauds They are charged with conspiracy to induce persons unqualified to vote and conspiracy to hinder voters.

Seven Missing Students

Geneva, July 2.—Seven students belonging to the Geneva university left last Saturday to make an ascension of Mont Blanc and no news of them has been received since. A search party will scour the mountain tomorrow morning.

THE FRUIT OF MOB LAW

Boys and Girls Play at Lynching In Belleville, Mo.

IMAGINARY POLICEMEN PRESENT.

New Game Has Taken Its Place With Kites and Tops—Imaginary Mayor Gives Order Not to Harm Imaginary Mob, and an Imaginary Hanging Follows—Fire Contributes Realistic Touch.

A new game has been added to the catalogue of sports of the children of Belleville, Mo., says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It is the "game of lynching." For the time being it has crowded out baseball and jackstones, being vastly more exciting, and, if continued until fall, promises to deprive of some of its prestige the game of football.

The children of the town, deducing from the light and airy manner in which many of their elders refer to the lynching of the negro Wyatt on the public square that the game is a proper and creditable one and deriving from the studied inactivity of the authorities the assurance that it is perfectly safe, have entered into the game with zest, and many of them have become adept at it.

If the game takes its place on the year's calendar of sports and "lynching time" recurs with the same regularity as "kite time" and "top time" the children will by the time they are grown be quite facile as lynchers.

The game starts with the intended victim, generally a boy, crouching in the weeds in a make believe cell in an imaginary jail. The lynchers, boys and girls, gather under the nearest electric light and vow with great ferocity that "the nigger must die."

With shouts as hoarse as they can make them the youngsters make a rush for the make believe jail and dance about it with an imitation of fury even more realistic than that of the crowd which surrounded the Belleville jail a few weeks ago.

A make believe mayor makes a speech studded with terrible adjectives, immediately following which a rush is made and the make believe front door of the imaginary jail is broken in. The mob is driven back by an imaginary force of defenders. The desperate mob withdraws a pace and confers.

The consensus of opinion is that the bastile can't be taken because the defenders have weapons filled with injurious bullets, and they are all agreed that, while they are bent on killing the prisoner, they don't want to run any risk in doing so.

Some try to convince the others that the authorities are their friends and would not harm them for the world, but still they hesitate. After an imaginary wait of several hours a bold spirit creeps close up under the walls of the jail and comes running back in great joy.

"It's all right, fellers!" he shouts. "The mayor has given orders to the guards that they are not to hurt us. Our revenge is at hand. 'Sdeath!"

They shout hoarsely and again rush upon the jail. The guards are locked in the imaginary office and the back door is not defended. They break it in with imaginary sledge hammers, and in a little while the victim is pounced upon and dragged down the imaginary steps and out on the street.

Emulating the real mob, they are not content merely to take him to a telegraph pole and complete the imaginary hanging. They pull and haul him over the sidewalk and street, shouting merrily the while. It is such fun that by this time they have forgotten to be fierce.

Finally the victim is pronounced dead, and a piece of paper is set on fire to give the proper realism to the finish.

Then they imagine it is the next day, and the leaders go around imaginary street corners telling what part they took in the make believe lynching.

The game ends with the make believe authorities reposing on a near by lawn, complaining that they cannot ascertain the names of the lynchers and languidly announcing that they will call the attention of the grand jury to the lynching next year.

The Frivolous Kitchener.

Gossip from India grows more feverish about Lord Kitchener, says the London Chronicle. The man of iron from the South African veldt has entered with surprising zest into the amusement of Anglo-Indian society. He has attached a ballroom to his headquarters. He has melted down numerous trophies, caskets, cups and what not to make a gold and silver dinner service, which is vastly admired. There is even a rumor, which we distrust, that he has joined an amateur dramatic club. As for matrimony, the commander in chief is already engaged by report to many ladies, and we are forced to remind the public that under British law polygamy is forbidden even in India.

A Large Kansas Flood Loss.

A canvass of the farmers in Kansas within a part of the Smoky Hill valley not more than five miles by three shows that in addition to probably $5,000 loss in household goods and buildings from the flood they have lost 575 acres of wheat, 529 acres of corn, 66 acres of alfalfa, 26 cattle, 6 horses, 147 hogs, 1,345 chickens, besides much grain in bins, says a dispatch from Enterprise to the Kansas City Star. This makes fully $15,000 loss to this section, and it is only a small part of the loss to the upper valley. The loss to farmers of the county will be six to eight times this amount.

RACERS' UNLUCKY DAY

Columbia Seaman Falls Overboard and Is Drowned

MISHAP TO CONSTITUTION

Carried Away Jaws of Gaff and Steel Spar Buckled, Ripping Mainsail and Rendering It Practically Worthless—Plating of Reliance Dented

Newport, R. I., July 3.—For the first time in the history of American 90-footers a fatal accident has occurred. Carl B. Olsen, a seaman on the old cup defender Columbia, and one of the best men in the crew, was washed from the bowsprit just before the yacht reached the first turn in yesterday's race and was drowned. Two other men who were out on the bowsprit with Olsen, snapping the big jibtopsail on the stay, were washed inboard by the same sea that swept him away. Both managed to get another hold upon the bowsprit and were hauled on deck by members of the crew. When Columbia lifted from the big wave into which she had plunged, Olsen was seen almost under the stem, clinging to the bobstay, but before assistance could be given him the sloop dipped into another great comber and he was not seen afterward.

Captain Miller is of opinion that Olsen was struck by the overhang of the craft as it came smashing down and knocked him insensible. He was a good swimmer and the fact that he did not reappear after the yacht had swept over him causes the belief that he sank immediately after being hit by the bow. Columbia came into the wind instantly and the forestaysail was lowered. Two life buoys were thrown into the water near where the racing cups from the three seamen were floating and the tender was put overboard as quickly as possible. Two men jumped into it and rowed around for 20 minutes ready to pick Olsen up if he came to the surface. The sailors swarmed up the mast and watched closely from the spreaders for some signs of the unfortunate man, but without success.

The race was also marred by a mishap to Constitution. Soon after the start she carried away the jaws of her gaff and the great steel spar, swinging forward, buckled in the centre. The mainsail was ripped clear across several times and rendered practically worthless. It was the best mainsail the boat had spread this season and was the third that Belmont had tried this year. At the time of the accident Constitution was doing splendid work to windward. She started to leeward and behind Reliance, but footed fast during the few minutes of sailing and was upon even terms but under the lee of the new yacht, when the gaff went.

Reliance received the severest buffeting she has had since being launched. The sea was a terrific one for racing yachts and when the yacht reached her moorings it was noticed that she had a big dent in the bronze plating close to the waterline on the port bow. Mr. Iselin said that the waves had hammered the metal in as the craft beat to windward. He expressed the opinion that the injury could easily be remedied at Bristol.

The indentation is about five feet long, as nearly as could be judged, and half the width of a plate. The rivets had apparently been started, in which case the craft must have leaked some on the second leg of the course. The indentation was similar to that sustained by Constitution two years ago.

The Reliance sailed splendidly in yesterday's event. The wind blew more than 20 miles an hour and all three yachts found that they could not even carry small working topsails to windward, so they went off under the three lower sails only. It was the stiffest breeze and hardest sea that the boats have been out in since the season's racing began and had there been no accidents the record for a 30-mile triangular course would have been cut down considerably. As it was, Reliance, with no craft to push her and with only a No. 1 jibtopsail hoisted in addition to the three lower sails, came to the finish line from the second turn in 47:10, the fastest 10-mile leg ever sailed. The rigging and spars of the Reliance went through the test in splendid style, not a strand of wire being started.

HIS SECOND ARREST

Sturtevant Murder Suspect Charged With Breaking and Entering

Medford, Mass., July 3.—The police of Medford think it a very strange coincidence—the arrest of Tomasso Lombardi, once in custody on suspicion of the Sturtevant murder, now charged with breaking and entering the house of John J. Johnson at 104 Salem street—the night of the second meeting of the co-operative bank since the murder.

Just two months ago Wednesday Nellie Sturtevant was shot down at the door of her house by a robber, and at midnight that night Lombardi was arrested in Boston on suspicion.

When he was arrested and later in court Lombardi denied most vehemently that he had ever been in Medford, that he did not know the way there, and this was one of the points that argued most strongly for his innocence.

His second arrest, coming on the anniversary of the murder and comparatively near the scene of the crime, has caused a good-sized sensation in the city.

Action Ordered by Root

Washington, July 3.—Secretary Root had a conference with Quartermaster General Humphrey and Colonel Patten, who has charge of the clothing supplies for the army, regarding the contract for gloves with E. R. Lyon, who, it is claimed, obtained his supply of gloves from the firm of which Representative Littauer of New York is a member. The secretary has directed that an inquiry be made as to whether any officer made contracts in violation of the statutes, and for such other information as may be obtained.

Grasshoppers Destroyed Vegetation

Butte, Mont., July 3.—Professor Cooley of the state agricultural college has returned from an investigation of the grasshopper-ridden district about Forsythe. He says the insects have devoured everything in a strip 70 miles long and 50 miles wide and that as a consequence of their raids range conditions are very serious. He says the plains are dotted with cattle that have starved to death as a result of the grasshopper raids.

Intense Heat In New York

New York, July 3.—A terrific storm followed a day of most intense heat. There were four deaths from the heat and a score or more of prostrations. Already three deaths, directly traceable to the storm, have been reported, and many persons caught in the fury of the wind were injured. At one time the gale blew at the rate of 72 miles an hour in the upper part of New York. Many places were struck by lightning.

Ohio Town Stirred Up

Canal Dover, O., July 3.—Dr. James Dixon was shot and instantly killed last night by his son, Burt Dixon. Dr. Dixon was sick with smallpox, having contracted the disease while helping a daughter to escape quarantine. The son was confined in the house with his father under quarantine. The fact that the son, when arrested, was taken to the city prison, caused great excitement.

Railroad Station Blown Up

Niagara Falls, July 3.—About 8 o'clock last night Miss Lydia Upper, in charge of the whirlpool station of the Gorge railroad, found that the station was afire. She grabbed the books and money in the office and ran. She was not 75 feet away when an explosion blew the house to pieces. It is supposed dynamite stored in the building exploded. Arson is suspected.

Turkish-Bulgarian War Imminent

Vienna, July 3.—In well informed circles here the view is gaining ground that the outbreak of a war between Turkey and Bulgaria is nearer than generally supposed. A dispatch from Constantinople asserts that the possibility of hostilities is being canvassed in diplomatic circles and it is feared that an encounter may at any moment occur.

Twenty May Have Perished

San Antonio, Tex., July 3.—A cloudburst visited the southwestern section of Texas. No accurate reports of the loss of life can be obtained, as the telegraph wires are down in the storm-swept section, but it is believed that at least 20 people, mostly Mexican laborers and farmhands, perished in the flood.

Lipton's Men to the Rescue

New York, July 3.—Five persons were rescued from a dismasted yacht by Sir Thomas Lipton's crews after a squall had wrecked their craft and in the nick of time. Three of the party in the wreck were women. The yacht was the Yankee of New Brunswick, owned by Jacob Ziegler.

Militiaman on Each Car

Richmond, July 3.—All but one, and that a very unimportant one, of the city and suburban street car lines, are now being operated day and night, with but one militiaman to each car. Passenger travel is picking up perceptibly. The strikers, however, are holding out firmly.

Afro-American Council Officers

Louisville, July 3.—The Afro-American council elected the following officers: President, L. T. Fortune, New York; nine vice presidents, including W. H. Lewis of Boston; secretary, C. F. Adams, Chicago; treasurer, J. W. Thompson, New York.

CHINESE FIND FAULT

With Restrictions Placed Upon Would-Be St Louis Exhibitors

Pekin, July 3.—The United States treasury regulations regarding the Chinese visitors to the St. Louis exposition are bitterly criticised in the native press and it is believed will demoralize China's effort to take a creditable part in the exposition. The most objectionable point in the eyes of the natives are the $500 bond, the photographic identification, police supervision of the visiting Chinese and the expulsion from America of the Chinese workmen and assistants when the fair closes. The press points out that the Chinese visitors will be no better than prisoners throughout their stay.

The official newspaper of Chi Li province, whose utterances are understood to be directed by the governor of the province, taxes America with hypocritical pretense of friendly intercourse, and says the politeness with which what is called the most just nation on earth treats its guests is a warning to Chinese merchants and others throughout the empire to seriously reflect if they are contemplating a visit to St. Louis. The tone of the press has already induced many Chinese to forego the idea of exhibiting at the exposition.

Relics of Prehistoric Days

Big Timber, Mont., July 3.—Wonderful discoveries of fossils and bones of prehistoric men and animals are being made in the Dish Creek country by Professor Farr and a party of students from Princeton university. In the remains of a city belonging to the stone age Professor Farr found the bones of animals of immense size and various crude instruments, many of them ornamented with gems. Near the creek was found almost complete the skeleton of a man nine feet high. Bones believed to have belonged to a dog the size of a horse were also discovered.

GRAND SUCCESS.

The Lawn Party at Mayor Bryant's

A Day Nursery Now Assured.

Thousands in Attendance—Those in Charge of Tables.

Nothing was lacking Thursday to make the lawn party at the residence of Mayor Bryant, for the benefit of the Day Nursery, a success. Beautiful grounds, finely adapted for such an affair, and a warm, yes a hot, summer day and evening. A large attendance. What more could be asked?

It was like a fairy scene. Hundreds of Japanese lanterns encircled the grounds, and rows of them marked the driveway and walks. Circling back and forth were scores of pretty girls and the more stately matrons in cool, bewitching summer costumes. Yes, indeed, it was a fairy scene.

Money was freely spent and there can be no doubt that it was also financially a success.

Chief Hayden was present with a squad of bluecoats but their presence was not necessary to keep order.

Henry H. Faxon came early and saw to it that no child went without a refreshing dish of ice cream. Fifteen hundred tickets he paid for, besides patronizing liberally the tables or booths.

Among the distinguished visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Adams. Mr. Adams is the only member of that illustrious family who makes his home in Quincy, and Quincy people are glad that he chooses to identify himself with Quincy and that he takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Quincy. Mr. and Mrs. Adams were present in the afternoon and left generous remembrances at all of the booths.

Mayor Bryant who kindly gave the use of his grounds was also present and he and Mrs. Bryant left nothing undone that would in any way add to the event.

The ladies of the Day Nursery promised that if by Oct. 1 it had $300 it would open its room. It is almost certain now that this object will be carried out.

The public would be surprised to know how many children needed such a room and it is the hope of those interested that next winter no child will be alone and hungry, while its mother is away at work, as there were many last year.

For amusement there was nothing aside from dancing in the barn. It was a warm night but the inspiring hurdy gurdy music with Marie Grosse as tamborine girl proved too facinating and the floor was constantly occupied all the afternoon and evening.

Good Afternoon

All who have secured advanced memberships in the National Educational Association for the meeting in Boston next week, must present their certificates of memberships at the registration bureau in the Walker building, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to secure there, their badges, guide books, official programs of meetings, receptions, excursions, etc. This bureau was opened yesterday afternoon and will be kept open to the end of next week. Anyone, whether a teacher or not, may obtain membership at the registration bureau. One person by presenting certificates or paying admission fees of $2, may obtain badges, guide books, etc., for any other persons. The only way to obtain a correct idea of the great variety of meetings, receptions, excursions, etc., and the richness of the whole program, is to secure the official program, a pamphlet of fifty-seven pages. The general meetings are at 8 P. M. in Mechanic's hall, and begin Monday evening and close Friday evening. The department meetings are at 9.30 A. M. in a large variety of meeting places near Copley square. They will begin Tuesday morning and will end Friday morning.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The effort to revive the good old custom of toasting "Sweethearts and wives" every Saturday night in the United States navy, renders of timely interest the charming sketch in Good Housekeeping for July, by Cyrus Townsend Brady, of this observance. The sketch is accompanied by a frontispiece drawing by Henry Fangel. Another timely feature is an illustrated sketch of the home life of Governor and Mrs. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania. The "Housekeeper at Large" this month deals with the little folks and the big doll of Mrs. Burnett's play, The Little Princess. The pictures are charming, as well as the text. Aaron Coolidge Dowse writes upon The Choice of a Grocer. Ten cents a copy, one dollar a year. The Phelps Publishing Co. Springfield, Mass., New York, Chicago.

FORE RIVER AHEAD

In Construction of the New Jersey Class.

To Launch the Douglas In August.

The Fore River Ship & Engine Company still keeps ahead on the construction of the battleships of the New Jersey class building in its yard at Quincy Point—the New Jersey and the Rhode Island. On June 1 these vessels were estimated, by the United States naval constructor in charge, to be 37 per cent. completed, which is a gain of 5 per cent. over their condition the first of May and puts them 5 per cent. ahead of any of the other vessels of the same class building in other yards, the Virginia being the nearest to them.

Outwardly the Rhode Island is further advanced than the New Jersey, but the New Jersey's interior is the more complete and she is considered slightly in advance of her sister ship, on the whole. Both hulls are framed to the height of the main-deck beams and placed amidships, and the greater part of the protective-deck armor is in place.

The Rhode Island's propeller shaft struts have been attached and the New Jersey's are ready. More than 2,000 men are now employed in the yard and the work in the ship-tool shop and the forge goes on night and day.

Last Monday, the two steel masts of the cruiser Des Moines were stepped by the gantry crane as the vessel lay alongside the Fore River fitting-out dock. The masts were made at the Charlestown Navy Yard and were sent to Fore River with the tops in place.

The standing rigging will be put over the tops at once. The wooden top-masts, which are now alongside on the pier, will be sent up latter. The schooner-cut sails for the cruiser are now making at Charlestown and the rest of her canvas equipment is being prepared at Gloucester. The first of June the Des Moines was 86 per cent. completed, standing third on the list of vessels of her class. Only the finishing touches now remain to be put on. The engines will have their dock-trial in a week or two and it is probable the cruiser will be ready to see deep water in a month.

The material for the four car-floats building for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at Fore River shipyard is now all in the yard and much of it is ready to be put into the hulls. The keels of two of them have already been laid, between the schooner William L. Douglas and the Fall River line freight steamer, and as soon as the schooner's masts and bowsprit, which are being made ready on the beach, are out of the way the third barge will be started. The contract calls for completion of all four in six or eight months.

A few days ago the keel-plates of the passenger boat for the Fall River line were laid on the blocks on the Fore River beach. They are of half-inch steel, 36 inches wide and curved slightly, but not so much as the keel-plates of the freight-boat for the same line which is being framed in the next berth. The freighter is building very rapidly. Forty pairs of bottom-frames have been erected and the bulkheads are being set up.

The hull of the six-masted steel schooner William L. Douglas, which is being built a Fore Rive River for the Crowley fleet, is all plated amidships and the work is being rushed in order to get the vessel off the ways early next month.

The masts and bowsprit, also of steel, are ready to step now, but will not be put in until after the launching. As soon as the Douglas is out of the way the blocks will be set in her place for the 16,000-ton battleship Vermont.

More improvements are being made in the mechanical departments of the Fore River shipyard. A house for enamelling has been set up near the galvanizing shed, between the ship-tool shop and the mould loft; a new large saw-mill is being built near the lumber storehouse, and the new brass-foundry is in operation. A system of blowers just installed in the pattern and joiner shops will convey sawdust, shavings and other litter directly from the machines to a furnace in the power house, almost a third of a mile of pipes of various sizes being used in its construction.

The Fore River spur railroad is kept busy now-a-days, about 2,000 tons of freight a week being brought into the yard over the new track. A freight shed is soon to be built at Braintree especially to accommodate the shipyard freight. The Fore River rolling-stock has been increased by another of the powerful little locomotives formerly used on the Manhattan Elevated Road in New York.

Clements—Phelps.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place Tuesday evening, June 30, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Maud, of Cochituate, when their daughter Miss Abbie L. Phelps became the bride of Mr. John M. Clements of Quincy in the presence of relatives and a few friends.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Arthur W. L. Nelson of Cochituate the bridal couple standing beneath an arch of ferns and roses, the background of which was completely banked with ferns and daisies, while hot house flowers were used in abundance. The room was decorated in such a manner as to make a scene of rustic beauty.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white Swiss muslin and lace and carried bride roses, her veil being caught up with a spray of lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Lucy Phelps Ruddy of Lynn, gowned in a dainty figured muslin over lavender silk and carried a bouquet of pinks. The groom was attended by Mr. Fred Don of Salisbury. A reception followed and a wedding supper served, after which the bridal party departed amid showers of rice, and good wishes with hack and horses gaily decorated with white streamers. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Clements will reside at 37 Freeman street, Norfolk Downs, where a pretty home awaits them. The couple received many handsome and useful gifts.

Clan-Na-Gael Picnic.

The grand Clan-Na-Gael picnic, which will be held at New Downer Landing, just across the river from Quincy Point, on the Fourth of July, will have somewhat of a local flavor as many of the visiting organizations will be guests of the Robert Emmet club of this city.

One of the features of the day will be a prize drill, the contestants in which will be military Irish companies from Lowell, Haverhill, Lawrence and Providence. The companies from Lowell, Haverhill and Lawrence will march from the north station in Boston to the south station as a battalion and will take a train for Quincy at the south station. It is expected that the battalion will reach Quincy before the noon hour and, on their arrival here, they will be welcomed by the members of the Emmet club. During the late afternoon and evening the officers of the battalion will be entertained in the Emmet club's headquarters in the French building, corner of Hancock and Chestnut streets.

The prize drill will be a special feature of the picnic and the judges will be Lieut. Col. Lawrence J. Logan, 9th Mass. Infantry, M. V. M., who went with his regiment to Santiago; Col. Dennis M. Calnan, Col. Charles McCarthy, Philip Keneally, a former member of the U. S. regular and James D. Molloy, who fought with the Boer army in South Africa.

One of the most attractive features of the picnic will be the athletic meet in which many noted athletes will contest. There are men entered in some of the various contests who have been instrumental in smashing the world's record and whose names are familiar to all lovers of out-door sports.

In addition to the long list of sports prepared and the military drill, there will be many well-known speakers who will entertain those who who have an ear for oratorial eloquence. Among those who have promised to speak are Congressman McNary of the Quincy district, Mayor McNamee of Cambridge, Congressman Kelliher, Congressman Sullivan, Ex-Congressman Naphen of the Quincy district.

From present indications the picnic will be one of the largest ever held around Boston and as all who attend will probably pass through City Square it is safe to assume that Quincy on the Fourth will be one of the busiest places outside of Boston.

School Attendance.

The Cranch school led in percentage of attendance for the month of June, according to Supt. Parlin's report. The Coddington had the fewest tardinesses, and the John Hancock the smallest number of dismissals. Seven buildings reported truants.

Don't forget to take dinner at the Cooperative Dining Rooms on the 4th. Everything that goes to make up a first class fourth of July dinner will be found on their table. It costs only 25 cents.

It did everyone good to see Mr. H. H. Faxon's generosity and evident enjoyment at the Garden Party. Mr. Faxon says what he has to say if matters do not please him, but does not lose his good nature.

The morning Globe says that Thomas Carey, 55 years, of 25 Carey street, Quincy, was found in a doorway on Washington street about 4.30, semiconscious. Bystanders said he had either fallen in front of an electric car, or from one. It is probable that the man was overcome by the heat.

Among those who contributed to the Garden party were Mr. Henry L. Kincaide small tablets and chairs; Mr. Chas. Brooks fancy crackers; Mrs. Jewett, spoons; and Mr. F. H. Smith, china. These are but few of the many who gave service or money, and to whom the Day Nursery Association will be always indebted.

THE SOCIAL REALM.

"Unknown" to earth, but up on high
No hero doth "unknown" e'er lie,
No life is ever spent in vain,
Each sacrifice its crown will gain.
Upon the Angels' golden book,
If we some day be blest to look,
We'll find each noble deed writ down.
Each resting place to them is known,
And when the silver trumpet calls,
They'll take their place on Heaven's walls.

His stateroom was lined with bouquets, one being made of thirty American Beauty Roses. He had a package of fifty-five letters to keep him in touch with his friends. One parting gift was a fine silk American flag which fluttered from the deck as long as the vessel was in sight. Dr. Anderson has gone for a much-needed rest and will not return until early autumn.

GRAND SUCCESS.

The hours were from 2 to 10; and the officers of the association and chairmen of the several booths constituted the committee of arrangements.

The booths were arranged about the lawn and were marked by rows of lanterns.

One of the first tables to meet the eye as the visitor came up the main drive was the lemonade table. After the walk or drive to the grounds, what could be desired more than a glass of cool, refreshing, sweet lemonade, served by young ladies, in cool, becoming, summer costume. The attraction was too great to be passed by unnoticed and many a nickel found its way to the treasury by this table. The young ladies in charge were Miss Ada M. Nightingale, Miss May L. Gavin, Miss Alice E. Townsend, Miss Emily Gassett, Mrs. Clara A. Penley, Miss Annie H. Leonard, Miss Myra A. Spear.

Just in the rear was the fancy table. This was in charge of Mrs. Frank S. Davis assisted by Mrs. Joseph M. Sheahan, Mrs. John W. Sanborn, Mrs. Frank Brewer, Mrs. Walter E. Simmons, Mrs. T. A. Addison.

Near by encircling a large tree was the confectionary booth. This was in charge of Mrs. Luther W. Glover, who was assisted by Mrs. H. R. Hall, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. Harry L. Rice, Mrs. George E. Pfaffman, Mrs. Joseph Grose, Miss Katherine Sibley, Miss Gertrude Waterhouse.

Next came the domestic table in charge of Mrs. Nathan G. Nickerson and Mrs. J. B. Cornish.

On the south side of the house was a table where tea had been served early in the evening. This was in charge of Mrs. Walter T. Babcock, who was assisted by Mrs. Calvin Dyer, Mrs. A. M. Hayden, Miss Ethel Babcock, Miss Mollie Rogers, Miss Alice Porter, Miss Jeanette Carr, Miss Catherine Hardwick, Miss Bertha Newcomb, Miss Louise Randall.

In the rear was the cake table in charge of Mrs. E. A. Penniman who was assisted by Mrs. Jennie Ewell, Mrs. George T. Magee, Miss Hattie L. Pearce and Mrs. E. G. Pratt.

Near this was the ice cream table in charge of Mrs. C. T. Hardwick, assisted bo Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. Charles Wilson and Mrs. Cobb.

At the left of the main drive inclosed in a hedge of green was the Goose Pen. From an opening a goose head protruded and ten cents placed within its mouth brought forth a present. This was in charge of Mrs. Paul R. Blackmar, assisted by Mrs. W. E. Blanchard, Mrs. W. I. Dewson, Miss Gertrude Babcock.

Near the barn was a table laden with books for summer reading in charge of Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. Fred H. Smith, Miss Dora French, Miss Jane Reed, Miss Kate Lincoln.

Away over in one corner in a canopy of flags was the palm reader, Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, who was gowned in a Swedish costume, which she obtained on a recent visit to that country.

Although situated a little to one side it was the mecca toward which many found the way and Mrs. Wadsworth was kept busy all the afternoon and evening.

A round to the tables shortly before 10 o'clock showed that few articles remained unsold. On some tables everything had been sold and the ladies were packing up their effects.

It is impossible to tell how much was netted but it must have been several hundred dollars.

Surprise Party.

A surprise party was tendered to Rev. Mr. Bernard of the Swedish Lutheran church on Thursday evening by the Young People's society.

The committee in charge were Mr. Ragnar Wallin, Mr. Albert Jacobson, Mr. Albin Johnson, Mr. Claes Samuelson, Mr. Albin Erickson, Miss Anna Ryden, Miss Augusta Chilstedt.

Refreshments were served by a committee which is always known to provide the best. Mrs. Alida Lagergren in charge.

Prof. Wallin, who is stopping in Quincy during his vacation, was selected to hand the pastor the present which he did with some well selected remarks. The present was a handsome sum of money. The pastor feelingly responded.

A Good Stop.

The prompt act of a young man, whose name could not be learned, prevented what might have been a serious accident in City Square, Thursday night. The square was crowded when the horse attached to a wagon of the Old Colony Laundry came tearing down the street. The young man caught the horse by the head and brought him to a stop.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The favor with which the Hoyt plays have been received this season has led the management of the Castle Square Theatre to announce "A Texas Steer" for next week's attraction at this play-house. The players of the Castle Square Theatre stock company have been eminently successful in realizing the characters created by the author of these plays and in meeting the standard set by the organization brought together for their original production under the direction of the clever playwright who made "A Texas Steer" one of the chief hits of the Hoyt repertoire. The action of "A Texas Steer" is rapid, its characters were drawn from life and the scenes and incidents afford ample cause for continuous interest on the development of its plot. Following "A Texas Steer" on Monday July 13th, comes an elaborate revival of the famous drama "The Bells of Hazelmere." The usual distribution of souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

One by one, since "York State Folks" commenced its engagement at the Majestic Theatre, other attractions have terminated their runs for the season and the vacation days have begun until another season, but in this case as in all others there must be a survival of the fittest, and this delightful pastoral play continues to please packed houses night after night. The seventh week of this remarkable run will commence next Monday night, July 6, and all the past week seats have been selling briskly for the coming eight performances of this phenomenal engagement. The Wednesday and Saturday matinees are especially popular with out of town patrons.

The story of "York State Folks" can be told in a very few words but it is not for the story alone that theatre-goers like this delightful production. It is the combination of quaint characters realistically portrayed, a tale of village joys and troubles very naturally presented, and scenic settings that make the spectator feel as if they were real, which charms the immense audiences at this play.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"My Awful Dad," with the well known actor Frederick Bond, in the leading role, will be the principal attraction at Keith's for the week of July 6, always excepting, of course, the Fadettes orchestra, which continues to be the "real feature" of the summer show. Mr. Bond will be supported by an excellent company, and the little play is one of the better class of such offerings. Among the other entertainers scheduled for the same bill are Selbini and Grovini, European acrobatic grotesques; the Brothers Leslie, musical eccentriques; Josie and Willie Barrows, graceful dancers and pleasing singers, and Reese Brothers, spear and gun jugglers. The Fadettes will play all new selections and there will be a complete change of pictures in the vitagraph.

Canadians Took Principal Race

Philadelphia, July 3.—The first American "Henley" under the auspices of newly organized American Rowing association was held over the national course on the Schuylkill river. The distance—one and 5-16ths miles—is the same as the English distance, and the rules are practically alike. The principal interest was manifested in the eight-oared shell race between the Argonauts of Toronto, Yale freshmen, a mixed crew from the University of Pennsylvania and the Union Boat club of Boston. The Canadians won easily by four lengths.

The Favorite a Bad Third

New York, July 3.—Before a crowd of 20,000 persons J. B. Haggin's Waterboy, with Odom up, won the Suburban renewal, worth $12,000, at Sheepshead Bay. The black son of Watercress broke the track record for 1 1-4 miles by covering the distance in 2:04 3-5. The Brooklyn handicap winner, Irish Lad, was second, and Goldsmith, the favorite, a bad third.

LAMONTHE'S MOVEMENTS

Lead Boston Police to Believe That Goddu Murder Was Premeditated

Boston, July 3.—The Boston police have found that Joseph A. Lamothe, who killed Miss Goddu at Lowell, had made an attempt the day before the shooting to procure a lot of jewelry from a Boston instalment house. For a week he had been negotiating with the firm, from which he had previously bought three watches, for the purchase of two diamond rings, worth $150. He called at the firm's place of business Saturday noon, expecting to get the rings, which were to be paid for in weekly instalments, but the firm objected to letting him have them, as he still owed money on the watches.

Lamothe visited this place within an hour of the time when he left his work at a New Haven freight shed. During the 10 months that he worked for the railroad he drew a daily wage of $2.25. On Saturday he had about $14 due him, which he could not collect until Tuesday.

The more the police inquire into the circumstances immediately preceding the shooting the more certain they are that Lamothe was planning on Saturday to do some harm to some one, probably Miss Alexina, and was trying to raise money to assist him in escaping. He tried to sell one of his watches to a fellow-employe at the freight shed, but failed.

Convicted Murderer Gets New Trial

Portland, Me., July 3.—The full bench of the Maine supreme court has granted a new trial to Alexander Terrior, convicted of murder in the first degree. This is the first instance where a new trial has been granted in a murder case in the history of jurisprudence in this state. Terrior was convicted of the murder of Matthias Pare. Counsel for the defendant moved to have the verdict set aside on the ground of newly discovered evidence.

Leavitt Off For a Rest

Boston, July 3.—The present whereabouts of Elmer E. Leavitt, a member of the boot and shoe firm of Lamkin & Foster, are not yet known. At Leavitt's home, Medford, his little daughter, in answer to a query as to the whereabouts of her father, said: "My father has gone away for a needed rest. No one here knows where he is but my mother, and she is out of town visiting."

Cleveland's Engines Worked Well

Bath, Me., July 3.—The cruiser Cleveland was given its first preliminary trial from this city, going down the Kennebec river and then straight out to sea. The engines worked splendidly, but no official time was taken. The craft was out eight hours, and the engines were worked under all possible conditions without mishap. Many naval officials were aboard.

Commissioners Refuse to Testify

Springfield, Mass., July 3.—The Chicopee board of aldermen have begun an investigation of the charges of improper conduct in connection with the granting of junk, liquor and other licenses. License Commissioners Lodge and Murphy flatly refused to recognize the authority of the board to compel them to testify.

Lads Drowned Together

New Haven, July 3.—George Vilsort and Charles Schlayer, 14 years old, were swimming in Quinnipiac river. One of them, who was not a good swimmer, got into a hole, and when his companion went to his assistance he clutched him so tightly that both went down. The bodies were recovered later.

Freight Conductor Killed

Wind Too Strong For Tent

Machias, Me., July 3.—A strong gust of wind flattened one of the big tents of a travelling circus which exhibited here and 30 persons out of an audience of 2500 were more or less injured. There were no fatalities, and none of the injured is likely to die as the result.

Killed by Fall From Wagon

Braintree, Mass., July 3.—George Drake, 26 years old, driver of an express wagon, fell from his seat last evening and the heavily loaded wagon passed over him, crushing him so that he died while on the way to a hospital.

Double Murder and Suicide

Rochester, July 3.—Mrs. William Baxter hung herself and two children, Goodson, aged 8, and Gladys, aged 3. When her husband returned to his house at Leroy last night he could not get in. He finally broke in a window, and in an unfinished attic, reached by a ladder, the horrible spectacle met his eyes. Hanging side by side from the rafters were his wife and the two children.

More Taffy From Peter

Belgrade, July 3.—In a speech at a dinner last night, King Peter expressed his satisfaction that Servia today stood high in the esteem and respect of Europe. Speaking of the future of Servia, he pointed out the necessity for devoting his whole solicitude to the regeneration of the economical life of the nation and the development of the army.

Less Deaths and More Births

New York, July 3.—Statistics for the first half of the current year show that for the first six months of 1903 34,855 deaths were reported, indicating a death rate of 18.67 per 1000 of inhabitants, against a death rate of 19.54 per 1000 in the first six months of 1902. GREAT RACE OF AUTOS

HIGHLY EXCITING CONTEST.

With De Knyff of the French Team Eclipsed Daring Driving of Gabriel In Paris-Bordeaux Race—American Competitors Made Poor Showing

Ballyshannon, Ire., July 3.—The international race for the James Gordon Bennett cup was won by Jenatzy, a member of the German team, who covered the distance of 370 3-4 miles in 6 hours, 36 minutes, 9 seconds, including the stops imposed by the regulations. Two members of the French team ran each other so close for second place that it is not yet known whether De Knyff or Farman is entitled to the honor. Only one minute divided them, and it is thought likely that De Knyff's claim to second place will be upheld. The most remarkable features of the great race were its practical immunity from serious accidents and the wretched showing by the American team.

At Ballyshannon, which was the headquarters for the race, no news had been received last night of any one being injured except one of the contestants, the English crack, Jarrott, and his chauffeur. Jarrott had a miraculous escape from death and has a broken collarbone and a badly bruised body. His chauffeur also has a fractured collarbone besides a broken leg. Both, however, are doing well. The accident occurred through the steering gear of the favorite English car getting out of order when going at full speed. Instead of turning a corner the automobile ran straight into the bank at the side of the road and was smashed clean in two. How the occupants escaped death is more than they themselves can explain. Stocks, another Englishman, had his car disabled through the same cause, but was not hurt.

Baron De Caters, after making a splendid race, broke the axle of his car, and Foxhall Keene retired because of a similar accident. Moers and Winton of the American team both failed to finish, owing to derangement in the mechanism of their cars, and Owen, the third member of the team, only completed five out of the seven laps of the race. Thus only five out of the 12 starters completed the course. One of these, Edge, the holder of the cup, came in long after the race was officially declared over.

The poor showing of the American competitors is generally attributed to the excessive lightness of their cars. Owen, who made the best showing among them, when the race was over said he could not blame the roads. "I guess the reason I was beaten is the same as that of the other fellows who were defeated by the daring German."

All the arrangements for the race worked well and the Irish peasants are once more venturing on the roads, though with fearful eyes and keen ears for the roar of the motors as they come down the hills of Kildare. The Frenchmen received some consolation in not getting the cup by gaining the prize offered by Scott-Mantague, M. P., to the team whose members all finished.

The general opinion expressed by the British authorities is that the race was the most successful ever run and is likely to do much to remove the antagonism towards similar contests and motors in general.

From a racing point of view the contest, which lasted from 7 in the morning until 7:30 last evening, will always be remembered for the desperate struggle between De Knyff and Jenatzy. The daring driving of Gabriel in the Paris-Bordeaux race was quite eclipsed by the speed at which the contestants seven times passed the judges stand at Ballyshannon. Then the rivalry between Germany and France always stood out. Both Jenatzy and De Knyff waved their hands wildly in answer to the cheers of the onlookers and drove with what looked like desperation. As the final round approached and the gap between the two rivals lessened, there were many who thought that a collision was inevitable, but De Knyff kept his lead of a minute or two and crossed the line ahead. In elapsed time from start to finish Jenatzy was the fastest.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 5—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Endeavorers in training for public life.—Gen. xli, 38-42; Acts vii, 35, 36; Dan. vi, 1-4.

National anniversaries should not only speak to us of the past, but also of the present. They should not only recall the splendid achievements of those who wrought well for God and country in days gone by, but should impress us with the necessity of our performing in our day the duties that devolve upon us. They should be inspirations to present noble action as well as memorials to past noble action. The writer of the book of Hebrews recalls in the eleventh chapter of that book the wonderful achievements of the heroes of the past not simply to commemorate them and their deeds, but that we also, under the influence of their example, might "run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Public life is as important as any other phase of life. A man not only owes a duty to himself and to his family and to the social circles in which he moves, but also to his state. And this duty is an important one. God has raised up human governments for the execution of his will, and He calls upon His people everywhere to be interested in them and to perform their duties toward them. "Render unto Cæsar," said Christ, "the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." God should hold the supreme place in our lives, yet at the same time there is an important place for the state and for civic duties. Nor is it enough to point out the impurities of political life and beg to be excused. That the name of God is not expressly written in the constitution of the United States is no excuse for a body of Christian people for refusing to vote. By their votes they could help stamp the name and character of God upon the country itself, which is far better even than to have it written in our constitution. If politics is impure, there is all the more reason that Christian people should be interested in it, that it may be purified. God can sustain His people even in adverse surroundings. He kept Joseph and Moses pure in high places in Egypt and Daniel faithful even in idolatrous Babylon. Statesmen and politicians can be Christians if, like all other Christians, they depend upon the grace of God to sustain them.

God often trains His people for public service and calls them to it. He trained Joseph and Moses in Egypt, Daniel in Babylon and thousands of others since their day, and when the crisis came and they were needed men recognized their wisdom and placed the reins of power within their hands. God still wants his people to rule this world. It is His world and should be governed in accordance with His will and by His people. Endeavorers, young and old, should keep themselves in touch with public life. We should be informed upon the questions of the day and by voice and ballot cast our influence upon the side of civic righteousness and in favor of Christian citizenship—for "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach unto any people." Our forefathers were faithful to God and to their country. They loved His word, His house, His name, His day, and they impressed His will upon the nation that they founded. Let us follow in their footsteps, rendering "unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's."

There is no place in Christian Endeavor for the self exalter.

GOWN GOSSIP.

Large fruit is to be used on the early fall hats not only for informal wear, but for dress occasions.

Short sleeves and loose half necks are worn this season on almost all negligee garments and on many thin waists.

The use of valenciennes lace increases and threatens the popularity of the antique and cluny so universally-worn at present.

Everything now points to a revival of the long shoulder and the 1830 sleeve. The high girdle belt threatens the extinction of the pouched waist.

A shade of white, if white can be said to have shades, called mie de pain—bread crumb—is lighter than buff and approaches ivory in tone. It is seen in soft silks principally.

Black taffeta gowns perforated in an all over design of the English embroidery kind are reported from Paris. They are lined with a contrasting color and are trimmed with jet and fringe.

For wear with linen or other light material jacket gowns are shown collar and front pieces, miscalled guimpes. They come in pink, blue, mauve and yellow, in combination with white, and are very pretty and cool. They are easily made at home and may be varied almost endlessly.—New York Post.

THE POPE'S END NEAR

Condition Admitted to Be Extremely Critical

RECEIVES LAST COMMUNION

Participated In by All Dignitaries of Roman Catholic Church In Rome—Speculation Already Begun as to Who Will Succeed the Pontiff

Rome, July 6.—"God's will be done. Who would have believed it, when only 10 days ago I was presiding over a public consistory?" murmured Pope Leo, as he felt himself late last evening sinking into a sleep which lasted about three hours until excruciating pain brought the dying pontiff back to consciousness. He groaned and complained of pains on both sides of the thorax. Tenderly Dr. Lapponi, assisted by Pope Leo's valet, Pio Centra, and the physician's second assistant, De Castro, lifted the frail form and, changing the position, succeeded in giving the patient some relief.

Though hovering on the brink of death, the life of the pontiff is still prolonged by means of strong stimulants and concentrated nourishment, and his wonderful vitality may again resist and conquer the attack of this illness. Late last evening, after the excitement of the ceremony of the last sacrament was over, the pope seemed less restless, partly soothed by the religious service and partly by a dose of chloral, which was given to him in considerable quantity. The pontiff is lying on a small bed drawn up to a window overlooking the piazza of St. Peter's. The chamber is very large and draped with green curtains. The only picture in the room is an antique Madonna and the sole ornament a great ivory crucifix.

The interior of the Vatican testifies to the conviction that the passing of Pope Leo is very near. The courtyard of St. Damaso is filled with the carriages of the cardinals. Cardinal Satolli drove to Rome from Frascati last evening, the beautiful carriage horses covered with dust and perspiration. In the cortile are drawn up the carriages of the cardinals and many notables. Servants and messengers hurry across the court with bundles of huge wax tapers and with the robes of the ecclesiastical dignitaries who are waiting within the palace. The antechambers of the palace are thronged with princes of the church, high noblemen and members of the diplomatic corps. Telegrams of inquiry have been received from several of the monarchs of Europe.

Dr. Lapponi administered camphor caffeine through the mouth late last night, as one experiment of injection did not prove successful, Pope Leo saying he could not bear it. The amelioration resulting from the camphor caffeine was so marked that the pontiff called first his nephews and then his private secretary and adjusted some personal affairs which are pending.

Dr. Mazzoni and Dr. Lapponi now hope that unless there is heart failure they will be able to keep their patient alive for a few days longer, especially if he will willingly consent to observe the physicians' prescriptions. This, however, is the more difficult, as the pope preserves his full consciousness and argues and discusses his doctor's prescriptions. The latter, fearing to excite him by contradiction, are sometimes at a loss how to proceed.

During Sunday afternoon the strength of the pontiff began to fail him so rapidly and his condition became so critical that it appeared that only a few hours of life remained for him. It was, therefore, deemed wise to advise him of his grave condition and this was done with tender precaution. Pope Leo was thus prepared for his last communion, which was administered last night with the participation of all the cardinals now in Rome and the whole of the pontifical court.

The solemn, yet gorgeous, ceremony of administering the last sacrament took place at the bedside of Pope Leo. The central figure was the dying pontiff calmly preparing to enter the dark valley. His pale and emaciated face, almost as white as the pillows on which it rested, showed little sign of life, except the keen, glittering eyes, always his most striking feature.

Around the bed were grouped the noble guards, in their glittering uniforms, the knights of the cloak and sword in their picturesque medieval costume of black with white ruffs, 25 cardinals, all the members of the sacred college who are present in Rome, stately and venerable figures in their sweeping crimson robes, the whole forming a scene of rich, yet subdued, coloring, a fit subject for the pencil of Rembrandt. The whole of what is

DEATH OF LAMOTHE

Miss Goddu's Slayer Shot Himself In Struggle With Detective

New York, July 6.—Joseph A. Lamothe, who was wanted in Winchester, Mass., on suspicion of having murdered Georgianna Goddu, died in St. Luke's hospital from the revolver shot wound in the abdomen which he received during a struggle with Detective Becker in the reception room of the hospital. From the time he was shot Lamothe sank gradually and was unconscious until a few moments before death, when he regained consciousness and asked for a priest, who was summoned and gave him the last sacrament. In reply to the questions of the priest at to his relatives, he turned his face away and was silent. A few minutes after he died.

It is said that when the injured man was being taken to the ward of the hospital, he murmured: "I want to die." After an examination the coroner's physician gave it as his opinion that Lamothe had killed himself, probably intentionally.

Lamothe, it is stated, has a brother, a clergyman, attached to St. Francis Xavier's church, Little Falls, Minn. An examination of the dead man's clothes showed that in the coat were two bullet holes. One of them evidently had been made by the bullet which killed him and the other, it is thought, might have been made by the bullet that killed Georgianna Goddu.

Race Riot In Indiana

Evansville, Ind., July 6.—Troops have been ordered out by the governor to protect the jail, which is surrounded by 2000 men. Two negroes have been killed in the race riot which is rampant. The crowd around the jail, incensed at the killing of Patrolman Massey by Lee Brown, a negro, is shouting: "Death to all negroes." A company of negroes, armed with Winchester rifles, is marching through the streets, threatening to kill all white people. They have broken into a hardware store and secured all the arms and ammunition. Business men are now organizing and arming a party to exterminate the negroes.

Archbishop Seton Consecrated

Rome, July 6.—In the church of the American college Cardinal Martinelli, assisted by Archbishop Stonor and Mgr. Panici, canon of St. Peter's, consecrated Rev. Robert Seton, formerly of Jersey City, N. J., as archbishop of Heliopolis. Many friends of Father Seton, who was one of the first 12 members with whom the American college was inaugurated in 1859, witnessed the function. A sumptuous collation followed the function and Cardinal Martinelli last night gave a dinner in Archbishop Seton's honor.

Hanna Will Manage Campaign

Boston, July 6.—Senator Lodge, in an interview with a representative of the Boston Journal, denied last night that he would succeed Senator Hanna as chairman of the Republican national committee and manage the coming campaign. He said: "You may state as coming from me that Senator Hanna will remain chairman of the Republican national committee and that to him will be left the management of the coming campaign."

Wound Was Self-Inflicted

New Haven, July 6.—Coroner Mix has decided that the death of Mrs. Adelia Randall was due to a bullet wound self-inflicted. Mrs. Randall was housekeeper for Fred C. Nelson, a laborer, and was found dead in her sleeping room with a bullet hole in her temple. Nelson, who was in the house at the time, was held pending the coroner's investigation, but has now been released.

Bodies May Never Be Recovered

Hanna, Wyo., July 6.—The fire in the Union Pacific mine is now confined to a small place and has been shut off. Many experienced miners are here and it is believed that by tomorrow the bodies of the 230 victims will be reached. It is possible that the lower workings may be sealed up and thus become tombs for the unfortunate miners.

Fire Causes Loss of $1,500,000

St. Joseph, Mo., July 6.—The main building of the Hammond packing plant was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. The loss is estimated as high as $1,500,000. It is entirely covered by insurance. Two men lost their lives in the flames. Three men were injured, one seriously.

Was Posted on Military Matters

Berlin July 6.—Major Justus Scheibert, the military editor of The Kreuz Zeitung, is dead. He accompanied General Lee's army during the Civil war in America as an observer of the operations and wrote extensively, interpreting the military lessons to be drawn from them.

Slasher Gets Off With Fine

Newport, R. I., July 6.—H. L. Windham, who became involved in a fierce fight on board the Gloucester fishing schooner Hazel Oneita with Moses Pally, in which the latter was badly cut, was arraigned in a police court and fined $30.

A DAY OF FIRE ALARMS.

House on North Commons Completely Destroyed With Contents.

The Holiday a Perfect One for Sports, Picnics, Excursions and a Good Time.

There may be some who are sorry that the Fourth of July is over, but the majority of citizens gave a sigh of relief Sunday morning that Independence day of 1903 had passed into history. There are those however whose burned fingers will serve as a reminder of the day for some time to come.

To many the Fourth means the hardest day of the year. These are the firemen, police and employes of the street railway. It is no day of recreation for them, but is a day of not only hard work but of long hours.

It would have been impossible to find more favorable weather conditions. It was neither too hot or too cold but just right.

It is "the night before" that the independence of "Young America" begins to assert itself and they did their best to make sleep impossible. During the early evening, Friday, thousands from Quincy took the train for Boston and it was expected that a harvest of drunks would result. In this, however, there was disappointment, either because of the viligance of the officers on duty at the South Terminal or because they did not return to Quincy that night; but two arrests were made.

All of the regular officers were on duty, and they were augmented by half a hundred specials. Usually the police look for trouble in the West Quincy ward but this district was very quiet the night before. In fact the noisy districts were at the Centre and South Quincy. The latter place is fast becoming to be regarded as the troublesome district.

In Ward One there was considerable racket. Crowds of youngsters armed with canes, which explode blank cartridges, and shrill horns, made things noisy, About 11 o'clock a crowd gathered in front of the Adams building and set off fireworks. At first they were handled with care, but a little later someone started the idea of putting sky rockets in the street and setting them off.

They thought it fun to see one of these dangerous things go flying along the street leaving a streak of fire behind it. A number of these were set off in this manner and it is a wonder that some one did not receive a permanent injury. Later a huge bon-fire was built in the middle of the street but did no damage.

At Brewers Corner, Officer Bradley and his assistants had several skirmishes with drunken Finns. They stand in wholesome fear of Officer Bradley, but he had his hands full and not a few learned that he knows how to use his hands to good advantage. Along toward midnight they set a small building off Smith street on fire and wanted to call out the fire department, but he prevented their doing so, and put out the fire.

The toughest crowd was at South Quincy, at the junction of Liberty street and Brooks avenue. Fences and everything else the crowd could get their hands on was destroyed.

At midnight a crowd of several hundred started a huge fire and fed the flames with fences and parts of stone sheds. The officers attempted to stop them, but were unable and came in for considerable rough usage. A crowd attacked Officers Boutin and Thorne, and they had a tough fight. They were assailed with sticks, stones and everything else that came handy.

The officers were knocked down but regaining their feet they fought their way through the crowd. The police station was notified and Inspector McKay drove to the scene. The crowd threw cannon crackers under his horse and he was obliged to drive off. He returned on foot, and after consultation with Chief Williams who had arrived in response to an alarm of fire, the hose was turned on to the jeering crowd. This had the effect of scattering them. The fire department was called to the scene a little later by another fire but they had no trouble with the crowd. As many of the crowd were known to the police it is probable that the leaders may be brought into court.

THE FIRE ALARMS.

In no year have there been so many fire alarms, and the firemen of the central station had little rest. The first alarm sounded at 11.22 P. M. July 3 and from that time up to 11 o'clock Saturday night the firemen were kept on the jump. In all eleven bell alarms were sounded.

The first at 11.22 came from Box 143. Five minutes later a second alarm was sounded from the same box. This was for a fire in the house of John Hannon on Hillside street. The fire is said to have been caused by an overturned lamp and resulted in a loss of $00.

During the fire George O'Brien of West Quincy got cheers from the crowd by mounting to the roof of the burning house on a ladder and rescuing an American flag.

The next alarm came from Box 37 at 1.25 A. M., and was for a fire in a small building in the rear of Sutherland's block at the corner of Franklin and Water streets; damage slight.

Box 143 came in again at 1.48 A. M. and was a false alarm.

Box 41 sounded at 2.25 A. M., and was for a fire in an outbuilding said to have been stolen from the premises of George Anderson off Granite street.

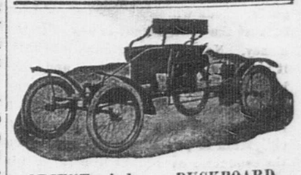

Box 36 came in at 3.20 A. M., and was for a fire in a small building off Marsh street, near the railroad tracks, and used as a clerks office by the Quincy Adams freight department of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The building was partly destroyed.

Box 136 sounded at 10.50 A. M., and was for a fire in a house on Quincy street owned by the estate of Patrick Cunniff and occupied by Daniel Driscoll. The fire is said to have started in the chimney near the kitchen, and worked up through the walls to the attic. The loss was $200.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Box 24 sounded at 1.22 P. M. This was the most disastrous fire of the day, and it was 4 o'clock before the recall was sounded. The fire was in a house owned by Edward Curran and occupied by John Logren situated off Mt. Ararat lane. It proved a most difficult fire to get at. The nearest hydrant was no Adams street 3,000 feet away, and aside from that it was a rocky country without streets. The fire was well under way when the department arrived, and it was seen that no power could save it. It took some time to lay the hose and get water to the building and all the department could do was to save a small barn adjoining.

Good Afternoon.

Today's rain further convinces us that the Fourth of July weather was made to order.

The epitaphs upon the four tablets within the walls of the Adams Temple are worthy of careful scrutiny; being examples of fine taste and scholarly in a high degree. They were written by scholars and are true and just in their eulogy, and touching in tender sentiment.

Fourth of July pranks where they do not involve the destruction of property can be stood with some degree of leniency. But setting fire to buildings and other similar crimes deserve to be corrected as seriously as if they occurred on any ordinary day.

A boy should be made to know that the Fourth of July is a day set apart to commemmorate the courage and sacrifice of those who spent their abilities and lives to free this land from tyranny, and that all might live in the enjoyment of their own lives and property.

The tyranny of the boy who commits the offense of setting fire should be as effectually stamped out as that of Revolutionary times.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Luce caucus bill is optional n all cities except Boston, and there is a tendency in the other cities of the state to wait and see the experiment in Boston before accepting it for local application. Why not consider the proposition on its merits as applied to the conditions at home, which are not similar to those existing in Boston, and make the issue a prominent one in each city in the next campaign. The trial in Boston will not demonstrate whether or not such a reform is wise or necessary in any other city.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞It is as much a man's duty to pay his fare on a railroad train or on a street railway car as it is to pay for a bill of goods which he has purchased. As well say that it is honest for a man to walk out of a store with a bundle of goods, goods which he has not paid for because the clerk forgot to ask for the money. No matter how one looks at it, it is a species of dishonesty, and dishonesty cannot be defended upon any plea whatsoever. When a man boards a public vehicle he puts himself under an obligation to pay his fare, and when the conductor over-looks him it is his plain duty to seek the conductor and settle.—Richmond Times-Despatch.

☞What has 2003 in store for us? In 1803 the telegraph, telephone, kodak, and other "commonplaces" of to-day would have been regarded as Munchausenisms, Is it not possible that one hundred years hence we can push a button and see as well as converse with our neighbors at the north pole, or drop a nickle in the slot and get the latest market reports from Mars, or ring a bell and have a meal served by a "dumb waiter" who isn't looking for a tip? At the pace we are going even this latter apparent impossibility may be possible. —From "Vest Pocket Confidences," in Four[illegible]k News for July.

HOLIDAY TENNIS.

Many Entries in Quincy Tournament and it Was Unfinished.

The open tournament in singles played at the grounds of the Quincy Tennis club on the Fourth drew a large crowd of entries, thirty in all. Many of the players from outside the club were well-known, among them being Wallis of Dartmouth, Bishop of the Longwood club and Niles the Interscholastic champion. Eight members of the home club played. Owing to the large number of entries it was found impossible to finish the tournament. A summary of the scores is given, Holden and L. T. Wallis drew byes.

PRELIMINARY ROUND.

H. H. Albee beat B. S. Evans, 6—4, 7—5.
V. S. Brokaw beat C. W. Bates, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4.
D. S. Niles beat F. H. Wallis, 6—3, 6—2.
C. H Smith beat Thorp Babcock, 6—3, 6—0.
Allen Arnold beat H. F. Wallis, 9—7, 7—5.
W. M. Packard beat S. B. Cook. By default.
R. Bishop beat T. Smith, Jr., 6—6, 6—1.
A. F. Fuller beat J. O. Hall, Jr., 6—2, 6—1.
E. A. Mead beat C. C. Miller, 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.
E. Bissell beat F. V. Chapman. By default.
A. W. Hall beat W. H. Abbott, 6—1, 5—7, 6—3.
R. P. Delano beat W. Stevenson. By default.
N. W. Niles beat Mr. Carpenter. By default.
S. L. Beal beat H. H. Aldrich. By default.

FIRST ROUND.

A. B. Holden beat H. H. Albee, 6—1, 6—3.
V. S. Brokaw beat D. S. Niles, 6—3, 6—1.
C. H. Smith beat Allen Arnold, 2—6, 6—3, 6—2.
Richard Bishop beat W. M. Packard, 6—4, 6—1.
A. F. Fuller beat E. A. Mead. By default.
A. W. Hall beat E. Bissell, 5—0, 6—1.
N. W. Niles beat R. F. Delano, 6—0, default.
L. T. Wallis beat S. L. Beal, 9—7, 6—4.

SECOND ROUND.

A. B. Holden beat V. S. Brokaw, 6—4, 6—4.
Richard Bishop beat C. H. Smith, 6—4, 6—1.
A. F. Fuller beat A. W. Hall, 5—7, 6—1, 6—4.
N. W. Niles beat L. T. Wallis, 3—6, 6—1, 10—8.

The matches between Niles and Wallis, and Hall and Fuller, were very close and interesting. Hall had the misfortune to fall in his third set with Fuller, when he had his opponent 4-3. He sustained a very severe strain of his ankle and although be pluckily finished, winning was out of the question.

The semi-finals and finals remain to be played. If it is pleasant tomorrow Niles and Fuller will play their match at two o'clock, and Holden will play Bishop at sour o'clock. These matches and the nals will bring out some fine tennis.

Through the kindness of Mr. W. E. Burke lemonade was served throughout the day.

Council Business.

There is considerable business to come before the meeting of the City Council tonight.

A public hearing will be given on the petitions to change the names of the square opposite City Hall, and the square opposite the Adams Academy.

The Committee on Streets will report on a number of petitions for street lights, on the widening of Independence avenue, extension of Penn street and Federal avenue, and on improving land at entrance to Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains will report on the proposed amendments to the Plumbing ordinance.

The Committee on Licenses will report on a number of petitions for minor licenses.

The Committee on Ordinances will report upon the order for $750 for improving the Wrrd Six playground and on removal of pole in front of Hose 3 house.

In the calendar is the order granting the Telephone Company permission to attach wires to poles of other companies.

Clan-na-Gael Picnic.

It is estimated that there were 10,000 present Saturday at the picnic of the Clan-na-Gael at New Downer Landing, and it was a very orderly crowd. The police reported no disturbances, and no arrests were made. There were a large number of sporting events and nearly $2000 were distributed in prizes,

The ball game was between the Quincys and Waverlys of South Boston and was won by the Quincy team by a score of 4 to 1.

The Robert Emmet club of Quincy entertained a number of the officials of the association before and after the picnic at French's hall.

The crowds began to arrive early. They came on the steam trains, in barges and carriages, and by electric cars from Neponset. Many remained at the grove in the evening to enjoy the dancing.

Beautiful Dahlias.

Mr. John G. Thomas of Wollaston brought to our office this morning a very handsome bunch of dahlias, the finest we have seen this summer. The season has been so cold and wet, that plants and flowers have been backward and poor, and only a few have been able to raise any blossoms on their dahlin stalks as early as this; but Mr. Thomas' good management produces an abundance of these beautiful flowers.

THE BIG GAME.

City Hall Team Defeated by the Merrymounts.

The Former Were Not In It.

The City Hall ball team met defeat at the hands of the Merrymounts on the morning of the Fourth at Merrymount Park, 19 to 6.

Councilman Reardon started in to twirl but he proved to be a mark for the Merrymounts, and was relieved by McKenzie. Kolson started on the slab for the Merrymounts, but after he had fanned seven of his opponents he was replaced by Monroe, and the City Hallies were allowed to make some runs.

Park Commissioner Pfeffmann made a pretty catch in left field and knocked a two-bagger, and Overseer of the Poor Cunningham played a good game at third. Officer Burrill made a couple of hits and sent up a long fly which was caught in deep left field.

Good for West Quincy.

In the presence of thousands of enthusiasts, the West Quincys nearly shut out Dorchesters in a fine game at Dorchester on the Fourth, the score being 9 to 1 in favor of Quincy, as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
West Quincys	0	0	0	2	2	0	0	4	1	—9

Copelands Win.

The Copeland club defeated the Edwards Associates on the Ward Four playgrounds, Saturday morning, in a one-sided affair by a score of 25 to 2. The game was marked by the terrific batting of Copelands, four pitchers being used by the losers, all of whom were severely pounded. The pitching of Donaher for Copelands was of a high order, he getting twelve strikeouts and allowing but three hits. Creegan's playing was the one redeeming feature of the losers' exhibition, his hitting and fielding being of the sensational kind. On stepping to the bat in the fourth inning he was presented with a basket of flowers by the members of his society in the bleachers. The Edwards nine is being reorganized.

Victors Win.

A most exciting game of ball was played between the Victor A. A. of South Quincy, and the Walnut A. A. of Charlestown on the afternoon of the holiday, the Victors winning with one out in the last inning. The game was replets with brilliant plays, the errors made being excusable on account of the poor condition of the grounds.

Rapson was in the box for the home team and he started at a pace that excited much enthusiam, allowing but five hits. The infielders were kept busy only two flies going to the outfield.

Probably the smallest number of putouts ever made by a first baseman was that of Morrisey who only had two.

Kemp again shone at second both at the bat and the field and is now a fixture in the team, for he has certainly worked hard for it.

Smith at short for the home team put up a good game, making some pretty stops and throws but his batting poor. As Manager McDonald has said, we are all right but our batting, and are due to take a brace.

Other Games.

At Hingham,—Braintrees, 5; Wampatucks, 1.

The Wollaston Park A. A. defeated the Y. M. I. C. ball team of Atlantic on their home grounds Saturday by the score of 24 to 6. The feature of the game was the battery work of Gram and Woodman.

Swedish Picnic.

A number of the Swedish residents held a basket picnic the Fourth in the lower grove at Merrymount park. A baud was in attendance and gave concerts through the day. There was also a series of sports and refreshments were served.

Mass for Late Fr. Francis.

A month's mind mass was celebrated at St. John's church this morning in memory of Rev. Fr. Francis A. Frigulietti, who died a month ago. Rev. J. P. Cuffe was celebrant, Rev. Julian E. Johnstone, deacon, Rev. John J. Casey, sub-deacon, and Rev. William J. Foley, master of ceremonies. Rev. Fr. McDonnell the new pastor of the Braintree Parish was inside the chancel.

A Live Wire.

Thursday evening, July 2, one of the electric wires broke on the corner of Elm avenue and Willow street, and what might have resulted seriously to many children in the neighborhood was averted by a neighbor telephoning to the city authorities. As it was, a small boy near by took hold of the wire and in attempting to lift it found he could not extricate himself and his agonizing screams brought to his aid his mother who succeeded in pulling him away with some difficulty.

ANCIENT COFFEE.

The Way the Beverage Was Brewed In the Seventeenth Century.

There are in existence in Great Britain a few copies of an ancient cookbook, published in 1662, that gives what is perhaps the first English recipe for coffee. The recipe reads:

"To make the drink that is now much used, called coffee.

"The coffee berries are to be bought at any Druggist, about seven shillings the pound. Take what quantity you please, and over a charcoal fire, in an old frying pan, keep them always stirring until they be quite black, and when you crack one with your teeth that it is black within as it is without, yet if you exceed, then do you waste the Oyl, and if less, then will it not deliver its Oyl; and if you should continue fire till it be white, it will then make no coffee, but only give you its salt. Beat and force through a lawn sieve.

"Take clear water, and boil one-third of it away, and it is fit for use. Take one quart of this prepared water, put in it one ounce of your prepared coffee, and boil it gently one hour, and it is fit for your use; drink one-quarter of a pint as hot as you can sip it. It doth abate the fury and sharpness of the Acrimony, which is the gender of the Diseases called Cronical."

A Coming Lawyer.

A young lady teacher in a West Philadelphia kindergarten thinks that she has discovered a "Philadelphia lawyer" in embryo. She made the discovery in one of the exercises incident to teaching the young idea how to count. After drawing five ones on the blackboard and writing beneath the five successive numerals, one, two, three, four, five, together with a painstaking verbal explanation, she attempted to test the understanding of the little ones by turning to one bright eyed little fellow and putting the question:

"Now, Donald, which would you rather have, five pennies or a five cent piece?"

"Five pennies!" Donald promptly replied.

"Why, Donald?" asked the teacher patiently.

"Because," said Donald, "you see, if you lost one of the pennies you'd have four left, and even if you lost four you'd have one left; but if you lost the five cent piece, why, it would all be gone—every penny!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Charm of the Mississippi.

To novice eyes a trip down the Mississippi is full of wonder. Not the beauties of the Hudson does one find, nor the castled turrets of the Rhine, nor the gay pageants of the storied Thames, nor the gentle loveliness of that small stream that graces the mountain region of North Carolina—O thrice fair Swananoa!—but a beauty all its own has this wonderful Mississippi, which on its serpentine way from pearly Lake Itasca to the blue waters of the Mexican gulf traverses 2,616 miles of territory. Its legends and traditions, its great flush times before the war, its spectacular history, may all be learned from some quaint old river man who will gladly give full measure of his lore. There is a charm in the vast stretches of forest, in the loneliness of the great stream—Father of Waters—in its mightiness and supreme length, its sunsets and its sunrises.—Sports Afield.

Ganjah Smoking.

In Jamaica ganjah, a variety of Indian hemp, is smoked by all classes, with terrible results. It is stated that it was this weed that was used by the leaders of the Indian mutiny to drive the sepoys into the passions of raging mania, which they exhibited during that campaign. Ganjah smoking affects the beginner in a peculiar way. While under its influence his senses of time, sound and distance are obliterated. A single minute may seem a month, a child's voice sounds like the rattle of a machine gun and a little finger may seem a mile long. "Continued use," says the Spatula, "causes cataleptic fits and eventually idiocy or raving homicidal madness."

Small Horses.

The geologists tell us that the orobippus, the ancestor of the noble horse of today, was but little larger than the common rabbit of today and that each had sixteen toes, four on each foot, the same as the cattle of today. After the lapse of ages this sixteen hoofed equus shed a toe or hoof from each foot and thus became a twelve toed animal. The sixteen hoofed variety are first found in the eocene period of geological epochs.

To Win Notice.

Mrs. Greene—One does not like to be ignored. I wore a brand new gown at the reception last night, and I don't believe a soul noticed me.

Mrs. Gray—There's where you made a mistake. Now, I wore my old black silk that has been turned twice, and everybody saw me fast enough.—Boston Transcript.

Carried Its Own Punishment.

Jack—Tom, I'm in a terrible fix. I'm engaged to three girls.

Tom—Well, that's not exactly a crime.

Jack—No. That's the worst of it. If it were, I could go to prison and have some peace.—Stray Stories.

Bound to Do as He Pleases.

Rebecca—Father is going to marry for the third time.

Rachel—He must be sentimental.

Rebecca—Oh, no; he's just obstinate. —Detroit Free Press.

One sure way to tell whether a man is a crank or not is to draw him into a discussion. If he doesn't agree with you, of course he's a crank.

DAY OF FIRE ALARMS

The family of Mr. Logren, who occupied the house, left home in the morning to attend a picnic at Merrymount Park, and when they returned to their home to find nothing but a smoking ruin, they were overcome with grief. It is also said that he had quite a sum of money in the house and this was also lost.

The cause of the fire is unknown, although it is believed to have been incendiary. The loss on the building and contents is estimated at $2,000, and is partly covered by insurance.

Combination H. & L. No. 1 was capsized at the fire, but fortunately the only damage done was to break one of the poles. The driver went up the lane toward the fire but had not gone far when he saw it was impossible for him to get to the scene, so he tried to turn and get out of the way so as to give the other apparatus a chance.

In trying to do so one of the ladders caught under a wire fence and the truck was capsized. Driver Bishop and the horses escaped injury. Box 35 was sounded at 9 o'clock, P. M. and was for another blaze in the freight office off Marsh street, which had again been fired.

Box 23, the hurry-up box, sounded at 9.36 P. M. This was for an incendiary fire in the unoccupied house on Cottage street owned by Representative Peter T. Fallon, and known as the Gallagher house. It was quickly extinguished. While the firemen were there, they were called to the adjoining house to extinguished a slight blaze caused by a man smoking in bed.

The last alarm of the day was sounded from Box 36 at 10.52. This proved to be a blaze in the freight office off Marsh street, to which the department had been called twice before.

At the Central fire station the wants of the inner-man were attended to by Caterer Remick, who supplied them with a nice clam chowder the night before the Fourth, and on the night of the Fourth with cold meats, hot coffee, doughnuts, ice cream, etc. The boys appreciate such things as these.

ACCIDENTS.

While there were doubtless many minor accidents, there were only two serious ones as far as known. One of these was to a Finn at Brewers corner, Friday night, who had his hand shattered by a cannon cracker which went off while he was holding it. The crowd warned him to throw it away, but he did not understand English and held on to it until it exploded. When it exploded it shattered his hand and smashed a plate glass window in the drug store.

Arthur Tingley, a newsboy, had a hole bored through his right hand in the afternoon of the Fourth by a blank cartridge. He held a revolver in his right hand with the muzzle close to the palm trying to load it with a blank cartridge. Suddenly it exploded, the wad passing clear through the hand. The wound was dressed by Dr. Ellsworth.

ON THE MOVE.

There were crowds about City Square all day the Fourth. At times the crowd numbered several hundreds. They were perfectly orderly and were for the most part bound for the Clan-na-gael picnic at New Downer Landing.

The street railway had all of its cars in use and carried thousands upon thousands of people, especially on the line between Neponset and Quincy Point. Considering the large number of people carried, cars were run on fairly good time and no accidents were reported.

Aside from this there was a constant stream of barges, express wagons, and carriages with people passing through the square mostly to the beaches.

SPORTS.

There were a number of sporting events in the several parts of the city. These included base ball, golf and tennis.

In the morning at Merrymount Park the Merrymounts and City Officials team gave an exhibition game of ball. There are many funny features during the game, notably the tumbling act of Overseer of the Poor Cunningham to avoid being hit by a grounder; the wild throwing of the ball by the City nine, and the remarkable stick work by Councilman Walsh which never found the ball; the two-bagger by Park Commissioner Pfaffmann, and the running by Policeman Burrell. But five innings were played.

The Atlantics won from the Ashmonts, the West Quincys from the Dorchesters and the South Quincys from Longwood although they lost one game to Brighton.

The game by the Odd Fellows of Mt. Wollaston and John Hancock lodges ended in a dispute over the ruling of the umpire. Special mention of these games however will be found elsewhere.

FIREWORKS.

On the night of the Fourth there were many private displays of fireworks. They were not confined to any particular ward but were general throughout the city. Along Washington street between Edwards and Union streets the boys had considerable sport and made considerable noise by placing caps along the street railroad tracks. They kept this up all the evening. Hundreds of those caps would be used at a time and as a car passed over them the reports resembled the noise made by a rapid fire gun.

Many residents kept open houses and entertained all callers on a lavish scale. Notable among these was ex-Councilman Wilson of Revere road.

Stoneham's Big Fire

Stoneham, Mass., July 6.—This town was threatened with destruction by fire when a blaze which started in Litch & Hayward's stable in Central square, swept rapidly through a line of wooden buildings, and within half an hour had passed completely beyond control of the local department. An hour later, however, with the aid of apparatus and men from neighboring towns, the fire had been placed under control after a whole block of 10 buildings had been burned, entailing a loss of about $100,000.

LIPTON'S COSTLY SPORT

Princely Fortune Invested to Lift the America's Cup.

COST OF THREE TRIALS $2,000,000.

Sir Thomas Says That if He Again Fails to Win the Cup He Has More Millions to Keep on Challenging. Titled Yachtsman Favors Changing Style of Boats In Future Cup Races.

At the luncheon in the White House at Washington the other day in honor of Sir Thomas Lipton interesting statements were made concerning the cost of challenging for and defending the America's cup, says the New York World. Sir Thomas caused much surprise when he said that if he should win the cup this time it would represent an investment of considerably more than $2,000,000. If he again failed to win it, he said, he had still more millions to spend in the effort to lift it.

Sir Thomas said it would cost him a little more than $1,000,000 to compete for the cup this year. This was partly due, he explained, to the fact that he had brought over his two challengers and had had both of them in commission for months. Each yacht has a crew of sixty men, who are the best to be had, and the cost of keeping them in commission a month represents a small fortune.

Sir Thomas did not say what Shamrock III. cost him to build, but intimated that it was close to $500,000. To the cost of the new yacht must be added the cost of keeping the other in commission and the expense of the Erin, in which her owner entertains in lavish style. The combined expenses of his trial for the cup this year, Sir Thomas said, would reach $1,000,000 and probably more. His two previous attempts to get the cup cost him a little more than that figure. In contrast with the cost to the challenger it was stated by one of the members of the party that the Reliance syndicate had invested but $300,000 in the defender and that this amount was expected to cover all expenses.

Following the question of the cost there was an informal discussion as to the advisability of adopting seagoing schooners in future cup races. Sir Thomas strongly favors this idea, though he has said that he will abide by the decision of the New York Yacht club. It was a seagoing schooner which brought the cup to America.

The British changed the style of the contest in an effort to regain the cup, by sending over a cutter to compete for it. That style of yacht was new on this side of the water, and it was met with a sloop, from which the present ninety footers have been evolved. They are built for wind and not for weather, and Reliance and Shamrock III. are believed to represent the very highest degree of perfection in that direction. Little change, it is said, could be made in building yachts along these lines for future cup races.

More than that, the yachts are so expensive that only millionaires can build them, and their value is gone when the last race of the series is sailed. Everything is sacrificed to speed, and they cannot even be rebuilt so that they can be used for cruising. Therefore, win or lose, Sir Thomas Lipton considers that the time is ripe for the adoption of schooners which can brave any sea and can cross the ocean under their own sail, instead of having to be towed across.

With the introduction of schooners it is thought many wealthy people would build boats to compete for the honor of defending or challenging for the cup, as they could be subsequently used for ocean cruising. The races would then become more a test of seamanship than they are now, and Sir Thomas believes the interest in the contests would be greatly stimulated. The distance could be increased and the races could be sailed in any kind of weather, for the rougher the weather the keener would be the sport.

The Massachusetts Medical society is moving to secure legislation for the protection of the confidential relations between physician and patient, says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican. The lawyer and clergyman now have the protection of the law for their professional secrets against the questions of examining counsel, and the argument is that the consultation and confidential conference between the doctor and his patient, which the law does not protect, should be held equally sacred in the courts. When called into court as witnesses the respect in which confidences given to the two other professional men are held falls away from the doctor. He can be forced to reveal that which has been given to him under pledge of secrecy, and this is revolting to his sense of honor. Hence the protest and appeal which come from the State Medical society.

Elections In Germany.

About 20,000,000 envelopes, intended to cover voting papers and insure additional secrecy of the ballot, are being prepared for the next elections to the German reichstag. Not less than seventy tons of paper will be used.

Poor King Peter.

Who is it in the palace sits,
With trembling tongue and shaky wits,
And in his dreaming turns and fits?
It's Peter.

Who jumps at every creak of door
And thinks he hears the mob's wild roar
And knows they come to spill his gore?
It's Peter.

Who wishes he had stayed away
And knows he's growing thin and gray
And counts each morn his final day?
It's Peter.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth entertained all the clerks at the shirt-waist store July 4 by taking carriages in the morning for Cohasset, where all had a dip in the ocean and then one of Kimball's famous fish dinners; driving back to Quincy late in the afternoon.

President Alden's experience while in the City Council does not seem to be that of other members from Atlantic some of whom say that they were besieged by requests from their constituents to interest themselves in improvements.

THE FINAL LINK WELDED

In a System of Globe-Girdling Submarine Cables

THE PRESIDENT'S GREETING

To Governor of Philippines at Opening of American Pacific Cable—Went Around the World In Twelve Minutes—Vast Asset For America

New York, July 6.—The Pacific cable was successfully completed at 10:50 o'clock Saturday night, eastern time, by the welding together of the eastern and western links at Honolulu, on board the cableship Anglia, thus completing the entire line of telegraph from San Francisco to the Philippine islands, a distance of 8000 miles, and bringing to a conclusion the greatest and most difficult of submarine cable enterprises undertaken in the history of ocean telegraphy.

A message from President Roosevelt to President Mackay of the Commercial Cable company was sent over the new cable around the world in 12 minutes and Mr. Mackay's reply was sent around the world in 9½ minutes. The best previous time for messages around the world was made on one sent by Chauncey M. Depew from the national electric exposition grand central palace in this city in 1896. It took 50 minutes to transmit the message. The first message sent over the new Pacific cable was one from President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay to Governor Taft of the Philippines at Manila. Following Governor Taft's reply was the message from President Roosevelt to Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph and the Commercial Pacific Cable company. Mr. Mackay's reply was followed by a number of congratulatory messages from governors of states and other public officials to Governor Taft.

At 10:50 President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay sent the following message to Governor Taft: "I open the American Pacific cable with greetings to you and the people of the Philippines."

Governor Taft's reply was received at 11:19 p. m. and was as follows: "The Filipino people and the American residents in the islands are glad to present their respectful greetings and congratulations to the President of the United States, conveyed over the cable with which American enterprise has girded the Pacific, thereby rendering greatly easier and more frequent communication between the two countries. It will certainly lead to a closer union and a better understanding of each other's aims and sympathies and of their common interest in the prosperity of the Philippines. It is not inappropriate to incorporate in this, the first message across the Pacific from the Philippines to America, an earnest plea for the reduction of the tariff on Filipino products in accordance with the broad and liberal spirit which the American people desire to manifest toward the Philippines and of which you have been an earnest exponent."

"Congratulations and success to the Pacific cable which the genius of your lamented father and your own enterprise made possible."

The course of President Roosevelt's message to Mr. Mackay was by the Postal Telegraph company's land line from Oyster Bay to San Francisco, thence by the Commercial Pacific cable to Honolulu, to Midway, to Guam and to Manila. From Manila to Hong Kong the message had to pass by the cable which was lifted and cut by Admiral Dewey in 1898. From Hong Kong it went to Saigon, to Singapore, to Penang, to Madras, to Bombay, to Aden, to Suez, to Alexandria, to Malta, to Gibraltar, to Lisbon and to the Azores. Between Hong Kong and the Azores it passed by foreign cables. At the Azores it was taken up again by the commercial cables and sent to Canso, thence to New York, and thence to Oyster Bay. The time of transmission was 12 miautes. The president's message was received by Mr. Mackay at 11:55 p. m. He replied as follows:

"I thank you deeply for your message and I earnestly hope that the Pacific cable, by opening the wide horizon of the great territory, may prove a useful factor to the commerce of the United States."

Mr. Mackay's message was sent eastward over the same lines as President Roosevelt's and was received by President Roosevelt at 12:04½. The time of transmission was 9½ minutes. These messages were followed by a large number of congratulatory messages to Governor Taft and President Mackay from governors of the different states and other distinguished men.

Nurse Bixby's Body Found

Lynn, Mass., July 6.—The body of a woman, apparently 40 years old, was found floating in the surf at Upham's beach, Nahant. The body was subsequently identified as Mary H. Bixby, a nurse, who left Norwood four weeks ago to go to Cambridge. It is not known whether death was due to accident or suicide.

Plague Has Foothold In Chili

Santiago, July 6.—Isolated cases of bubonic plague have occurred at Valparaiso and other towns in Chili. The authorities are taking the strictest precautions.

HUB IS CROWDED

With Delegates to Convention of National Educational Association

Boston, July 6.—The main body of educators from all parts of the country has reached this city for the great convention of the National Educational association, which begun its annual session here today. The system of steering hotelward the incoming hordes was severely taxed. However, it stood the strain to a remarkable degree, assisted in a great measure by the excellent weather and the general good nature of the strangers, notwithstanding their long, tiresome journey.

Groups of 20 and 30 are met at frequent intervals, guide-books in hand, looking at the different places of historic interest throughout the city. A large number go out into the suburbs on trolley rides, while those from the west seem particularly eager to get a sight of the ocean, so that all the harbor boats are well patronized.

It is estimated that there are between 25,000 and 30,000 men and women closely identified with the different educational institutions in the country in the city.

Boston Firemen In a Smashup

Boston, July 6.—While responding to an alarm for a trivial fire in the Dorchester district, six of Boston's protective department men were run down by a flying express train at the Freeport street crossing of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. Thomas V. Duffy, the driver of the wagon in which the sextet were riding, was instantly killed, his body being almost ground to pulp, while three of the others were seriously and another badly injured. The real responsibility for the accident is not yet determined.

Robbed and Beaten to Death

Boston, July 6.—Edward L. Scribner, aged 82, was found lying on the common just after 1 o'clock in the morning and was dead when brought into a hospital. From stories told to the police it is believed the man was assaulted by three colored men on Somerset street, who robbed him and then took their victim in an unconscious condition to the common, where they left him lying on the grass. There he was found half an hour later by a policeman.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded

Stamford, Conn., July 6.—Arthur Austin, 20 years old, a law student of New York city, is in a critical condition, the result of an accidental shooting by his younger brother. The latter went to the room where Arthur was sleeping with an old revolver and playfully told his brother that if he did not get up he would shoot him. Unaware of the fact that the revolver was loaded, the boy pulled the trigger and a bullet entered Arthur's side.

End of Nicholson Strike

Lynn, Mass., July 6.—The cutters and stitchers of the George E. Nicholson shoe factory, who went out on strike last January, voted to call the strike off, as Nicholson has no longer the union stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. Satisfactory arrangements have been made by Nicholson with the K. of L. officials and the men will return to work.

Waterbury Strike Continues

Waterbury, Conn., July 6.—By a unanimous vote of 51 the local Trolley Men's union voted not to accept what they call a proposition from the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company to return to work on the cars. Three did not vote. The officials of the company deny that any offer has been made. The strikers have been out now nearly six months.

Respected Citizen Kills Himself

Rockport, Mass., July 6.—Isaac P. Sears, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Rockport, committed suicide by hanging in his barn. He was a member of the firm of Isaac P. Sears & Son, building contractors, retiring a few weeks ago. He was an ex-member of the legislature, ex-selectman, and an Odd Fellow. He had been in poor health.

Will Not Talk Politics

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 6.—Senator Hanna, accompanied by Mrs. Hanna and a small party of friends, is expected at Sagamore Hill early this week. Assurance is given that the senator's visit will be purely social and will have no political significance.

Hotel Destroyed by Fire

Ossipee, N. H., July 6.—Fire which started from a stove in the Carroll house about 1:30 o'clock this morning destroyed that hotel and four other buildings, causing a total loss of nearly $20,000, which is well covered by insurance.

Poolroom Patrons Not Molested

New York, July 6.—Taught by recent experience, the police, in raiding an alleged poolroom in the "Tenderloin" district, arrested only the principal and three employes, letting 85 visitors go.

Wrangle Over Japanese Budget

Yokohama, July 6.—The report is current that the premier has resigned on account of the difficulties of adjusting the next budget.

THE POPE'S END NEAR.

called the pontifical family, headed by Cardinal Rampolla and including all the private chamberlains, were there.

Nearest to the bed stood the imposing, tall figure of the cardinal grand penitentiary, Serafino Vannutelli, with the pope's confessor to hear the last confession of the departing pontiff. Then the priest apostolic approached bearing the viaticum to give the last communion and administer the extreme unction, assisted by the grand penitentiary.

Pope Leo feebly recited the confession of faith as formulated by the council of Trent and finally the words of absolution, and the formula of indulgence in articulo mortis were solemnly pronounced by the grand penitentiary. The heads of the great religious orders who were present granted the pope the special indulgences which they have the privilege of conferring. Then came the touching prayers for a passing soul and part of the gospel, the Lord's passion.

As the last words died away, all fell on their knees. The pontiff, raising his almost transparent fingers with a feeble effort pronounced in scarcely audible words his benediction on the sacred college and on all present and then sank back on the pillows. There was scarcely a tearless eye in the whole assemblage, the sobs of the pope's relatives were plainly heard and deep silence followed, only broken now and again by a murmured prayer or a pious ejaculation.

In the portion of the loggia of Raphael, adjoining the papal apartments, were the families of Count Pecci and Count Moroni, the pope's nephews.

All kinds of speculation are already in circulation as to the probable successor to the throne of St. Peter. Opinions are much divided, owing to the many interests which will be affected according to the choice made by the sacred college. The first question the cardinals will have to solve will be whether the conclave shall be held in Rome or outside of Italy. It is believed that the supporters of the idea of abandoning Rome will be even fewer than in the conclave held after the death of Pius IX, when 32 out of 37 cardinals voted in favor of Rome. The second question will be whether the next pope must be an Italian or a foreigner. It is generally believed that he will be an Italian, because, in view of the struggle between the church and the state since the fall of the temporal power and the constitution of united Italy, all the clergy, as well as the clerical party and even foreigners, think that an Italian pope can protect better than a stranger the advance of the religious and political interests of the church.

The candidates chiefly spoken of are Cardinal Rampolla and Cardinal Vantutelli. They are both representatives of the conservative policy, but are bitter antagonists of each other. Cardinal Rampolla is a very warm Francophile, while Cardinal Vannutelli is avarse to the policy inaugurated by the present pontifical secretary of state of assuming the power to which he has adhered for 15 years.

The most probable liberal candidates are Cardinal Agliardi and Cardinal Satolli, whose breadth of views and love of modern ideas have been strengthened during his stay in America.

The most probable religious candidates are Cardinal Gotti, who would carefully avoid mixing up in politics, and Cardinal di Pietro, who also has the very desirable requisite of old age, being 75 years old.

All these candidates live in Rome, but a strong party, which might include a good many foreign cardinals, advocate the election of a cardinal who is not a member of the curia.

It is believed that the first ballot will merely be a test in which nobody will be elected, but it will be used to see which way the wind blows. It is considered certain that if Cardinal Rampolla sees the impossibility of succeeding to the pontifical throne he will throw all his strength in favor of an outsider, with a view to preserving his candidacy for the next conclave. Under these circumstances it is supposed that Cardinal Oreglia, dean of the sacred college, will be chosen, as he is 75 years old and lately had a serious attack of pneumonia.

All these plans, especially those drawn up by the cardinals of the curia, may be disturbed by the attitude of the cardinals coming from outside Rome, principally foreigners. Things might be pushed to such a point as to induce a portion of the Italians from the provinces to ally with the foreign cardinals, in which case alone there might be a possibility of a foreign pope. However, no French or Spanish cardinal could command the votes of the Germans or English or vice versa, so that if an opportunity arises for a foreign cardinal to be chosen the most authoritative members of the college think that the only one who could obtain the prescribed majority is Cardinal Gibbons.

BREAKING OF A DAM

Follows a Cloudburst In a Pennsylvania Town

LOSS OF LIFE VERY HEAVY

Estimates of Number Killed by Drowning or Electrocution Run From Twenty to a Hundred and Fifty—Victims Were In a Park

Pittsburg, July 6.—Several men, women and children perished by a cloudburst at Oakford park, Jeanette. The majority were drowned or their lives beaten out against the rocks in Brush creek, but quite a number were electrocuted.

At least 800 persons were at the park seeking relief from the heat. When the storm burst the greater number sought a hillside, preferring the shelter of the forest trees to the park buildings, because they did not care to be below the level of the dam and but little above the dry season level of Brush creek. When the dam broke a solid wall of water 20 feet high rushed down and completely filled the narrow ravine with its car tracks, car barns and restaurant. In front of the car barn stood a car containing from 50 to 70 passengers, many of them seeking to return to Jeanette, others using it as a temporary shelter.

With the immense body of water behind it, the crest of the flood bore down with irresistible force. As it swept down the narrow ravine it carried with it in its embrace the loaded street car and the crowded restaurant. The flood was filled with men, women and children struggling for their lives.

The poles carrying the heavily charged trolley wires were uprooted and strewn along the grounds. In a number of instances—how many is not yet known—the victims of the flood, grasping for anything that might save them from the fury of the water, seized the trolley wires and met death by being electrocuted instead of being drowned. Several bodies have already been recovered that showed that death was the result of this cause.

Brush creek is still rushing through Oakford park like a young Niagara. It was absolutely impossible for the large crowds of rescuers to approach the park beyond a point about an eighth of a mile from the entrance, therefore any attempt to estimate the loss of life caused by the cloudburst and the collapse of the dam of the lake with any degree of accuracy would be folly. It is almost the consensus of Jeanette that fully 100 persons perished in the flood, while many conservative persons maintain that the official death list will contain fully 150 names. Many persons who witnessed the calamity claim that from 100 to 150 lives were lost, while there are others who were in the hills overlooking the death valley who insist that not more than a score of persons were washed away by the waters.

POPE LEO'S LAST HOURS

Full Realization That His Condition Is Hopeless

GIVEN EXTREME UNCTION

Mind Is Clear Although His Physical Powers Are at Lowest Ebb—Touching Scenes In the Chamber of Dying Pontiff While Life Is Fading

Rome, July 7.—The pope has taken nourishment four times during the night. His pulse shows a slight improvement. At half past 6 o'clock this morning he left his bed for an arm chair.

Another fateful morning has broken on the pathetic scene within the simple chamber of the Vatican where Pope Leo lies dying. As the soft light of dawn penetrated into the room the pontiff whispered to his devoted physician that he desired the shutters of the windows to be opened, saying: "I wish to see once more, perhaps for the last time, the rays of the sun."

It was just a short while after the pope came back to consciousness from a sleep which Dr. Lapponi had induced by a strong dose of chloral. His sleep was so deathlike that artificial respiration was continued and Dr. Lapponi every few minutes leaned anxiously over the couch to observe the dying patient and listen to his hardly perceptible breathing. Pope Leo awoke wet with perspiration, feeble to the extreme and his voice hardly audible. The fits of coughing had brought pains in his chest and shoulders, and, thinking his end was near, he said to Dr. Lapponi: "Tell me when the time really comes." The doctor assured him that he believed the danger of his immediate passing was averted for the night and for today.

These seemingly last moments of Pope Leo are full of solemnity. Perhaps his last hours would be less melancholy and sad if the sufferer were less conscious of the circumstances and his mind less clear as to the duration of time remaining to him before he enters eternity. Although his physical powers are at their lowest ebb and his breathing becomes more labored, the pope's mind is clear, as is manifest to all around him by his bright, expressive eyes, and the few words he now and then succeeds in uttering. The scene is so touching that those present can scarcely restrain their tears.

Count Camillo Pecci, the pope's nephew, whom the dying man kept by his bedside yesterday, was so exhausted late last night by his contending emotions that he had to be taken from his uncle's room completely worn out. A few moments before, as he stood bowed beside the bed, Pope Leo laid his hand on his head with paternal affection saying: "Take courage."

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night the pontiff received the extreme unction. At 9 o'clock his condition seemed so hopeless that only a short time apparently remained before he would glide into his last sleep.

At Dr. Lapponi's initiative a hasty consultation of the pope's relatives, Cardinal Rampolla and other ecclesiastics was held and it was decided that extreme unction should be given. The pontiff received the announcement with his usual calmness and though scarcely able to speak audibly, he said he knew his time had come and he was ready to appear before the Sublime Tribunal with full trust in the divine mercy. Mgr. Pifferi, Pope Leo's confessor, administered the extreme unction, and when the ceremony was over the pope sank back to the pillow with apparent great relief that all was done and that he was entering into rest after his long pilgrimage.

After the administration of the viaticum telegrams hoping for his recovery were shown to the pope and he appeared to be much gratified. One of the strangest features in his condition is the interest the pope takes in telegrams inquiring about his health. Yesterday, having heard that a French lady whom he had received in audience a few weeks ago had telegraphed a message of sympathy, he asked to see the dispatch, and when Mgr. Pifferi brought it he was not satisfied with looking at the message but wished to read it.

From the piazza of St. Peter's the groups of watchers can see figures flitting to and fro past the windows of the palace.

The pope was always a man of extremely simple tastes, which he brought from his childhood's home, and possibly his cautious temperament, curiously combined with power and unhesitating decision, was inherited from his mountaineer ancestors. For his personal use he selected, instead of one of the numerous magnificent suites of the Vatican, a few simple rooms containing little beyond absolutely necessary articles. His bed stands in an alcove separated from a larger room by a curtain hanging over marble columns. Above the bed is a picture of the Madonna and child. Beside it is a prayer table surmounted by a crucifix. A wardrobe against the wall faces the bed and between the latter and the wall is a couch. The rest of the room is used as a study and contains a writing table, with a crucifix, a chair on a carpeted platform, chairs and tables for the pope's secretaries, writing materials and a few books, among which are the works of Dante, Virgil and Horace, besides a Bible.

The pope has just given striking proof of his well known taste for the classics. He has partly composed and partly corrected a new Latin poem, which he has entrusted to Mgr. Angeli, one of his private secretaries, directing him to have it printed for publication and adding: "I shall die happier in thinking that something will remain of me that I have done at the very last moment."

The pope, even when in good health, sleeps only four or five hours each night, and often in the morning his bed is undisturbed and the pope is found asleep in the very chair before the writing table in which he now reclines. The odd window of the combined bedroom and study of the pontiff overlooks the colonnade of the piazza of St. Peter's and the door of the rooms opens into a tiny private chapel. Adjoining is a small room, furnished only with an arm chair and lounge, where the pope sometimes takes an afternoon nap.

The rooms are all on the same level as the famous loggia of Raphael.

Great activity reigns among the cardinals now that it is sure that a conclave cannot be far off. It is even said that there has been an exchange of telegrams in cipher between the members of the sacred college in Rome and those in the provinces or abroad. Innumerable rumors are circulating and scarcely any cardinal is deprived of the flattery of being considered a candidate. Cardinal Rampolla is thought by many to have the best chances of being elected. According to the most accredited Vatican gossip, however, Cardinal Rampolla has entered into an agreement with Cardinal Gotti, prefect of the congregation of the propaganda, to support the election of the latter on condition that he himself be appointed Gotti's successor as prefect of the propaganda, the holder of which post is called the "red pope."

Fugitive Chased 17,000 Miles

Johannesburg, July 7.—Two American detectives have arrested James Beasly at a place 70 miles beyond Pietersburg. Beasly is charged with having forged postal orders at Cape Nome. The detectives pursued him for 17,000 miles, as he came to South Africa by way of the Philippines and Australia.

Lively Battle on Excursion Boat

Mount Vernon, Ind., July 7.—A fight on an excursion steamer between here and Uniontown, Ky., resulted in six persons being shot. Two of the number shot were women. The boat returned to Uniontown and six men and two women were arrested and put in jail there.

A BATTLE AT LYNN

Between Boot and Shoe Union Men and Knights of Labor

Lynn, Mass., July 7.—One of the most serious conflicts between representatives of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the local cutters' assembly, Knights of Labor, since the struggle began between those organizations last January, occurred in front of Lasters' hall last night. It developed into a street fight in which, in addition to several score of shoe workers, a number of bystanders took a hand, with the result that half a dozen men were more or less seriously injured and three of the combatants carried from the field of battle in an unconscious condition. The fight lasted about half an hour, and was ended only after a struggle between the crowd and a detail of policemen which had been hurried to the scene.

That the clash may have a sequel is proven by assertions made by members of the B. and S. W. U. that Lieutenant Jordan, who had charge of the police officers sent to the scene, discriminated in favor of the K. of L. men in the melee, using his forces in an attempt to drive the members of the former organization back to their hall, and refusing to arrest a man whom he saw assault a member of their organization. No arrests were made.

A Harvard Man's Escapade

Boston, July 7.—John Lankershin, 19 years old, a Harvard student, was arrested last evening on the charge of breaking into an automobile stable in this city and stealing an automobile, valued at $900, on June 14. Since that time the police have been hard at work tracing it through several cities in New England. Lankershin admitted that he took the automobile, but said that it was only a lark, and that he had left it at an auto station at Providence. The police in that city were notified and the machine seized. Lankershin had tickets for Europe and had engaged passage on a steamer which sails today. It is said that Lankershin is the son of a wealthy banker in Los Angeles.

Quarantine Raised In Part

Boston, July 7.—Dr. Peters, chief of the cattle bureau of the state board of agriculture, has received from Washington an order in part raising the quarantine against shipment of cattle, sheep and other ruminants from states not in quarantine across Massachusetts and New Hampshire for slaughter and other purposes. Dr. Peters says this is the first step towards the entire removal of the quarantine which was established on account of the foot and mouth disease, and he believes that within a month the regulations will be done away with.

Lightning and Heavy Rain

Newport, R. I., July 7.—One of the heaviest thunder showers which has been experienced in this city for many years passed over the lower end of the state of Rhode Island last night and although lightning struck in a half dozen different places no damage to life or property has been reported. Rain fell in torrents for nearly an hour and some of the streets were badly washed.

Slasher Held In $10,000 Bail

Boston, July 7.—Albert Jackson, the negro who slashed Patrolman Michael J. Sullivan with a knife when the latter attempted to arrest him for having insulted white women, was arraigned here and held in $10,000 for the grand jury. The charge was assault with a dangerous weapon on a policeman. Policeman Sullivan is thought to have chances to recover.

Granite Strike May Spread

Barre, Vt., July 7.—The granite cutters employed by J. T. Corskie & Co. and Moore Bros. have gone on strike on the question of whether the firms had a right under agreement with the union to sublet work. An effort was made to effect a compromise, but it proved unsuccessful, and it is expected that the strike will spread to other yards.

LICENSES REFUSED.

The Mayor returned without his approval the order granting junk licenses to David Silver, P. H. Lycett and Herman Katz. His reason was that it was desirable to have as few junk dealers as possible. The veto was sustained.

Later when three licenses were revoked an order was passed granting Silver and Lycett licenses.

PETITIONS.

The Old Colony street railway petitioned for permission to lay an underground conduit on Washington and Chubbuck streets. Laid on the table until later when an order was offered and refered to the Street committees.

The Committee reported leave to withdraw on the petition of David Silverman, L. Grossman & Son and Hyman Friedberg. Accepted.

CITY SQUARE.

A public hearing was given on changing the name of City Square bounded by Hancock, Temple and Washington streets to "Presidents Square," and the name of the square opposite the Adams Academy to John Hancock square.

Col. Charles H. Porter appeared in favor. The request was based on the desire for properly noting two parties which seemed appropriate. The Presidents square was in olden times the training field at which were assembled men who fought in the French, Indian, Revolutionary and Civil wars. Under the church were the two Presidents. The only place in the country where two Presidents are buried. It was very appropriate indeed that this should receive the name desired.

The other square was near where stood the house occupied by Rev. John Hancock and where was born John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The old house was burned but the cellar remained for many years, and the old well was used up to a few years ago. Very few people outside of Quincy realize that John Hancock was born there. He hoped it would be so named.

John Q. A. Field opposed, saying the town and parish had an understanding 60 years ago that parish should control the land, and the Council has no authority over anything but that within the street lines. The City Council has nothing to do with naming the place. If changed it would have two names; that by which it has been known for 60 years and that the city gives it. It would be confusing to people looking up old land marks.

City Soliciter Blackmur, in reply to questions, stated that the order proposed to name the area bounded by Hancock, Temple and Washington streets, but you are really naming a piece of church property. You are asked to designate a name for private property. The junction of any two streets could be named which would be appropriate.

Henry H. Faxon opposed. It would take people 50 or 75 years to learn where Presidents square was located.

He opposed changing names as it demoralized people. Take Revere road. This was formerly Canal street. The name was changed, then the street

Good Afternoon.

The grounds of the new Oakdale at Dedham are attracting considerable attention as a model school garden. There are 180 varieties of trees, shrubs and vines, individual flowers beds and kitchen garden for pupils, besides, boys playground, girls playground, wild garden, and a lawn. Dedham's example might profitably be followed in Quincy.

Probably the City Council, which is considering a new name for the square in the vicinity of the First church, is not aware that the Town of Quincy in town meeting assembled voted to name the square just north of the church "George L. Gill Square." The late Mr. Gill was for a great many years town clerk, and also treasurer of the Quincy Savings Bank, for many years located on Hancock street at the corner of Saville street.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The vacation season is fairly at hand, and with it a greater demand upon the time of the average business or professional man than ever. The number of men who can't afford a vacation is increasing each year and the summer makes little difference with the man who finds it necessary to give close and continual attention to business in order to keep the wheels moving all the time. The all-the-year-round busy man has got to learn a new scheme of rest-taking, the utilization of afternoons in exercise on the golf links, the acceptance of the opportunity offered by trolley for easy communication with the beaches and country, a rearrangement of the office hours and work so that nature can perform her invigorating work. If he studies this science he may learn the combination of business and pleasure in the summer months so that profit in business and rest and recreation will go hand in hand.—Haverhill Gazette.

Nearly Turned Turtle.

The steamer Electra nearly "turned turtle" at the Electric Light Co. wharf on Monday. She came to the wharf to receive a new boiler but ran into the mud and the ebb tide left her fast on the bank. As the tide receded she began to careen, and would have "turned turtle" but that the barge Cultivator was floated near enough to hold her up.

A New Pest.

The residents of Adams street, North Abington are alarmed over the appearance of a pest that has struck the maple trees in that section. Trees all along the northern part of the street are suffering from the attack, and so far no one has been found who can tell what they are.

Record Broken.

David Brown, professional of the Wollaston Golf Club broke the record for the course Monday afternoon in a four ball match, making the 18 holes in 67, the best previous record 69, also being that of Brown. It was in a match game.

QUINCY IS READY.

Up to Noon None of the N. E. A. Delegates Had Arrived.

Chairman Hall, and several of the committee of the Quincy Teachers Association, and the young men who are to act as guides, were at the Quincy station this morning to welcome delegates to the N. E. A. convention, and were prepared to escort a hundred or more to the historical sites and the shipyard, but not a teacher came.

It is the afternoons of the convention, however, which are given up to excursions, and the Quincy committee expect several visitors before the week is out.

John O. Hall, Jr., the chairman of the Quincy committee, and Mayor Bryant have after conference assumed the expense of all visiting delegates who visit the Adams shrine under the First church so that it will be free to teachers.

No teachers came either at 1.49 P. M., the specially designated train, but during the day several have come by different trains in groups of two or three, who have been escorted about the city.

Mr. Blackwell's Offer.

The public spirit portrayed in the offer of Mr. Blackwell, to sell to the City of Quincy for a site for the Atlantic schoolhouse a lot of fifty thousand feet of land valued at twenty-five cents a foot and assessed for fourteen and a half cents a foot, for fifteen cents a foot, that is, less than a cent above its assessed valuation, is certainly worthy the highest commendation.

This land is some of the most valuable in Atlantic, is opposite the playground, but a short distance from steam cars and electrics, would give the desired southern exposure and above all is a central location. Its being bounded by three streets gives it a special recommendation while its location can not fail to present advantages superior to any lot yet presented.

We hope that the City Council will realize the splendid opportunity presented of securing this site and will take immediate steps for its consummation.

A Taxpayer.

The Wollaston Flag.

Editors of the Ledger:

Can any one give the citizens of Wollaston who contributed toward the flag and flag pole during the Spanish war any information why the pole was not put in its proper place and "Old Glory" flying from the top of it, especially on the Fourth of July. The flag means something that day, especially in the city of Quincy, the home of the presidents and signers of the Declaration of Independence. From one of the contributors for the flag.

Benjamin King.

Vacation Home.

The Cathedral parish of Boston has opened a vacation house for children at Houghs Neck, under the management of Rev. Francis X. Dolan. During the summer months 20 children are brought to the house every week, and, in addition, 50 children are brought every morning for a day's outing.

Pottery and Secrecy.

In the royal manufactory of pottery at Meissen, Saxony, the work was formerly carried on with the utmost secrecy to prevent the processes from becoming known elsewhere. The establishment was a complete fortress, the portcullis of which was not raised day or night, no stranger being permitted to enter for any purpose whatever. Every workman, even the chief inspector, was sworn to silence. This injunction was formally repeated every month to the superior officers employed, while the workmen had constantly before their eyes in large letters the warning motto, "Be Secret Unto Death." It was well known that any person divulging the process would be imprisoned for life in the castle of Koenigstein. Even the king himself when he took strangers of distinction to visit the works was enjoined to secrecy. One of the foremen, however, escaped and assisted in establishing a manufactory in Vienna, from which the secrets spread all over Germany.

Royal Gamblers.

Henry VIII. would gamble away property and money recklessly, taking his defeats with bluff good humor. On one occasion he staked the famous campanile bell of St. Paul's and lost it to his adversary, a Sir Miles Partridge, who insisted on his pound of flesh and removed the bell. Queen Mary sometimes resorted to cards and was seldom more lucky than her father, losing occasionally even her lace caps or coifs, which were worth a good sum. Charles II. loved basset and other round games and would play night after night and even on a Sunday till daylight, while singers entertained the company from a gallery. Even the cold William of Orange was a gambler and liked nothing better than to spend the day racing and the night playing cards.

George III. detested cards and disapproved of playing for money, an aversion and opinion in nowise shared by his son and successor, who is said to have lost more than £800,000 before he attained his majority.

CITY COUNCIL.

numbers also so that now peop e there do not know where they live. It would be a great inconvenience to conveyancers. He did not know as he would object to changing the other square to "Porter square, as Porter lived there."

Councilman Whiton asked if he knew of any deeds of his that read bounded by City Square?

Mr. Faxon—Did not know.

Councilman Whiton—Do you mean to say you do not know how your property is bounded?

Mr. Faxon—I mean just that. How is your house bounded?

Councilman Whiton,—Why is it, if you are opposed changing names of streets you are willing to change name of the other place to Porter Square.

Mr. Faxon,—I like to see a fellow with a swelled head swell a little more.

Mr. Porter said he was obliged to Mr. Faxon, but did not propose to accept a slur from anyone. He was responsible for the order. It was not intended to change name of church property. Presidents' Square means something. He felt that order could be amended. There was no record to the name City Square. Presidents' Square not only represents sentiment but facts.

City Solicitor Blackmur did not believe it would cause any confusion among conveyancers, as they always bounded property by streets.

The hearing was then closed and the order recommitted.

PLUMBING ORDINANCE.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains reported favorable on the amendment to section nine of the Plumbing Ordinance. The amendment permitted the use upon approval of the Board of Health of a flush-ometer.

Councilman Hardwick opposed.

Councilman Adams said that the committee had two experts before them and they favored the proposed amendment.

Mayor Bryant hoped Council would go slow and let order take its course. We have a lot of trouble now with these ordinances and the Board of Health have been criticised. No ordinance should be passed unless made mandatory on the part of the Board of Health. It should say what was best for the public health. It should say just what you want. It should not be a permissive order.

Councilman Nickerson said this flush-ometer was a good thing. Right should be given to use it in certain cases.

Councilman Adams the Inspector of Plumbing and chairman of Board of Examiners approved it.

Councilman Cleverly, Reardon, Whiton and Meyer also favored.

The rules were suspended and the order passed. Councilman Hardwick voting no.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains reported ought not to pass on amendment to section 6 the Plumbing Ordinance.

Chuncilman Adams hoped report would not be accepted. This was in regard to the soil pipe. As it is new the soil pipe must be laid in a trench so that it can be got at. The amendment permits it is to be covered with cement except at the traps.

Councilman Meyer—It cannot be got at if covered with cement. The only objection to present method is the expense.

Councilman Cleverly favored report. The committee took the stand that this method was for a good reason. Did not think the matter of expense should enter. The order originated from the fact that the Quincy Real Estate Trust wanted to cement up the pipe in the cellar of its new building.

Councilman Reardon agreed with last speaker. If the amendment is passed the pipe can be laid in any manner.

Councilman Whiton thought if the traps were exposed that would be all that was necessary.

Councilman Johnson—Most every house now has pipes across the cellar. It was better to have pipe covered up if traps were exposed.

Councilman Meyer. It would cost as much to cement it as to make a trough for it.

Mayor Bryant hoped ordinance would not be amended. With all due respect to the Inspector of Plumbing and chairman of examining board, they are not experts. This piping in the cellar is most important. If the pipes are covered and the house settles, and the joints break, how are they going to know if there is a leak? He did not want to see any plan that would be an injury to health of poor people. Do not take away from them the right to be protected by plumbing laws as at present.

The report of the Committee was accepted.

PLAYGROUND ORDER.

The Committee on Ordinances reported favorably on order for $750 for improving playground at Ward Six. Passed.

OTHER REPORTS.

The order requesting the Telephone Co. to remove pole in front of Hose 3 house was passed.

The Committee on Streets reported ought not to pass on orders for lights on Granite and Adams streets.

The Committee on Streets reported reference to the Executive department on the petition and orders for the following lights:

Hamilton street, West Elm avenue, West street, Hall place, Squantum and Washington streets, Newbury avenue. Liberty street, Marion street, Baxter and Elm streets in Ward Two, Clay street, Garfield and Quincy streets, Centre street, Adams street, Fayette street, Chubbuck street, Hancock street, Palmer street and at Quincy Neck.

Councilman Meyer moved order No. 7 for lights on Coddington and Sea streets be added.

Councilman Nichols—The Councilman has not been present at any of the committee meetings and he has stated he did not think orders in which he was interested should be reported without an opportunity to be heard.

Councilman Meyer—This was one of the first orders filed. He did not see why it should be eliminated. What I said was about being heard was only in case of adverse reports.

Motion lost and order as reported accepted.

The finance Committee reported an order refunding tax title of $49 to H. N. Richards. Rules suspended and order passed.

The Finance Committee reported an order refunding tax title of $95 to Harlow H. Rogers. Rules suspended and order passed.

MOTIONS, ORDERS, ETC.

Councilman Meyer offered an order that the Committee on Streets report on order No. 7 at the next meeting. Voted.

He then moved it be taken from the committee and referred to the Executive. Ruled out of order.

Councilman Nichols offered an order replacing the incandescent light on the corner of Newport and Lincoln avenues with an arc light. Referred to Executive.

WILLARD TOO SMALL.

Councilman Loud offered an order for $1500 for providing two additional rooms to the Willard school building and painting. To Committee on Public Buildings.

CITY SCALES.

Upon motion of Councilman Loud the order relative to City Scales was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Adjourned at 10.15.

Stood In Dangerous Spot

New York, July 7.—Mrs. F. L. St. John, a prominent society woman and church worker, was killed by being thrown into the rapid transit subway by an electric car. She had just stepped off a car and was standing on the 18-inch space between the track and the subway when another car came along and knocked her into the tunnel. The motorman was arrested.

Egyptian Dam Proves Its Worth

Cairo, July 7.—The Assouwan reservoir has been emptied of its winter's store of water for the first time. The results are most satisfactory. The area of cotton is largely increased and the success of the summer crops is assured in the entire area tributary to the dam. The officials say the expenditure on the dam is fully justified.

Building Strike Will Spread

New York, July 7.—At a meeting of the united board of building trades, at which 57 unions were represented, the employers' plan of arbitration was repudiated. A union official said that there will not be an organization which will accept the employers' plan and that every building trade in the city will soon be out.

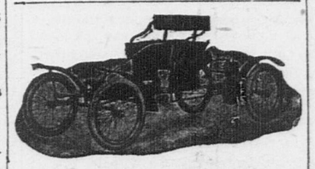

Canal Treaty In the Balance

Panama, July 7—Up to the present nothing of exceptional importance has been done by the Colombian congress at Bogota. It seems that neither congress nor the president wishes to assume the responsibility of the ratification of the Hay-Herran canal treaty.

Swedish Foundrymen Idle

Stockholm, July 7.—A lockout of foundries and machine shops throughout Sweden, affecting 15,000 men, has been declared. The trouble is the result of a wage dispute.

MILITIA AND ANGRY MOB

SOMEONE FIRED A SHOT

After Soldiers Had Been Annoyed All Day and a General Fusillade Followed—Seven Killed Outright and Many Wounded

Evansville, Ind., July 7.—Following four days of rioting and general lawlessness this city last night saw the most terrible of its experiences with rioters. Seven persons are dead and 14 are known to be injured, with at least that number more thought to be hurt.

At 10:30 o'clock the members of company A, First regiment, National Guard, after a day's vigilance guarding the county jail, and 100 deputy sheriffs, under Sheriff Kratz, fired point blank into a mob of 1000 surrounding the Vanderburg county jail and attempting its capture.

From 7 o'clock in the morning until the hour of last night's catastrophe the crowd surged about the jail, calling the militiamen vile names, assailing them with stones and berating the deputy sheriffs who guarded the jail. At 9 o'clock the mob gradually became more and more excited, its manifestations of uneasiness more frequent, and at 10 o'clock it was seen that nothing could prevent an assault on the jail.

At 10:30 the rioters pressed slowly forward and innocent onlookers followed. Slowly they forced the militiamen back toward the jail until the alley between Division street and the stone building was reached. Then the leaders, with a bicycle in their front as a shield to the bayonets of the soldiers, attempted to enter the alley and storm the alleyway entrance.

Captain Blum of the National Guard ordered a charge on the rioters. Gradually the crowd was forced back, the soldiers using their bayonets and butts of guns. Suddenly a rioter fell. A soldier tried to drag him to his feet but before he could was assaulted by a rioter. Stones and boulders began to fly through the air. A soldier was struck with a rock and fell. A rioter was knocked down with a gun butt and then a shot was fired.

The one shot started a fusillade of musketry and shotgun fire from the defenders of the jail and a return fire from the rioters. Fully 300 shots were fired from the jail windows, the court house steps immediately opposite, and by the soldiers on the streets.

No one knows who fired the first shot. The soldiers claim it was the rioters, while the rioters make no claim and refuse to talk about it. The governor is said to have instructed the authorities not to jeopardize the safety of the jail with half way measures. The soldiers and deputies fired into the retreating mob of men who ran into Division street, falling, crying and praying. For 15 minutes the firing continued; then it ceased. The mob was gone and the soldiers held the place.

In front of the staggering band of 58 soldiers lay the dead and wounded. Moans and shrieks of agony and fear came from the injured. Ed Schiffman, a painter, who was seen in the first ranks of the mob during the evening, lay on the sidewalk with the top of his head blown completely off by a 45-calibre rifle bullet. A short distance from him lay two other men, both dead, and one with a bullet wound over the heart.

All over the street, crawling and moaning, wounded rioters and onlookers tried to ease their pain and escape by getting away from the jail. On Division street, lying between her grief stricken father and mother, Hazel Altman, aged 15, was dead with her breast torn away with a buckshot charge. She was out driving with her parents, who, attracted by the noise, stopped a few minutes to watch the excitement. In the yard of the court house wounded rioters lay, and back of the line of soldiers two of the militiamen had fallen.

The general feeling of unrest and uneasiness caused a meeting of Mayor Covert, Sheriff Kratz, and the county officers, at which the grave situation was discussed and plans made to protect all citizens if another outbreak is precipitated. All saloons in the city were ordered closed last evening at 6 o'clock. Mayor Covert made the following statement last evening:

"The feeling between the whites and blacks of this city has been brewing for some time and the murder of Patrolman Massey caused the feeling to become intensified. I shall do all in my power to supress rioting in the city and will depend on the militia to help me do it. I expect the police to deputize enough men tonight to suppress all lawlessness."

In a proclamation issued last evening the mayor says: "All congregations of people, either on street corners or in other public places, are hereby prohibited; all persons carrying arms, or any kind of weapons for attack or defense, or anything with which an attack or defense could be conducted, shall be arrested; any boisterous or incendiary talk will constitute sufficient ground for arrest.

"The chief of police is hereby intrusted with the faithful performance of this order and if it shall require a special force of 500 men to restore peace and quiet, he is authorized to furnish the same."

Baptist town is being depopulated. Negro families by the dozens are leaving, some of them taking refuge in the open country. Newburg road, leading to the west, is lined with negroes, some in wagons and some camped by the roadside. Nearly all are armed.

The firearms and ammunition taken from the stores broken into Sunday night are still in the hands of those who composed the mob. There were no arraignments in police court yesterday.

Brown Indicted

Evansville, Ind., July 7.—The grand jury has indicted Lee Brown, the negro murderer, for the killing of Patrolman Massey. A rumor was started that Brown would be returned to the city for trial and preparations were at once made to have an organized body of armed men meet all incoming trains for the purpose of searching every car in the hope of finding Brown.

Attack on Jail Feared

Vincennes, Ind., July 7.—Rumors that an Evansville mob might come here to lynch Lee Brown, who is in jail here, have caused great excitement, though the more conservative say there is no possibility of this. The Knox county jail where Brown is confined is a new structure of stone and 50 deputies could safely defend it from any mob. Colonel McCoy of the Fourth regiment of militia has the men ready to march out at a moment's warning. Sheriff Summit has sworn in a large number of deputies. Brown is badly frightened and is suffering intensely from the severe wound in the breast received during the battle with Massey.

Will Have Troops If Necessary

Indianapolis, July 7.—Governor Durbin says the situation at Evansville is very much to be regretted and he will do everything to prevent an outbreak. He says he has authorized the sheriff of Evansville to swear in 1000 deputies if necessary and if they are found to be insufficient he will give him troops.

Educational Progress In Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., July 7.—The house of representatives, after a heated debate, killed by an overwhelming vote the resolution providing that in the distribution of money to common schools the county authorities should apportion the money among schools for whites and colored youths according to the taxable property of the two races. The debate showed that the sentiment of the legislature is that the state should contribute to the limit of its ability to the common school education of the colored youth, even when the burden falls almost entirely upon white taxpayers.

Sailor Shot Dead by Captain

St. Johns, July 7.—Schooner Helen Whitten of Gloucester, Mass., put into Broyle harbor for bait and was ready for sea when Patrick Yetman, one of the crew, refused to go, and jumped into a dory and attempted to leave the vessel. The captain ordered him to stop. Yetman refused and Captain Willard shot Yetman dead in the boat. Captain Willard was arrested. The victim was a Newfoundlander and his death has aroused indignation here.

At Least Twenty Perished

Jeannette, Pa., July 7.—As a result of the breaking of the Oakford park dam 20 persons are known to be dead and 16 are missing. The property loss in the valley will reach $1,500,000 and the distress is so great that outside relief will have to be asked for. The number of lives lost was not so great as estimated. It is found that $75,000 is needed from outside sources and the people of Jeannette trust their friends will respond promptly.

Death In Toy Pistol Caps

Chicago, July 7.—Three persons were instantly killed and several injured, one fatally, in an explosion last night which wrecked a factory where caps for toy pistols were manufactured. The three persons killed were mangled so that only parts of their bodies were found. The explosion was caused by concussion, according to the management of the factory. It is believed one of the men must have dropped a bundle of the caps.

Aided by His Youth

Berlin, July 7.—The appeal was heard before a court martial of Ensign Huessner from the sentence of four years' imprisonment and degradation imposed on him for killing an old friend because the latter did not salute him properly. The court, on the ground of the youth of the prisoner, reduced his sentence to two years and seven days' incarceration in a fortress.

THE EDUCATORS

Attend Large Meetings and Take In the Sights of Greater Boston

Boston, July 7.—The 42nd annual convention of the National Educational association was formally opened in this city with two sessions of the national council, a meeting of the department of Indian education, and finally the general sesion, practically a mass meeting in the largest hall in the city, at which fully a fifth of the whole of the host of about 16,000 teachers from all parts of the country, who have come to attend the convention, were present. The general session, which was held in Mechanics hall, was naturally the feature of the day, and the two addresses, one by President Eliot of Harvard university and also president of the general association, and the other by Andrew F. West, dean of the graduate school of Princeton university, were listened to with great attention. At this meeting the visitors were formally welcomed by Governor Bates, in behalf of the state, by Mayor Collins for the city, and by President Pritchett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, representing the local committee. Responses were made by Albert E. Lane of Chicago, chairman of the board of trustees, and William P. Harris of the executive committee of the association, while an impressive blessing by Rev. E. E. Hale and some excellent music completed the program.

Despite the frequent showers which occurred during the middle of the day, the visitors enjoyed themselves thoroughly in visiting numerous points of historical interest about the city, taking trolley rides to the suburbs, and excursions down the harbor to the numerous beaches.

War Would Favor Japs

London, July 7.—According to the Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard the opinion prevails in Russian circles there that the outbreak of hostilities in the far east is inevitable. It is reported that the Japanese are mobilizing their forces. It is thought at Tien Tsin that in the event of a war with Russia everything would favor the Japanese, who are certainly in a better state of preparation.

Sternberg Made an Ambassador

Washington, July 7.—Official information has reached Baron Von Sternberg at his summer home at The Weirs, N. H., of his elevation to the rank of ambassador, to succeed Herr Von Holleben, who formally retired from the German diplomatic service July 1. Sternberg's presentation to the president may occur at Oyster Bay this summer, although this has not been settled.

Battleship In Bad Shape

New York, July 7.—It is said at the Brooklyn navy yard that the battleship Indiana is in such condition that when she is placed out of commission her machinery will have to be overhauled at a heavy cost to the government. Her boilers need a complete overhauling and her turrets require proper balancing, it is said.

Cassini Starts Abroad

New York, July 7.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, and his daughter sailed from New York today for Europe, en route to St. Petersburg, where the ambassador will spend his summer vacation. He expects to return to Washington in September.

GOOD RACING WEATHER

Gives Opportunity to Size Up the Shamrocks

HAD A THIRTY-MILE SAIL

New Challenger Showed Superiority Over Older Sister In Reaching and Running—Work In Five-Mile Brush to Windward Delights Lipton

New York, July 7.—Shamrock III covered a 30-mile course off Sandy Hook six minutes and 18 seconds faster than Shamrock I. It was a broad reach of 15 miles to the outer mark and a long leg, close hauled, back to the finish line.

Reaching and running are Shamrock III's best points of sailing. Messrs. Lipton and Fife were satisfied with the new boat's reaching, but were delighted with the splendid fashion in which she beat the old boat in a five-mile thresh to windward after the finish of the race. In the latter trial the new cup hunter sailed through the lee of Shamrock III in less than 10 minutes, worked up from the lee to a position fairly ahead of the old boat, and then passed to windward of her, outpointing and outfooting her and beating her an eighth of a mile dead to windward.

Clear skies and an eight-knot south-southwest wind, freshening to 12 knots at the finish, made splendid racing conditions. Both Shamrocks ran off from Sandy Hook to Scotland lightship under their own sail. Lipton and Fife remained on board the Erin. The starting line was established between the Erin and Scotland lightship and the yachts were sent away at the blast of the Erin's whistle. The course was east by north.

Spinnaker poles were nimbly dropped and spinnakers sent up in stops, but before they could be broken out the wind suddenly backed to south-southwest. Spinnaker poles were taken on board again. Shamrock III broke out a balloon jibtopsail, while Shamrock I carried a baby jibtopsail.

With sheets well off before a freshening wind over her quarter Shamrock III slowly drew ahead of the old challenger until, when they approached the turn, the new boat was setting a 10-knot pace and leading by two-thirds of a mile.

Rounding the tug at the turn they trimmed sheets flat in and lay a straight course, close hauled, to the finish line. Nearing the finish the breeze grew fresh, and they finished at a rate that called for the Erin's best speed to reach the line first. Shamrock I was a good mile astern, but coming at a flying gait when Shamrock III crossed the line.

The summary:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time
Sham. III.....	12:15:13	3:13:50	2:58:37
Sham. I.....	12:15:32	3:20:27	3:04:55

Then the racers were sent away five miles to windward. With her lee rail just dipping, Shamrock III walked through the old boat's lee, outpointed her and in 40 minutes was an eighth of a mile to windward of her. In the run back to Scotland lightship Shamrock III cut down the old boat's lead, though Shamrock I, having the leeward position at the start, was the first to finish.

Reliance Plates Repaired

Bristol, R. I., July 7.—The bow plates of Reliance, which were bent in by the heavy seas during the race off Newport on Thursday last, have been straightened and additional braces placed in the bow of the boat to prevent a repetition of the accident. The yacht has been placed in trim for the cruise of the New York Yacht club, which begins next week.

POPE'S GREAT VITALITY

May Enable Him to Overcome Inroads of Disease

A GRAVE SURGICAL TASK

Performed Upon the Pontiff Has the Result of Affording Great Relief—Doctor Finds Improvement Sufficient to Entertain Hope

Rome, July 8.—The alleviation brought about by yesterday's operation of removing fluid from Pope Leo's pleura was followed later in the evening by a restless period, and fresh doses of chloral digitalis and caffeine were administered. Under their influence the pontiff fell into a slumber, which, however, was not very peaceful on account of the difficulty the patient has in breathing. Seeing Lapponi always at his bedside, the pope just before falling asleep said kindly to him: "Now it is your turn tonight, you must sleep." Throughout the Vatican absolute calm prevails, the excitement of yesterday having to a great extent died out with revival of hope after announcement that yesterday's operation was attended with success.

The marvelous vitality and recuperative energy of the pope were never so forcibly demonstrated as by the series of events preceding, accompanying and following yesterday's operation. When first informed that the operation would perhaps be necessary, the pope began to inquire about it. Turning to Dr. Lapponi, he asked: "Will it be painful? Remember I cannot stand much pain."

Instead of Dr. Lapponi, Dr. Mazzoni answered: "I can assure your holiness that you will feel no pain. A little cocaine will deaden all sensation."

Pope Leo replied at once: "Remember, you said the same thing when you extracted that cyst a few years ago." Dr. Mazzoni replied: "That operation went very well, but this can hardly be called an operation."

The pope then concluded: "Then do whatever you think best."

When the operation took place nobody was allowed in the room beside the doctors except Pope Leo's valet, Pio Centra. The doctors, desiring a strong light, had the window widely opened, but as it faces the bed the light offended the weak eyes of the pontiff so that it was thought desirable that he should reverse his position. As soon as this was proposed the pope himself made a movement, showing again that spirit of activity and determination which seems constantly to inspire him. Dr. Mazzoni, however, did not give him time to leave the bed, but taking him in his arms turned the pontiff about. Pope Leo smiled and exclaimed: "Pravo, professor, I congratulate you. Although I have become so light, I must still be rather heavy."

Both the doctors were astonished at the brightness of the pontiff when oppressed by such a dangerous illness and on the point of undergoing a grave surgical operation.

Pope Leo remained sitting up in bed during the whole time of the operation without need of support. When Dr. Mazzoni substituted a needle with a potain aspirator, the pope did not even notice it, going through the whole affair without emitting the slightest lament and without showing any feeling of pain. He was extremely pale, almost diaphanous, and somewhat tremulous. As soon as the operation was closed the pope felt much relieved. His eye, from an expression of languid melancholy, assumed its usual vivacity, illuminating the emaciated face.

Dr. Mazzoni at once administered a cordial which the pontiff took willingly, thanking him with a grateful look for the brave struggle to preserve his life. He afterwards expressed a desire to see the liquid which had been extracted from his thorax. Both doctors assured him that his wish would be gratified later. The pontiff then asked for minute explanations of the apparatus used in the operation.

"It is a most ingenious instrument,' he said, "but your hand is also very clever. That is why the operation was successful in not giving me any pain. I thank you."

The happy and cheerful expressions of the pontiff at the moment when he was in the very shadow of death astonished the doctors. The pope himself seems to glory in his ability to present a calm and bright demeanor and particularly asked the doctors to tell people about the state of his mind. Accordingly the doctors have freely discussed the cheerfulness of the venerable patient, repeating the details of his quick sallies as showing the activity of his mind.

Dr. Mazzoni, assisted by Dr. Lapponi's son, who is also a doctor, has finished the anaysis of the liquid extracted from the pope's pleura. It is prevalently composed of blood with coagulated fibrin without pus. What is feared is a reproduction of serum in the pleura, in which case the operation will be repeated in about two days.

Dr. Mazzoni has been besieged by relatives and friends of the pope and by journalists, inquiring as to the result of the operation and his prognosis of the disease. To The Associated Press correspondent he said:

"When one considers that the pope should be dead by this time the unexpected may happen and there is still hope. His resisting so long and maintaining perfect lucidity of mind means that notwithstanding the pneumonia, the affection of the kidneys and the difficulty of breathing, there is no poisoning of the blood. Between being at the point of death and returning to what his holiness is now, there is certainly such a difference as to permit the most optimistic views. To properly understand the change which has taken place it must be considered that on Monday the conviction was so sure that he would die during the night that notwithstanding the contrary opinion of Dr. Lapponi the pope's surroundings insisted on having extreme unction administered. Evil tongues even insinuate that some members of Pope Leo's immediate circle counted on the bad effects that such a function was likely to produce on a weakened organism, but the pope resisted splendidly. Indeed he seems to have acquired fresh strength. I don't dare to say anything positive. It is very easy to be deceived, especially in the presence of such marvelous resistance. I merely venture the impression that there is a probability that the pope will die, but I do not believe death will occur yet."

Much significance is attached to an extended visit made by Cardinal Gotti, prefect of the propaganda, to the sick room, from which other conspicuous members are excluded by the doctors. Cardinal Gotti's interview lasted 20 minutes, even the doctors and attendants withdrawing and leaving him alone with the pope. This has naturally opened a wide field of speculation. It is even asserted on the authority of one cardinal that Pope Leo expressed the hope that in the event of the succession falling on Cardinal Gotti, he might have the strength to take up and carry forward the great work thus confided to him. Just what passed between the pontiff and Cardinal Gotti only they know, but certainly the circumstances and length of the visit strongly support the view that the pope was giving his attention to the administration of the affairs of the church when he himself has passed away.

Throughout the day a constant stream of visitors besieged the entrance to the Vatican. The guards at the portals kept back the merely curious, admitting only diplomatists accredited to the Vatican and high ecclesiastical dignitaries. None of the visiting cardinals except Cardinal Gotti saw the pope, owing to the rigid directions of the doctors that the patient be spared the cares and excitement of the affairs of the church.

LOCKOUT AT BARRE.

Unions Objected to Sub-Letting and Granite Cutters Had Struck at Three Yards.

All the stone sheds of Montpelier and Barrie are closed, with a prospect of remaining idle for some time, says a Montpelier dispatch of Tuesday to the Herald. A lockout was declared by the Barre Granite Manufacturers' Association last night, and the Montpelier members followed, closing their sheds at noon today.

Members of the association say tonight they fear there is no prospect of reaching an immediate settlement. The cutters went out of the sheds of two Barre firms last week, alleging that work was being sub-let and cut for less than the regular schedule of prices. The manufacturers and the union failed to come to an agreement, and matters came to a head on Monday.

Meetings were held all day without result, and the session of the manufacturers lasted till after midnight. Several propositions were considered, and it was expected they they would be accepted, but the sub-let principle proved a stumbling block on which they could not agree, and the manufacturers voted to close their sheds.

A meeting of the manufacturers of Montpelier and Barre was held this forenoon, and it was voted to submit to the union a resolution providing that manufacturers shall have the right to sub-let any contract or any part of it, to any other manufacturer who is a member of the association. This is a concession, as membership in the association requires the maintaining of schedule prices.

The union will meet tomorrow morning and appoint a strike committee, to whom the proposition of the manufacturers will be submitted. Conservative manufacturers say there is little chance of this compromise being accepted, now a lockout has been declared.

There are now 1300 men out, cutters and sharpeners. Unless the matter is settled, the polishers and other granite workmen are expected to join them, and there will be more than 3000 men idle. The manufacturers are being urged by business men to stand firm, and as the business is a little dull at present, they are less likely to make further concessions than they would have been two months ago.

Later in the day three sheds at Northfield were closed with the announcement that they would not be reopened until the difficulty at Barre had been adjusted. The firms affected are Cannon & Slack, Cross Bros. and Devine & Burns.

Assignment Follows Disappearance.

Haverhill, Mass., July 8.—Following the sudden disappearance of Edwin F. Lang, a local shoe manufacturer, comes the announcement that the firm of Lang & Bertsch, of which the missing man was a member, has made an assignment, involving $20,000 liabilities. With the settlement of the business interests of the firm the business will be cleaned up and the firm will pass out of existence.

Prison Ship Goes to Portsmouth

Boston, July 8.—The Southery, the only prison ship in the United States navy, has left the navy yard here in tow of two large government tugs for Portsmouth, where she is to be permanently stationed. On board the Southery are several scores of prisoners who are serving terms of various lengths for breaches of discipline.

No Trace of Assailants

Boston, July 8.—Since the report of Medical Examiner Draper declaring that Edward L. Scribner, whose body was found on the common, was murdered, the efforts of the police to find his assailants have been redoubled. No marked progress, however, has been made in clearing up the mystery of his death.

Fatal Collapse of Staging

Northampton, Mass., July 8.—By the collapse of staging here two men were thrown 30 feet to the ground, and Joseph Jewett, aged 72, is dead, and O. D. Buckman so badly hurt that he may die. The men were shingling a barn when the staging broke. Jewett lived only two hours.

Blaine's Widow Seriously Sick

Double Canoeing Fatality

Augusta, Me., July 8.—By the overturning of a canoe on Lake Cobbossee last night Mrs. Harry Reid and Mrs. Everett Stone of this city were drowned. Mr. Reid reached shore in an exhausted condition.

Was Actor and "Poolroom Queen"

New York, July 8.—"Gussie" McKee, aged 26, known in this city as the "poolroom queen," died last night from cancer of the stomach. Mrs. McKee was formerly the wife of Lieutenant Martin of the United States army, who was cashiered for falsifying his accounts. During the last few years she toured the country as leading woman in several theatrical companies.

Kearsarge's Great Record

Washington, July 8.—The big battleship Kearsarge smashed all ocean records for speed in the battleship class in her journey to Kiel, making total distance of 3345 miles from New York to the Needles at high average speed of 16.62 miles an hour. She made the entire distance of the run without a single stop or disarrangement of the machinery, which showed its perfect condition by running up the speed to 14.5 and 15 knots on the last few days of the voyage.

Entertaining American Squadron

Portsmouth, July 8.—The American squadron's first day in British waters ended as brilliantly as it began. While Admiral Hotham entertained Admiral Cotton and the American captains at dinner last night, the junior officers of the United States vessels were dining on board the British gunnery ship Excellent. The English and American ships were illuminated, the spectacle attracting thousands of onlookers who watched it from the flag-bedecked streets.

Russians In Manchuria

London, July 8.—The Standard correspondent at Tien Tsin says that the Chinese are complaining bitterly that the Russians are continuing to commandeer fodder, mules and carts beyond the Great Wall. The Russian troops encamped at Liang Ho Kwang have commandeered 80 carts to convey supplies of wheat to their forces on the Yalu.

To Increase Speed of Electric Cars.

Henry E. Huntington, who is interested in the building of a great trolley system covering all southern California, running parallel to the steam lines in that section, is preparing to run long distance cars at a speed of a mile a minute, says a Los Angeles dispatch to the New York Tribune. Steel wind hoods are now being placed on the front of all long distance cars. The hoods are shaped like cowcatchers, their base being on a level with the floor of the car and a knifelike edge extending at an angle of forty-five degrees to the top, the point being six feet from the front of the car. This causes a great saving of electrical energy. The other day in experimenting a heavy car attained a speed of sixty-eight miles an hour.

Protection of Australian Birds.

Australia has an ornithologists' union which is working hard to secure the passage of laws to protect certain birds which are in danger of extermination. It is suggested that certain islands should be reserved specially for the nutmeg pigeon.

If those whose Work is Mental

—book-keepers, clerks, business and professional men—were as particular about the bread they eat, as are those who, like manual laborers, need and know the best, they also would insist upon having bread, cake and pastry made from Spring Wheat Flour, the standard being Pillsbury's Best Flour.

Good Afternoon

Should the city decide to widen Washington street to the uniform width of 66 feet, it would show foresight which in future years would be commendable. Quincy is a rapidly growing city, its percentage of gain since 1900 probably being larger than any Massachusetts city or town. We have a population today of over 30,000 and in 1910 it will be over 40,000 and so on. Quincy should grasp the situation and in a great measure anticipate this remarkable growth.

The Fore River Ship Co. is making big contracts which will give work for three or four years to come, with prospects good for all the work they can do after that. Already they employ nearly 2500 men and will soon go over 3,000; perhaps 4,000.

Other large industries are sure to locate at Quincy Point, both on the Fore river and Town river, and Washington street, which is now the thoroughfare between Boston and all the South Shore towns, will certainly in the near future become a great business street. It is today a busy street, and it is important that the street railway should be put into the centre of the street and double tracked. The public demand more cars, fewer delays, and sure connections with trains.

We would not advocate street widening just to give street railways double tracks, for the city should require an equivalent from corporations for all privileges granted, but the city should encourage the expansion of street railways as well as other enterprises.

We repeat, Washington street will in the very near future become a great business street.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Boston teachers who have done duty as such in the Philippines say that conditions there are such as to make the work of the most unpleasant nature to Americans. That is a natural story. To any one who is fairly well along in years there is generally no place like home, and the difference in all ways between Boston and Massachusetts and Manila and the country wastes of the Philippines, is too great to be regarded as anything but a change to desolation and weariness unspeakable.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ To live happily in this world it is not enough to know how to work; one must know how to rest and to rest comfortably so that it will produce the best results. You want a change as well as a thorough relaxation. The man or woman who knows only how to work will soon wear out. If they don't wear out immediately their work will suffer in some way. No one can do their best work unless they alternate with a little play or a little rest, and an entire change from their every day life.—Gloucester Times.

☞ It is generally considered lucky that there is but one Independance Day in a year.—New Bedford Standard.

POOR RETURNS.

The Taxpayers Imposed Upon, Says Mr. Faxon.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

As the heaviest individual taxpayer in the city of Quincy, I feel that I am justified in calling upon the administration to show me what returns I get for the money paid by me to the city in the year 1902 for the following:

City taxes, including sprinkling,	$9,558.64
Water taxes,	$918.82

In addition to these items I am compelled to expend large sums on account of:

Sidewalk assessments.

Renumbering houses and streets so that the tenants themselves cannot tell where they live.

As it is more than likely that a tyrannical administration will not attempt to answer my question regarding the supposed benefits I get from my outlay of tax money, I will endeavor to show to the public a few of the blessings (?) which I am permitted to enjoy.

Seventeen years ago there was given to the then town of Quincy by me a piece of property known as Faxon Park. In the deed conveying the land to the city there was a clause stipulating that the land should be fenced. How has the city kept faith with me? After repeated requests of mine to the Park Commissioners, concerning the obligation of the city, and complaints from the occupants of the farm adjoining the Park, the tenants themselves were compelled to erect a temporary fence.

For years I have served the town and city of Quincy as constable without pay. I sought the appointment in order that I might have the power of protecting my large property interests and those of other citizens from the vandalism and destruction which a high-priced force of the city failed to prevent. The appointment was refused by the Mayor because of my known hostility to his extravagant method of conducting the city's affairs, and because of the spirit of vindictiveness which prevails in the present administration. Time and time again have I offered suggestions to the police authorities concerning the proper enforcement of the law but my advise have been ignored and the wholesale destruction of property goes on unpunished, thus adding a double burden to the taxpayer.

For many years I have urged the city to have the tide-gate near the almshouse kept in order to prevent the salt water from flowing over the meadows bordering on Coddington street. Proper attention has not been paid to the obstructions in the dam and the nuisance still exists.

The valuation of my real estate has been increased with each succeeding year by servile office holders who raise the valuation in order that the tax rate may appear lower and thus hoodwink the hard working and unsuspecting tax payer.

Another subject of especial interest to me, as well as to other tax payers of the city, would be information concerning the cost of land, houses and appurtenances thereto, upon which are located the Mayor's famous machines that are supposed to wash the vault and cesspool matter into the sewer. These stations are maintained at a great and unnecessary expense, an enormous waste of water is occasioned by washing the matter that is to be dumped into the sewers which will become clogged by this impracticable system.

When these machines were erected I predicted their failure and experience with them has justified my predictions. The machine located in Ward Five, because of its proximity to residential property, will make the city liable for damages to the owners of land surrounding. The failure of these machines represents a squandering of the public's money, and the promoters, the administration and its political supporters, have proved to be utterly incapable to deal with a condition of affairs for which an incompetent Board of Health was primarily responsible.

VISITING TEACHERS.

All Who Come to City of Quincy Are Interested.

The visiting teachers this morning included Mr. H. Thomas of Granville, Ohio, and Mrs. Sarah B. Stimson of Hillsdale, Mich., who were accompanied by friends. Guides escorted them about the city.

W. H. D. Meier of Griggsville, Ill., was among the visiting teachers on Tuesday. He only intended to visit the birthplaces of the Presidents but he went the rounds and then took in the granite quarries.

Miss Mary L. Mudget, instructor of physics and mathematics in the Maine normal school, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hall, Jr.

Mrs. Charles F. Knowlton has been entertaining her cousin, Miss Lucy Jones of Jackson, Ohio, who is accompanied by three other teachers.

REBEKAHS OFF.

They Have Two Chaperons and Are Regarded As Safe.

About seventy of the members of George L. Gill Rebekah lodge are holding an outing today at Nantasket Point. The party, which was composed of sixty-eight ladies and two men, left Quincy on a special car at 11 o'clock. The two men went along to chaperon the girls. It is also understood that they may be called upon to pay for all the soda water and peanuts that the female portion of the party is supposed to get outside of during the day. The ladies were loaded down with mysterious looking bundles which may have contained lunches or bathing suits, probably the latter.

At Nantasket plenty will be found to amuse the party, those who do not care to go in bathing can go in wading. Then there will be dancing, running races, etc., but no making goo-goo eyes at any gentlemen outside of the two chaperons.

One of these is married and is safe. The other is said to be willing to be married if the right girl shows up and today may be the appointed time for him to meet his fate. There is nothing like salt water bathing to turn the heart of a young bachelor toward thoughts of marriage. In the party were quite a few misses who would doubtless not object to being led to the altar by some eligible young man.

Good men are at a premium however, which may account for the fact that they are still blushing, but anxiously waiting maidens. Today may settle the question of whether or not they will be willing to try and prove that marriage is not a failure.

Bits of Information.

When very thirsty and only a small amount of water is at hand drink with a spoon or through a small hole in the cork of a canteen. It will do as much good as when taken in large mouthfuls. Boil putrid water in charcoal before drinking. Indians purify all waters by plunging hot irons and rocks into them.

When an Indian is cold he builds a small fire and huddles over it. A white man builds a big fire and cannot get near it.

When you wish to roll up your shirt sleeves do not turn the cuffs inside out, but turn them inward or under, and they will remain tucked up without being touched.

When you want to climb a tree unite the feet with a dampened towel or raveled rope so that their distance apart shall be about two-thirds the diameter of the trunk.

Teach Language to Parrots.

A queer business which is carried on with considerable success in certain parts of London is the teaching of language to parrots. There are several persons engaged in this strange educational work. The country into which the bird is to be sent is first ascertained, and a sum of 10 shillings a week is then charged for a period varying from two to three months, according to the capacity of the parrot. With a year's tuition the teacher guarantees a bird with a polyglot vocabulary chosen haphazard from four different languages.—Golden Penny.

Cockfighting In England.

For centuries cockfighting was encouraged in English schools. Fitzstephen in the twelfth century mentions it as an amusement of Londoners and that yearly at Shrovetide the boys of every school brought cocks to their schoolmasters, and all the forenoon was spent in school witnessing these birds fight. As late as 1790 the income of the schoolmaster of Applecross, in Ross-shire, was drawn partially from cockfight dues. Down to 1815 at least there was an annual exhibition of cockfighting at the Manchester grammar school.

Valuable Time Saved.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cuts, bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. BUILDINGS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

VARIED ARTS BUILDING.

CITY SQUARE SALE.

It is understood that the John W. Nash property on Hancock street which comprises about 15,000 square feet of land and the store buildings occupied by John W. Nash as a grocery and A. A. Linscott as a jewelry store have been sold to Henry L. Kincaide. It is also reported that Mr. Kincaide buys for investment and aside from some needed improvements the present buildings will remain for a few years.

After the sale had been made another local business man offered Mr. Kincaide a good bonus for the property but Mr. Kincaide decided to hold it himself.

Wig Dressing.

Not everybody who can dress a head of real hair becomingly can comb a wig with equal success. There is a special knack in wig dressing. In some shops where wax figures abound one or two of the employees are trained in the art of wig dressing and combine that with their other duties at a slight increase of salary, but in most places the entire business is intrusted to professional wig dressers.

Indiscretion.

"Aren't the perfect trust and confidence engaged people have in each other perfectly beautiful!"

"Perfectly idiotic, I should say."

"Why?"

"Because when I was engaged I told my future wife all about my income and prospects, and now I can't spend a dollar on myself without her knowing about it."—New York Times.

A Cupid Prescription.

"Well, then, how must I make love?"

"First you must believe that there is no one in the world but me."

"I've got that far already."

"Next you must make me believe that there is no one in the world but you."—Life.

An Unkind Suggestion.

"You love my daughter?"

"She's all the world to me, sir."

"Then I don't suppose you'll want a settlement."—Exchange.

Just about the time you conclude you are down and out your feet strike something that will hold you.—Atchison Globe.

Hard Words.

"Your fingers seem twisted and bruised," we write on the pad which forms the medium of conversation with the deaf and dumb youth. "Are you on the ball team at your institution?"

"No, sir," he writes in reply to our question. "I have taken up a course in Russian."—Judge.

The Retort Discourteous.

Miss Van der Whoop — Yes, Miss Binns, I am the youngest member of one of the oldest families in New York.

Miss Binns (envious)—I don't doubt that it's the oldest family—if you're the youngest member!—Smart Set.

Time to Leave.

Husband (in an aside to his wife)—If you can't think of some more anecdotes of our children's smartness let's go home right away, for they're getting ready to tell us things about their own.—Baltimore American.

ARMENIAN EDITOR SHOT

Fellow Countryman Puts Two Bullets In His Back

TWO MISSILES WENT WIDE

And Whistled Over Heads of People on Crowded Thoroughfare—Injured Man Declares That Assailant Is a Spy of Turkish Government

Boston, July 8.—Peter Kureghian, the editor of an Armenian paper in this city, was dangerously shot by a fellow-countryman, Samuel Gulezian, whom Kureghian charged with being a spy of the Turkish government. The shooting occurred near the Dudley street surface station, where the two men met, and was preceded by no altercation or conversation between them. Four shots were fired, two of which took effect in Kureghian's back, while the two others whistled over the heads of the crowd of people assembled around the car station. Gulezian was captured after a lively chase and locked up.

Kureghian boarded with Mrs. Foss on West Concord street and to her, before he was etherized at the hospital, he made the statement that he had been shot by spies of the Turkish government; that the officials of that government had been after him for years, and that it was his reward for what he had done for the Armenian cause. He is a member of the "Hentchkest," the Armenian Revolutionary society.

Interviews with Armenians of the city bring out the fact that there are two factions in this society at bitter odds with each other, but nothing could be ascertained to bear out the wounded man's charge.

The shooting is generally believed to be the outcome of the feud between the two factions of the Armenian society rather than an affair implicating the Turkish government.

At the police station Gulezian is said to have stated that Kureghian never did him any harm, and when asked his reason for shooting him, Gulezian, who then believed he had killed his man, replied: "I wanted to kill him and I did it. I am ready for the chair." Beyond this he would make no explanation.

Kureghian, it is said, addressed a meeting in Providence a week ago Sunday, at which police officers were present for the purpose of arresting him should his utterances prove too anarchistic. At the conclusion of his address the officers congratulated him on the moderate tone of his remarks. The presence of the officers at the meeting he interpreted as an act of persecution on the part of his enemies.

He also stated that he had received a letter from Providence warning him that an attempt on his life would be made on July 4. Kureghian asserts that two men were implicated in the attempt upon his life, but the police have been unable to obtain any trace of the second man.

Newburyport, Mass., July 8.—Samuel Gulezian, charged with the attempted murder of Peter Kureghian in Boston, was recently employed in a shoe factory here. He left about two weeks ago, and was joined last Saturday by his roommate, whose name cannot be learned, and who may be the man whom Kureghian claims was with his assailant at the time of the shooting. Gulezian has an uncle and several cousins here, and is known to be a member of the Armenian revolutionary faction. About a year ago several of the more conservative Armenians here received letters threatening them with death if they did not join the revolutionists. Gulezian was suspected of writing these letters, but the police could not secure sufficient evidence to warrant his arrest.

Chinese Officials Cashiered

Pekin, July 8.—On the recommendation of Tsen Chun Hsuan, the new viceroy of the province of Kwan Tung and Kwang si, an edict has been issued cashiering all the high officials in Kwang Si, including the governor, on account of corruption, incapacity and connivance with the rebellion which has been constant for the past year, provoking a threat on the part of the French to interfere.

Fell Into Lynchers' Hands

Vicksburg, Miss., July 8.—Cato Garrett, the negro who stabbed Harry Stout to death, was taken to Natchez, Sheriff Brennan fearing an assault on the jail here. A special grand jury found a true bill against Garrett, and the county sheriff was notified to bring the negro to this city. Six miles from here the train was held up by 50 masked and armed men, who took the negro and hanged him.

COKE PRODUCTION

Interesting Figures Relating to the Substitute For Anthracite

Washington, July 8.—The strike of coal miners to which this country seems destined to be subjected each year, is tending to the more general use of coke as a substitute for anthracite coal. Coke is made from bituminous coal by a cooking process, during which by-products, principally ammonia and gas, are obtained.

The domestic manufacture of coke in 1901 is discussed by Edward W. Parker in Mineral Resources of the United States, now in press, United States Geological Survey. Including the output from by-product ovens, the total coke production of the United States in 1901 amounted to 21,795,883 short tons, valued at $44,445,923, as compared with 20,533,348 short tons, valued at $47,443,331 in 1900 and with 19,668,569 short tons, valued at $34,670,417 in 1899. The increase in production in 1901 as compared with the preceding year was 1,262,535 short tons, or 6.15 percent. The value of the product, however, showed a decrease of $2,997,408, or 6.3 percent.

The amount of coal used in 1901 to produce the coke was 34,207,965 short tons, as compared with 32,113,543 short tons in 1900, an increase of 2,094,422 short tons. The value of this coal increased from $28,134,756 in 1900 to $31,378,631 in 1901, an increase of $3,243,875. From this it would appear that the cost to the coke producer of the coal used increased over $3,000,000, at the same time that the value of the resulting coke decreased $2,997,408.

Joseph D. Weeks, in the course of investigation into by-product coke making in Germany, ascertained that in some instances the by-products paid all the cost of coal mining, coke making, depreciation of plant, etc., and that the resulting coke was absolutely net profit to the producer.

Cardinals Disagree

Paris, July 8.—According to a dispatch from Rome to The Echo De Paris, Cardinal Oreglia has ordered the apartments in the Vatican which are occupied by the camerlengo, which post he himself holds during an interregnum, to be prepared. Cardinal Rampolla, on learning of this, declared the action not to be decent while the pope was still living, and ceased his own work. The incident, says the dispatch, has caused much comment.

To Utilize Waste Labor

San Juan, P. R., July 8.—The government of Porto Rico is about to carry into effect a plan which has aroused some resentment by unemployed labor and by native sentimentalists, but which is warmly applauded by Americans. Convict camps are being established at two important points and several hundred prisoners who are now supported in idleness will be employed building much needed roads.

CROWDED MEETINGS

Attest the Interest of Teachers In Convention Work at the Hub

Boston, July 8.—The members of the National Educational association, in convention in this city, have got down to hard work. After the sightseeing of pre-convention days and after the rather general and formal meeting of the whole body and the initial session of the somewhat select national council, the great mass of the 25,000 and odd teachers in town had their first real chance to personally participate in the meetings in which they are particularly interested.

In no less than eight of the city's largest auditoriums, each crowded to the doors, as many sections held sessions intended for the specialist in education. Altogether upwards of 60 formal papers were delivered before intensely interested and technically critical audiences.

Again the general session of the convention formed the climax of the day and Mechanics hall was thronged last evening with those interested in manual trade and technical education, which was the topic ably discussed by four of the leading authorities in the country.

Many of those who were not interested in the manual training availed themselves of the opportunity of attending the performance of "La Damnation de Faust," by Berlioz, while not a few went out to Brookline to the swimming school.

The day was bright and sunny and, while quite warm, the air was dry and invigorating, so that sightseeing in and about the city was thoroughly enjoyed.

Talked on International Affairs

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 8.—Secretary of State Hay is a guest of President Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill. Matters of grave importance to this country were under consideration yesterday afternoon and evening. The conclusions reached at the conference are not disclosed, but it is known that they considered in all its phases the Russian situation, particularly with respect to the B'Nai B'Rith petition, which it has been determined will be forwarded to the Russian government, and the Alaskan boundary question, which next month is to be taken up for what is hoped may be final adjustment by the American and British commission in London.

Twenty-Three Killed In Wreck

Washington, July 8.—Twenty-three persons were killed and nine injured in a head-on collision at Rockfish, Va. A passenger train dashed into a local freight standing on the main line at that point, wrecking both engines and the baggage and express cars of the passenger train. The baggage car and the second-class passenger coach were telescoped. The coach was occupied mostly by colored people, of whom 19 were killed. The engineer of the freight had orders to get out of the way of the passenger train, but for some reason not yet explained he failed to take a siding.

EVANSVILLE NOW QUIET

Public Safety Committee Will Assist the Mayor

POLICE FORCE INCREASED

Has Aid of Eight Companies of Militia and a Battery—Nine Persons Dead, One Dying and Three Fatally Hurt as Result of the Riot

Evansville, Ind. July 8.—The city of Evansville is now under control of Brigadier General McKee and Mayor Covert, assisted by a committee of public safety chosen by a conference held last evening. The conference was called by General McKee, who inquired of the mayor what precautions had been taken to prevent a recurrence of Monday night's lawlessness and informed him that the state would not assume control of the city until the municipality had exhausted its resources.

After a consultation with prominent citizens who attended the meeting, Mayor Cobert announced a committee of public safety, which will advise him during the trouble. The committee discussed the situation with the mayor and General McKee and decided to place the guarding of the city in the hands of Chief of Police Houke, and to increase the regular police force by 32 men, making it 100. The military forces will assist the police and patrol the city. All persons found on the streets at night who cannot furnish a satisfactory explanation of their business will be sent to their homes under guard. The policemen are armed with shotguns and revolvers and their instructions are to force the people to respect their authority.

Mayor Covert last night made the following statement: "I anticipate no further acts of violence, but to be fair, I will say that I did not suspect the possibility of such an occurrence of last night. I believe that the presence of the troops in the city and the strict measures adopted is having the effect of quieting the people."

After the carnage of Monday night, Evansville last night obeyed the orders of the mayor and people kept off the streets.

Nine are dead, one is dying, three others are fatally hurt and 21 more or less injured.

Eight companies of militia and one battery are on duty here. The troops marched heavily armed through a quietly curious crowd of several thousand people, but not a negro was in sight. At every corner were policemen armed with rifles and revolvers. The troops arriving last night were met by Brigadier General McKee, who formally assumed command, and the Martinsville company was ordered to relieve the companies guarding the jail while the Indianapolis companies and the battery were encamped in Sunset park, six squares from the jail. As the troops marched through the streets with the Gatling gun rattling over the pavements, a bystander shouted: "There won't be anything done until you fellows leave, but watch out then. We don't care how long you stay. We can wait." The soldiers paid no attention, but the cry was commented upon.

Lee Brown, the negro who killed Policeman Massey and precipitated the race rioters, has been taken from Vincennes to the state prison at Jeffersonville by order of Governor Durbin. The negro was barely alive and had to be given stimulants and worked with for two hours before he could be taken to the train. His removal caused relief.

The grand jury has returned 20 indictments against Monday night's rioters. The names of the rioters have not been made public. They are said to be well known citizens.

Golden Maxim was second and Savable was third. It was an exciting race, in which Golden Maxim led for the greater part of the distance and was ahead as the horses came into the stretch, but Africander's speed at the finish carried him to victory.

FINAL AGONY OF POPE

May Be a Matter of Hours or Perhaps Days

SEEMS BETTER AT PRESENT

Doctors In Attendance Upon the Pontiff Give Diagnoses of the Case as a Reply to "Rebellion of Cardinals" Against What They Considered Wrongful Treatment of Patient

Rome, July 9.—The condition of the pope's lungs this morning is no worse. There is as yet no suspicion of serum gathering again in the pleura, but the disorder of his kidneys is disquieting.

During the early part of last night the pope was somewhat restless. The occasional brief periods of sleep were disturbed by difficulty in breathing. Dr. Lapponi and Pope Leo's valet, Pio Centra, did their best to nourish the patient at brief intervals. The pontiff spoke little and seemed much depressed. Chloral and caffeine were administered with good effect. About sunrise the pontiff fell into a more restorative sleep than he had had all night.

Fortunately all the climatic conditions in Rome for the time being are favorable to the sufferer. The air is deliciously cool and there is a complete absence of the enervating sirocco which depresses and kills. The bright sunshine streams into the papal apartment. The encouraging conditions are further augmented by the constant use of artificial means of exhilaration, including supplies of oxygen.

Except for the brief time he passed in the armchair the pope lay in bed throughout yesterday, shifting his position frequently without assistance and occasionally taking a small draught of diluted wine with the yolks of eggs. The only solid food he has taken is calves' brains and meat broth.

The late official bulletin following a consultation between Drs. Lapponi and Mazzoni completely contradicted the alarmist reports and gave a most favorable statement. This was disclosed in the improved pulse, better respiration and ameliorated general condition.

Dr. Mazzoni said that while the pope's condition still continued desperate recovery was not entirely impossible. Unfortunately, some elements in the population of Rome, including a few who are high in the councils of the Vatican, are inclined to cast doubts on the sincerity of the bulletins. This led during the day to a strong movement in favor of calling other physicians. The theory of the initiators of this movement was that Drs. Lapponi and Mazzoni had misjudged the disease, taking for pneumonia what was really pleurisy. Both accepted the idea of a consultation with any of their colleagues. Many eminent specialists have been proposed, but it is stated that it has practically been determined that Dr. Rossini shall be called in if another consultation is decided upon. However, Dr. Mazzoni stated that in his opinion there was no imminent need of a consultation and that one would not be held unless the present conditions changed.

Groups of silent, curious people watched the lights glimmering in the sick chamber till past midnight from the broad piazza outside St. Peter's, anxiously waiting for news from within. Now and then distinguished prelates came and inquired regarding the pope's condition, and they in turn would give the little groups their varying impressions of hope and fear. The prevailing sentiment of those admitted nearest to the sufferer is that his life is gradually ebbing away, but whether the final agony will be a matter of hours or days, neither the doctors nor his nearest friends can tell.

The motive for Dr. Mazzoni's sudden call by Cardinal Rampolla originated in what Vatican circles have already baptised as "the rebellion of the cardinals" against Dr. Lapponi. It appears that some of the cardinals complained of the doctor's treatment of the patient, thinking that Lapponi had not since the beginning detected that the pope was suffering from an affection of the pleura and thus, they said, allowing the disease to assume a gravity which otherwise might, perhaps, have been avoided.

Dr. Lapponi, who is supported by Dr. Mazzoni, indignantly repudiated the idea. Both the doctors declared that barely five days have elapsed since the pope became ill and they claim that three days ago they detected water in the pleura and add that it was not possible, in the nature of the disease, to detect it earlier, when the liquid was just gathering, nor was it prudent, considering the age and weakness of the pontiff, to risk a test puncture before having almost certainly detected the presence of serum. However, the criticising cardinals not only maintained their view, but succeeded in reaching the ear of Cardinal Rampolla.

The newspapers publish a history of the pope's illness, evidently inspired by Lapponi and Mazzoni, who wish to defend themselves from the attacks on their diagnoses of the case, but it is interesting as the first statement given of the exact data from a medical point of view. The account runs as follows:

"On the morning of Tuesday, June 30, Pope Leo went for a drive in the Vatican gardens. On returning he declared that he had greatly benefited by the fresh air and wished to repeat the drive. The pope said he felt no need of a medical visit and informed Dr. Lapponi not to go and see him.

"During the night of Wednesday, July 1, Pope Leo complained of intestinal disturbance, which he attributed to constipation. Notwithstanding, he went into the Vatican gardens and returned to his apartments, again feeling the benefit from his drive.

"On Thursday he declared he felt well, but Dr. Lapponi, wishing to know personally the nature of the disturbance complained of, spent the night at the Vatican. During the night the pope was sleepless and restless.

"On Friday Dr. Lapponi examined the pope and found pulmonary inflammation in the right of the thorax, between the inferior and middle lobes. He informed Cardinal Rampolla and began the treatment which he thought right on Saturday. During the day the inflammation spread. Dr. Lapponi, worried, decided to have Pope Leo seen by Dr. Mazzoni, who, since the operation in 1890, has visited the pontiff occasionally, replacing Dr. Lapponi during his illness with appendicitis.

"On Sunday Dr. Mazzoni went to the Vatican and examined the patient with Dr. Lapponi, confirming the latter's diagnosis, viz: An inflammatory process in the lung, which was defined in the medical bulletin as pulmonary hepatization. The original treatment was continued, consisting of supporting the strength, the heart and general condition of the patient.

"No noticeable change was observed until Monday evening. It was then found that the lowest part of the right of the thorax, which previously was pervious to respiration, had become impervious, affecting the function of the lung. The presence of fluid was suspected. The pontiff spent an agitated and sleepless night.

"On Tuesday many symptoms confirmed the presence of fluid. Its increase was considered to account for the pope's general condition growing worse. After a test puncture, 800 grammes of bloody serum was extracted. The condition of the patient improved immediately, reviving hopes, slight in some persons and exaggerated in others. The amelioration in the condition of the patient was not continued during Tuesday. Indeed, depression gained the upper hand."

The Cardinals' Squabble

Paris, July 9.—According to The Journal's correspondent at Rome, the struggle between Cardinals Oreglia and Rampolla is becoming serio-comic. On the former claiming an apartment in the Vatican Rampolla had 1000 chairs piled up in it. Oreglia, says The Journal's correspondent, told him that there were possibly treasures, and in any case important documents, in the pope's room, and he must prevent any one entering. "Some relatives of cardinals have long fingers," he said.

Gibbons Called to Rome

New York, July 9.—In response to an official message from Cardinal Rampolla summoning him to Rome, Cardinal Gibbons, primate of the Catholic Hierarchy in America and member of the sacred college of Rome, which will elect a successor to Leo XIII, arrived in this city last night from Baltimore and sailed for Europe on La Touraine this morning.

Maine Crops Flourishing

Augusta, Me., July 9.—The Maine Farmer has returns from all parts of Maine on crop conditions to July 7. Following is the summary: Haying will not begin in earnest until next week and the crop will be about 70 percent of the average. Potatoes will be fully 100 percent and are growing rapidly. Grain, especially oats, reported good, with a full yield indicated. Fruit very uneven, dropping, and the general condition not over 60 percent. Pasturage is excellent and stock in fine condition. Milch cows lower, dairying increasing in nearly every locality and fodder crops greatly increased.

$125,000 In Unclaimed Deposits

Hartford, July 9.—Deposits aggregating over $125,000 are lying in the savings banks of Connecticut, unclaimed for 20 years or more. The aggregate continues about the same, year by year, although there is a law under which the existence of these deposits is made public for the benefit of possible heirs or others. The returns by the savings banks last year showed an aggregate of $127,543.67, and it is estimated that the returns for the present year, only partly in at this date, will show about the same amount.

EXPERIMENTAL STAGE

Lipton and Fife Change Trim of Shamrock III

IT REDUCES HER SPEED

But Not Enough to Prevent Her Beating the Old Cup Hunter and Covering New York Club Course Close to Columbia's Fastest Time In a Race

New York, July 9.—Over a leeward and windward course of 30 miles, starting at Sandy Hook lightship in a rattling breeze, Shamrock III beat Shamrock I only 4m. 9s., official time. If the figures told the whole story the cup might be safe, but they are deceptive. It is apparent that Messrs. Fife and Lipton are experimenting with the new boat and that changes are made daily in her ballast and trim to discover the effect upon her speed. On Monday, in windward work, she simply outclassed her trial horse. Yesterday she covered the 15 miles to windward only 2:59 faster than Shamrock I. Her ballast had been moved aft, with the result that she could not point so high, though it did not affect her footing ability.

A 10-knot westerly wind and a smooth sea furnished splendid conditions for yesterday's race. The course was a run before the wind, 15 miles east by north, and a beat back to the finish line, 30 miles in all.

They made a beautiful spectacle, as, with spinnakers set, they crossed the line side by side. Shamrock III gained so slowly that it was quickly evident that the new trim was bad. At the turn she was less than quarter of a mile ahead. The wind held fresh and true, beating back to the finish line, and Shamrock III covered the 15 miles in one second less than two hours. She did no better at pointing than did Shamrock I. A falling wind at the finish increased her advantage.

Only once in a cup race has Columbia covered the New York Yacht club course faster than Shamrock III did yesterday and Columbia's fast time was in a race having but 10 miles of windward work. Official summary:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed
Sham. III	11:56:19	3:18:59	3:22:40
Sham. I	11:56:14	3:23:03	3:26:49

Charles E. Adams, president of the Massachusetts Board of Trade, was a guest of Sir Thomas on the Erin. Mr. Lipton accepted Mr. Adams' invitation to be his personal guest for a visit to Boston after the cup races.

The cup hunter will race no more this week. Her bottom is fouled and she will be taken into drydock at the Erie basin and her underbody cleaned and repainted.

Americans Honored by King

London, July 9.—King Edward honored the officers of the American squadron last night at the state ball given at Buckingham palace—the climax of the visit of President Loubet. The king formally received Admiral Cotton, the captains of the American ships and 25 of the junior American officers, and Queen Alexandra later gave them the same distinction. The ball—the first since the accession of King Edward—was a brilliant function, 2200 guests being present.

Time For Him to Reform

Springfield, Ills., July 9.—Adolphus Itjen, who was indicted by the federal grand jury in this city in January, 1900, on the charge of impersonating a special agent with intent to defraud, was brought to this city from Newark, N. J., where he has been serving a term for a similar offense. He has served time in the Ohio state penitentiary, in New York and New Haven, for similar crimes.

Arrests In Riot Cases

Evansville, Ind., July 9.—Five arrests have been made on grand jury indictments for the rioting Sunday night. The police authorities say that while many of those shot by the militia were reputable persons, who no doubt were drawn into the crowd from curiosity, two or three of those killed were disturbers and had caused the police trouble before.

Congo Administration Upheld

Brussels, July 9.—At the close of the debate in the chamber of deputies on the charges brought against the administration of the Congo independent state, the house passed the order of the day, expressing agreement with the government and confidence in the moral development and prosperity of the Congo state under the direction of King Leopold.

Jury Declares Clay Insane

Lexington, Ky., July 9.—General Cassius M. Clay has been pronounced by a jury at Richmond to be of unsound mind. He will be sent to an asylum, this action being taken to protect his property. The aged man was not in court. Physicians testified as to his mental condition.

No More Military Preparations

Vienna, July 9.—As a result of urgent representations from Austria and Russia, Prince Ferdinand has given the strongest assurance that Bulgaria will make no further military preparations against Turkey.

Of Conditions at Lowell Painted by Head of Local Textile Council

Fall River, Mass., July 9.—The feature of the meeting here of the executive committee of the United Textile Workers of America was the appeal made by Robert Conroy, president of the Lowell Textile council, for funds to alleviate the suffering which, he says, exists among the operatives because of the recent strike. He made a long statement in which he urged the necessity for rendering financial assistance, if any money could be raised. He told the committee that the mill owners are discriminating, in the giving of employment, against the officers of Lowell unions and against any and all persons prominent during the strike. He also asked that the officers of the Textile union request the American Federation of Labor to send organizers to Lowell to hold together the unions which have been formed. The emergency committee was instructed to investigate Lowell's condition.

Pardoned Before Sentence Begun

Concordia, Kas., July 9.—A. J. Patterson, sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for withholding $5000 collected from illicit saloons as license payments while he was county treasurer, has been pardoned by Governor Bailey. This is the first case in the state in which a convicted man has been pardoned before entering the penitentiary. Patterson contended that the city received the money illegally and could not hold him accountable for it.

Twenty Still Missing

Jeannette, Pa., July 9.—The search for bodies of the victims of the Oakford park flood is progressing slowly. The recovered bodies number 20, with 20 still missing. Roland Merrill, treasurer of the relief committee, has issued an appeal for help from the outside.

Child Labor Will Flourish

Atlanta, Ga., July 9.—The house of representatives of the general assembly, by a vote of 89 to 75, killed the child labor bill.

G. B. Bates—Expert Plumber.

Good Afternoon

In these days when new methods are constantly superseding old ways, it does not appear right for a city to prescribe by ordinance that only one device shall be used. We know nothing about the flushometer, the use of which it is proposed shall be permissive in plumbing, but if it has the approval of experts, we see no reason why its use should not be permissive. If we are to progress, inventors must be encouraged. Suppose there had been a law forbidding the use of telephones, of applying electricity to street cars, of using pneumatic tools, etc.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Edwin D. Mead, who is a man of peace, does not like the motto on the seal of the commonwealth, nor the design of the seal with its unsheathed sword raised, but he will find considerable difficulty in securing the abandonment of either the design or the motto. However that motto may be translated, "peace under the sword" or that "the sword is drawn for peace," the idea is the same, true to the letter at the time of its conception and equally true today when it is expressed by President Roosevelt in the advice to "speak softly, but carry a big stick." The disarmament of the nations is a pretty thing to consider, but it isn't a reality, and the world is not near enough to the millennium at the present time to warrant nations in putting that sublime trust in others that justifies disarmament. The sword must still be raised and ready to strike in order that we may have peace, and that nation is destined to be the most peaceful which is the most secure in the power of her sword and the arm to wield it.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ When Haverhill elected a Socialist as a Mayor there must have been voters who helped accomplish it who do not accept Socialism as a political doctrine. But they thought it would be a good joke to elect one of those enemies of public peace, just to see what he would do. He has unfolded his plan, and declares his purpose to appoint none but Socialists to the offices he has a right to fill. It will be a good lesson to the voters of Haverhill. We rejoice that he has determined to give them a dose of Socialism, for it will demonstrate to the unthinking what Socialism is in a quicker and more comprehensive way than any amount of talking or writing could do. It may lead Haverhill to choose for her next Mayor a man who has a better idea of the principles of American government than any Socialist can have, and perhaps send men to the Legislature who are more in touch with our free institutions than the Representative from the Fifth Essex.—Lynn Item.

LITERARY QUINCY.

Valuable Contributions of the Past and Present.

In the literary land marks of Boston which is given as one of the guides and souvenirs to the Teachers and Educators of the present National Association meetings, Quincy plays a not insignificant role.

During the last half century some of the most valuable contributions to literature and to history have come from the pens of those whom we claim as our townsmen.

The figures of the past from leaves of old journals kept for nearly 64 years by Josiah Quincy of the class of 1821, Harvard college, is a fascinating volume and of value to all who are students and readers.

No. 5 of page 2 of this souvenir, says: Josiah Quincy, the elder and President of Harvard 1829—1845 wrote History of Harvard university, History of Boston athenaeum and municipal History of Boston.

"The letters of Mrs. Adams are even more valuable object lessons to young women of today than they were when written as simple home letters. In this strenuous, latter life, we need the poise of those early days.

Valuable work is still being done by Charles Francis Adams, author of the life of Richard Henry David. Three episodes of Massachusetts history. Lee at Appomatox, and other historical papers.

Mary Elizabeth Blake journalist, prose writer and poet was educated throughout her early days in Quincy, her old home. Her poem to Ireland has a trumpet note that thrills all hearts that beat to the call of Erin or that can respond to patriotism, or that is sensitive to fine poetic measure. The first step, is a lyric of the home, and her two volumes if poetry give her a place among American poets.

Our city claims exclusive ownership in many who have not an especial part of literary Boston but who have been writers of note.

Dr. William Everett has written two books for the young. While we think "Changing Base" is more for the boys who are in his especial charge, and in his last book he paid a glowing tribute to our army of young women teachers, to their good work and the smaller pay which has been awarded them in past times especially.

It may not be out of place here, to refer to Miss Dearborn, principal of our Coddington school, and to pay another tribute to her arduous and most excellent record extending over very many years.

The late preacher, Dr. Lunt, was a scholar, a fine writer and a poet of a few poems that give one a place among poets.

The latter years have given us valuable and interesting papers upon local history prepared by careful students. Later years still, have added good original work in our various clubs and the present days are seeing original and good work in very many other organizations in our midst.

W. R. C. LAWN PARTY

A Very Enjoyable Gathering With Mrs. Minchin.

W. R. C. No. 103, Quincy, and Post 88 were invited to a lawn party given by Julia Minchin of Braintree, one of the members of Corps, at her beautiful home on Wednesday. The grounds were beautifully decorated with flags, small and large, and Japanese lanterns. There was all kinds of games and plenty of hammocks, swings and even couches for the tired ones. The latter were needed on arrival for the day was hot and the hill was long. There was a match game of croquet between Comrades Farrell, McGrath, Newcomb and Holt. At 5.30 a very nice supper was served, including clam chowder sandwiches and ice cream. There was singing by the Farrell and Newcomb quartet, and dancing on the lawn.

In the evening the program included the singing of America, salute to the flag by corps and children, piano duet by Lillie Greed and Eva Dam, song by Helen Nixon, mandolin and piano duet by Mrs. A. M. Minchin and Mr. Charles Bowers, solo by M. A. Minchin.

It was a financial as well as a social success and netted the corps a good sum. The kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Michin was appreciated and they were given hearty cheers on separating.

The office of the Superintendent of Schools will close Saturday until the latter part of August.

Mr. Daniel Spear of Ohio, a native of Quincy, born on South street, called at the Patriot office this morning. He is about seventy years of age, smart and active, and is stopping at his cousin's, Esther Hunt, in Braintree just over the Quincy line. In the forties he carried the Quincy Patriots for Mr. Green. Probably a few of the aged citizens at the Point will remember the smart lad who used to bring them the news each Saturday morning. May Mr. Spear enjoy a pleasant visit in his native town.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY LEDGER

A PART OF THE PLAY.

Hissing That Brought Some Russian Actors to a Prison Cell.

The course of true art does not always run smooth in Russia, as, for example, in the theater of Yelizavetgrad. In the fourth act of a certain play there is a theater within a theater, as in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," only that some of the dramatis personæ have to mix with the public in the galleries and to hiss the chief actress, who duly faints. As soon as the gentlemen had taken their places among the gods and begun to hiss and whistle the policeman on duty came down upon them like a wolf on the fold, and before they could utter a word of explanation he and his colleagues "nabbed" two, removed them by force and took them to the next police station, where they were charged with disorderly conduct at a public place. They protested that they had only done their duty, but the police laughed their explanations to scorn. The public left the theater en masse to see what was happening to the actors, but the latter had already been consigned to the cells. The crowd in the street before the station house grew rapidly in numbers, and its noisy protests threatened to culminate in serious disorders. Fortunately, the manager of the theater appeared before the superintendent and by the light of a lamp declaimed, with manuscript in hand, the whole fourth act, in order to show that hissing was an essential part of the performance. Only then did the representatives of the law release the innocent actors.

Nativity of the Potato.

There is as much mystery as history connected with the common tuber called the potato. Its nativity, original place in the kingdom of nature and several other things regarding it are still open questions. As to its nativity, the weight of argument seems to favor the tropical or subtropical regions of America. There is a tradition that the vines once grew to monstrous size and that the "balls" were of the "bigness of melons," and at that time the roots were not tubers, the edible parts growing among the branches. It seems that they were first introduced into Europe in the year 1565.

Haskell's "Roots and Wild Plants" says, "Wamkins first fetched a queer, bulbous root out of America which some called a 'bodado,' while others, who had heard the Peruvians mention it, spoke of it as a potato." Periam's Cyclopedia of Agriculture says that Sir John Wamkins found it growing wild near Santa Fe de Bogota at an altitude of 8,000 to 13,000 feet. He also says that it was "fetched out of America" at about the time settled upon by Haskell—viz, in the year 1565.

A Royal Romance.

Carmen Sylva, the royal authoress, met her husband, the king of Roumania, in quite a romantic way. As a girl of seventeen she was running down the staircase of the palace at Berlin when her foot slipped on the marble, and she would have fallen to the floor below, but at the moment Prince Charles of Hohenzollern stepped from an anteroom and caught her in his arms. She did not accept him, although he made her the offer at once. In joke—for it was then most unlikely—she said she preferred to remain queen of herself, but if she became queen of any country at all she would prefer Roumania. Eight years afterward the beautiful Carmen was married to Prince Charles, who had been proclaimed king of Roumania, and thus she realized her ambition.

THE REBEKAHS.

Other Men Joined the Party—Sports a Feature.

Seldom is there seen or heard a livelier or happier crowd than that which took the special car for Nantasket Point Wednesday. The day was all that could be desired and George L. Gill Rebekah lodge and friends to the number of seventy-five celebrated their annual picnic. It was one of the most enjoyable until on the return home they had the privilege of waiting "side tracked" at Hingham for one hour and a quarter owing to an accident to the car. Oh! no, no one was provoked, for they were not in any hurry to return, for the children could sleep just as well on the sidewalk. But at last, as the clock struck eleven, three hours from the beach the party were in City Square. And oh! how glad to be home.

The sports of the day were very interesting and witnessed by a number of spectators.

The swimming match—between Mrs. G. Monk, Mrs. Elsie Robinson, Mrs. Thomas Burke and Mrs. A. T. Jones was won by Mrs. Robinson of Loyal Lodge of Charlestown.

Dinner was served at Wade's, and all declared it the best that was ever eaten at the beach. Barring the accident all felt pleased with the days outing and before the summer is over hope to all meet again, and finish up the balance of the sports, which were postponed on account of darkness.

When Water Was Avoided.

Until comparatively recent times there was a medical prejudice against drinking water. Sir William Vaughan in his "Natural and Artificial Directions For Health" declared that water "ought seldom to be drunk." Another doctor admitted that it might be healthful for children, but not for men—"except some odd, abstemious one among a thousand perchance, degenerate and of a doggish nature, for dogs of nature do abhor wine." Indeed, the recommendation of water as a beverage was supposed to be the sign of the quack. Even Wesley in his "Primitive Physic" wrote of it with caution: "Drink only water if it agrees with your stomach; if not, good, clear small beer."

A Queer Dog.

Dagonet in the Referee tells a story of two little girls who were trying to explain what sort of a dog it was they had seen. Said one little girl, "It was one of those funny ones; you know, the ones that are a dog and a half long and half a dog high." Said the other: "You must know the sort. It's a dog that only has four legs, but looks as if it ought to have six." It may interest Dagonet to hear of a fairly apt definition that a Public Opinion man once heard applied to the dachshund—"the dog with the Louis XIV. legs."

The Appetite of Kitty.

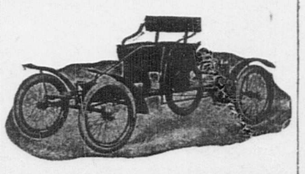

The number of wild animals sold as pets to private families in this country is said to be beyond belief, but the families generally return the beasts before long to the dealer. A writer on this wild beast traffic in Leslie's Monthly says that one animal dealer who recently sold a lion cub to a lady received only two months afterward a letter from her saying: "Please come and take Kitty away. She has eaten our Newfoundland dog."

Business Man—I'd like to oblige you, Rackstraw, but a fellow came around last week with a pledge binding the signer not to put his name on a petition of any kind for a year—and I signed it. —Chicago Tribune.

Babies In India.

Babies cry very little in India—they obey spiritual law as a flower. The lotos bud, lying on a stone bench in a dirty room, sucks its toe and seems dreaming of the pranks of baby Krishna and solving problems of the universe. As it grows older it is very timid and shy in the presence of its elders. It feels the religious awe around it and does not break out into boisterous sport when all seem at prayer

But there is much love in India and these humble households seem very happy. They are all in all to each other and seek nothing outside either in society or amusement. Beautiful character comes from obedience to law and not from lawlessness. In India children are the crowning gift of life. It is a horror to be childless.—Everybody's Magazine.

The Same Brick.

She threw it out of doors and, turning to the child, said, "If you bring another brick into the parlor mother will whip you."

Shortly afterward she again found the child playing with a brick and, looking at her reprovingly, asked, "What did mother tell you about that brick, Alice?"

"Well, this isn't another brick," said the child. "This is the one I had before."

Love and the Doctor.

It would be well if in negotiations with a view to matrimony the doctor were to be called in as an accessory to the god of Love, who is proverbially blind and therefore regardless of consequences. The family doctor can do much to prevent unwholesome marriages, and we look with much greater confidence to the fruits of his teaching and persuasion than to legislative enactments.—British Medical Journal.

Don't Play Hymns at Sea.

Any woman who takes a sea voyage should be careful not to play or sing hymns aboard ship except at the regular Sunday morning service. Sailors think singing hymns at any other time is bound to bring bad luck. It is as bad, they say, as having a parson aboard, which is reckoned a sure sign that the ship will go to "Davy Jones' locker."

One Cause For Satisfaction.

"Well," said the detective, "there is one thing upon which we may congratulate ourselves in this case."

"Why, you haven't even found an important clew."

"That's just it. We can rest assured that no innocent person is going to suffer."—Washington Star.

McQUINN---HAYDEN.

One of the prettiest mid-summer weddings of the season was that of Miss Ruth Elmore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse C. Hayden, and Mr. Benjamin Russell McQuinn on Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 1126 Hancock street.

The ceremony, which was witnessed by the immediate relatives only, was performed at 7.45 o'clock beneath a bower of green and white by Rev. Edward Norton, the ring service being used. The bride, who was unattended entered upon the arm of the groom to the inspiring strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Miss Alice Belcher of Randolph, a cousin of the bride.

The bride, who never looked more charming, wore a white muslin, and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. McQuinn received many beautiful gifts.

Relatives were present from Scituate, Randolph, Cambridge, Weymouth and Wollaston.

Mr. and Mrs. McQuinn will reside at No. 1126 Hancock street, where they will be at home after September 1.

MILTON.

Mrs. William H. Forbes and Miss Emerson entertained about three hundred visiting teachers at the Forbes residence on Milton hill on Tuesday.

Rev. George Whitehouse is in Maine on a brief trip. Later in the season he is going abroad.

Paul Carpenter has gone to Provincetown for the summer.

L. Bolton has been confined to his home this week by illness.

Miss Millie Fuller has gone to Concord, N. H.

Rev. Tyler E. Gale of Worcester will preach at the East Congregational church on Sunday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson is on a visit to Abbot, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Babcock and Miss Rachel Babcock are on a trip to the White Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harrigan are preparing for a trip to Colorado.

The Fourth was unusually quiet in Milton. The night before the boys were about and while they made considerable noise after midnight it was quiet up to that time. There was but one alarm of fire and that did not amount to anything.

About the year 1690, at Jena, where the west gate of the city is remarkable for four images of monkey heads, cut in stone at each corner of the gate, a quarrel arose between the students of the university and the citizens, during which the gownsmen called the gate watchmen "monkey watchmen." To avenge this insult the watchmen killed one of the students, whose funeral sermon was preached from the text, "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson." From that time the townspeople were called by the students "Philistines," and this use of the word spread to other places.

In another explanation, given as early as 1777 by Adelung, reference is made to the Balistarii, or crossbowmen, who were called in Hungary Philistael, and to the municipal soldiers of Vienna, who had the nickname Philisters as early as the seventeenth century.

The word was brought into prominent notice in England by Matthew Arnold, who appears to have adopted it from Heine. By a Philistine he meant "a strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent, like Goliath, of the chosen people, of the children of sweetness and light."

The Exclusiveness of Caste.

An English officer who some years ago was wounded in a battle in India and left lying all night among the native dead and wounded tells this story: "Next morning we spied a man and an old woman, who came to us with a basket and a pot of water, and to every wounded man she gave a piece of joaree bread from the basket and a drink from her water pot. To us she gave the same, and I thanked heaven and her. But the Soobahdar was a high caste Rajpoot, and, as this woman was a Chumar or of the lowest caste, he would receive neither water nor bread from her. I tried to persuade him to take it that he might live, but he said that in our state, with but a few hours more to linger, what was a little more or less suffering to us—why should he give up his fate for such an object? No; he preferred to die unpolluted."

JEWISH PLEA REVISION

Will Be Handed to President Roosevelt Next Week

THE METHOD OF PROCEDURE

When Document Is Ready For Presentation to Russian Government Not Yet Decided Upon—Petition Grouped With Manchurian Question

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 9.—President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay have concluded their conference and the secretary has returned to Washington. It is understood that the exact method of procedure relative to the B'Nai B'Rith petition to the Russian government has not been determined. The petition itself has not been completed and it can be said that the president deeply regrets the delay in the placing of the document in his hands.

On Tuesday next the president expects to have a conference at Sagamore Hill with three of the Jewish citizens who have promoted the idea of forwarding a petition to the Russian government. On last day Simon Wolf of Washington and Oscar Strauss and Leon N. Levy of New York will take luncheon with the president. It is expected that the petition, which has been revised carefully by its authors, will be handed to the president at that time. In any event, he subject, in all its phases, will be considered thoroughly.

It is understood that the Jewish citizens who have been insistent in their advocacy of the sending of the petition desire that matters relating to it should be considered entirely apart from the Manchurian question. This, it is pointed out by state department officials, is scarcely possible, as the two matters are unseparably connected in the manifold ramifications of the United States diplomatic relations with Russia.

Whether the petition, when completed, will be sent immediately to the Russian government, or whether the Russian foreign officials will be asked first whether it will receive such a presentation, has not been determined definitely.

The result would be the same in effect, whether the one method were adopted or the other, as naturally Russia would be cognizant of the nature of the petition before she declined or agreed to receive it.

Former Governor Crane of Massachusetts is a guest of President Roosevelt. He is one of the intimate personal and political friends of the president and was invited to come to Oyster Bay to consider some matters of concern to President Roosevelt.

Washington, July 9.—Secretary Hay has returned to Washington, looking much improved in health. It may be stated that the president and his secretary of state are in absolute accord upon everything that has been done in connection with the Jewish petition, the Manchurian issue and other important pending and open questions. There has been no change of plan respecting the Jewish petition so far as the general features are concerned.

Cuban Rural Guard Depleted

Havana, July 9.—Some concern is being manifested over the situation of the rural guards. The period of the two-year enlistments which began during the intervention is expiring. The force of 1600 men has recently dwindled to 1200, the best class of soldier material not applying for enlistment. Coincident with the depletion of the rural guard, the government is taking preventive measures against possible disturbances.

Didn't Hold the Meeting

Vienna, July 9.—A memorial service for the victims of the Kishineff massacre was held yesterday in the synagogue here. The students, wishing to show their disapproval of the massacre, decided to attend in a body. At the entrance to the synagogue they were surrounded by gendarmes and arrested. They will be prosecuted for disturbing public order.

Longstreet's Life In Danger

Gainesville, Ga., July 9.—General James Longstreet is dangerously ill and physicians will perform an operation for the removal of his left eye, destroyed by a cancer. On account of his age, 81 years, he may not be able to withstand the shock, though he has assented to the operation.

Scarcity of Harvest Hands

Boston, Kas., July 9.—Forty farmers stopped a Missouri Pacific train here last night and went through it, searching for harvest hands. The train ordinarily does not stop here and the farmers flagged it. They offered passengers $2.50 and $3 a day for three weeks to get off the train.

Trolley Passengers Shaken Up

New York, July 9.—Twenty-five persons were injured in two trolley accidents in The Bronx last night, but none seriously. In each accident the car came to a sudden stop, owing to a derangement of the machinery, and the passengers were hurled from their seats, shaken up and bruised.

Waterboy Wins Brighton Handicap

New York, July 9.—J. B. Haggins' Waterboy won the Brighton handicap at 1 1-4 miles in 2:03 1-5, a world's record. Waterboy carried the top top weight, 124 pounds, and was favorite in the betting at 2 to 1.

EDUCATORS KEPT BUSY

Heard Many Papers on Special Topics and Enjoyed Recreation

Boston, July 9.—The convention of the National Education association has reached its high tide with a maximum attendance, a dozen meetings, at which nearly 80 interesting papers on special topics were read, almost a score of receptions in and about the city in the afternoon, and the usual general session and concert in the evening.

The day favored the sightseers for, although it was quite warm, the air was dry and the heat scarcely felt. Those who clung close to the city had a good snuff during the afternoon of a genuine Boston east wind, which blew in from the sea for nearly an hour and sent the mercury down 6 or 8 degrees in as many minutes. The sea breeze subsided about 4 o'clock, however, and the heat returned with apparently added vigor.

The morning was devoted to departmental meetings, no less than 10 separate sessions being held, counting the joint meeting of the art, elementary and manual training sections as one. Each of the section assemblies was of paramount importance to teachers who specialize along the different lines represented, but the one of the greatest interest was perhaps that of the department of higher education. The discussion of the relation of the university to the manners and morals of its students enlisted some of the best thoughts of the country's leading college presidents.

Three interesting papers were read at the general session held in Mechanics hall in the evening on school gardens, city school yards and surroundings of rural schools. A concert, lecture and dancing closed the day.

Best's Body Stuffed With Sawdust

Newark, N. J., July 9.—At the demand of his sons an autopsy was held at Caldwell on the body of Colonel W. J. Best, who died in San Rafael, Cal., in the home of Dr. John D. Woods. It was ascertained that the body had been opened once before, and that the stomach, the digestive and other organs, with the lungs, had been removed and sawdust inserted. While some of the other organs were in place, there was every evidence they had been disturbed. The physicians found that the embalming fluid had been injected from the inside, through a large vein, which had first been broken and tied. The physicians agreed that every precaution had been taken to prevent any light being thrown on the cause of death.

"Trust" Manager Committed

Newark, N. J., July 9.—A. M. Ross, manager of the Empire Trust and Securities company, has been committed in default of $5000. The company of which he is manager is alleged to be a "get rich quick" concern. Daniel J. Ward, president of the concern, was arrested last night by a postoffice inspector and two local detectives. He denied any knowledge of the concern or of his name being used as president. Ross, he said, was a friend of his who frequently had letters sent to his house and called for them.

Nose Clipped Off With Beer Glass

Springfield, Mass., July 9.—Charles Vitkofsky narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of a mob in Huntington last night following a bar-room row in which Vitkofsky was charged with throwing a beer glass at George LaFond, cutting his nose off close to the face. After severe treatment at the hands of the mob Vitkofsky was locked up. While on the way to the station the mob demanded the prisoner, continuing their cries of "lynch him; get a rope."

Dividing Huntington Millions

San Francisco, July 9.—The Huntington estate in California has been equally divided between the two heirs of the late C. P. Huntington. They are the widow and H. E. Huntington, a nephew of the deceased millionaire. This is the first division of the $60,000,000 estate, and a distribution of the eastern properties will soon follow. The value of the California property of the estate exceeds $400,000.

Uncle Tom's Cabin Shows Barred

Fayette, Mo., July 9.—The Howard county court has effectually put an end to all "Uncle Tom's Cabin" shows in this county. In rearranging the license rate for circuses and shows, it was decided to levy a tax of $200 a day on all Uncle Tom shows. Howard was the largest slave holding county in the state.

A $400,000 Shoe Failure

Boston, July 9.—The Shoe and Leather Mercantile agency reports the assignment of Ara Cushman & Co., shoe manufacturers of Auburn, Me., to E. S. Faul of that city. Ara Cushman & Co. was a Maine corporation with a paid up capital of $500,000 and stood high in the trade. The firm was incorporated in 1888 and did a business of $1,250,000 per annum. The assignment was attributed to the inability of the firm to secure sufficient bank accommodation.

Threw a Man Overboard

Kineo, Me., July 9.—Joe Scribner, a woodsman, was brought here last night and placed under arrest, charged with pushing James Myers, another woodsman, overboard from a lake steamer which was carrying a crew of woodsmen. Scribner, it is said, threw Myers overboard without the slightest warning and without any known reason except that Scribner was intoxicated. Myers was drowned.

Threatened to Shoot Councilman

Lowell, Mass., July 9.—Fred M. Thrall was arrested last night for carrying a concealed weapon. An unloaded revolver was found in his possession, but Councilman Pinder preferred charges against him for threatening to shoot him because Thrall alleged the councilman was holding back a paving loan. The man is thought to be insane and will be examined by physicians.

Murderer Dies In Jail

Bridgeport, Conn., July 9.—Peter Worden, the confessed slayer of his niece, Edith Roscoe, at Sherman on June 16, died last night at the jail here of hemorrhage from the wounds which he inflicted upon himself immediately after his attack upon Miss Roscoe. So far as the physicians know the hemorrhage was natural. Worden having done nothing to bring it about.

The Serpent That Talked Like a Man

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a mowe or rycke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpentes as there was sheafes, so as no one sheaf could be removed but there presently appeared a heape of ougly and fierce serpentes. The countrie men determyned to set fire upon the barne and so attempted to do, but in vaine, for the straw would take no fire, although they laboured with all their witts and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heap a huge great serpente, which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying, 'Cease to prosecute your devise, for you shall not be able to accomplish our burning, for wee were not bredde by nature, neither came we here of our owne accord, but were sent by God to take vengence on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "countrie" men did, but it is natural to suppose that they surrendered at once.

Pictures In Stone.

Shakespeare could "find tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything," but he fails to mention the possibility of finding a picture drawn by nature in a stone. In several of the ancient as well as modern scientific journals we read of lines and markings in certain stone formations, particularly agates, which bear striking resemblances to the outlines of men, animals, landscapes, etc.

One of these curiosities now preserved in the museum of the Vatican is a perfect likeness of a crowned king. Many of these representations are so lifelike that they have been mistaken for medallion portraits. We read accounts of several of these wonders in Albertus. One plainly shows a man in the attitude of running, another is a perfect figure of the good St. Jerome, but the most remarkable of all is an agate containing a representation of Apollo surrounded by the nine muses.

SHOE WORKERS' WAGES

Scale Recommended by Board of Conciliation

IT APPLIES TO CUTTERS

Covering All Branches In Their Department—Conclusions Reached After Extensive Inquiry and Affects Twelve Brockton Manufacturers

Boston, July 10.—One of the most important decisions that the state board of conciliation and arbitration has had for some time is the following in relation to the cutting of shoes in 12 factories in Brockton. This is one of the last cases that required the attention of Judge Reed before he left the board as its chairman. The decision says:

In these cases a question of fair prices for work performed in cutting rooms was referred to the board. A public hearing was given to all parties involved. The board has obtained through conferences the views of the employer and the employed concerning day and piece prices; moreover, the rates paid for similar work in a large number of factories were ascertained through the assistance of men skilled in the trade. In view of all the testimony the board recommends for the present the following prices for labor as now performed by workmen of average skill and capacity in all branches of the cutting departments of the factories in question.

Sorters and special cutters, $3 a day; outside cutters, $2.75; topping cutters, $2.50; lining cutting, cloth, $2.50; leather linings and gore cutter, $2.50; skiving vamps, $2.50; skiving tops and trimmings, $2.25; dieing-out cloth on machine, $2.25; crimping, $2.25; throating vamps, $2.50; marking linings, $2; putting up linings, $2; matching up work, $2; pinking and punching, $2; cutting trimmings with knife, $2; dieing-out on block, according to proficiency, $1 to 2.

The board further recommends that the manufacturers and their employes proceed without delay to negotiate in joint committee a bill of wages for week work, specifying the number of pairs a day for shoes retailing at $3.50, smaller stints for dearer grades and larger stints for cheaper grades, and a scale of piece prices; that in the event of not reaching such a mutual agreement by Oct. 1, 1903, the matter be referred again to this board, with the understanding that the award shall take effect from that date.

Harmony Among Methodists

Asbury Park, N. J., July 10.—The joint commission of the Methodist Episcopal churches, north and south, has completed its ritual revision labors at Ocean grove. The new order of worship adopted lays special stress upon reverent worship and provides for kneeling in silent prayer on entering a church. There are extensive changes in the catechism. Bishop Merrill, in an interview, said: "The Methodist Episcopal churches north and south are closer today than they have been since they separated in the days of slavery."

Turkish War Party's Advice

Constantinople, July 10.—A special session of the ministerial council was held at which it is understood the war party insisted on Turkey's right to continue the occupation of strategic points on the frontier, in spite of Austrian and Russian remonstrances. It was maintained that it was impossible to act otherwise lest Turkey be caught unprepared. A panic occurred on the bourse and Turkish bonds fell 1½ points, owing to sales by palace functionaries.

The Endeavorers' Convention

Denver, July 10.—The 21st annual meeting of the United Society of Christian Endeavor has formally opened. The attendance at the opening session did not include as many delegates as had been expected, on account of delayed trains. The opening of the convention was preceded by the annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor corporation, at which the officers for the ensuing year were elected and reports of officers submitted.

MISS HALEY'S VICTORY

Defeats College Presidents In Tilt Over the N E A Bylaws

Boston, July 10.—John W. Cook of Illinois is the head of the National Education association for the coming year. He headed the list of officers presented by the nominating committee and was elected at the annual meeting of active members. The newly elected treasurer is McHenry Rhoades of Kentucky. The retiring president, Dr. Eliot, heads the list of 12 vice presidents.

The sensation of the meeting was the spirited difference of opinion between Presidents Eliot of Harvard and Butler of Columbia, on the one side and Miss Margaret A. Haley of Chicago on the other over a proposed amendment to the bylaws giving the election of the nominating committee, now lodged with the state delegates, to the president. Miss Haley opposed the proposed change and came out victorious after a lively forensic battle with the two college presidents in which a number of the delegates joined.

Miss Haley contended that the proposed amendment was nothing less than a move toward investing the power of government in the male members of the association. The question of the control of the association, she said, had narrowed down to a contest between the men and the women, and the adoption of the amendment proposed would mean complete victory for the former.

Both President Eliot and President Butler insisted that under the existing conditions the states are not getting the proper representation on the committee of nominations. When the matter came to a vote, however, Miss Haley's contention that the proposed amendment meant a too great centralization of power was sustained, and the choice of members of the committee remains with the state delegates.

The convention will practically close today, although the visitors have kept up their registration, and the list is now far beyond 30,000.

New Coach For Columbia Crew

New York, July 10.—Edward Hanlon, who coached Columbia university's racing crews for a number of years, will retire from his position Sept. 15. The alumni of the university, at a meeting held last night, unanimously recommended Jasper T. Goodwin, Columbia '76, for the place of rowing coach. Goodwin was stroke of the famous Columbia four which won the visitors' cup at the Henley regatta in England in 1878, the only Henley cup ever brought to America. He has practiced law for many years.

Officers Looking For Horse Thief

East Whately, Mass., July 10.—Officers from Vermont, Massachusetts and New York are looking for C. R. Young, who, it is alleged, is a notorious horse thief. It is claimed that he has spent 43 of the 60 years of his life in prison, principally for horse stealing. He was discharged from the state prison at Windsor, Vt., on May 1. It is claimed that he has stolen three rigs since that time.

Labor Laws to Be Revised

Boston, July 10.—At a special meeting of the executive council Governor Bates nominated the following named men as members of the special committee of five to revise the laws in regard to the relations between employers and employes: Carroll D. Wright, Royal Robbins, Davis R. Dewey, William N. Osgood, Henry Sterling.

Fell Into Thieves' Hands

Waterbury, Conn., July 10.—Isidor Opaluski, a baker, was found late last night near a resort on the Thomaston road, lying unconscious, with his hands securely tied. He was roused long enough to say that three men had robbed him. He then sank into unconsciousness and is now in a critical condition. Physicians say that he was drugged.

Swordfish Jabbed Fisherman

BUT A QUESTION OF HOURS.

All Hope of the Recovery of Pope Leo Abandoned---Progress of Disease.

Rome, July 10.—The injections given first by Dr. Mazzoni and then by Dr. Lapponi have had in part the desired effect, as the pope has succeeded in getting some sleep, although his slumber was not entirely tranquil. The patient's diet has been somewhat lightened since the attack of diarrhoea yesterday and is now limited mainly to meat broth and beef tea.

When, shortly after sunrise this morning, Dr. Lapponi went to see the pope, he found him with his hands together in the attitude of prayer. On the doctor inquiring whether he required anything the pope replied. "Today finishes a week since I was taken ill. I am thanking God for having given me strength to still pray to him."

Rome, July 10.—Another day of alternate hopes and fears has passed and Pope Leo's life still hangs in the balance. Beginning with renewed hopes the day closed with the scales tending slowly, but surely, downwards. How long this period of suspense will last not even the attending doctors dare to say.

At 12:15 this morning it was learned from Dr. Mazzoni that the condition of the pontiff had not changed since the issue of the evening bulletin at 7:30 o'clock, which announced that the patient's state was grave, and at which hour Dr. Lapponi had declared his fear that there was no hope. At midnight a report coming from the Vatican itself gained currency that Dr. Mazzoni had again operated on the pope and extracted serum which had again gathered in the pleural cavity. The representative of The Associated Press immediately went to see the surgeon and found him at his home at 1:30 this morning. Dr. Mazzoni said:

"It is untrue that a new operation has been performed. I was with the pope from 11 p. m. until after midnight and found his general condition stationary. To strengthen the patient's heart and help the circulation of the blood I injected camphor and caffeine, after which the pope, who seemed somewhat relieved, said he remembered being treated with rasphal water on a cancer when he was nuncio at Brussels, 60 years ago.

"It must be understood that the pope is too frail to be handled like other people. Besides, his thorax, through old age, has become bent in such a way that the right side, where pneumonia was first detected, curves out in a very pronounced manner, while the left side curves in. In tomorrow's visit attention will be especially centered on the progress in the secretion of serum. Then a decision will be taken as to whether a new operation is necessary."

The condition of Pope Leo at times yesterday morning seemed so favorable that the hopeful Dr. Mazzoni and the more conservative Dr. Lapponi united in expressing the belief that there was some prospect of recovery. But within a few hours these brighter prospects disappeared before the most alarming conclusions, reached after the lengthy consultation of the doctors. The earlier hopes had been inspired largely by the pontiff's outward evidence of vigor, as he was able to rise, walk and command all his faculties, but the later consultation disclosed that these outward evidences of strength were entirely deceptive, as the real danger consisted in the gradual internal progress of the insidious disease.

The mere fact of the consultation gave rise to the gloomiest forebodings. Indeed, this was the first actual consultation, as the previous frequent meetings of the doctors were not regarded as formal consultations. Yesterday, however, Dr. Rossoni, a distinguished specialist, was called in to a consultation lasting two hours, during which every phase of the patient's case was minutely gone over. The conclusions announced showed that fluid is again rapidly gathering in the pleural cavity and that the pope's general condition is very grave.

Following the issuance of this bulletin the doctors freely expressed their personal convictions regarding the extreme gravity of the case.

Whatever may be the outcome, the Vatican world has fully made up its mind that the demise of the pope is only a question of days at the most and probably only of hours. With this being the prevalent view, every detail for conducting the affairs of the church during the interregnum and for carrying out the election of Pope Leo's successor is being systematically arranged. Following advices from the Vatican, the cardinals throughout the world are hurrying Romeward anticipating the holding of a conclave for the choice of a pope.

One of the most remarkable features of the sick room is the absolute simplicity and the entire absence of the usual elaborate equipment found in the sickrooms of distinguished patients. There are no trained nurses, the only attendants, besides the doctors, being the pope's valets, Centra and De Castro. The doctors are without a corps of assistants, and there are none of the modern appliances for refrigeration and other means of ameliorating the condition of patients.

That the pope fully realizes that his end cannot long be deferred is shown by the attention he has given during the last few days to the details of his final resting place. It is well known that he has discussed his testamentary dispositions and expressed his wishes as to the place and manner of his funeral. Shortly before he was taken ill the pontiff repeated to Cardinal Satolli his desire to be buried in the church of St. John Lateran. The spot he designated is above the entrance to the sacristy, corresponding to the opposite niche in which is the monument erected by himself in 1891 to Pope Innocent III. It is said that a statue of Pope Leo, forming part of the monument, has already been made. In other respects the tomb will resemble that of Innocent III, consisting of a sarcophagus with a bas relief, two niches, two statues and two medallions.

If there are real martyrs at the Vatican they are Professors Lapponi and Mazzoni, who are inundated with letters and telegrams from the four quarters of the earth, imploring them to save their patient.

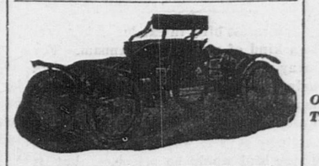

Unknown names rub elbows with those of world-wide celebrity, some of the senders asking for telegraphic news two or three times a day. A private secretary and a large fortune would be required to answer them all, which the eminent professors certainly have no intention of doing. It does not even end there, for admirers and worshipers of Pope Leo send infallible remedies which they say if only employed are sure to save the pontiff's life. An American has sent what he describes as an extraordinary nutritive liquid which would restore the dying to health. A South American has sent a hemorrhoidal unguent in a very rich flask. Besides these, there are prescriptions from druggists and offers already to embalm the pontiff. Others offer to make a death mask; some want to paint a picture of Pope Leo and one writes even offers to impart the secret of petrifying the body into an everlasting statue to be offered to the pope's nephews.

A new phase of the historic strife between the noble families of Colonna and Orsini has been developed by the illness of the pope. Hoping to reconcile this ancient family hostility, it has been the practice to designate the head of each house as a prince assistant to the pontifical throne, these two positions being the highest lay honors in the gift of the pope. In the case of the coronation of a new pontiff, the two princes stand on either side of him. The head of the Colonna family, Don Marco Antonio Colonna, was among the visitors at the vatican yesterday, but the Orsini family is temporarily unrepresented in this high dignity, Don Filippo Orsini having resigned in favor of his son, Don Domenico, prince of Solofra, and the latter's nomination not having yet been confirmed by Pope Leo. The Orsinis are thus without representation and this circumstance constitutes an interesting historical curiosity.

The Neapolitans are showing great emotion over the approaching end of Pope Leo, praying in the churches and doing all that religion prescribes in appealing to the Almighty to delay the catastrophe. Cardinal Prisco telegraphs that recourse has even been had to the extreme measure of bringing out the blood of Saint Gennaro. The blood of the saint is contained in a vial in a petrified form, which turns into liquid and boils when the saint condescends to intervene. The miracle is very dear to the heart of the Neapolitans, who firmly believe in its power to cure all ills. The cardinal reports that the petrified blood took a liquid form today in the presence of a large concourse.

Valuable Time Saved.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause 'several days' loss of time and when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cuts, bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

Mrs. Margaret Walsh and family of Quincy enjoy life at the Oakland cottage on Island avenue.

Mr. Richardson and family of Brookline are in a cottage on Great Hill.

J. S. Coveney and family of Hyde Park occupy a cottage on Bay View avenue.

The residents of Houghs Neck are high in their praise of the efficient service rendered by Officer Curtin who looks after the beach this summer. Officer Curtin comes on duty in the afternoon and remains on until late at night, and it is a well established fact that the beach was never more orderly than this year. The night before the Fourth has usually been celebrated in a manner that was not at all pleasing to property owners. This year, however, Officer Curtin used a little diplomacy and the result was that there was no vandalism or lawlessness, and everybody had a good time.

An employe on the Metropolitan sewer near Nut island had his ankle broken Thursday by being struck with a bucket.

RECEPTION.

And Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Goodridge.

The popularity of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Goodridge of Quincy among the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs was attested Thursday evening when there was a large gathering of the fraternity at Odd Fellows' hall at Randolph to give the newly married couple a reception. It was under the auspices of Golden Star Rebekah lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodridge were ushered into the hall by four past grands and escorted to near the Noble Grand's chair. There were decorations of potted plants and flowers. Two past grands acted as ushers, and all were pleased to extend their individual congratulations and best wishes.

Then came a presentation, Mrs. Cushman, the Noble Grand, presenting in behalf of the brothers and sisters a china closet and a dozen silver knives and forks.

An entertainment followed and ices and punch were served.

The Barre Lockout.

The lockout of the granite cutters continues without change, says a dispatch to the Globe. The proposition of the manufacturers to arbitrate the differences was rejected by the union on Thursday, after a 17-minutes session.

Up to 4 o'clock, Thursday 200 traveling cards had been taken out by cutters who have left or will leave the city for other places. In addition to this a considerable number has left town without waiting to take out cards.

Great Island Tournament.

A. L. White of the Wollaston Golf club not only defeated E. A. Slack in the first round for the Great Island Cup, but also defeated G. E. Barnard in the second round. In the semi-finals he will play A. G. Lockwood.

C. L. Perkins of Wollaston beat W. B. Merrill in the first round for the Governor's cup, but fell before Alfred Howard of Woodland who won 2 up.

The rarest bird in existence is a certain kind of pheasant in Annam. For many years its existence was known only by the fact that its longest and most splendid plume was in much request by mandarins for their headgear. A single skin is worth $400, and the living bird would be priceless, but it soon dies in captivity.

Of the five tickets distributed to Massachusetts teachers to attend the supper given by Mr. and Mrs. James J. Storrow of Waltham, Thursday, Quincy teachers were fortunate to receive three.

AT THE SHIPYARD.

Progress on the New Jersey, the Douglas and the Freighter.

The steel conning tower for the battleship New Jersey has arrived at the Fore River shipyard from Pennsylvania. It is a huge casting of elliptical shape, and weighs 91,500 pounds. The shield that protects it weighs eleven and one half tons, and the top nearly another ton, while fifteen of the bolts that fasten it together come to 35 pounds more, making the total weight of the structure about 115,330 pounds.

Rapid progress has been made at the Fore River shipyard on the Fall River line freight steamer. The frames are all in place now so that next week the shell-platers will be set to work, and the raising of the interior bulkheads begun. Over 300,000 pounds of steel has been built in already and the work is going on very satisfactorily.

A large force of men is engaged at Fore River grading and setting the the foundations for a new building, 49 x 73 feet on the ground to be used as a coppersmith's shop. This new development of the plant, which is on the little point that ends in the yard's landing dock, is planned to be extended along the fitting-out basin and will ultimately include a rigger's loft and a paint shop.

The construction of the addition at the seaward end of the fitting-out dock is being pushed fast. The foundation piling has been set, and work on the concrete walls will begin at once. When completed the dock and the gantry crane tracks upon it will be 1200 feet long.

With her launching but a month away, the six-master William L. Douglas begins to show her true bulk, even side of the big battleships under the Fore River shiphouse. The hull plating is not completed, the frames still showing fore and aft but the upper or spar deck is laid and the forecastle and poop are closed in. Looking down through the five great hatches the bottom shows 29 feet below, and in this cavernous space 5,700 tons of coal can be stowed—almost twice as much as any of the three six-masters now in commission can carry at one time.

Valuable Special Knowledge.

The unique botanical knowledge of Sir George Birdwood, one of the most erudite men in the India service, once enabled him to perform almost unconsciously a neat bit of detective work.

He was in Bombay when he was asked to investigate the case of a young nobleman who in applying to the governor for an appointment represented that he was just out from England and that his letters of introduction had been lost on the voyage.

A few days after Dr. Birdwood, as he then was, had undertaken the investigation he met the young nobleman at dinner at the governor's house. The table decorations of orchids suggested a conversational opening, and Dr. Birdwood's praise drew from the young nobleman standing opposite:

It was a fatal remark.

"You come from Rangoon, then!" instantly exclaimed Dr. Birdwood.

The pale face, the silence that could be felt, the request of the young man that he might leave the table, all prepared the governor and the company for the subsequent discovery that he had absconded from Rangoon with some public funds.

How Roses Came to Be Red.

More than with any other flower does the color of the rose have special significance. Red is love, white is silence, yellow speaks jealousy, says N. Hudson Moore in the Delineator. One of the legends connected with the rose tells that it became white through being bathed with the tears of mourners who sought the sweetest flower to lay in the hands of their dead. A prettier conceit declares that all roses were white until one day young Cupid, dancing among them, upset in his merry sport a glass of wine, which dyed the roses upon which it fell red, its own color. Another legend tells the story of a holy little maid of Bethlehem who was doomed to death. When the stakes were heaped around her the fire would not burn, but the brands which had been flaming turned to red roses and those which had not caught to white. From this time forth roses, red and white, were martyrs' flowers. The Turks say that red roses sprang from the blood of Mohammed.

Tax Rate Reduced.

Whitman's tax rate will be $18.30 against $21.70 last year. The valuation is $28,620 larger. The total amount raised by taxation is $76,444, for a population of 6,469.

—The value of such a man as Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow to the Government cannot be estimated, for besides the amount saved, there is the incalculable tonic of his exemple. —Athol Chronicle.

KNIVES DRAWN.

There was a free fight in the steel room at the Fore River Works Thursday afternoon, shortly before 5 o'clock. The trouble is alleged to have arisen over the use of a plate punching machine. The parties directly involved were John and Wade Shorter aged 28 and 19 years, and John McAndrews and H. Johnson.

The affair came just before the day crew is relieved by the night crew. From a wordy dispute the parties came to blows, and it is alleged that the crowd turned upon the two Shorters, who in self-defence drew their pocket knives.

The affair now assumed the aspect of a small riot, and while it was at its height H. Johnson received a stab in the upper part of the back, and John McAndrews a cut in the wrist.

The wounded men were taken to the relief hospital and their wounds treated. The affair was reported to the police and late in the evening Inspector McKay and Officer Bradley arrested the two Shorters.

The men stabbed were not seriously injured and were about this morning.

Another version of the affair, is that the row started in the morning, during which it is alleged that Wade Shorter struck a man and backing up against a post deliberately drew his knife. During the afternoon wordy war ensued over the morning affair, and fighting words were frequently used.

It is alleged that Shorter again drew his knife and John McAndrew stepped in to defend his brother and received a cut on the wrist. Johnson attempted to prevent trouble and received a cut in the back. The crowd then closed in and the Shorters disappeared.

When the police were notified they searched the boarding houses at Quincy Neck, but they could not be found. Knowing that the men belonged in the south it was surmised that they would head in that direction. Inspector McKay and Officer Bradley took the 8.08 train for Boston intending to watch the New York trains. When the train reached the Pope's Hill station the two men boarded the train and the Quincy officers did not lose sight of them again until they were locked up in the Quincy police station.

A Persian Story.

There is a story in Persian literature of a certain poet who came before a great man and praised him very ornately. The rich man was very pleased and said: "Ready money I have not; nevertheless there is in my granaries very much corn. If you come tomorrow I will give you some." The poet went to his own house and on the morrow presented himself to his patron. The rich man asked him, "Why have you come?" He said: "Yesterday you promised to give me corn. For this reason am I come." The rich man said: "A most wonderful fool thou art. What you said to me gave me pleasure. What I have said to you equally pleased you. Why, then, should I give you corn?" The poet was covered with shame and departed.

How to Make Cloth Waterproof.

Ordinary cloth may be made waterproof by the following treatment: Put half a pound of sugar of lead and half a pound of alum in a pail of soft water. Stir this at intervals until it becomes clear. Then pour it off into another pail, put the cloth or garment into it and let it stand an entire day, twenty-four hours. Then hang up to dry without wringing. Garments treated thus, it is said, can be worn in the wildest storm of wind and rain without the wearer getting even damp. The rain hangs in globules upon the cloth, and cloth that is waterproof is better and more healthy than rubber goods.

The Spittle Fly.

The spittle fly is an insect which encompasses itself in a white froth composed of the juice it has sucked out of the plant on which it is bred. It seriously injures pinks, carnations and picotees if not checked in the early stages of its progress. It is very tender when young, but develops into a hard skinned hopper. It can be pinched and rubbed off with the fingers, or a good syringing with something bitter, like a concoction of quassia chips, will drive the creatures away.—London Times.

The young ladies of City Hall who had the lemonade table at the Day Nursery Garden Party netted thirty-seven dollars. This argues that they must have served first class lemonade, or else were more than usually agreeable and charming if that were possible.

The body of the man found Thursday in a field at the corner of Adams and Center streets, Dorchester, who was thought to have belonged in Quincy, has been identified as Thomas Slattery of Weymouth. The man's death is thought to have been caused by heat prostration and over indulgence in liquor.

THE DAY NURSERY.

Committee on Room and Matron Appointed.

One of the most interesting meetings of the Day Nursery Assosciation was held in the Council Chamber, Tuesday, July 7th. A full report of the proceeds of the Garden Party at Mayor Bryant's was given and received with congratulations and applause. When all moneys due are collected the association will have a fund of about seven hundred dollars to draw from on Oct 1, when it is voted to open the Day Nursery.

A committee was appointed to secure rooms and to confer with the matron under consideration.

It was voted to move cautiously in matter of expense and if best to close the nursery through the three summer months when the summer kindergartens are open.

The president without any formalities received the hearty support of the meeting in expressions of gratitude to all who contributed so cordially and generously to the success of the garden party. These include first our Mayor and his wife; who not only loaned their beautiful grounds but gave so much personal effort and interest; also our prominent merchants and the many individuals, not particularly identified with the Association, who gave time and goods. The Day Nursery will feel more than ever interested to purchase needed supplies and give its trade in Quincy.

It has been suggested the Day Nursery Association ask to be incorporated with the People's Union with a view to having Day Nursery rooms in every ward. This will be discussed at the next regular meeting of the Association which will be the first Tuesday in August.

OREGON'S PAUL REVERE

How Leslie Matlock Saved Two Hundred Lives.

SHOUTED A WARNING AS HE RODE

Hero of the Heppner Cloudburst Describes His Wild Night Ride Through Willow Creek Valley With Rushing Waters In Close Pursuit. Never Stopped In His Nine Mile Gallop.

Leslie Matlock, a hardy stockman of Heppner, Ore., saved the lives of more than 200 people after the flood on that fateful Sunday evening of June 14 last had overwhelmed the town and destroyed 300 souls.

Chased by the flood, he saddled and mounted his sturdy mare and galloped for miles down the valley of Willow creek to warn the dwellers in three towns, Lexington, Pettysville and Douglas, besides others who dwelt along the creek road. Today Oregon is hailing him as a second Paul Revere. He tells the story for the New York World in part as follows:

Any one man who knows the country as well as I do and who can ride a horse could have done the same thing.

We none of us guessed what was coming. The people who live down Willow creek were spending Sunday evening quietly in their homes. We all wanted rain in the stock region, and we were getting it.

We never expected it at Heppner. Pretty nearly every man, woman and child had turned in for the night. It had been raining all day, but that was a good sign. Nobody had the slightest thought of danger. Then came that awful torrent of water—black, fierce, roaring water that made your knees tremble when you heard it and made men turn pale when they realized what they would have to face.

My father's farm was among the first to go—buried under twenty feet of hissing water. The house, the barns, every stick of wood on the place—all was swept away before a man could think twice. People were drowning before our eyes, and we could see the bodies swept down in the front of the flood.

Thank God, I remembered!

"Willow creek!" I thought. "Hundreds are down there who may drown just as others have drowned in Heppner. Perhaps I can get there first."

There wasn't a telegraph; there wasn't a telephone. It was a case of riding down the valley ahead of that awful avalanche of water. I don't think I ever saddled my horse so fast in my life. Nine miles away were lives to be saved, and I the only man who could save them. Off we went, my bully good mare and I.

Behind us came the water. You could hear it gathering strength. It rolled and roared against the sides of the valley like big cannon in a battle. Once when I looked behind I saw something big and white leap up into the black sky. It was the torrent lifting a house and dashing up just as the surf does when it strikes a cliff.

Every time I came to a house I yelled: "Run for your life! The flood's coming!" I never stopped. It would have cost me my life and the lives of all those 200 people farther down the valley.

The road was so dark and stony that we stumbled all the time, but my plucky little horse never fell once or else it would have been all up with us. Closer and closer behind came the rush of that infernal water. There was no time to pick your way. I just hung tight and trusted to my horse to get me through all right. The miles went by in the darkness, but nearer and nearer came that thunderous roar. More than once I thought it was all up with us.

We were going close to Lexington now. Ahead I could see the lights. Not a soul in all those quiet houses guessed what was coming. Many people had gone to bed. A few hundred yards behind you could hear the flood, louder and louder. My horse and I were racing the waters. We got there first.

"Run for your lives!" I yelled. "The flood's coming! You've only got a minute! Don't stop to save anything!"

I never stopped galloping. People saw I was in earnest, thank God, and saved themselves. In about thirty seconds, without stopping to bring a thing along, they went on the dead run for the hills, fathers carrying their babies and mothers running along with the other little ones by the hand. There was plenty of high ground back of the town, and in five minutes they were safe. But there hadn't been a moment to spare. Already the flood was tumbling in on the town, first two feet deep, then ten and then twenty.

"Don't forget Pettysville!" shouted one man to me as he took to the hills, carrying two babies and helping his wife with another.

"I know! I know!" I remember answering as we tore down the road.

There were ranches on both sides of the gully and people in all of them. I did nothing but shout and try to hang on in the saddle. Behind me, faster and faster, I could hear the water coming. Sometimes when it reached a wide place in the creek or a big hole it took a few moments to fill it up, and that's the way I gained on the water.

On, on we rode. The night was pitch black now and the rain was falling almost like a cloudburst. I thought I'd never do it, but I did. I got to Ione and the telephone. That was better than my horse. I called up Douglas and then every ranch that had a connection, and the people had lots of time to save themselves. If the poor people of Heppner had only had the same warning they would all be alive now.

GYPSY RETICENCE.

It Was Not Proof Against Charles Godfrey Leland.

Charles Godfrey Leland, author of the "Hans Breitmann" ballads, had a passion for studying the race of gypsies and at the same time great human sympathy with them. The fact that he was the greatest living authority on the gypsy tongue and customs gave him little pleasure compared with the delight of being hailed as brother by gypsy horse traders at English fairs and gypsy musicians in Russia and Austria.

One day in Philadelphia he met three dark men whom he knew to be of an ancient stock. He was quite sure that they could speak a language which contained roots of Sanskrit, Hindoo and Persian. Yet they would make no display of it. They would, like their race, deny all knowledge of it as well as the fact of their gypsy blood.

He addressed them in Italian, and they answered fluently. He changed to obscure tongues of the east, and again they replied.

"Have you got through all your languages?" he inquired at last.

"Yes, signor, all of them."

"Isn't there one left behind which you have forgotten? Think a minute."

"No, signor; none."

"What, not one?"

"Signor, you have seen every egg in the basket."

Leland looked the man fixedly in the eye and put a question in Romany. There was a startled glance from one to the other and then a silence. He asked them, again in Romany, "Won't you talk with a gypsy brother?"

That opened the gates. They shook his hands in great emotion and tried to tell him how happy they were in having met some one who knew them. —Youth's Companion.

Moon Superstitions.

The eclipse of the moon is full of portent to the Macedonian Mohammedans. It indicates bloodshed. It is met with reports of firearms, and the imams call from the minarets the faithful to public prayers in the mosques. This recalls in a striking manner the practices of many savage and barbaric nations. The great nations of Asia, such as the Hindoos and the Chinese, still cling to the belief in the eclipse monster. The latter meet it with prayers, like the Turks. But even in civilized Europe, both ancient and modern, one finds numerous proofs of this superstition. The Romans came to the succor of the afflicted moon by flinging firebrands into the air, by the blare of trumpets and the clang of brazen pots. The superstition survived through the middle ages into a very late period. France, Wales and Ireland offer many instances as late as the seventeenth century.

N. E. A. Reception.

The reception of the Quincy Mansion school to N. E. A. delegates occupies a prominent place in the N. E. A. program for today, and many are expected by Dr. and Mrs. Willard at the school today to meet Mrs. Mary A. Livermore and President Wheeler of the California University. The hours are from two to five, and it is expected that many will later visit the birthplaces of the Presidents.

A Temple of Divorce.

So long ago as 1250 the wife of a Japanese regent obtained from the government permission to rescue women from the hands of cruel husbands. The means she took were very simple. A new sect of Buddhism known as the Zen was just then being formed. In the temple of the Zen sanctuary was established for fleeing wives. When they wished separation or divorce from their husbands, they could claim protection under the wing of the temple. Once across the threshold, government officials would not be allowed to interfere, still less the furious husbands. This "temple of divorce" was supreme umpire on matters of matrimonial disagreement. The practice of the "privilege of the temple" was maintained for over 600 years.

Facts About Animal Structure.

The complexity of animal structure is marvelous. A caterpillar contains more than 2,000 muscles. In a human body are some 2,000,000 perspiration glands, communicating with the surface by ducts, having a total length of some ten miles, while that of the arteries, veins and capillaries must be very great. The blood contains millions of corpuscles, each a structure in itself. The rods in the retina, which are supposed to be the ultimate recipients of light, are estimated at 30,000,000, and Meinert has calculated that the gray matter of the brain is built of at least 600,000,000 cells.

The Animals In Heaven.

According to the Mohammedan's belief, there are ten animals in heaven. These form the following strange menagerie: The calf offered by Abraham, the ox of Moses, the whale of Jonah, the ass of Balaam, the ram of Ishmael, the ant of Solomon, the camel of the prophet Salech, the cuckoo of Balkis, the dog of the seven sleepers and Al Borak, the animal which carried Mohammed to heaven.

Anti-Golden Rule.

"What are you going to do for the men who have put you in your present position?"

"My dear sir," said Senator Sorghum, "that is not the question. Prosperity is attained by observing what people can do for you, not what you can do for other people."—Washington Star.

Proof.

"Old Swaddleford always pretends to be as deaf as a post, but I believe he can hear as well as anybody."

"What makes you think so?"

A Tired Brother.

"What you gwine to do w'en you gits ter glory?"

"Nuthin' 'tall, but des' crawl in en' rest."—Atlanta Constitution.

Difficulty is only a word indicating the degree of strength requisite for accomplishing a particular object.

If those whose Work is Mental

—book-keepers, clerks, business and professional men—were as particular about the bread they eat, as are those who, like manual laborers, need and know the best, they also would insist upon having bread, cake and pastry made from Spring Wheat Flour, the standard being Pillsbury's Best Flour.

LIPTON LOOPS THE LOOP.

Sir Thomas Says Coney Island Is "the Greatest Place on Earth."

Sir Thomas Lipton saw Coney Island in all its glory the other day, says the New York Herald, and shot the shoots and looped the loop and slid the helter skelter. With him were seven friends, all yachtsmen, in white duck and blue flannel, and Mr. Fife, who acted as mentor and guide.

Sir Thomas' party arrived at Coney Island about 4 o'clock and began to make a round of the various places of amusement. First they struggled with the surging crowd in the Bowery and were carried along from one end of that famous board walk to the other. The loop the loop next attracted their attention and Sir Thomas seemed very much interested in the crowd that patronized that topsy turvy arrangement. The proprietor induced his bookkeeper, a rather good looking young woman, to take the trip standing up in the car for the benefit of the English yachtsman and his friends.

The girl calmly remained on her feet while the car turned upside down at the top of the loop, and Sir Thomas clapped his hands in approval. Then Sir Thomas and his friends got into the car and were whirled around the contrivance.

After the loop the loop the Englishmen went to the shoot the shoots and went down the incline in the big boats. They had a lively time sliding down the rattan tunnel which is known as the helter skelter, took a trip to the moon on an air ship and rode the camel. Sir Thomas then aided in the opening of a new entertainment known as "twenty thousand leagues under the sea," and he led the way into the first submarine boat which was to make the trip to the north pole.

"Coney Island is a great place," said Sir Thomas, catching his breath as he started for home. "For excitement it is almost as good as a yacht race, while I think it excels one for physical exercise.

"It's the greatest place on earth!" he shouted back as the two automobiles in which his party was started for New York.

DOGS AS SCOUTS.

Airedales to Be Employed by the German Army.

The German army is to be provided with terriers for scouting duties, writes the Berlin correspondent of the Philadelphia Press. After many trials the Airedale and the German pointer have proved to be the most intelligent for war use, but the keenness of scent of the former places it far ahead of the German type.

Official instructions have been circulated that the terriers are to be employed as the eyes and ears of an army in the field, as they are much more reliable than man and horse, owing to invisibility, for certain reconnoissance work in front of an enemy.

The Airedale terrier can unearth a patrol which would be hidden to man, and for carrying information the dogs are of considerable value. They can be used between a patrol and the main body, or for linking up posts, and, being small, their presence is unnoticed.

A number of pure bred Airedales are to be obtained for breeding purposes, and it is proposed to attach to each Jaeger battalion two dogs of abnormal intelligence, trained to carry from front to rear and return. Every regiment will have from half a dozen to a dozen dogs.

CIVILIZATION BY GAMBLING.

Chinese Takes $1,000,000 Home For This Purpose.

Chai Tin Sin, better known as "Big Jim," sailed on the Gaelic for China the other day with his white wife, his half caste boy and $1,000,000 in American gold and securities, says a San Francisco special to the New York World. These are the fruits of thirty years' contact with occidental civilization, and the remainder of his life will be devoted to the introduction of American methods in his native country. To that end he is negotiating with Chinese mandarins of Canton and other cities for a gambling monopoly.

"Big Jim" landed in the United States a big, penniless, rawboned cooly. He acquired a taste for gambling while working in the mines of Nevada. Many years ago he acquired a monopoly of Chinese gambling in San Francisco.

To Chase Wolves Instead of Foxes.

The Mercer County (N. J.) Fox Hunting association, tired of the anise bag and unable to procure satisfactory foxes, has decided to attempt an innovation, says a special dispatch from Trenton to the New York Times. To this end four cub wolves were purchased a few days ago and will be prepared for a grand run shortly. It is thought that the wolves will make satisfactory substitutes for the foxes.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Shorter and Wade Shorter were arraigned on two complaints for assault with a dangerous weapon at Quincy. They were held in $500 each until Monday.

DIPLOMACY'S NEW FIELD

Washington Foreign Corps to Study Our Commercialism.

WILL INSPECT THEIR CONSULATES

Signor Mayor des Planches and Baron von Sternburg Will Make Long Trips—Thorough Investigation to Be Made of the Conditions In Large Cities.

"Commercial diplomacy" is the new field in which the members of the diplomatic corps at Washington are striving for supremacy, says the New York Herald. At other world capitals the line between the diplomatic and consular services is strictly drawn, but the wave of commercialism which has swept over the United States and invaded Europe demands that the foreign envoy accredited to Washington be posted on American financial and industrial developments to protect the interests of his countrymen.

That they may get in closer touch with the consulates of their respective governments and themselves study American business methods and conditions in all sections of the country several diplomats have been instructed to make inspections of their consulates in the United States and report what changes and additions seem advisable.

Signor Mayor des Planches, the Italian ambassador, will spend a month on a trip through the west as far as San Francisco and up the coast to Seattle. He expects to stop on his way out at Chicago, Denver, Salt Lake, Helena and other important cities.

The ambassador's trip as originally mapped out was curtailed by the necessity of his returning to Washington from the dedicatory exercises at St. Louis in April to sign the last of the Venezuelan protocols. Another year he hopes to spend several months on the same route in further study of the west.

Returning to Washington in October from the Weirs, N. H., where he is spending the summer, Baron von Sternburg, the German ambassador, will start on an extensive trip of inspection of the German consulates in the west, going to Chicago, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles and probably Seattle.

Since coming to Washington the ambassador has had occasion to reorganize his entire embassy staff, and in selecting his new secretaries he has done so with a view to the vast amount of commercial work the embassy is called upon to do. As each new secretary has arrived the ambassador has sent him off to visit the centers of industry in the east and middle west before permitting him to take up his duties at the embassy.

While no important changes have been made in either the German or the Italian consular services, both ambassadors are determined to make a thorough investigation of the conditions in the large cities, and will advise their governments of the character of work their consuls are doing.

Senor Ojeda, the Spanish minister, will make New York his headquarters for the summer, but will spend most of his time in visits to other large cities to make the personal acquaintance of his country's consuls.

M. Jusserand, the French ambassador, is also staying on this side this summer to get in touch with American life in all parts of the country and be able to post his government on commercial as well as diplomatic matters.

How She Won Lipton's Boutonniere.

Sir Thomas Lipton recently made a score of pretty Bayonne (N. J.) girls happy, says the New York World. They are members of the Epworth League of the First Methodist church and had an outing to Westfield. They reached the station at Elizabeth just as the train on which Sir Thomas was returning from Washington pulled in. As soon as the girls learned that the British sportsman was on the train they insisted upon seeing him. Sir Thomas left his car and shook each girl's hand and gave them a handsome bouquet to divide. Miss Coxon, the only English girl in the party, expressed a hope that the Shamrock might win. Sir Thomas shook her hand again and, taking a rose from his coat, presented it to her. The girls cheered Sir Thomas as he returned to his car.

Fan Painting Fashionable.

An exhibition of ancient fans in Vienna recently attracted many visitors. The Austrian archduchess loaned many quaint and beautiful specimens, some painted on vellum and parchment, others having designs transcribed on the skins of serpents and swans. There were several fans of the time of Louis XIV., that age of coquetry, these being very richly painted and having the ivory sticks united by ribbons. Fans of carved and pierced ivory formed a very interesting exhibit. Several of these, loaned by the Duchess of Cumberland, were decorated in gold and beautiful medallions. Fan painting is said to be the present craze of English fashionable demoiselles.

The "American Fever" In Norway.

The "American fever" is spreading so fast in Norway that the authorities are becoming alarmed. The country is very sparsely settled, having only about 2,000,000 inhabitants. Of these 28,000 emigrated last year, mostly to America, and the indications are that that figure will be nearly doubled this year.

Why We Are Confident.

Sir Tommy Lipton, we salute
Your coming with defiance;
You've got the pluck and ginger, too,
But we have got Reliance.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA

Should Combine For Interest of World's Peace

DESIRE OF KING EDWARD

For Closer Relations Between the Two Countries—Says It Represents Sentiment of All His People—His Advisors Approve Monroe Doctrine

London, July 10.—Informally welcoming the American naval officers to England last night, King Edward took occasion to make an emphatic declaration in favor of closer relations between the United States and Great Britain. He did not speak of an alliance or even of an understanding, but the impression was clear from his remarks that he desired that the two nations move together in the interests of the peace of the world. Some of the king's ministers also took advantage of the occasion to impress on the American officers their cordial approval of the Monroe doctrine and their desire that it be supported by American influence in a way which it would place it above all criticism.

The royal welcome was extended to the American officers at Buckingham palace, where a dinner was given in their honor by King Edward. The table was decorated by Marshal Neil roses and gold plate brought from Windsor was used. The king commanded the most distinguished officials of the empire to attend and 36 guests were present. On the king's right sat Ambassador Choate and on his left Rear Admiral Cotton.

Among the others present were the Prince of Wales, Captain Hemphill, U. S. S. Kearsarge; Captain Walker, U. S. S. San Francisco; Captain Cornwall, U. S. S. Chicago; Commander McCrea, U. S. S. Machias; Flag Lieutenant Hussey, Captain Prince Louis of Battenberg, Colonial Secretary Chamlain Premier Balfour; first lord of the admiralty, the Earl of Selborne, Foreign Secretary Lord Lansdowne, Admiral Lord KeKrr, Sir Arnold Foster, Rear Admiral May, Sir Michael Herbert, British ambassador at Washington; Henry White, secretary of the United States embassy; Lord Charles Beresford, Admiral E. M. Seymour, Sir Berkeley Milne, Admiral Sir E. R. Fremantle, Admiral Sir C. F. Hotham, Admiral Sir Henry Stephenson, Captain Lambton, the Earl of Howe, Lord Farquhar, Sir George Clarke, governor of Australia, and Sir Charles Cust.

The king was dressed in the uniform of an admiral of the British fleet. On the conclusion of the dinner, in a tactful speech, he expressed gratification at the acceptance of his invitation and cordially welcomed Rear Admiral Cotton and his squadron to England. He asserted that what he said represented the sentiment not only of himself, but of the whole British people, and he proposed a toast to President Roosevelt, for whom, he said, he "entertained the highest consideration and admiration."

Ambassador Choate responded and in an eloquent speech echoed the wish of the king for the maintenance and promotion of more cordial relations between the two great English-speaking nations.

The king further emphasized his gratification by writing at the table a message to President Rooseveit, in which he stated that it had given him the greatest pleasure to welcome the American squadron.

Talked on Campaign Funds

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 10.—Former Governor Crane of Massachusetts, who was a guest of President Roosevelt, has left for home. Mr. Crane will probably devote his energies in the campaign of 1904 to raising the large campaign fund necessary. President Roosevelt counsels with him on matters of politics more than with anyone outside the cabinet, not excepting Senator Lodge. Governor Crane's wide acquaintance among New England moneyed interests which are unaffiliated with the Wall street interests recognized as hostile to the president makes him a most desirable active campaign worker.

POLE GAVE WAY

Struck Five Persons, While Numerous Others Received Shocks

Boston, July 10.—A pole supporting six large feed wires of the Edison Electric Illuminating company on First street, South Boston, fell last night, seriously injuring five persons, none fatally, and causing a suspension of all street traffic for over an hour. The injured are: James Harvey, Mrs Margaret Conroy, Annie Conroy, Frank Holloran and Mrs. Ellen Griffin.

Besides the above numerous people received severe shocks from contact with the wires, each of which carried a voltage of 200, before the power was shut off. None of these was seriously injured. The accident was due, it is said, to the fact that the pole had become decayed and was unable to bear the strain of the heavy wires.

Mrs. Conroy had her infant in a baby carriage and was passing just as the pole was seen to topple. Holloran, seeing the child's danger, jumped for the carriage and succeeded in pulling it from under the falling pole, thereby saving the child's life, but he was knocked down and severely injured about the left arm and shoulder. Mrs. Conroy was thrown to the ground and her leg was broken. It is feared that she may have received more serious internal injuries.

The accident drew a crowd of several thousand and great excitement prevailed until it was ascertained that no one had been killed.

Firebug In a Maine Town

Rockland, Me., July 10.—Fire that broke out last night at 10 o'clock served to remove what doubt might have existed regarding the presence of a firebug in the community. It is the fourth time since July 3 that the unknown incendiary has set fire to property belonging to the Spear estate. The loss in the last instance is placed at $2000. Mrs. Patrick Burns and child were sleeping in a house adjoining the storage building that was partially burned. Mother and little one were almost suffocated when rescued.

Conductor's Memory Was Poor

Portland, Me., July 10.—A special car carrying 40 children of a Sunday school was in collision last evening with a regular car, caused by the conductor of the special forgetting to wait for the regular at a turnout, as he had been directed to do. Motorman Hickox of the special had one foot so badly crushed that it will probably have to be amputated and several of the children were cut and bruised. The special car was badly smashed.

Assault May Result Fatally

Westfield, Mass., July 10.—Patrick Keough was murderously assaulted and robbed last night and lies at the point of death. His assailants are unknown. Patrolman Broadbent heard cries coming from Prospect hill about 11:30 o'clock, and when he arrived on the scene found Keough tottering around. In a short time he was seized with convulsions and it required the efforts of six men to hold him.

ADVERTISE.

The Social Realm.

Give me the gospel of the fields and woods—
The sermon written in the book of books;
The sweet communion of the things on earth
Fresh with the warm baptism of the sun.
Give me the offertory of bud and blossom,
The perfect caroling of happy birds.
Give me the creed of one of God's fair days
Wrought in the beauty of its lovliness;
And then, the benediction of the stars,
His eloquent ministers of the night.

A Boy of the Revolution.

The American Boy for July has a page article of local interest, entitled "A Boy of Revolution." It tells of President John Quincy Adams as a boy and has surroundings and achievements, and is illustrated by a good portrait, and half tones of the birth-places of John Adams and John Quincy Adams at Quincy, taken separately, also of the Church of Statesmen. The magazine has the usual number of entertaining stories and articles of interest, most of them illustrated, and there is much that is instructive. There are departments for boys money makes, boys in the home, boys in the school, fine deeds, by brave boys, etc., etc. — Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit.

The Women's Declaration of Independence

By ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

Copyright, 1902, by Eliza Archard Conner

"MARSTON, who's that pretty girl over there at the window opposite? Good style, she is."

"That's Esther Zane."

"No! Can't be but one Esther Zane, and she's the leader of those brassy athletic girls in Co Ed university. I never saw the creature; don't want to see her. Women that ape men are disgusting. If we university men had our way we'd put 'em every one out. They weaken and belittle our tone."

"My son, when you are older you will know more. When you are as old as I am you will know it is better to leave women to do as they like, for they will do it anyhow."

"Thanks, John Marston. You are just four years older than I am. But you're married, and I suppose that makes a difference; gets a fellow so broken in that at twenty-five he's twenty years older than he was two years before."

"Just so. Philip Altman, twenty-one, if he had been two years married would be wiser in woman lore than Philip Altman, bachelor, will be at a hundred. Did you hear of the women's Fourth of July celebration here at Sunlight this summer? Esther Zane planned it all and carried it through."

"That girl with the wavy black hair, the bright, merry, refined face, so pretty a fellow would like to— I don't believe it."

"But it's so, Phil. Some of the women wanted us men to arrange an old fashioned Fourth of July picnic. We were too lazy. The young fellows were nearly all away camping in the woods; the old ones were off on fishing trips. Hardly a he creature was left besides myself except Granddad Grote, eighty years old and a cripple; the milkman, the butcher boy and the Rev. Spurgeon Spiles, summering here for his ministerial bad throat. Then there were a few old farmers. The men, such as they were, would do nothing. Esther Zane, just twenty and just out of her sophomore year at Co Ed—she is the same, I tell you, Phil—said it was a shame to let the school children pass the nation's birthday without any commemoration at all. She roused the women to help her and declared that not a man should have anything to do with the affair."

"I read of it, John, and I was disgusted. It's a woman's place to look sweet and lovely and wear pretty clothes and charm us men in private life. To stride upon a platform and strain her squeaky soprano voice trying to speak in public! Detestable, I say! I've no use for the new woman anyhow."

"Phil—good Lord, how much you don't know! The women outdid with their celebration anything in that line ever undertaken hereabout. 'We won't do anything by halves,' said Esther Zane. So the squeaky soprano committee of arrangements sent to Boston and got the women's orchestra there—trumpet, drum, fiddle and brass horns. Jolly good band it is, Phil!"

"A woman distorting her face tooting on a brass horn makes me sick."

"The women's brass band opened the ball with 'The Star Spangled Banner.' It floated through the trees and echoed among the hills outdoors like the roll call of liberty. Then Esther Zane, dressed in white, with a silk American flag draped across her breast, steps up and reads the Declaration of Independence."

"That pretty creature in pink over there at the window? I say, I don't believe it."

"But I say she did—read it with a force and feeling that wakened thrills of boyish patriotism even in my hardened old soul. You never heard the Declaration read like that, Phil."

"No, I never did, and I don't want to. But I heard"—

"Oh, I know. Yes, she did that too. When she came to the words, 'We hold these truths to be self evident,' she paused till all the audience looked up at her to see what was coming. Then she raised her voice and continued slowly and impressively, 'We hold these truths to be self evident—that all men, including women, are created equal; that they are endowed by the Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, LIBERTY and the pursuit of happiness.'"

"By Jove!"

"She spoke that world 'liberty' in a way to give you thrills down your spine. She had the Co Ed girls' glee quartet up to help her. They all wore little silk American flags pinned to their white dresses just as she did, and after she finished the Declaration they sang a new patriotic song one of the club herself had written to the grand old air of 'Rally Round the Flag, Boys,' words that both north and south could unite in singing whole hearted. Old soldiers of the civil war wiped their eyes, women kissed the little flags they wore. The girl had got the school children together—she let the boys in on that—and dressed them in a United States flag tableau. In the upper left hand corner of a rectangle of benches rising one above another the girls sat. They wore blue dresses and carried small white parasols, star shaped. The boys wore red and white muslin caps and capes and sat in red and white stripes below and to the left of the girls. Girls waved the star parasols, boys waved their red and white caps. Wasn't it a fine idea, Phil? Oh, you've nothing to say.

"Next a sweet old saint of a woman with white hair told the gaping children what women, too, had done for their country. She told them how in 1777 Esther Zane the first, a long ago relative of the young lady who had read the Declaration, volunteered to go out from the stockade at Fort Henry in Ohio when the Indians were all around them firing bullets into the fort and bring from the cabin of Ebenezer Zane a keg of powder, for the men in the stockade were out of ammunition."

"Well!"

"Well, the white haired old saint told us next of Mother Bickerdyke, the soldiers' angel in the civil war. She saved thousands of lives, Union and Confederate alike. Many a night following a fight, even in the storm and bitterest weather, an officer would perhaps see a twinkling light upon the battle field after the hospital corps had abandoned it, and the light would be from a lantern carried by Mother Bickerdyke, out with an orderly examining the bodies if perhaps there might not yet be a spark of life remaining in some."

"Well!"

"Well, after that the American flag children sang 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee.' Then while the women's orchestra played 'Yankee Doodle' we assembled for our basket picnic dinner. Phil, that was the most fetching Fourth of July celebration I ever attended, pestered with not one of your long winded orators that are such a nuisance in the meetings of us men."

* * * * * * *

"Linda Miles, who is that coming this way with John Marston? Very good looking for a man!"

"That, Esther, is Philip Altman, Mr. Marston's cousin. He is here for the vacation."

"Linda, you don't mean it! This person looks really manly. Philip Altman, of all creatures contemptible! He heads the fellows that tried to keep us girls off the college campus, and he's written the meanest things about us of anybody in the college paper. Linda, sometimes I'm afraid I'm getting to hate men, and I'm sorry for it, because the emotion of hatred is not a good one to indulge—reacts psychologically on the health. I hope that I shall never meet that Altman."

But of course the two did meet later. When they were introduced Esther Zane stiffened her lips visibly; Philip Altman assumed his indifferent drawl; John Marston smiled.

The two foes met often. She treated him with the barest civility at first, which Altman was not used to from girls, and it hurt his vanity. Presently, however, Esther remembered that we should be kind to our enemies so as to heap coals of fire upon their heads. She suddenly turned about and became sweet as an angel—a far off angel, that is, and unattainable. Philip Altman noticed that of all her frippery loving sex Esther Zane was one of the fripperiest. She wore yellow muslins that enveloped her like a halo, now again gray that veiled her in a mist. He heard the swish of a silk petticoat as she passed him in street gown. She even wore chains and bangles. What a pity a girl like this had distorted her true womanly nature by adopting the strong minded role!

History moves swiftly with hearts in hot weather. Once at twilight through the open window Philip heard Esther singing a love song—low, sweet and tender. He sat still and listened and thought the rings of smoke he lazily blew from his lips were just the color of Esther Zane's prettiest gray street gown. Then he said to himself:

"I wonder if there is a Juliet as well as a Portia in Esther Zane?"

After that night he discovered that a flower she had touched, a book she had read, somehow had a peculiar interest for him—more than any other woman's books or flowers had ever held. When she and Linda Miles went for a morning spin upon their bicycles he often happened along there in the path in time to come home with them.

As for Esther Zane, when the strong hand of this person of the hated sex touched her arm her heart beat faster, she knew. It was queer, but his eyes were clearer and keener than other fellows' eyes, so that when he looked at her she could not face him back, but dropped her eyes like a fool—she whose glance had never fallen before the gaze of man. She shook herself and rubbed her eyes. She said:

"Thank goodness, vacation is nearly over! I'm not going to be hypnotized by any mere man."

It was the last night of vacation. The armistice was ended. Tomorrow they would go back to the Co Ed and resume hostilities, she the champion of the Co Eds, he the leader of the antis. They would be bitter enemies once more, man against woman, woman against man. Esther Zane sat alone in the twilight and sighed. Oh, why would men be so unjust to women? Philip Altman, Philip Altman! Out of college manly, courteous and chival-

"AGAIN, I CANNOT TELL YOU HOW SORRY I AM."

rous as a knight of the Round Table; in college a perfect gorilla! Her heart was sore. Philip came in.

"I have come to bid you goodby, Miss Esther. I suppose back at the university we'll never meet again, there is so much antagonism between the sexes. Must there always be antagonism, Miss Zane? Well, it's a pity!"

"I'm surprised to hear you say that, you who wrote those bitter editorials against us girls just because we, too, wanted a university education. I could not have believed it of you if I had not known. Out of college you seem so different, so courteous and chivalrous, so—so—everything a girl most admires in a man."

A flush crept over Altman's face; his voice dropped low and tense.

"Miss Zane, I cannot tell you how sorry I am. I did not know, I did not think. I never once thought that the stronger and more intellectual a man himself is the better he can afford to let women have their chance too. If college men knew girl students better they would be to them more like gentlemen, less like red Indians. I suppose now I can never destroy in your mind the prejudice I put there by my conduct toward you college girls. Again, I can't tell how sorry I am, and that's all I can say."

Esther smiled, but her lips quivered with something that was not a smile as she answered:

"Didn't I tell you that outside of the university you are all that a girl most likes and admires?"

"Esther, Esther, don't say that if you don't mean it! Don't you see I am dead in earnest? I love you, Co Ed Esther, as I never thought to love one of the sex we boys said we despised, when we knew better all the time and we didn't despise them at all, but were only jealous. I know I shall never care so much for any woman again. Esther, you tell me a girl can like and admire me. There is only one girl I care a straw to have like or admire me, and that girl is you, and you know it. After all that has been, can you forgive? Esther, tell me the truth. Can you 'like and admire' me?"

"Till death; at least," she corrected, "I think I can."

At that he laughed even while his arms drew her to him and he kissed her.

A year afterward there was another Independence day celebration at Sunlight. Men and women both participated in it, and it was even better than the women's celebration had been because there were more men to help eat the picnic dinner and make things lively. Philip Altman, who had just been graduated from Co Ed university after a respectable record in letters and a brilliant one in heavy weight athletics, read the Declaration. In a musical, impressive bass voice he pronounced these words:

"We hold these truths to be self evident"—here his eyes roved calmly over his audience till they rested upon a beautiful young lady, who smiled, blushed faintly and looked down; then the voice continued—"that all men, including women, are created equal; that they are endowed by the Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, LIBERTY and the pursuit of happiness."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic.—What the Holy Spirit can do for me.—John xvi, 5-16.

The Holy Spirit is the third person of the Trinity and as such has a distinctive work to perform. The Father planned the only method of salvation, the Son executed it by His death upon the cross, and it is the mission of the Holy Spirit to apply it. The Father is specially manifested in the Old Testament dispensation, the Son in the gospels and from the day of Pentecost we have been living in the dispensation of the Spirit. He came as a result of Christ's going from earth. "It is expedient that I go away; for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I depart I will send him unto you." Christ in the flesh was to be replaced by Christ in the spirit. In the flesh Christ could be in but one place at the same time, but in the spirit He could be everywhere, performing His work; hence the expediency of Christ's going away that the Spirit might come.

Having come, what is the work of the Spirit in applying the redemption purchased by Christ? Several phases of the Spirit's work in the world are here suggested by Christ:

1. The Spirit convinces the world of sin. "And when He is come He will convince the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment." The people of the world were loath to believe in Christ, but the Spirit would convince them of their unbelief and would show that righteousness could be obtained in Christ and that Christ had judged and condemned Satan, the prince of this world. Conviction of sin is the first step in the salvation of the soul. No one will cry out "What must I do to be saved?" until he feels that he is a sinner and therefore needs salvation. This conviction is the work of the Spirit, and then He leads to repentance and faith and a complete apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ. This is the Spirit's work for the sinner, and if unsaved He is the only one who can do it for us.

2. The Spirit guides into spiritual truth. Christ taught the disciples many things, and yet they were often ignorant and full of misunderstanding. But after Pentecost this was not true of them. Their faith was strong and their knowledge certain, because they were guided into the truth by the Spirit. This also is a part of His word in relation to the Christian. "When He, the Spirit of Truth, is come He will guide you into all truth," and the truth which He teaches is the truth as it is in Jesus, "for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak, and He shall show you things to come." And in John xv, 26, Jesus says, "He shall testify of Me." The truth of God as revealed in His word is the work of His Spirit. "Holy men spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And in addition to that, the Holy Spirit enlightens the mind that it may comprehend the truth as it is in Jesus. In all Bible study we should earnestly and prayerfully seek the personal guidance of the Spirit. He wrote the Bible, and no one like Him can help us to understand it.

3. The Spirit glorifies Christ. "He shall glorify Me, for He shall receive of mine and show it unto you." The method of glorification is by the manifestation of the truth. To one who knows the truth Christ cannot but be glorified.

The New General Secretary.

After nearly six months of searching the ideal man has finally been found to succeed Mr. John Willis Baer as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Mr. Von Ogden Vogt of Beloit, Wis., assumed the duties of the office recently. He brings to the work a large experience along similar lines and will throw his splendid personality into Christian Endeavor in such a way as to make it move forward in every branch. Mr. Vogt is twenty-five years old, a graduate of Beloit college and a member of the Woodlawn Presbyterian church of Chicago.

Endeavor Day In Juneau.

Endeavor day was celebrated in Juneau, Alaska, by emphasizing the "good citizenship" features of the movement. This unusual observance was for the purpose of giving encouragement to the efforts then on foot for ridding the town of gambling and other kindred evils.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Religion is not something brought to man from without, but it is a response from within.—Rev. S. S. Ames, Methodist, Hyde Park, Ill.

Resources of Life.

The great resources of life are not railroad stocks or money in banks. The great resources are always religious ones.—Rev. L. C. Barnes, Baptist, Worcester, Mass.

The Divine Method.

The fact that the Bible is a growth does not necessarily invalidate its fullest inspiration. Growth is the divine method. This is true of the creation.—Rev. J. K. Smyth, Swedenborgian, New York.

The Christian Must Climb.

If, like the first disciples, we yearn to come up and sit beside the Master on his throne of power, it means that we must climb up thither from where we are.—Rev. Pearse Pinch, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Justice Must Include Mercy.

Justice, to be justice, must include mercy, and anything that we include in our thought of mercy that is not in justice is not good and ought not to be exercised at all.—Rev. David Utter, Unitarian, Denver.

An Emblem of Love.

The cross was an emblem of ignominy and shame until Jesus Christ went forth bearing a cross. But a marvelous change has taken place, for it is now an emblem of love and sacrifice.—Rev. Dr. John T. M. Johnston, Baptist, St. Louis.

Christ's Revelation of God.

Jesus Christ is the revealer of God in his moral attributes. We can know God through natural religion, but we know him as a God of love and the author of moral law through Christ.—Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patten, Presbyterian, Princeton, N. J.

The Use of the Tongue.

It is a good rule to say nothing of a person except it be good. The man who says no evil of any one will have less to repent of. The tongue should be restrained to keep it from profanation, and it should be active to speak out for the Lord's side.—Rev. Dr. Alonzo Monk, Methodist, Atlanta, Ga.

Not an Invention of Man.

Religion is something that a man cannot invent for himself and cannot keep to himself. The man who thinks that he has about enough religion to save himself is in a doubtful position. That man probably has not enough to save his own soul.—Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Presbyterian, Princeton, N. J.

The Brotherhood of Christ.

We used to talk of the kingdom of God, which was something far off, vague and indistinct. Now we talk of the kingdom of man, Christ's brotherhood, the kingdom of God on earth. The church that will stand at the end of the century is the one that does the work of Christ.—Rev. Dr. Gunnison, Universalist, Canton, N. Y.

The Church and Science.

For a member of the church every genuine discovery of science is welcome and a new manifestation that the finger of God is there. We rest secure in the synthesis of the natural and the supernatural, knowing that in this life we see as through a glass darkly, but in the vision of God we shall see even as we are seen.—Rev. Charles K. Malloy, Catholic, Philadelphia.

As Candles to the Sun.

There are days of finding a fuller life. In these days there are three things that are pre-eminent. These are wealth, culture, power. They bring tremendous things—the very stuff and fiber of civilization. They bring untold possibilities and open to us vast gates of life. And yet they are as candles to the sun.—Rev. Dr. West, Congregationalist, Winona, Minn.

The Octopus of Sin.

Oh, the destroying power of sin! Some years ago a diver was sent down to explore the bottom of the sea. While there he thrust his hand into a hole which seemed to be the retreat of some kind of a living creature. Instantly his arm was seized as by a vise. The long tentacles of an octopus wound themselves about his arm. He dared not give the signal for the friends overhead to pull him up, because he knew that his arm would be pulled off, but he had presence of mind enough to take a sharp steel knife which he had strapped to his side, and with it he cut off the arms of that octopus, and when the diver was pulled up attached to his body were the arms of that octopus, still clinging, one of the tentacles over eight feet long. The octopus of secret sin has many a man and woman in a fatal clutch.—Rev. Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage, Presbyterian, Chicago.

The Greatness of Jesus.

What was the greatness of Jesus? It was and is forevermore the only greatness that will stand the test of time, the greatness of the spirit. The cross, now the most powerful fact in history, shows us that man's real glory lies not in the possession of many things, not in reputation, not in popularity, not in fame, but in the allegiance of his soul to truth and in the fealty of his conscience to the good. This is greatness, according to the teaching of the cross of Christ. It is the greatness of magnanimity, of humility, of purity of spirit, of gentleness, of charity, of considerateness and of amenity, always and in every situation of life amenity. It is loyalty to our light unto the very end. And this soul greatness has this blessed and glorious advantage. It may be universal. We cannot all be rich or strong or wise, commanding of intellect or eloquent of speech, but we all can be great with the greatness of holiness and love, with the greatness that is symbolized by the cross of Jesus Christ, our Lord.—Rev. J. A. Milburn, Congregationalist, Chicago.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Conditions Are Returning Toward the Normal In All Branches

New York, July 11.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Business again responds to improved conditions. Retail distribution of merchandise is accelerated by more seasonable weather and fewer labor controversies, while wholesale and jobbing trade, especially at the interior, shows the encouraging effect of brighter agricultural prospects. There is less than the usual midsummer idleness in manufacturing, except in the cotton industry.

Violent changes in quotations of raw material are never good for business in finished products, so that as yet the cotton goods manufacture shows no improvement in response to fluctuations at the cotton exchanges. But it is certain that there will ultimately come a revival of normal activity at the mills when the material reaches a less inflated level.

Another week of favorable weather has done much to restore normal crop conditions, especially in sections where replanting had put agricultural products so far back that there was danger from frost at the latter end of the season.

Twenty-Two Deaths From Heat

New York, July 11.—Twenty-two deaths and 65 prostrations in greater New York tell the story of Friday's heat. It was the hottest July 10 in the history of the local weather bureau. The early threat of a temperature that would break all records, however, was not fulfilled. Thursday's record of 94 degrees at 4 o'clock, the high weather mark of the year, was reached yesterday at 1:20 p. m. without signs of relief, but by 9 o'clock the temperature had begun to fall.

Burglar Had Too Much to Say

New York, July 11.—Andrew Brown, a burglar, whose sentence of four years was raised to six and finally to nine years by Judge Aspinwall of Brooklyn, because the judge objected to remarks made by the prisoner, was indicted yesterday for a burglary alleged to have been committed prior to his other offense. Judge Aspinwall ordered the indictment carefully preserved so that Brown may be tried on it at the expiration of his nine-year sentence.

Congratulations From Philippines

Washington, July 11.—The president has received the following cablegram from the American Chamber of Commerce, Manila: "We congratulate you and the American people upon the completion of Pacific cable, which is truly a monument to American industry and enterprise. May your administration speedily accomplish abolition of tariff and temporary admission of competent labor, without which Philippines cannot prosper."

Fine Specimens of Quarryman's Art

New York, July 11.—Two of the eight granite columns that are to form an arc about the altar of the cathedral of St. John the Divine have arrived here from Rockland, Me., where the huge pieces of granite were quarried and polished. Each column is made of two pieces. The lower is 3 feet in diameter, 36 feet long and weighs 85 tons. The upper is 18 feet long, 3 feet in diameter and weighs 40 tons.

Denver Crowded With Endeavorers

Denver, July 11.—A conservative estimate places the number of delegates in attendance on the intrnational Christian Endavor convention in session here at 70,000. About 5000 other visitors also have arrived. The trustees of the united society met, the principal business being the election of the executive committee, with Rev. Francis E. Clark at the head.

Ames Must Serve Sentence

St. Paul, July 11.—Frederick W. Ames, former colonel of the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers and former superintendent of the Minneapolis police department during the administration of his brother, Dr. A. A. Ames, has been taken to the Stillwater penitentiary to begin a six years' sentence. The supreme court refused his motion for a new trial.

Lumber Drivers Locked Out

Detroit, July 11.—A general lockout, involving nearly 2000 team drivers and helpers and tying up every large retail lumber yard in the city, was inaugurated by the members of the retail Lumber Dealers' association. The differences arose over trouble with regard to recognition of the union.

No Room For Prizefighters

Baltimore, July 11.—Mayor McLane announces that he will not, during his term as chief magistrate of the city, issue a permit for a boxing or sparring contest. This means that there will not be any authorized prize fighting here during the next four years.

In Memory of Great Composer

London, July 11.—The Duchess of Argyll (Princess Louise) unveiled a memorial bust of Sir Arthur Sullivan, on the Victoria embankment and fronting the Savoy theatre, with which the composer was so intimately identified.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, July 12.
Sun rises—4:17; sets—7:21.
Moon rises—8:49 p. m.
High water—12:45 a. m.; 1:15 p. m.

Thunderstorms have occurred at widely separated points, in some cases lowering the temperature considerably. High temperatures, however, prevail in the greater majority of districts. The outlook for showers in New England during the next few days is favorable and it is expected that the severity of the present hot spell will be somewhat mitigated.

RICH HINDOO'S MISSION.

Peculiarly Garbed Foreigner Is Studying Methods of Agriculture.

For a few days past there has been seen about Washington a strange looking figure in a flowing yellow robe and wearing a white turban, says the New York Times. The man's swarthy face and peculiar waddling manner of locomotion, added to the striking garb, have attracted much attention to him.

It is learned that he is a Hindoo of much wealth who is traveling privately over the world to study different systems of agriculture, with the purpose of teaching his countrymen how to raise enough to feed themselves and avoid the awful famines which periodically decimate the population.

His name is Aagarika Dharmapala, and he is a priest of Ceylon. He recently called on Secretary Wilson at the department of agriculture and had a long interview on American methods of farming. The Hindoo said he had been advised to visit Tuskegee, and he was convinced that his people needed a school like it to teach them how to farm.

Aagarika said that India and Ceylon had been buying American windmills, pumps, carpenters' tools and dairy appliances, but the people knew little of modern ways of farming. Secretary Wilson told him much of how farming was carried on in the west, where irrigation is depended on for success, and his visiter went away pleased with what he had learned.

NEW ARMY MEDICAL DEVICE

Tests to Be Made In Transporting Material at Fort Riley Maneuvers.

Acting at the request of the surgeon general of the army, the war department has made arrangements for the testing of a device for transporting surgical material and medical stores in the field at maneuvers at Fort Riley in September, says the Kansas City Star.

The device has been constructed at Washington barracks. The surgical material and medical stores are to be placed in tin receptacles which are fitted to wooden cases. The cases are constructed so that they can be attached to the bottom of ambulances on each side and in the rear of the front wheels. The device has already been tested, and objections were found on the ground that the metallic cases were not water proof. Improvements have been made, and it is believed that the objections have been overcome. The cases are so constructed that they may be removed from the ambulances and their contents heated over a camp fire.

TO NATIONALIZE CHINESE.

The Object of the Quock Mun Wool, a New Society.

Branches are about to be established throughout America of the Quock Mun Wool, which, literally translated, means "nation, men, society," or society of patriots, says a San Francisco dispatch to the Kansas City Star. It is an organization of Chinese who believe in the spreading of education from their native land and its defense against the incursions of foreign powers, particularly Russia.

A large and influential meeting of Chinese was recently held in San Francisco. The adoption of methods required to place China in her rightful place in the political world was urged by many speakers. An appeal for practical help in the form of money met with a liberal response. This is the most decided action ever taken by the Chinese in the United States looking toward a nationalistic movement.

NEW HOUSE ON HIS LAND.

Boone County (Mo.) Farmer Made Rich by the Flood.

As a result of the recent flood in Missouri P. C. Nuckles of Rocheport, thirteen miles west of Columbia, Mo., is in possession of a story and a half house newly furnished, says the St. Louis Republic.

The water was all over Mr. Nuckles' farm and drove him to higher ground. When he returned the other day, he found the house on a piece of bottom land. It is in good condition and appears to have been recently built. All the furniture and clothing had been carried to the second floor and are only slightly damaged.

—Somebody, trying very hard, probably, to be funny, suggests Booker T. Washington for next vice president, on the Roosevelt ticket, and the suggestion is immediately pounced upon by others, with similar facetious tendencies, as a foundation upon which to rear their insane witticisms. The fact is that any man who feels like poking fun at Booker T. Washington because he is a negro, is a pigmy beside him, in manhood. Probably no negro could be elected to that high office in this country, but as a man, Booker T. Washington would not demean the position. And there is no work in the country, not even that of the chief executive officials, more important or honorable than the work Mr. Washington is doing. President Roosevelt and other thoughtful men know this, and honor him for it, although he is a negro.—New England Farmer.

Valuable Time Saved.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. WORK AND REST.

When They Alternate Perfectly, a Man Will Enjoy Both.

After work comes rest. When they alternate perfectly a man may prepare to enjoy real happiness. When they alternate perfectly a man will enjoy both the work and the rest that follows it.

Nature is a just old lady. She seldom gives a man more than he needs. If he elects to live a lazy life she lets his muscles get flabby and his brain go sleepy. She never permits him to long possess a faculty or a nerve or a muscle or a sinew that he does not use.

The proper way to keep your muscles or your brains is to use 'em up and let nature provide you with a fresh supply. Nature is assisted in this work by rest. One may rest sometimes by seeking a change of labor. Labor thus becomes a recreation—re-creation.

To live happily in this world it is not enough to know how to work. A man must also know how to rest. The man who knows only how to work will soon wear out. If he doesn't wear out immediately his work will suffer in some way. No man can do his best work unless he alternates it with a little play or a little rest.

A man who can't drop his work from his mind as readily as he can drop his tools from his hands had better take a few weeks off to study the rest question. His nerves are not what they should be.

Ivy Clad Buildings.

So long as the walls of a building are sound and the bricks or stones, well cemented together, offer no fissures or cracks for the plant to force its way into, there is nothing whatever to fear. Should the ivy, however, find an opening, and so thrust itself into the wall, the natural and continuous expansion of its parts will tend to loosen the stones and hasten the decay of the building.

A fair growth of ivy on sound walls that allow of no advances beyond the superficial attachment of the claspers, or aerial roots, as they are called, is altogether beneficial. It promotes dryness and warmth, counteracts the corrosive action of the atmosphere and is at once a shelter and an ornament.

These aerial roots are not sources of nutrition, but merely serve as mechanical support to the climbing ivy. The contention that they sap the whole of the moisture from mortar, leaving it excessively dry and crumbling, has therefore no foundation in fact.—London Standard.

A Disguised Toast.

At one time the officers under Lord Howe refused to drink his health at their mess, for, though a splendid admiral, he was not popular in the navy on account of a certain shyness and want of tact with those about him. The chaplain, who was a protege of his lordship, was mortified at this and determined that the officers should drink to Lord Howe. When called upon for a toast one day he said, "Well, gentlemen, I can think of nothing better at this moment than to ask you to drink the first two words of the Third Psalm, for a Scriptural toast for once may be taken from one of my cloth." The toast was drunk. Not one of the officers indicated by word or look that he was ignorant of the words alluded to. On referring to the Bible it was found that the Third Psalm begins, "Lord, how are they increased!"

Cowardly Brave Men.

It is related of a Missouri engineer that he does not hesitate to drive his machine at full speed through the blackest storm at night with washouts all around him, but that he is afraid to go home alone in the dark. If some one is not at the roundhouse to go with him he sits there till daylight. It is the old story of every man having his own peculiar fears. There is a doctor we know who will cut a man to pieces and smile the while. He is an old soldier and often faced the cannon's mouth. But he will betray the most abject terror if one of the harmless little elm tree worms happens to drop on his person.—Kansas City Journal.

Doctor's Recipe For Lemonade.

Here is a scientific recipe for lemonade advocated by the medical profession: Wash the lemons thoroughly; slice thin and peel all. Cover with sugar, allowing the sugar to become saturated with the lemon juice by gently pressing the slices of lemon with a spoon. Then add water, slowly stirring all the while. Ice, if used, should be used sparingly. One-third of a lemon to a glass is about right for home use.

A Good Suggestion.

"When I write a story," said the struggling young author, "I make out a list of ten magazines that I think might like it, and I usually get mighty close to the end of the list before I sell it."

"In that case," returned the wise business man, "I should think it would pay you to begin at the other end of your list."—Chicago Post.

Not Paid by Results.

"Is the profession of weather prophecy a satisfactory one?"

"Well," answered the expert, "in a general way it is. You see, as a rule, the income is not so unreliable as the predictions."—Exchange.

Doctor—Yes; but I wouldn't let him see my bill for some time yet.—Baltimore American.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ American independence was the most precious thing ever secured by this nation. It deserves all possible remembrance and fitting commemoration. But it is not fitting that the celebration should cost more than did the thing itself. Yet we suppose there were few battles in the Revolutionary war more costly, in the consumption of money, in the destruction of property and in the loss of limb and life, than was yesterday's celebration; and it would not be rash to reckon that the aggregate of losses in Fourth of July celebrations during the century and more has been greater than that in all the battles of the Revolution. Such a record may to some unthinking ones denote a high degree of patriotic ardor. To the judicious mind it rather denotes a low degree of patriotic common sense.—New York Tribune.

☞ The wise ones on the really warm nights don't bother to hunt the streets on foot looking for coolness. They just climb aboard the trolley and let it roll; or they sit in a room with the windows open, no lamps lighted, and let the cooling breezes find them and refresh them. There is, perhaps, the wisest game of all. As has been said many thousand times before, it is unwise to gormandize or even to eat heavily on the hot days. It is better to do one's heaviest eating about 6 o'clock, after the work of the day is over, and when there is no hurried walk back to work, and no heavy work to be done, after the meal. And—best of all—it is wise to keep fairly busy and to try and forget the heat, absorbed in one's duties.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ People quit growing old at 40 half a century ago. They quit it when they ceased thinking themselves old at 40, ceased dressing themselves old at 40, and ceased actually being old at 40, not to speak of drinking themselves old at 40. What have become of the widows' caps, and the matrons' caps, and the solemn and stiff suits our fathers and grandfathers wore at 40? Gone to perdition and the old clo' junk shop, where they ought to have gone. The young man of 50 or 60 now wears the natty sack tweeds or serges that his son or grandson wears, tipped off with a jaunty hat. He goes to baseball, the races; he keeps up with the procession, and is all in for a good time in moderation, healthfully. The young woman with him in white or colors, with the gay hat, who has the manners of a youthful, but self-respecting girl of 20 in the last century, is his wife, perhaps a grandmother, but none the less young and happy yet. They feel young, they dress young, they believe themselves young—by the Great Horned Spoon, they are young!—Louisville Herald.

F. M. Tucker Failure.

A meeting of the creditors of F. M. Tucker & Co. will be held early in August. The amount which the creditors will receive depends largely, says the Globe, on the figure at which the $200,000 Quincy Granite Quarries are sold. Up to the present time no satisfactory bid has been received for these bonds.

—Seven of the Presidents of the United States have died in July.

SHIPYARD NOTES.

The largest amount in wages that was ever disburst by the Harlan & Hollingsworth Co. of Wilmington, Del., was paid out July 2, amounting to over $24,000, for the week.

The Pentucket, an ocean-going tug under construction at the Charlestown Navy Yard, is nearly completed. The tug is of steel, 92 ft. long 21 ft. wide and 9 ft. deep. She is schooner-rigged, and will cost about $70,000.

The Norfolk-Hampton Roads Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., with $10,000,000 capital, and which was to establish a plant on Hampton Roads, allowed its office furniture to be sold at public auction last week to satisfy a debt of $380. W. P. Harrison of Cincinnati has been known as president.

The Turkish cruiser Mejidia, built for the Sultan of Turkey by the William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building Co., will be launched on the 25th inst. in the presence of the Turkish ambassador and 200 invited guests. The Mejidia will go down the ways with her masts and crossyards in position and her pilot-house and bridges complete. She will, in fact, be almost ready to start on her maiden voyage.

Officials of the Neafie & Levy Co., Philadelphia, are gratified at receiving the contract from the government for building four vessels to be used in connection with submarine defenses. The vessels will be each of 750 tons, and the contract price is $122,000. Two tugs will be launched this week from this yard. Efforts have been made to complete the tugs as speedily as possible so that room would be had to stretch the keels for ten iron vessels which the company has recently contracted for.

Two Schoolmasters.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, in his introduction to Miss Gould's charming little book, says: "The youthful schoolteaching of two such very eminent men in New England history as John Adams and Daniel Webster could not but well repay any reasonable amount of investigation; and that given to it by Miss Gould has been fruitful of results."

It is, of course, much to be regretted that both John Adams and Daniel Webster should not have put on record more concerning the surroundings and conditions under which they taught, in the one case a century and a half, and in the other a little over a century ago. Every educational condition has since changed. When the two men, freshly graduated from college, but afterwards so famous, presided over village schools, those schools were frequented by children of both sexes and all ages.

The offspring of the vicinage there gathered. The 'three R's' as they were called, only, were taught; but from the alphabet up to reading writing and arithmetic, the whole work of instruction devolved on the single teacher.

It never occurred to either President Adams or Mr. Webster that the time could possibly come when the commonplace, every-day, humdrum experience they were going through would be of the deepest interest to great numbers of the most highly educated men and women of the succeeding centuries,—men and women who make a life-long profession of what was to those others a temporary bread-earning expedient."

The high character and ambitions of John Adams and Daniel Webster in their youthful days are shown forth in golden words in Miss Gould's book, which is a shining example of what can be done in the way of original historical research, with the materials furnished by our rapidly developing American life.

All students of history, every lover of his country, every teacher and every thoughtful young man or woman will find the volume of deepest interest, and stimulating to the noblest personal ambitions.

It is quite fitting that Miss Gould should find a publisher in those who are responsible for the monthly issues of EDUCATION, the oldest of the high-class educational magazines.

The books are now on sale at $1.00 each by the Palmer Company, publishers, 50 Bromfield street, Boston.

Registry Bids.

The County Commissioners met at their rooms at the Court House, Tuesday morning, and received sealed proposals for the construction at Dedham of a building for the Registry of Deeds and of Probate and for the Probate Court of the County. Three bids were received. Morrill and Whiton Construction Company, 35 Federal street, Boston, bid for entire work was $279,500, the work to be finished in 15 months; McNeill Brothers, 196 Freeport street, Dorchester, bid $287,571, and specify no time in which they will have the work completed, and Augus McDonald of Melrose, doing business at 95 Milk street, Boston, bid $293,232, and specify 20 months as time needed to complete the work. The Commissioners took the bids under consideration.—Dedham Transcript.

Unique Commencement.

The following from the Lowell Daily Courrier of June 12 regarding the commencement at Quincy Mansion School, Wollaston, is doubtless from the pen of the editor of that paper, Mr. George A. Marden, as he was present at the exercises:

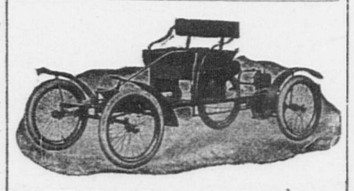

I attended, on Wednesday, a really unique commencement at Quincy Mansion School. The school is for young ladies, and there have been about fifty pupils the past year, the graduating class numbering eleven. The principal and proprietor of the school is Dr. Horace M. Willard, who is ably assisted in its management by Mrs. Willard, and there is a large corp of instructors. The name of the school comes from the fact that it occupies the old Quincy Mansion in the limits of the historic town (now city) of that name, the home of the Quincys, the Adames, of John Hancock and other famous people.

This mansion was built in the early days, and is surrounded by spacious grounds, which made it one of the finest homes of the colonial period. Dr. Willard has, by liberal expenditure, most perfectly adapted the house and grounds to the purposes of the school, has added commodious buildings, and equipped the institution with all the facilities for modern education. He has also added greatly to the attractiveness of the grounds, which are indescribably lovely. 'A shrubbery that Shenstone might have envied blooms around him,' as William Wirt said in his famous defence of Blennerhasset, and in the vocal notes of the birds which are attracted to the lovely place which Dr. Willard has prepared for them, 'music that might have charmed Calypso and her nymphs is his.' So attractive a home for a period of educational life is rarely found. Dr. Willard's library and the other rooms of the Mansion are full of rare domestic and foreign curios of art, of which he is an inveterate collector, and there are many historical curiosities and relics particularly pertinent to the place.

I have said that the commencement was "unique," and the word is justified by the out-of-the-common character of some of the subjects selected by the girl graduates—such as "The Country Doctor in Literature," "Old and Recent Modes of Travel," "The Horse or the Automobile," and two reciprocal essays setting forth the rival claims of San Francisco and New York as "metropolises"—the Pacific slope being championed by a breezy and enthusiastic daughter of San Francisco, Miss Hannah Wooten, and the more ancient and advanced metropolis being exploited by a New York city girl, Miss Florence I. Seligmann. The essays were exceedingly amusing, the supremacy resting with New York in esse, with great promise in posse for the city of the Golden Gate.

The salutatory was in German, and the valedictory in English, and the seniors and undergraduates marched into the hall singing, as a processional hymn, Dr. Holmes's famous "Hymn of Peace," to Keller's stirring music. The closing music was Kipling's "Recessional." It was a very enjoyable programme—and none the less so for its departure from the ordinary commencement routine.

Lowell has, and has had, a considerable interest in Quincy Mansion School. One of the faculty is Miss Grace S. Hadley, daughter of Judge S. P. Hadley. At the meeting of the alumni (I cannot bring myself to write "alumnæ") Mrs. W. A. Lamson, the youngest daughter of Judge Hadley, who graduated in the first class turned out by the school, appeared as the mother of the first child born to the "Alumnæ"—the father and mother both being present. Miss Emily Dewey of Vermont was president and valedictorian of the class.—Boston Transcript.

Banquet at Squantum.

Congressman Thayer and Mayor McNamee of Cambridge are to be the speakers at a dinner to be held at the Squantum Inn today by the Ward 20 Young Men's Democratic Club of Boston. They believe, says the Boston Advertiser, the biggest ward in the city can be made democratic, and the feast at Squantum is called for the purpose of starting the battle before the republicans have awakened to the fact that the democrats are really in earnest. Besides Thayer and McNamee the speakers will be Congressman McNary, ex-Congressman Fitzgerald, Senator Gore and J. A. Dennison. Thayer's visit will lend a flavor of more than customary importance to the usual club feast.

—The balky horse has found a champion in Miss Mabel Alva Messinger, of Chicago, who is conducting a small crusade in behalf of this much abused animal. The cause of balking, Miss Messinger states, lies back of the horse, and it is unreasonable, as well as futile, to abuse the animal for what is the fault of his driver, past or present. He balks, as a rule, because at some time he has been overloaded, though at the precise time of his refusing to move his load may be light. Miss Messinger's cure for the habit is a very simple one, says the New York Tribune, and is based on the theory that a horse can think of but one thing at a time. "Hold the horse's front foot up for about a minute," she says, "then urge him gently, and he will start off as if nothing had happened." Miss Messinger has never known this plan to fail, and has several times relieved blockades tn the street by starting a balking horse on its way.

A Sustaining Diet.

These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the sunstroke as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic,—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.

JOHN O'GROAT'S HOUSE.

A Famous Domicile That Was Long a Landmark In Britain.

In the reign of James IV. of Scotland John O'Groat and his two brothers, Malcolm and Gavin, arrived at Caithness and bought the lands of Warse and Dugisby, near the beach at the mouth of Penland firth, the northeastern extremity of the mainland of Scotland. In time their families increased until there were eight households of the same name. They lived as neighbors in the greatest peace and amity, each year holding a festival in the original house. At one of these annual gatherings the question of precedence arose among the younger members, and they disputed as to whom should sit nearest the "head of the table" or enter the room first.

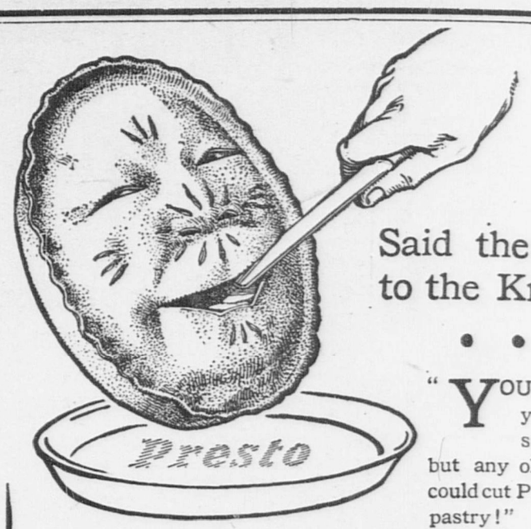

The old grandfather, Johnny O'Groat of history, was made arbitrator. He promised to have all satisfactorily settled by the time of the next annual meeting. Accordingly he built an eight sided house in which to hold the annual jubilee. This octagonal domicile was fitted with a door and a window on each side and a round table in the center. This arrangement made it possible for each family of the O'Groats to enter by his own door and to sit at a table which was practically "without a head."

This famous house was long a landmark in Britain and even to this day is one of the Englishman's starting points of measurement, "Land's End to Johnny O'Groat's" signifying from one end of England to the other.

"YOU think you're sharp—but any old Stick could cut PRESTO pastry!"

"Oh!" a little bit short and crusty, am I?"

"Well, I'm not so tough as the last pie you cut, if your edge is an indication!"

"Took an hour to make, and a week to bake, did it?"

"Folks had to dig the fruit out of it with a pickaxe I'm told, and,—sent the shell to the Blacksmith for hinges!"

"But,—never again will they need to do that, since now they use "magical" PRESTO."

"It makes the quickest, surest, lightest, whitest, and cheapest, of cakes and pastry."

BRAINTREE.

Rev. Matthew F. McDonnell, the recently appointed pastor of the new parish of Braintree, assumed his new responsibilities on Sunday morning. Fr. McDonnell brings to his work an experience of more than twenty-five years and will no doubt, strengthened by the hearty co-operation which has been so noticeable a feature of the relation between priests and people of of Braintree in the past, accomplish a vast amount of good in the future.

Ellery Walker Mason, a well known resident of this town, passed away at his home on Commercial street Wednesday forenoon, after an illness of only a few days of that dread disease pneumonia.

A few days ago little Eugene Miller proved himself a brave lad by rescuing the little Ross boy from drowning. The boys had been enjoying themselves upon a raft near the gate house at the reservoir, when the Ross boy fell in. Eugene swam to the rescue as his companion was going down for the last time.

Correction.

Monday Governor's Day.

The First Corps of Cadets will be an attraction at Hingham for a week.

Today the usual routine was taken up, and on Sunday, with the exception of guard mounting, inspection, evening parade and a religious service in the mess hall, the members of the corps will have the time to themselves.

Gov. Bates and staff will review the Cadets Monday afternoon, the ceremony taking place in vicinity of 4 o'clock.

The corps this year numbers 290 men and Col. Edmands is determined to make this encampment one of the best ever had by the corps.

On Wednesday the Cadets will take a "hike" into the country for outpost duty, and today a detail from the four companies will pontoon Burditt creek, in the rear of the campground.

The campgrounds are in excellent condition having been considerably improved during the early spring and a new rifle range has been constructed, the new one being considered by experts to be one of the best in the state.

July Magazines.

The July Woman's Home Companion opens with a highly interesting article by Mary Annable Fanton on "Keeping House With High Explosives." Louis J. Tance has an amusing article on "The Terrible Danger of Being Alive;" Myrtle Reed writes of "The Courtships of George Washington," and Dr. J. Buckly tells of "The Methodists and Their Good Works." The fiction, which is unusally strong, includes stories by Eden Phillpotts, Hermon Lee Ensign, E. L. Sabin, Elliott Flower and John H. Jewett. Special attention is paid to the children and to short stories, games and amusements for the youngsters. Mrs. Herrick tells how to give a July picnic, and Miss Gould has some very smart touches for summer girls.—Crowell Publishing Co., Springfield, Ohio.

Reception to Teachers.

Dr. and Mrs. Horace Mann Willard gave a lawn party yesterday afternoom from 2 to 5 o'clock at the Quincy Mansion school to college and secondary teachers, to meet Mrs. Mary A. Livermore and Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, the latter president of the State university of California.

Although cards were issued all teachers were welcome and a number who had not received cards were present. An interesting note of the occasion was that Dr. Wheeler, who stands very high in educational matters, was once a pupil of Dr. Willard.

The spacious grounds about the school buildings never looked more inviting than on this occasion, and although the sun was scorching hot, there was a cool, westerly breeze and it was charming.

Mrs. Livermore and Dr. Wheeler received in the parlors of the mansion, and the guests were presented by Professor Currier of Wellesley, Miss C. Belle Kennedy, Mrs. W. G. Corthell, Mrs. Marceau, Miss Ruth Marceau, Miss Clara L. West of Prnceton, Miss Grace L. Hadley of Lowell, and Mrs. F. W. Blanchard of Chicago University.

An air of of infromality prevailed and a delightful afternoon was the reward of those who availed themselves of the opportunity to attend. Ices, cool drinks, and sandwiches were served.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. DORE LYON.

A Popular New York Woman Who Has Ambitions and Ability.

That Mrs. Dore Lyon, queen of clubs (women's clubs), has turned authoress will surprise none of those admirers who have followed her career, noteworthy alike for the versatility with which she has brought herself to prominence and the speediness with which she has caused her sway to be acknowledged by all women engaged in the club movement in New York city. To Mrs. Lyon the conquering of literature is only a step in her upward course. The field of art has already known her through her musical ambitions.

Mrs. Lyon's ambitions are not only boundless, but unusually varied, and whether it be in conducting an election controversy in a woman's club, in superintending a money raising function for a philanthropy or in her gracious patronage of the fine arts Mrs. Lyon has always demonstrated her keen comprehension of human character, especially feminine character, and her ability to put that comprehension to good use.

Mrs. Lyon is the newest leader among women's clubs to have achieved success in so short a time. For only four years has she been at all prominent in club circles. During that time she has been president of the Eclectic club, an organization upon which the light of publicity has beaten with unusual pertinacity, and from this post of only comparative importance—for the Eclectic club is by no means the greatest among women's clubs—she has been elevated to the presidency of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, than which there are only two higher positions within the gift of the woman club members of this country, the state and the national presidencies.—New York Herald.

Economy and Laundry Work.

It was demonstrated in a household economics exhibition held recently that with a little care in selection of material women could become in a measure independent of the laundress and at the same time save a considerable sum of money. Unironed and sun dried underwear was recommended as being both economical and healthful.

There was also a demonstration of the money saved by wearing plain rather than fancy lingerie, which was based on laundry prices for washing and ironing.

Two suits were shown of three pieces each. One was of longcloth, edged with convent embroidery, the prettiest being trimmed with plain ruffles only. This cost $4.50 and could be laundered once a week for a year at a cost of $32. The other was nainsook, made elaborately and trimmed with lace. It cost $13.50, and the laundry work for the same time amounted to $83.

This estimate was made on the actual pieces which had been charged for doing the suits at a first class laundry. As an accurate estimate of the time spent is made when grading laundry prices, $5 is the equivalent of the time saved by the laundry on the plain suit. At home, with fewer facilities and less expert work, which are most needed in doing the lace trimmed wear, the difference in time would be even greater.

Women and Newspaper Work.

A well known western newspaper woman gives the following bit of advice to an inquirer who asks about newspaper work as a profession for a woman: "It all depends upon whether you can readily adapt yourself to the business and whether you have some natural talent for scribbling. For those to whom writing is a painful, laborious task newspaper work is anything but pleasant. But if you are the sort that can write anything at any time without waiting for a muse to push you along you will find the work fascinating in the extreme. There is much that is drudgery; there is much that is exhilarating and inspiring. People who have been in it for many years keep up a perpetual growl, but couldn't possibly be induced to break away from the jolly world of pot boilers. If you are strong and well, can stand long hours of work, do not think you are a glowing genius, don't cry over every trivial disappointment and know a little something about spelling and composition, make a try. Write something and send it in. That is the only way now that the field is so frightfully crowded."

The Short Skirt Gait.

Don't think you can walk just any old way in your short skirt, for you can't—that is, if you want to win the coveted appellation "smart." At least, those who study the art of dress say so. These critics aver that the short skirted girl must study seriously the matter of her gait, for it is of far more moment than when wearing longer skirts. The steps should be small and regular. They say that the Spaniards attach a ribbon to each garter to keep their pace even and regular. Be this taken for what it is worth, there is no doubt that Spanish ladies have a most graceful walk and carriage. The American woman who led off with short skirts and is wholly responsible for either adoption will hardly adopt a method of gear to hamper her steps and reduce her gait to a "mince." But in this suggestion there is a hint for the girl of the period to ponder over. The gait acquired on the tennis court or golf field will never give grace to a girl in ankle high skirt, especially if she have feet that her friends dub "good understandings."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Advice of a Successful Belle.

"Yes, my dear, one could lay down rules for the charming of the other sex," said an old but very successful belle to a debutante who, in spite of a beautiful face, is, it must be admitted, a failure as far as popularity goes. Ardent admirers she has, but of temperate admirers and men friends she has none. "One could lay down rules—a hundred and three of them, all good rules too. But there are two I'd remember if I were you, and you can afford to let the others take care of themselves. The first is when talking to a man never 'run down' another woman. The second—and even if you forget the first please remember the second—is never praise another man!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

To Wash Corsets.

If it is necessary to wash corsets take out the steels in front and sides, then lay them on a flat surface and with a small brush scrub them thoroughly with tepid or cold lather of white castile soap. When quite clean let cold water run on them by holding them under a running faucet until the soap is all rinsed off. Pull them lengthwise until they are straight and shapely and let them dry in a cool place, pulling them again when partly dry. By this treatment they will retain their natural shape and wear for months after.

The Parasol.

It is not economy, though it may seem so, to combine the use of a rain umbrella and sunshade in one article. A manufacturer of umbrellas points out that it is the oil in the silk which continues its wear. When that is dried out, the material cracks and is useless. The sun's heat obviously, therefore, is not desirable and should be kept from a good umbrella. A cheap pongee or silk and linen parasol may better be bought, as it will mean perhaps a year more wear for the more expensive rain shield.—Harper's.

Black Bean Soup.

The liquor in which ham is boiled may be made the basis of a delicious and nutritious soup. Soak a pint of black beans overnight, boil till perfectly tender in the water in which they were soaked, mash fine, add a pint or a little more of the ham liquor, which must be allowed to get cold so that the fat can be removed, and press through a sieve upon a few slices of lemon and rings of hard boiled eggs. This is the "black bean soup" which has such a reputation.

Lemon Juice Treatment.

To treat the skin with lemon juice take one pint of hot water and add to it a teaspoonful of powdered borax. To this add the juice of half a lemon. Use a sponging lotion for the skin. Let it dry on, but wash off after fifteen minutes or so. This will prove very whitening. If there are deep, yellow spots the clear lemon can be applied, but it should be tried first with caution, as every skin will not bear the clear, strong lemon.

Apple Taffy For Children.

Apple taffy is a delicious sweet for the children and less injurious to the "little insides" than most sweets. Choose firm, ripe, tart apples and put in each one a stick three or four inches long. Put two pounds of brown sugar in a saucepan and add a little water. Boil until it threads, then dip the apples in this sirup and turn them over and over until covered. Set on buttered paper until cold.

Violet Powder.

A pure violet powder can be easily made at home as follows: Pound six ounces of the best starch to a very fine powder and sift it through a fine piece of muslin, then rub into it two drams of powdered orris root and perfume it with a few drops of oil of lemon, lavender or attar of roses. Tint it if you like by adding a very little rose pink.

Table Lace.

It is not good form to have any but pure white lace upon the table, and even the colored silk embroideries upon white linen which have made lunch tables so bright in times past are less popular, although still in use by people of fashion to some extent.

In closets devoted to shelves the shelves should have spaces between them of not more than fifteen inches, this space allowing sufficient room for most practicable purposes.

The parlor is the showroom for the outside world, but the kitchen and living rooms should be even better showrooms for the family.

WENTWORTH MILLIONS

Daughter Contests Will on Ground of Unsound Mind

STORIES OF QUEER ACTIONS

Related by His Grandson—He Had Strange Ideas as to Manual Education and Inventions—Sandpapered Hands and Even His Face

Boston, July 11.—An array of legal talent and witnesses gathered in the superior court for the Arioch Wentworth will contest, before Judge Harmon. The last will of Arioch Wentworth, made in 1903, practically bequeaths all of his estate of more than $7,000,000 to found a school, subject to a life interest to his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Stuart, and a few other bequests. Mrs. Stuart contests the will on the ground that he was of unsound mind at the time of making the last will. She claims that the will of 1887, which bequeaths the entire property to the direct heirs, should be allowed. Mr. Wentworth died March 1, 1903.

In court Robert M. Morse appeared for Mrs. Stuart. In support of the will there appeared Elder, Wait and Whitman. A. W. Erickson, grandson of Mr. Wentworth, was on the stand. Practically all his testimony was on the line of showing his grandfather to be of unsound mind. He testified that Mr. Wentworth had on one occasion started in singing "Up-I-Dee, Up-I-Dee," and continued at it for a considerable time. Another time he walked around the edge of a rug for half an hour, singing "Yankee Doodle Dandy." He claimed that he had invented a system of drainage which he claimed he could get a patent on if he desired. Another time, in discussing the principles of boatbuilding, Mr. Wentworth said that Herreshoff did not understand the principles of boatbuilding; that to be successful they ought to be perfectly straight on the bottom, instead of sloping.

He said that Mr. Forbes, when he was building the Mayflower, came to him to get his ideas and advice about the boat.

Continuing, the witness testified that Mr. Wentworth said that Booker T. Washington was a pretty good man; that he had been to see Queen Victoria and the President of the United States, and that Mr. Washington had also been to see him, and he hoped the family would now appreciate him, seeing the public classed him with these people. He said it was useless to give money to colleges or institutions, as it usually cost $3 or $4 to get $1 for such purposes, as they stole it.

A college education, he said, was no use, unless a man was paid for it, because if a man had it in him he was capable of doing everything without a college education which he could do with it. He said, for instance, that, although he never was at college, he could build boats. He also insisted on cutting down the vines in front of the house lest the roots should undermine the walls.

Mr. Erickson testified as to the untidy habits of his grandfather, his actions at dinner being such that the witness sometimes went without eating. One of Mr. Wentworth's fervent prayers was: "Oh, God, please teach me how to live without a stomach!"

Witness testified that his grandfather once said that someone had told him that he was too old to make a will, but he would show them that he was not, adding: "I'm not so crazy as you think I am!" Mr. Erickson once explained to his grandfather the working of the clockwork in the observatory of Harvard university which moves the telescope, when Mr. Wentworth declared that he had invented the apparatus and told the professor about it.

Mr. Erickson then went into details regarding the condition of the Beacon street house and how badly it was in need of repairs. He testified that his grandfather had never in his presence said that he wanted to found a college for mechanics or any other kind of a college.

Samuel J. Elder cross examined the witness. Mr. Erickson declared that he had never known before Mr. Wentworth's death that he was an executor under the old will. Witness said he never had any business outside of looking after his own property. His grandfather had several times suggested that he go into business. He often became violent over this subject. He had told his grandson several times that he was lazy and too tired to work.

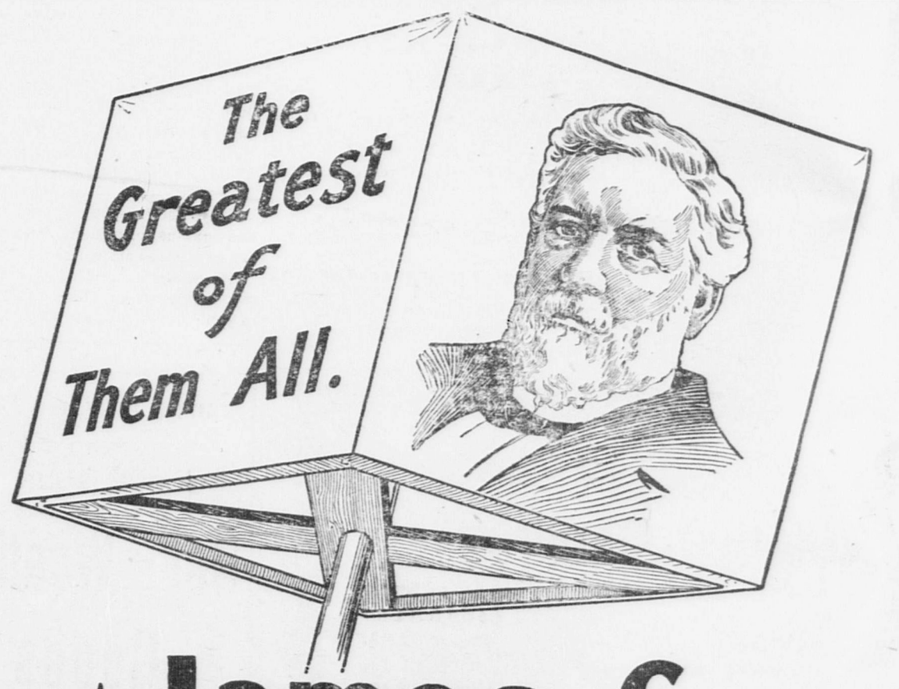

Under further cross-examination witness said that at times Mr. Wentworth would find fault so incessantly with his mother that she would go into hysterics. Mr. Wentworth was for years treating himself, but more particularly during his last few months. It was true that for years he had been troubled with eczema, but had apparently gotten over it. Lately he had made up all sorts of medicines. His hands were so rough that witness had seen him sandpaper them. He had even sandpapered his face.

POPE'S LIFE PROLONGED

But Chances of Recovery Are Not Improved

EXHIBITS GREAT COURAGE

Which Is Shared by People Waiting to Hear the End of Unusual Struggle—Death and Funeral of Mgr Volpini Forgotten In Excitement

Rome, July 11.—Another operation, performed yesterday, has brought further relief to Pope Leo, and by it the possibility of his life being prolonged was increased, but it can hardly be said that the operation improved his chances of recovery.

The usual gathering of watchers, mostly journalists, witnessed from the piazza of St. Peter's the opening of the windows of the papal apartment at 6:40 this morning by the pope's faithful valet, Centra. From what has leaked out from the sickroom it appears that no significant change has taken place in the condition of the patient. Dr. Lapponi succeeded in having Pope Leo take a sufficient quantity of nourishment during the night.

As an immediate result of yesterday's operation the pope spent a quiet and almost painless day, with, for his age, a normal temperature, and he once more strikingly exhibited his strength of constitution and intellect. At the examination last evening the doctors could not perceive any regathering of serum in the pleural cavity, but it was feared that the presence of serum would be detected today, thus rendering necessary perhaps another operation in a few days.

Shortly before midnight the condition of the pontiff was reported to have undergone no change and it was added that he had just dropped peacefully into sleep. At that hour all within the palace was quiet, the pontiff's apartment alone showing signs of life. The pope slept until nearly 2 o'clock this morning, when he woke up, seemingly more refreshed, and asked for food. His pulse was taken and found to vary from 87 to 93. His temperature was 96.8 and his breathing irregular.

The latter part of the night was not so good, owing to the restlessness and uneasiness of the patient. Dr. Lapponi has been going almost every 15 minutes to look at the pontiff, who did not notice the presence of the doctor, being in a drowsy state. Dr. Lapponi administered a dose of chloral and gave the patient at the same time an injection of camphor-caffeine.

A general feeling of tranquility marked the day in Rome yesterday, due to the widespread belief that, though the pope's days are numbered, his hour has not yet come. The sublime self-confidence of the patient permeates the people, especially the simpler folk, who go about their day's work, postponing signs of sorrow and mourning until from the sickbed itself they hear that the unusual struggle is nearing its end.

The news of yesterday morning's operation sent cardinals and ambassadors driving hurriedly to the Vatican. The sombre black carriages and horses of the former, relieved only by glimpses of the scarlet robes worn by the pale-faced occupants, contrasted strangely with the brilliant equipages of the ambassadors. Outside St. Peter's the ordinary visitors hurried past the Swiss guards and ascended the staircase leading to the inner court of the Vatican.

The sun beat fiercely on the plain, white shutters which shelter the pope's room, and all eyes were turned towards them. Compared with the magnificence below, with the bewildering colors of the papal courts and the rich attire of the guards, the shuttered windows are peasant-like in their simplicity.

Another window caught the eye. This was open and the sun streamed in on Raphael's priceless frescoes and lit up the great marble portico. "Within there," said a papal attendant, "the rooms are all ready for Oreglia, the cardinal deacon, who will reign during the interregnum." The same grim preparation is apparent on all sides.

From the castle of St. Angelo came the boom of the mid-day gun and then the Palatine guard gave the signal for the anxious crowd to be admitted to the Vatican. Passing through the corridor each received a slip of white paper on which the morning bulletin was printed. The crowd filed out through another door past the armed guard and into the quiet streets. During the remainder of the day but few of the public sought the Vatican. Then came the night bulletin and far larger crowds than had gathered during the day wandered to the Vatican in the cool of the evening. The Swiss guards had received instructions only to admit a small portion of the inquirers, prior to the printing of the bulletin, and even this restricted number almost filled the court of the Vatican, while many waited in suspense on the steps of St. Peter's.

The extraordinary confusion prevailing at the Vatican outside the immediate vicinity of the pope's sickroom is demonstrated by the remarkable neglect to make even the most ordinary preparations for the interment of Mgr. Volpini, the secretary of the consistory and canon of St. Peter's, who died suddenly Thursday of syncope. Usually the funeral of so high an ecclesiast would have been a prominent event in Rome, but it was completely forgotten in the shadow of the greater impending loss to the church.

The body of Mgr. Volpini seems to have been permitted to remain almost in the condition in which he died. The remains were not laid out in the customary manner. Only two lighted candles were provided, and they were permitted to burn to the sockets and had almost expired when a woman came yesterday morning to view the body. She raised an indignant outcry at such a condition of affairs. Hasty arrangements were then made for the interment. At 5 o'clock the coffin was brought down from Mgr. Volpini's room, situated immediately above the pope's apartments, and placed in a communal hearse of the fourth class, drawn by two horses, such as is usually employed for small tradesmen and comparatively poor persons. A few choir boys, monks and priests headed the procession to the church of Santa Maria, where the final rites were celebrated. There was an entire absence of ecclesiastical dignitaries and prominent members of the laity who, in ordinary circumstances, would attend the ceremony. The great bell of St. Peter's was tolled a few moments only, which is remarkable in view of the fact that the news of Mgr. Volpini's death was kept from the pope, who must have heard the bell, which is only tolled for prelates and ecclesiasts of high order.

The Italian government follows the fluctuations of Pope Leo's condition with deep interest. Premier Zanardelli is kept constantly advised of every varying stage in the sickness. In response to questions put to him, Zanardelli has expressed his personal solicitude for the pontiff and he added: "My duty is solely to assure, in the interest not only of Italy, but of all Europe, the most absolute liberty to the approaching conclave and the fullest assurance may be entertained that this liberty will be given."

The Tribuna, the semi-official organ of the government, says: "In view of the condition of the pope, which occasions deep suspense throughout the Catholic world, the visit of King Victor Emmanuel to France has been postponed until next September by a common accord between the French and Italian governments."

Pampolla Greatly Worried

Paris, July 11.—According to a dispatch to The Journal from Rome the ambassadors yesterday found Cardinal Rampolla wrapped in a woolen shawl, bent, and complaining of being sick. The cardinal declared that he would retire from active life at the Vatican and could not attend the conclave. He said to the Spanish ambassador: "I want to go into a monastery and withdraw from the world. My human life will end with that of Pope Leo." Cardinal Rampolla wept bitterly, but later had an interview with Cardinal Gotti, who succeeded in consoling him.

THE MANCHURIAN SNAG

Brought Forth "Unofficial Statement" at Washington

RUSSIA'S UNFRIENDLINESS

Toward Our Government Shown In a Note to China Which Prevented Her Giving Desired Open Ports—Course Delays Commercial Treaty

Washington, July 11.—The basis for the accusation of Russia's unfriendliness toward the United States, which was contained in the "unofficial statement" of July 1, was a communication from the Chinese treaty commissioners at Shanghai that Russia had objected to an arrangement between China and the United States for the opening of Manchurian ports to American trade "until she has completed arrangements for the evacuation" of Manchurian territory.

This communication marked the suspension of the treaty negotiations, as the Chinese commissioners said that, in view of Russia's attitude, they could not consider the question of opening ports. The Chinese government assured the United States of its earnest desire to accede to the wishes of this government to open Manchurian ports, but it felt obliged to defer that matter on account of the coercive course of Russia.

Practically nothing has been done by the United States commissioners at Shanghai since the Chinese commissioners declined to give further consideration to the open-port question. The Chinese commissioners did propose that the treaty be concluded without provision for opening Manchurian ports to American trade, leaving the matter to be determined through subsequent negotiations, but the American commissioners declined to agree to this. They maintained that the treaty could not be completed until the provision for the opening of ports was included. This occurred a fortnight ago, and since then the negotiations have been at a standstill.

The Russian government is pledged to evacuate Manchuria Oct. 8, 1903, provided the attitude of other powers is not an obstacle thereto. The fear is expressed here, however, that when the time for evacuation coms Russia will claim that the attitude of Japan and perhaps England is so menacing that she must retain her troops on Manchurian soil or receive pledges that these powers recognize Manchuria as within the Russian sphere.

War Talk Is Revived

Pekin, July 11.—Advices from New Chwang regarding the recent cleavage in the relations between Russia and Japan have caused a revival of the war talk, greater than at any time for three years. The secret sale of the British company to Russia has been taken to indicate a loss of confidence by the foreign residents in the ability of the powers to resist Russia's absorption of the port industries. Since the departure of the Russian minister, M. Lessar, for the Port Arthur conference, it has been learned that the Chinese foreign office intended to have a representative at that meeting and was only deterred from accepting the invitation by the fear of alarming the other powers. Japan's demand regarding the deficiency in the indemnity payment is taken as an indication that she is adopting a policy independent of her British alliance.

Lynching Brutalities Recited

London, July 11.—The Russian ambassador in London, according to The Catholic Herald, has refused to receive a petition relative to the treatment of negroes in the United States and forward it to the czar, as requested by the Catholic Herald. The petition draws attention to the "increasing outrages on negroes, accompanied by appalling brutality," and urges the Russian government to make representations to Washington, asking the authorities there "to take steps in the interests of civilization and humanity to suppress the growing evil." The ambassador says the matter is outside his purview, and that he cannot therefore move therein. The Catholic Herald says the petition will be sent direct to St. Petersburg.

Labors of Thirty Thousand Educators at Boston Ended

Boston, July 11.—The 42nd annual convention of the National Educational association practically closed last night after an interesting and undoubtedly instructing week to the 30,000 teachers from all parts of the country who visited Boston. The great army of educators began to disperse last night and by tonight the great majority of the visitors will be on their way home.

The day was excessively warm, although the morning hours were somewhat tempered by sea breezes. The heat, however, did not prevent the strangers from pursuing their sightseeing and enjoying numerous excursions in and about the city, and numerous little groups of 10 and a dozen, with or without guides, who have peered into every nook and corner of Boston and thoroughly examined every point of historical interest, have left with an impression which will not soon be forgotten.

The Daily Telegraph says: "The net results of the last few days are practically the inauguration of a new era, and clasping the hands of our kinsmen across the ocean and holding our nearest European neighbor as the best of friends, we have given nostage to the future and pledged ourselves for the cause of peace.

Suicide's Breastpin Stuck In Engine.

While cleaning an engine at the North White Plains yard the other day an employee of the Harlem Railroad company found the diamond breastpin worn by Mrs. Mary Agnes Hall Potter when she was killed the other evening, says a New York special dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. The pin was tightly fastened on the front of the engine cab between the boiler and the window. The pin of the brooch was stuck into the cab nearly a half inch. A railroad man said that it was the strangest incident he had ever heard of in connection with death on the rail, that the pin should have gone with such force as to imbed itself in the cab of the engine, which, since killing Mrs. Potter, has run several hundred miles and made 300 station stops.

Santos-Dumont's Night Flight.

M. Santos-Dumont late the other night made a nocturnal aerial flight as far as the fashionable Outdoor club grounds on the Ile de Puteaux, in the Seine, says a Paris cable dispatch to the New York Herald. He had a powerful acetylene lamp in his air ship, which flashed on the fashionable throng enjoying the cool night air at that favorite society resort. Owing to the dark and mist over the river he had to be led by the guide rope part of the way.

THE STOREROOM.

Some of the Things This Important Apartment Should Contain.

In every house should be a storeroom which should be cool, airy and, above all, dry. Where the space can be allowed it is well to choose a fairly large room and have it fitted up with shelves, brackets and a strong, firm table, with, if possible, a drawer of generous size. In this keep two or three spoons, a knife, a large pair of scissors, a ball of string, a cheese cutter and a soap cutter. These last two are practically the same as far as make is concerned, but should naturally be kept very strictly each for its separate use.

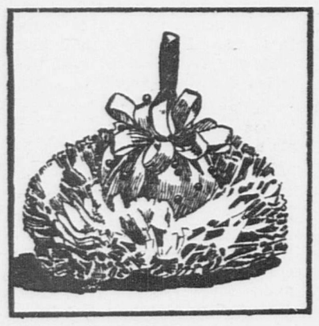

A good set of scales should also be part of the storeroom outfit, as should a slate, with pencil attached, for any stray memoranda. A generous allowance of shelves should be provided, and each shelf should be kept for its separate and special use, so that in a little time you should be able to tell blindfolded in which direction to go for sugar, jam and starch.

Either tightly closing tins or large earthenware crocks should be used for cereals, currants and raisins. The lids should be kept tightly closed, as insects are very destructive, to cereals especially. Garlic and strong smelling articles should be kept in tight fitting tins and as far away as possible from anything likely to be affected by the odor.

Lastly, to insure comfort, a corner of the storeroom should be devoted to household stores of various kinds, such as writing, blotting, packing, brown and other kind of paper; a ball each of fine and coarse string, a small tool chest, with a glue pot and a bottle of either cement or glue, and last, but by no means least, a small medicine chest, for, where there are children especially, one never knows when a question of minutes may not make the difference between life and death.

An Odd Pincushion.

There is an odd design for a paper pincushion which is given in the Ladies' Home Journal. The pincushion is easy to put together and is quite ornamental in appearance. To make it you paste four ruffles of paper, fringed and gathered, on a circle of cardboard. For the top fasten a small stick in a piece of cardboard and arrange cotton around it in the shape of a bell. Cover this with fine net over crape paper and paste it to the foundation. The ribbon trimming completes a pretty pincushion.

New Idea In Servant Problem.

Some enterprising Americans, now resident in London, have hit on a new idea looking to the solution of the domestic servant problem. In an apartment house recently erected according to their design there are suits of rooms for the exclusive use of the servants, where they may retire for recreation or in which they may receive friends. These rooms, which are described as being bright, cheerful and well furnished, consist of bedrooms, excellently appointed bath rooms, a reception room and a library in which current literature abounds. This surprising effort to secure the contentment of the "help" and thus to obviate too frequent applications for evenings out, as well as the constant recurrence of that horror known as "giving notice," is being viewed with much curiosity and interest by Londoners.

Cure For Nail Biting.

The annoying habit of nail biting, common among children, is curable in its earlier stages without resorting to the trick of rubbing the finger tips with bitter stuffs. Manicure the child's nails carefully and see that there are no hangnails. Cut rather deeply into the corners and file the nails short. Children often bite their nails because they are not quite comfortable. A ragged edge of one nail is bitten to make it smooth, and the foundation of the habit is laid. If the little fingers were cared for regularly from babyhood few children would adopt the disagreeable practice.

A Dish For an Invalid.

Take the white part of the breast and wings, freed from skin, of a boiled chicken and pound in a mortar with an equal quantity of stale bread. Flavor with a little lemon peel, a pinch of nutmeg, salt and pepper. Add enough of the water in which the chicken has been boiled to make the mixture of the consistency of cream. Boil for ten minutes, stirring well all the time. This is a useful invalid dish, as it can be drunk and affords a large amount of nutriment.

To Mend a Leaky Boiler.

If on washing day morning your laundress, with doleful looks, tells you that the boiler filled with clothes has sprung a leak do not despair. Push the clothes away from the side of the boiler and drop in a handful of corn meal. This will settle at the bottom of the boiler, will soon swell, filling the leak entirely, and the meal cannot harm the clothes. The effect is equally good if your pot with a boiled dinner or ham leaks while in use

Love In Lapland.

In Lapland the crime which, after murder, is punished with the greatest severity is that of marrying a girl against the wishes of her parents. When a suitor makes his appearance he says nothing to the maiden, who often does not know who he is, but her parents inform her that she is sought in marriage. Shortly afterward, on a day appointed, the girl, her parents, friends and suitor all meet together at a feast, and the young man and maiden are placed opposite, so that they can look at each other freely and can talk with comfort. After the meal is over the company repair to an open space, where "the race for a wife" is run. The usual distance is about a quarter of a mile, and the girl is placed a third of the distance from the starting point. If she be fleet of foot she can easily reach the goal before her suitor, and in that case he may never trouble her again. If, however, he has found favor in her eyes, all she has to do is to lag somewhat in her flight, so that he may overtake her. If she desires to intimate to him that his love for her is returned she may run a little way and then turn with open arms to accept him.

English For French Tongues.

Persons who have worried through a "French Manual" may get some satisfaction from the thought that with their own language they are revenged upon the Parisian. "Methods Avec Prononciation" is a little book which makes straight the way of the English language for French tongues. Does one wish to say, "How is it, miss; one so charming and pretty walking alone?" (which, of course, would be one of the first remarks a French traveler would have occasion to make) it is only necessary to consult the "Nouvelles Methods:" "Aou isite, miss; oueune so tcharminngue annde pretti ouakinngue alaune?" If the traveler goes to the theater the man at the box office may say, "Oui have onli orchestre stalls laifte, beute allow me tou rimarque sat se are se best sitce for sinngeule dgeentlemene." Evidently "th" is given up as a bad job, and "j" is as difficult for the Frenchman as for the German, though a German manual gives John Bull as "Dschonn Bool."

Great Mushroom Garden In France.

The strangest of the underground worlds in France which I visited was one devoted to the raising of mushrooms. Its limits seemed unbounded, as indeed they were, for it pierced the hillsides in every direction. We entered through an opening under an orchard of cherry trees. During "harvest time" a crop is gathered every twenty-four hours. Three men, with their great baskets, make the rounds of this underground farm every morning, and every day in the year can count on an immense crop, which they ship to the large cities near by and even several miles away. The discolored and inferior mushrooms are sent to the canneries, but for his best growth the producer receives only 20 cents a pound.—Scribner's Magazine.

Flamingoes' Tongues.

The beastly Vitellius, as Gibbon calls him, spent at least six millions of money on table in as many months. He invented, or his cook invented for him, a dish which he designated "the Shield of Minerva." One of its principal ingredients was flamingoes' tongues, of which both Pliny and Martial speak in encomiastic terms. Dampier says that the flamingoes have "large tongues, and near the root is a piece of fat which is accounted a great dainty." When Captain Owen was surveying the east coast of Africa his sailors shot down hundreds of these beautiful birds in order, with an extravagance worthy of Vitellius, to make a dish of the tongues alone.

Historic Albania.

Albania lies 180 miles on the Adriatic sea and is fifty to a hundred miles wide. It was formed originally, says William Jackson Armstrong in his "Heroes of Defeat," from part of Illyris, all of Epirus and part of Macedonia in the eleventh century. From this territory sprung Pyrrhus, who defeated the Roman invader; Philip and Alexander of Macedon, the conquerors; Perseus, whose fame as a soldier covered the world sixty years after Christ, and Skanderbeg, who for forty years defeated armies sent against him by the Turk. Ancient Albania lay in Asia, just east of the Caucasus.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet! You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as she passed."—Philadelphia Press.

Club Benefits.

"It's a shame the way those Squallop children are growing up without any parental restraint whatever."

"Yes; when their mother joined the Woman's Literary society and began attending all the meetings Mr. Squallop got sort of reckless and joined a Don't Worry club."—Exchange.

AN INGENIOUS BURGLAR.

How He Opened a Safe Without Tools or Explosives.

An extraordinary account is given of how a safe was opened by a robber who had at his disposal no instrument of any kind, but operated merely with his finger nail. The person who accomplished the feat revealed his intention of robbing the iron safe in a hotel to another young man, who happened to be the cousin of the hotel proprietor.

As a matter of course the proposed scheme to rob was revealed to the owner of the hotel, and a little before midnight, when it was to be put into execution, a couple of detectives were concealed behind the office counter.

A short time afterward the robber entered the office gently, without either tools or explosives wherewith to open the massive iron receptacle, the combination of which it was evident he did not know. He had, however, resorted to an ingenious plan of his own.

He had pared the nail of his index finger on the right hand until the blood vessels were exposed. Then by placing the sensitive wound on the combination lock he could distinguish the movements of the tumblers as they fell. For more than an hour did he work, and at last there came a sharp click, and he swung back the doors of the safe.

He was in the act of filling his pockets with the valuable papers it contained when a damper was thrown upon his activity by the sudden grasp of the detectives, under whose escort he was taken to prison.—London Tit-Bits.

Danger In "Home Remedies."

"The trouble with poor persons who try to doctor themselves before coming here," said a physician in a public dispensary, "is that they do not know the first thing about the 'simple remedies,' as they call them, that they use. Oftentimes they do themselves serious injury through sheer ignorance. I had a man in here the other day who had taken half an ounce of cholera mixture. Somebody had told him to take half a teaspoonful. It is the same way with paregoric, sweet niter, ammonia and other well known household remedies. Persons who trust to their memory are likely to get mixed and either take an overdose or use the wrong medicine. A woman came in here suffering from the effects of a drug that she should never have obtained except on a physician's prescription. It was the big overdose and her prompt application for relief that saved her. When I scolded her she showed me a clipping from one of the magazines advising its use. The dose prescribed was enough to kill a horse."—New York Times.

The Menu Card In Its First Form.

In its old fashioned form the menu was usually written large on cards of such imposing dimensions that room for one only could be found at each end of the board. In the mediæval dinner this aid to selection must have been an absolute necessity, for the mediæval dinner was a mine of surprises. It was divided into courses, as are our own dainty meals, but whereas nowadays the diner has a general idea that fish will follow soup and that entree is succeeded by releve, and can conceive generally the sort of demand that each course will make upon his appetite and digestion, there was no possible arguing as to what was going to happen at an early English dinner, and close study fails to reveal the existence of any principle of arrangement.

Discrediting an Astrologer.

A certain king, says a tale from the Persian, asked an astrologer, "How many years of life remain to me?" The wise man replied, "Ten." The king became very despondent and betook himself, as one stricken with a sickness, to his bed. His vizier, who possessed great wisdom, sent for the seer and in the king's presence asked him, "How many years have you to live?" He replied, "Twenty." The vizier ordered that he should that very hour be executed in the king's presence. The king was satisfied and commended the sagacity of his minister, and no longer attached any importance to the astrologer's saying.

Eggs and Fairies.

A writer in the Chicago Tribune says: "My people came from the north of Ireland. My great grandfather always stuck his knife through the bottom of his eggshells after he had eaten breakfast. My grandfather and father followed his example through force of habit, and now I have contracted it. If you don't break the shells the fairies can use them for boats and can cross bodies of water thus. In the north of Ireland there are good fairies and bad fairies. The bad fairies will play tricks on you if they can reach you. You can hamper their movements by breaking their boats."

Poetical Concession.

Sir Walter Scott was asked why he had made Ellen Douglass the lady of the lake.

"Because," he replied, "if I had made her the lady of the river there might have been a run on the bank."

The Absurdity of It.

Mrs. Skrapp—It seems to me to be so ridiculous to refer to a tugboat as "she."

Mr. Skrapp—That's so; tugboats do actually accomplish some good in the world.

Mrs. Skrapp—Yes, and they puff and blow about it so.—Philadelphia Press.

Under Water.

"What was the trouble?"

"He couldn't swim."

"What has that to do with his failure?"

"He got into a company where the stock was all water."—Exchange.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

An elaborate production of Pettit and Grundy's romantic drama "The Bells of Haslemere" is to be the Castle Square Theatre attraction next week, this being the first presentation of the play in this city since the remarkable performances given at the Castle Square four years ago. The scenic demands of the play, including ten stage pictures, will be fully met and follow accurately designs made for the original production in this city, at the Boston Museum, under the direction of Mr. J. R. Pitman, who is again in charge of the coming performances. The great scene in the Louisiana swamp will be made especially realistic and some fine scenic effects will be show in the pictures of Haslemere manor-house and surroundings. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"An Awful Fix," a most amusing one-act farce, is to be played at Keith's the week of July 15 by James Horne, a well known Boston actor, who has been appearing in the roles made famous by the late James Herne, for some seasons past. Mr. Horne will be supported by a capable company. Otherwase the bill is a typical variety one, several of the entertainers being new to the patrons of the popular playhouse. Among the more prominent are Silvern and Emrie, novelty gymnast; Polk and Kellins, the noted banjo experts; Joe Flynn, monologue comedian and parody singer; Garritty sisters, vocal and dancing comediennes; Bean and Hamilton, marvelous barrel jumpers, and Howe and Scott, Henrew comedians and mimics. The Fadettes will make an entire change of selections, and all the motion pictures in the vitagraph will be new. A tremendous summer business is reported.

The New Proposal.

[The Thomas S. Clarkson School of Technology confers a degree of "bachelor of science in domestic engineering" upon young women who complete the course in household sciences.]

Priscilla, when I gaze upon
The azure of your eyes,
I see the glory of the dawn
And peace of twilight skies.
Please note my blushing and my sigh,
And, oh, Priscilla, dear,
But say the word that you'll be my
Domestic engineer.

What joy! Your knowledge so exact
Would ever charm my soul;
You know just how best to extract
Heat units from the coal.
No grim bacilli could get by
If you were watching near.
Priscilla, oh, say you'll be my
Domestic engineer.

A life with you—it could be but
A fate serene, divine,
For even pies must all be cut
On geometric line!
No janitor could me defy;
His voice I should not fear.
Priscilla, please, will you be my
Domestic engineer?

POPE LEO MUCH BETTER

Apparently Gaining Strength With Each Day

Dresses Himself Alone and Receives Four Cardinals, Showing Unusual Brightness and Lucidity of Mind—Doctors In Optimistic Mood

Rome, July 13.—Pope Leo has lived to see another Sunday, and with the Sabbath quiet which fell upon Rome came also peace and even progress to the pontiff. Beginning in the morning with distinct signs of improvement, he maintained this throughout the day. Last night Dr. Lapponi made the following important statement in answer to the question if he believed that the improvement in the pope's condition could continue:

"I believe that if the improvement lasts until July 21 we may not perhaps achieve an absolute cure, but we will secure such a general state of health in the patient as will allay our anxiety."

During the morning the pontiff participated in the celebration of mass. The ceremony was held in the chapel adjoining the sick chamber, Mgr. Marzoni being the celebrant. The door connecting the sick room with the chapel was opened so that the pope might follow the service. He insisted that Dr. Lapponi and his valet, Centra, should leave his side and enter the chapel in order to better hear the mass.

The history of the day was comparatively uneventful. The pontiff had several hours' repose, Dr. Lapponi resting near him throughout the night. The physician twice administered injections to him, once of digatalis to strengthen the heart, and another injection of camphor-caffeine to overcome the patient's growing depression. The morning found the pontiff with spirits bright and the conditions generally improved. Dr. Mazzoni joined his associates at 8:20 a. m. and after a brief conference issued the most encouraging official bulletin thus far given. Besides summarizing the satisfactory pathological conditions, the doctor gave the cheering tidings that the pontiff's condition had manifestly improved. The pulse, which went down Saturday to 82, had risen to 86, while the temperature and respiration showed no abnormal characteristics.

Pope Leo took his usual light breakfast and Dr. Lapponi, who has remained in unceasing vigil since the patient's case became desperate, felt sufficiently assured to leave the Vatican for the first time, going to his home, where his daughter lies ill with fever. When the physician left the sickroom he was almost mobbed by high dignitaries, who rejoiced at seeing Dr. Lapponi tranquil enough to leave the patient. Dr. Lapponi addressed them all by saying: "Yes, the pope is better, but I beg you not to exaggerate in optimism in order to avoid a disillusion later."

During the afternoon the pope felt strong enough to get up. He rose, dressed himself alone, in white, and went to sit in his usual armchair, where he remained for some time. Then the windows were opened for a change of air, the sun streaming in, together with a light, refreshing breeze from the Mediterranean. Late in the afternoon he received four cardinals. The pope showed his usual brightness and lucidity of mind and spoke to each without showing any perceptible fatigue. To Cardinal Mathieu he said: "I have not ceased for one moment to pray God to protect France and have the men now governing her repent and stop the persecution of the church."

He then sent the apostolic blessing to Cardinal Mathieu's sister, who is a nun. He heartily thanked Cardinal Steinhuber, who told him that the whole Jesuit order was daily praying for his recovery and preservation, and he asked Cardinal Agliardi how he liked the position of vice chancellor of the church, to which he was appointed at the last consistory and how the cardinal enjoyed his new residence, the beautiful and historic palace of the chancellory. Hearing that the cardinal had not yet moved there, Pope Leo said: "You must settle yourself before leaving for the country," as though the conclave was a most remote possibility.

He thanked Cardinal Casali for the warm interest he had taken in his illness and then gave all the cardinals his hand to shake. As the King of Spain had telegraphed to inquire about the pope's health, and had asked for the papal benediction, the pope directed Cardinal Rampolla to telegraph back granting the request.

Later the pontiff took a short nap and slept tranquilly enough, although he seemed to have somewhat more difficulty in breathing. The doctors returned at 7:30 p. m. and their evening bulletin gave negative encouragement, simply showing that the favorable conditions of the morning had been maintained. Throughout the day St. Peter's was surrounded by the usual Sunday worshippers, and steady lines of inquirers visited the Vatican courtyard, where the bulletins are issued. Unusual rigor was adopted to prevent unseemly gatherings. One notable instance of Vatican sternness was the arrest of Captain Smith, commanding the Swiss guard, for having given information to the press.

A GRAND SUCCESS

National Education Association to Receive $70,000 From Railroads

Boston, July 13.—Now that the convention of the National Educational association is over even the officials of the organization are talking about its unprecedented success. William M. Anderson, the treasurer, says that $70,000 will be turned over to the association by the railroad companies as dues collected by the different roads. The railroads charged $2 more than the fare one way for the round trip to and from Boston, the extra $2 being collected for the association as dues from the delegates. Last year at Minneapolis the revenue received by the association from this source was only $12,000, so the great success of the Boston convention from this standpoint is easily seen.

The various state headquarters have closed and a visit to the large hotels discloses that fully 90 percent of the teachers have left. They haven't all left Boston, however, for not more than 2500 return tickets have been called for at the joint railroad office.

Double Drowning Accident

Hartford, July 13.—The crew of a freight which had just arrived from Boston, consisting of five men, went in bathing in the Connecticut river. They waded half way across the river when Harry Towner became exhausted and sank. John Braman, who was unable to swim, got beyond his depth and he also drowned. A third member of the crew also got beyond his depth and was in danger of drowning when he was rescued by one of his companions

Bradley Again In Durance Vile

Boston, July 13.—James M. Bradley, a notorious convict, is back again in the state prison at Charlestown, out of which place he quietly walked on Thanksgiving day, 1892. Bradley arrived last night from the Texas state prison, where, on July 4, he completed a sentence. Bradley is wanted here to complete a five-year sentence. He will now be sentenced for escaping from an institution while serving a sentence.

Accident Overtook Yachtsmen

Bristol, R. I., July 13.—One man was drowned and several others narrowly escaped similar fate in Narragansett bay when the yacht Curlew was capsized and the 12 occupants thrown into the bay. The man who lost his life was James Cronin, aged 27. Three of the men swam to the shore. Eight men on the overturned boat were taken off by a passing boat.

Nahant's Celebration

Nahant, Mass., July 13.—The first exercises in connection with the celebration of Nahant's semi-centennial were of a religious character. All public buildings and most of the private residences are profusely decorated. Fully 12,000 people have visited the town, the greatest number attracted by the presence of the vessels of the North Atlantic squadron.

A WIDE OPEN SUNDAY

For Many Thousands Who Visited Revere Beach

SPECIAL LICENSES ISSUED

For Places of Amusement, Thus Outwitting State Police, Who Had Planned Upon Strict Closing of All Places of Amusement

Boston, July 13.—Notwithstanding the state police and the edict sent forth by Chief Oakes of the Revere police to the proprietors of amusement places and photograph galleries that if they opened their places for business Sunday he would certainly arrest them and have them before the court, all but three places on Revere beach yesterday opened promptly at 2 o'clock and kept open until closing time, at 8 o'clock. Not an arrest was made. The selectmen issued special Sunday licenses to 15 or 18 shows and photograph galleries. These licenses are issued under the statute law which permits performances on Sunday for the benefit of regularly organized charities.

Early in the forenoon Chief Wade of the state police, with four officers, made his appearance on the boulevard and visited many of the places and told the proprietors not to attempt to do business, adding that action would be taken against them if they did so.

At the Johnstown Flood a young man sat in a chair and called out every few minutes, "Open at 2 o'clock." The first place to open was the nautical garden, where the submarine and swan boats started with a rush of business. The flying horses began with music which, however, was toned down so that it could be heard only a short distance. The photograph galleries did a big business, but did not have any men on the outside to solicit trade. Manager O'Neil of the Point of Pines was waited upon by the district police, as was also the Crescent Garden opera house and some others in regard to their opening on Sunday. The officers were politely informed that the managers had a special license from the selectmen of Revere to keep open on Sundays.

The license given to the various places is under the statute providing that any such amusement places may be granted a Sunday license provided that the entire proceeds are for the benefit of charity and benevolent societies. On the second trip of the officers they were confronted with signs on every place of amusement. The Crescent gardens and Point of Pines signs read: "For the benefit of the Children's Aid association of Cambridge."

On the flying horses establishment the sign read: "For the benefit of division 51, A. O. H."

The Johnstown flood and the old mill were placarded with: "For the benefit of the Ladies' Benevolent association of Boston."

The submarine and swanboat establishment had only "Boats to let," claiming they had the right to let boats under the statutes which they pointed out to the police that came.

The state police made inquiries regarding the status of the Ladies' Benevolent society, and were introduced to the president of that organization. The law permits entertainments to be given by regularly organized charitable societies where the entire proceeds are given to such organizations giving the entertainment.

Neither the state, park nor town police made an attempt to arrest any one or prevent the running of the shows.

Chief Oakes during the day went down the boulevard. When asked why he did not carry out his declaration made last Saturday night that he would arrest any who opened their places on the spot, he replied that he had afterward consulted with Clerk Curley of the Chelsea court, and from his interview had come to the conclusion that it would be better to apply for warrants and have a hearing on his applications for them before proceeding against them.

BRIDGEPORT STRIKE ENDS

Trolleymen Waive the Question of Recognition of Union

Bridgeport, Conn., July 13.—By a vote of the majority of the members present at a meeting of the Trolleymen's union the strike of the conductors and motormen employed by the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company was practically declared off and the men will go back to work as individuals. The meeting was very stormy and terminated almost in a riot on account of the action of President Wood of the union in declaring that according to the constitution of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes the action was illegal and that in order to declare the strike off it would be necessary for a majority of the members of the union who are present in good standing to vote in favor of such a motion. President Wood moreover says that any man who returns to work is a deserter and forfeits his rights in the union.

Despite this assertion, however, the men who voted in favor of the motion and won say they are in readiness to return to work as individuals. It is likely that powerful influence will be brought to bear and the action of the majority upheld.

The strike went into effect on May 15 because of the refusal of the company to grant the demands of the men for a flat scale of $2.25 for a day of 10 hours, a rearrangement of schedules and recognition of the union. To these demands the company offered a counter proposition embodying a slight increase in wages and a new schedule, but this was not satisfactory to the men.

Root Consulting With President

Oyster Bay, July 13.—Secretary of War Root is the guest of President Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill. He arrived last night. Secretary Root said that his purpose in visiting the president at this time was to discuss with him some departmental matters which required the president's attention. While he declined to indicate what the matters were, it is known that the pending investigation of army contracts, the Alaskan boundary question and some problems relating to the Philippines will be considered.

Prisoners Evidently Have Weapons

Elmira, N. Y., July 13.—A couple of loaded revolvers and some razors and knives belonging to guards were stolen from the storeroom at the Elmira reformatory. The guards have been doubled and every effort made to find the missing weapons, without avail. There seems to be no doubt that the inmates have hidden the weapons somewhere.

Short but Severe Storm

Beaver City, Neb., July 13.—A terrific electrical and wind storm prevailed here, lasting for 45 minutes, in which time 2 1-4 inches of rain fell. The wind blew with great violence, doing much damage. The Union Salvation army of Kansas and Nebraska is holding a camp meeting here. Nine of their tents were blown down.

No Chance For Gibbons

London, July 13.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent at Rome telegraphs: "I am authorized to state on the authority of two cardinals, one of whom is himself a candidate, that neither Cardinal Gibbons nor any other foreign member of the sacred college possesses the remotest chance of succeeding Pope Leo."

Insect's Bite Caused Death

Pawtucket, R. I., July 13.—The bite of an insect received a week ago was the primary cause of the death of Nicholas J. Clavers, a travelling vocalist. Soon after being bitten Claver's neck began to swell and brain fever developed, that being given as the direct cause of death.

The Quincys and South Quincys Also Victorious.

The West Quincys won in the tenth innings in their game of Saturday at Lynn. The Lynns took the lead in the third, and it was tie in the fourth, fifth and sixth. The visitors added one in the seventh which looked like the winning run but the home nine made it a tie score in the ninth. In the tenth, however, the West Quincys again scored, and the Lynn boys were unable to, and West Quincy won.

Good Afternoon

A Quincy lady on a visit here, expresses herself in gratitude that The Ledger suggested a memorial to "Father Kelly" and says she will be glad to contribute for this purpose. Later, another similiar expression has come, and we think if this matter is put in a definite form, the work done, so long and so well by this modest, self forgetful Methodist preacher here, may be marked by a testimony worthy of so good a cause.

Let the stay-at-homes make a vacation, if only by changing the position of the furniture and by inaugurating a different kind of summer suppers.

Joint Picnic.

The King's Daughters are a busy organization, and business received first attention at the annual picnic on Saturday at Squantum, when the membership of Bethany Brotherhood had to shift for themselves. The King's Daughters through their different tens are doing great deal of work, and much-needed assistance is given in many directions. On the afternoon of the picnic the Brotherhood furnished the fruit, and had the pleasure of making the lemonade. It was a grand picnic lunch, the table cloth being spread on the grass. There were sandwiches, brambles, doughnuts, cake, olives, etc., in abundances. A special car conveyed the party both ways, and it was an enjoyable trip without delays.

Capsized in Hull Gut.

John J. Barrett, Jos. H. McLaughlin of Quincy and John Dignon and Frank Collins of Houghs Neck had narrow escapes from being drowned on Sunday in Hull Gut.

They had rowed to Hull in a boat and were on their return when Dignon attempted to pass from one end of the boat to the other and the next instant they were all four in the water.

They tried to right the boat but were unsuccessful and then McLaughlin and Dignon started to swim for the shore. They nearly lost their lives before they were picked up.

Barrett and Collins clung to the overturned boat until they were rescued. It was a close call for all four.

Drug Stores Raided.

Inspector McKay, accompanied by Officers Cahill, Goodhue and Burrill visited the drug store of George L. York at the corner of Hancock and Beach street on Sunday, armed with a search warrant and found a small quantity of alcohol.

They also visited the drug store of Paul J. Brown at the corner of Hancock street and Billings road where they seized two gallons of alcohol, two jugs of cherry wine, a jug of gin, rum and a quart of brandy.

RUSHING IN QUINCY.

Fore River Company Iudependent of Trust and Prosperous.

What effect will the financial difficulties of the so-called shipbuilding trust have on the business of shipbuilding in New England?

With a view to answering this question, brought to the fore by the appointment of a receiver for the $70,000,000 combine that controls two of New England's largest shipbuilding concerns, the Globe has made careful inquiry into the condition of the trade involved.

The result, is of a character to sustain a spirit of optimism among the thousands in New Ehgland who look to the business of shipbuilding for a livelihood. From the standpoint of the breadwinner the outlook for continued prosperity in iron shipbuilding—the branch of the trade affected by the control of the trust—was never better. Plenty of work is under way at the larger yards, and large contracts for future work are at hand. Wages are good among all grades of artisans in the shipbuilding trade.

It appears that the troubles of the combine, so far as New England is concerned, do not extend to the industrial foundation on which the great merger was based. That is still solid, in spite of the policy followed by the trust's promoters in attempting to float their enterprise by means of copiously watered stock.

In the largest independent yard, that of the Fore River company at Quincy business is rushing, and where four years ago but a few men were on the pay rolls, hundreds are now employed. The company has many large contracts on hand and is highly prosperous.

From a lengthy interview, President Watson of the Fore River Co. says: "I know of no reason why New England should not maintain the same supremacy in shipbuilding that it has in other mechanical avocations. In my judgment New England is the national home of shipbuilding."

Church Contract.

The Quincy Quarry Co. has received the contract to furnish the granite for the new Congregational church to be erected at Newton Centre. They are also getting out for New York parties twelve turned columns, twenty feet long and 3 feet 6 inches in diameter.

PICKPOCKET CAUGHT.

Robbed Woman on Houghs Neck Car and Ran.

Street Railway Man Gives Chase.

A Man's Pocket Also Picked near the Neponset Bridge.

Charles Austin, the street railway starter in City Square, covered himself with glory on Sunday, when, after an exciting chase he captured a fellow who had snatched a pocketbook containing $4 from a woman on a Houghs Neck car.

Mrs. Catherine Tucker of 198 7th street, South Boston, boarded a car in City Square for Houghs Neck about 3 o'clock. At the same time others tried to board the car and there was a rush. One of the crowd grabbed Mrs. Tucker's pocketbook. She immediately discovered her loss and shouted that she had been robbed. At that a young man jumped from the car and started up Hancock street on the run.

As he ran he threw the pocket-book away. Starter Austin started in pursuit. The fellow dashed through the Nancy Brackett esta te, over the fence into the railroad track toward Wollaston. Austin was hot on his trail. The fellows wind gave out when near the Presidents bridge but Austin had a good supply left and he nabbed the fellow and brought him back to Quincy.

He turned him over to Officer Murray. The fellow gave his name as Robert Hilpan and his residence as Boston. He claimed it was all a mistake, and that he only ran because others did. He said he was married and had a large family of children, and begged to be released.

At the police station he said he was 23 years of age was unmarried. He wore a belt inside of which was the name J. H. Hill.

He was arraigned in court this morning for larceny from the person and was held in $500 for the grand jury.

LOST $100.

Charles P. Winslow of 378 Columbus avenue, Boston, reports that his pocket was picked of $100 Sunday afternoon at Neponset bridge. Mr. Winslow says that he boarded a car for Nantasket beach about 3.30. There was a rush for the seats and he was pushed by some one. A few minutes later he discovered that his pocketbook was gone. He reported the matter to the starter who notified the police officer.

There was no clew as to who had done the act. A year ago the Neponset terminal became quite a place for pickpockets and not a few lost their pocket books.

A Society Event.

Quite a society event at Magnolia last week, says the Herald, was the opening of Mr. W. B. Closson's new studio on the afternoon of July 10. Finished in an artistic shade of green, the walls form a most effective background for the charming pastel portraits—in which line of work Mr. Closson has made for himself a reputation in Boston and other cities. Among the new portraits were those of Mr. Dexter E. Wadsworth of Quincy and Mrs. Kendall of Boston. Many delightful reproductions of the beauties of the shore also added much to the exhibition.

TROLLEY RIDES.

Were Cool and Popular on Sunday —Everybody Out.

Sunday was one of the busiest days that the street railway has had this year. It seems as though after a week of hot weather everybody turned out for a car ride or a trip to the beaches. Every car of the company both open and closed was in use, and it was hard work even then to accommodate the rush.

On the Squantum line it was necessary to run two and three cars on every trip. On the West Quincy line two of the largest cars were run on every trip, and the same was true on the Nantasket, Brockton, and Weymouth Landing lines. On the Houghs Neck line three and four cars were run on every trip, and fifteen minute time was maintained nearly all day.

Seldom has their been a larger crowd at Houghs Neck, outside of illumination days than Sunday. Hundreds came from West Quincy and East Milton the five cent fare probably being an inducement. People with large families and small incomes find it possible to take the whole family for an outing at Houghs Neck for a small sum. This was doubtless the cause of Sunday's rush on all lines.

Although there were thousands of people about City Square all day it was a most orderly crowd, and there were no disturbances.

The only thing of an exciting nature was the race for a thief who had grabbed a woman's pocketbook. This episode is mentioned elsewhere.

The street railway men had a hard day, yet they kept cool heads and handled the crowds without friction. As far as known there were no accidents of any kind.

WITH THE CADETS.

Many Quincy Visitors on Sunday—Governor's Day Today.

The camp of the Cadets at Hingham was the objective point of many Quincy people on Sunday, and all the neighboring towns were well represented. The guard mounting took place at 8.15 A. M., and there were no other duties until the latter part of the afternoon. At 4 o'clock religious services were held in the mess hall, when there was an address by Rev. Louis C. Cornish, Unitarian.

At 5.15 came inspection and muster, first in the brown suits and then in full dress uniform, and later there was an evening parade.

Today is Governor's day and Gov. Bates and staff arrived by steam launch about noon.

THE ORANGEMEN.

Picnic With Games at New Downer Landing.

About 1000 people attended the annual picnic under the auspices of Bay View lodge, L. O. L., on Saturday, at New Downer Landing. In addition to the two lodges that paraded in Quincy early in the morning there were representative from Mt. Horeb of Somerville, Washington, Cameron, and Massachusetts lodges of Boston and also Cambridge lodges.

Upon the arrival at the grove a meeting was held in the large hall at which addresses were made by G. M. Henry Hull of Boston, Rev. W. W. Dornan formerly of Quincy, and Andrew Stewart.

There was plenty in the line of amusement, including dancing, boating, and a vaudeville show in the rustic theatre.

During the day there was a se rvies of sports which resulted as follows:

Running high jump---Won by John Gould. Distance, 5 feet, 6 inches.

Hop, step and jump---Won by Louis Guertin. Distance, 43 feet, 11 inches.

Running broad jump---Won by Louis Guertin. Distance, 20 feet, 9 inches.

Mile run---Won by Thomas McLean.

Ladies' race---Won by Mrs. Lizzie Russell.

Girls' race---Won by Miss Martha McCready.

Boys' race---Won by William Wilson.

100-yard dash---Won by Louis Guertin.

Three-mile run---Won by Thomas McLean.

—A new line of electric road has been completed between Boston and Worcester and has its terminal at Park square, Boston, which will be their starting and arriving point. The road was opened for business, Wednesday, July 1st. The construction is equal to that of a steam train, and an equal speed will undoubtedly be secured when the Company has fully equipped the road, and everything gets in good running order.

—The graduation exercises of th Stetson High School of Randolph were of a high order. The assistant teachers, Miss Katherine O. Fletcher of Amherst, and Miss Katherine E. Garrity o Quincy, are new comers of only a few months, but they have secured the good will of the whole school, and working in perfect harmony with the Principal, Mr. Fred E. Chapin.—Randolph Register.

The Shorters Discharged.

The case of Wade and John Shorter, for assault with a dangerous weapon on H. Johnson and John McAndrews at the Fore River Works last Thursday, was heard in the district court this morning. McAndrews and his brother Charles, who were two of the most important witness to the affair, did not appear, and a default was entered against them. The evidence submitted showed that the men acted in self defense and while it was self eviden that a knife was used the evidence did not show who used it. The court therefore dismissed the complaints.

TODAY'S COURT.

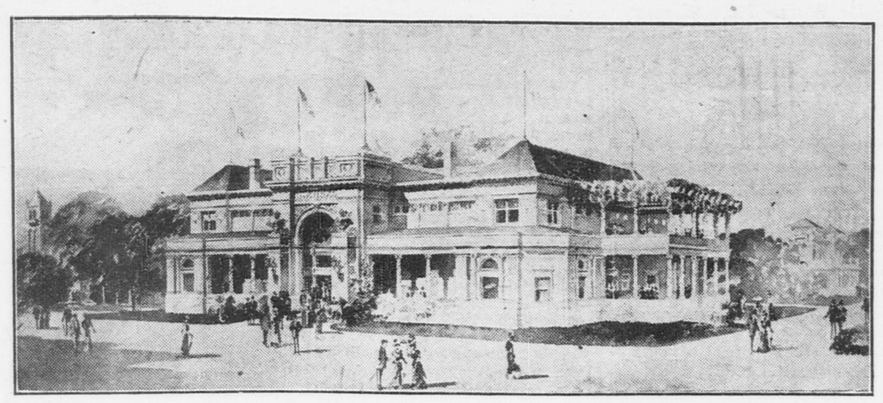

William E. Bradlee and Leon Merritt were arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Cases continued until July 20.

Thomas J. Holt and Thomas P. Flanigan were fined $3 each for drunkenness at Quincy.

Robert Hilpan was arraigned for larceny from some person at Quincy, and was held in $500 for the grand jury.

The continued cases of Wade and John Shorter, for assault on John McAndrews and H. Johnson with a dangerous weapon were heard and both were discharged.

BUILDINGS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The Kansas building at the World's Fair at St. Louis is to be 80 x 125 feet and cost about $30,000. It will be two stories high and have a large central hall on the first floor. There will be three general entrances. The building will stand directly south of the New York building and west of the Illinois building. Senator John C. Carpenter, of Chanute, is president of the Kansas Commission, and Representative Charles H. Loling of Topeka, is secretary. The other members are Senator R. T. Simmons, of Caldwell; Senator J. C. Morrow, of Haddam; and William P. Wagner, of Atchinson.

A Peculiarity of Japan.

"One of the strange features of Japan," said a man who has lived long in that country, "is that all crops and fruits are almost certain to deteriorate. I have seen beautiful peaches grown the first year from stock imported from the United States. The second year they were still fairly good, the third season poor, and after that unfit to eat. Nothing in the vegetable world would seem to retain its excellence for any length of time. It is a bamboo country, and everything reverts to the bamboo. Beautiful lush grass covers many a plain, and yet it gives no nutriment to cattle. Garden vegetables look as fine as any grown in the United States, but when cooked they have no taste. The flowers are of gorgeous hues, but they are without perfume.

"But even with these imperfections it is a very interesting corner of the earth, and many things recommend it. Its inhabitants are in their way a fine people. In the rural districts particularly the natives are the most honorable beings I ever met. In the cities they are sharper mentally, but not nearly so scrupulous."

The Emotional Foreigner.

I saw a very pathetic sight on Forbes street, said the observing young woman, and it made me smile. A poor foreigner—I can't tell you his nationality—stood on the corner surrounded by a big pile of luggage.

He signaled to an approaching car, but the car passed right on. Motorman and conductor possibly objected to the load of freight. No sooner had the car passed than the young man burst out crying, and the tears rolled down his cheeks. It seemed strange to see a man act so.

It was one of those stories which have no beginning and no ending. It may be that he had waited there long and that no car would stop for him. It may be that he thought that that was the last car that was going to his destination. I only know that he was a stranger in a strange land and that he seemed broken hearted and that I smiled to see a grown man in tears for so simple a thing.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Cues as Life Preservers.

The fashion of wearing the hair in a cue commenced to wane in the latter part of the seventeenth century. As we think now of those queer pigtail appendages it seldom occurs to us that they could have been of any use except as an index to human folly. It appears, however, that occasionally they were a very important part of a gentleman's person, as may be inferred from the following complaint published in England at the time the fashionables commenced to cut their hair:

"The bathers of Brighton complain bitterly of the trouble they have in pulling young gentlemen out of the sea since they have cut off their cues. Till one of these docked fashionables is drowned from this circumstance the rage for cropping will not die out."

Encouraging the Horses.

A clergyman who spent many years in missionary work in the west says that he had occasion one day to ride in a full stagecoach up a steep hill. The driver where the ascent was sheerest got out and walked, and as he walked he would frequently open the door of the coach and then shut it again with a slam. This the passengers found annoying.

"Look here, driver!" one of them said. "Why do you kick up such an infernal noise with that door?"

"To hearten up my horses," the driver answered. "Every time they hear this door close they think that one of you, taking pity on them, has got out, and that makes them imagine that their load is lighter."

Fishhooks.

Practically all the best fishhooks in the world—and nearly so of all qualities—are made at Redditch, England. The annual output is probably 500,000,000 hooks, about 10,000,000 per week, ranging in size from enormous and ferocious looking shark hooks to the tiniest hooks for very small trout flies, with a "bend" diameter of about one-sixteenth of an inch, a thousand of which will not more than fill a good sized thimble. The price varies as much as the size, ranging from a few pence to two or three pounds per thousand.

SUMMER POLITICS.

Democrats at Squantum and Republicans at Randolph Grove.

Two political gatherings attracting considerable attention were held Saturday, the Ward 20 Democratic club of Boston holding a banquet at Squantum, and the North Dorchester Republican club at Randolph grove.

The Democratic gathering was intended as a boom for John F. Fitzgerald for Mayor of Boston, but proved to be an endorsement of Mayor Collins and a boom for Congressman Thayer for governor. The speakers were President O'Connell, Charles W. Bartlett, Congressman McNary, Joseph A. Dennison, Senator Gore, ex-Congressman Fitzgerald, Mayor McNamee of Cambridge and Congressman Thayer.

The Republicans were addressed by President A. L. Whittemore, Chairman Wolfson, Hon. George N. Swallow, Dr. E. Peabody Gerry, Michael J. Murray, Senator Garfield of Brockton and John S. Richardson of the Abraham Lincoln club. Sports followed the dinner.

Only Room For One.

Lady—How could you be so foolish as to put anything on that newly painted table?

Maid—But I saw Mr. Jones lay several articles there.

Lady—What of that? If my husband makes a jackass of himself he has a right to, but you haven't, you stupid creature.

Discretion.

Miss Bizzy—I am glad to hear that you are married, O'Brien, and hope that you and Bridget don't have many differences of opinion.

O'Brien—Faith, ma'am, we have a good many, but Oi don't let her know about them.—Town and Country.

If a girl had to decide between having a pearl necklace or nice curly hair she would go crazy.—New York Press.

Largest Hanging Bell.

What is perhaps the largest hanging bell in the world is to be seen in Mandalay. This is the Mingun bell, on the right bank of the Irawadi, almost opposite the city of Mandalay. This immense bell measures as follows: Height to crown, 12 feet; diameter at the lip, 16 feet 3 inches; thickness of metal, from 6 to 12 inches. It weighs about eighty tons and is suspended on three massive round beams of teak placed horizontally the one over the other, their ends resting on two pillars of enormous size, composed of masonry and large upright teak posts. This bell was cast at the end of the eighteenth century under the superintendence of the reigning king.

A Lake of Many Wonders.

Lake Chad, in Africa, is 185 miles long and 89 miles wide, or somewhat larger in area than Lake Erie, yet it is only twenty-five feet deep in its deepest part and only five feet in its eastern side.

It has eighty islands, some barren, others only pasture land and some covered with forests and millet plantations and having a total population of about 50,000.

Storms arise with surprising quickness on the lake, and the shallowness of the water forces up big waves at short notice, while treacherous gusts and puffs of wind about the islands make navigation dangerous.

Forestalling Fate.

In some parts of England the tapping of a bird round the house is looked upon by the superstitious as a warning.

He found an old man in bed, but in perfect health, and asked why he had been sent for.

"Why, sir," replied the daughter-in-law, "there coom a little robin about the door. We knowed it was a 'call,' and we thought it must be granfer; so we put 'im in bed and sent for you."

The Family.

Railway officials differ in the degrees of liberality with which they define the word "family" when used on a pass. An American copied the instructions of the Paris-Lyons Mediterranean railway bearing upon the subject as a lesson in liberality. On that road a pass for one and family is good for father, mother, children, grandfather, grandmother, mother-in-law, father-in-law, brother, sister, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece and servants attached to the family.

The arrival of the International Mercantile Marine Company's Dominion liner Commonwealth at Liverpool July 10 from Boston indicates the safe landing in England of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Howland and Mrs. Edward Russell of Quincy.

Some time ago congratulations were in order for a young miss of South Quincy who intended changing her name. The event is soon to take place, as she appeared out last week in a black and white hat and a blue necktie. Hurrah for the bride to be.

Miss Roberts, who has been the guest of her brother John Roberts of Goddard street for two years, will be missed by her many new made friends, as she sailed on Thursday last on the New England for her home in Wales, being called away on account of poor health of her parents.

Animals and Telegraph Poles.

"A strange thing is the effect of electrical energy on birds and wild beasts," says a telegraph lineman quoted in the Philadelphia Record. "Woodpeckers are continually tapping telegraph poles. In the country you will find everywhere poles honeycombed by the sturdy bills of woodpeckers. The birds mistake the humming sound inside the poles for the humming of insects, and it is to get at these supposed insects that they make their perforations.

"Bears, on the other hand, think the humming comes from bees, and they overturn the stones at the pole's base in their endeavor to get at the honey. Wolves are afraid of the sound. A wolf won't go near a telegraph pole under any circumstances."

An Appetizer.

In the family of Mr. H., treasurer of one of our states, was a small boy of four who was the possessor of a fine rat terrier. One day the dog mysteriously disappeared, and the child, Ralph, was heartbroken. Soon afterward Mrs. H. gave an informal dinner to other state officers and their wives, and Master Ralph was allowed to be at the table under promise of good behavior. Things went on smoothly till the meat course, when a fine roasted pig was brought in, and Ralph thought his long lost pet was going to be served to the guests. He arose in his chair, pointed at the pig and with tears in his eyes and voice cried: "Oh, my doggie, my doggie! I want my doggie!"—Good Housekeeping.

Lincoln on Swearing.

Senator Fessenden once came roaring at President Lincoln over a question of patronage. The president listened till the storm was over, then asked:

"You are an Episcopalian, aren't you, Fessenden?"

"Yes, sir; I belong to that church."

"I thought so. You Episcopalians all swear alike. Seward is an Episcopalian. Stanton is a Presbyterian; you ought to hear him swear."—"The True Abraham Lincoln."

BANK WRECKED

Its Secretary, Treasurer and Cashier a Confessed Defaulter

Cornwall, N. Y., July 13.—Joseph W. Cummin is in jail at Newburgh on the charge of grand larceny. He was secretary, treasurer and cashier of the Cornwall bank, and is alleged to be a defaulter to the extent of about $50,000, wrecking the bank. The state bank examiner appeared at the bank and before the examination of the books begun Cummin took him aside and confessed to shortage in his accounts of between $40,000 and $50,000. He added that he would render the examiner all assistance possible and point out the falsified accounts. A meeting of the board of directors was called and Cummin was placed under arrest.

Cummin is 29 years of age and has a wife and two children. He was president of the board of trade, vice president of the Cornwall Realty company and president of the board of school trustees. The capital of the Cornwall bank is $25,000. Charles E. Cooks is its president. Cummin was under bonds in $7000. He turned over to the bank all his personal and real property and insurance, which amounts to between $15,000 and $20,000. It is said Cummin speculated with the bank's funds. Cummin was formerly an assistant paymaster on the Long Island railroad before coming to Cornwall.

STATUS OF THE JEWS

In Their Native Land Said to Be Worse Than Slavery

RUSSIAN RESTRICTIVE LAWS

Responsible For Abnormal Arrival of Terror-Stricken Human Beings, Crushed In Spirit, In the United States—Have Legal Right to Object

Atlantic City, N. J., July 13.—John B. Weber of Buffalo, late commissioner of immigration at the port of New York and chairman of the special commission authorized by congress in 1888 to investigate in Europe the causes inciting emigration to this country, was a speaker before the Jewish Chautauqua on the subject of "The Status of the Jew in Russia."

In his address Mr. Weber charged the Russian restrictive laws as being responsible for the misery and persecution of which we read and hear. He stated that there would be no peace, no substantial relief for the sufferers until the total disappearance from Russia of either the Jew or the special laws directed against him.

Taking up the laws regarding the right of residence, which the speaker characterized as especially harsh and oppressive, he briefly sketched the history of the official decrees regulating the area within which the Jews were permitted to live during the past 40 years. Summing up the status of the Jew in Russia, Mr. Weber said:

"Today he is an alien in the land of his birth, a subject who bears an undue share of the burdens of good government without the privileges of its meanest citizens. Fettered in his movements, handicapped in his vocation, restricted in his educational opportunities, he is unable to protect himself and powerless to successfully invoke the protection of the authorities, a slave without the self-interest of a master to shield him from abuses. He stands helpless, friendless and defenseless against brute force, egged on not only by religious intolerance, but by contending forces that strive to strengthen the government on the one hand and to destroy it on the other, the irrepressible conflict of the age between government by autocracy and government by the people. The Jew is therefore the sport of the rabble, the spoil of the official, the football of fanaticism, the buffer against which strikes the wrath of bigotry, intolerance and savagery."

After asserting the moral obligation and the legal right of the United States to protest to the Russian government against its treatment of Jews, Mr. Weber said:

"We cannot look with unconcern upon the arrival of the thousands of hunted, terror-stricken human beings, who come to us crushed in spirit and impoverished in substance to enter into competition with our respected and self-respecting labor. Neither is it an answer to say that we have the remedy in our own hands by closing our ports against these people. This would violate our every instinct of humanity and would war against the policy which has made this country great and prosperous, and which will continue to add to our progress and prosperity if immigration is confined to normal causes alone. The abnormal immigration from Russia is duel to the laws and methods of that country—and this gives us a legal and moral right to object. Self interest and humanity unite in a loud call to invoke such rights."

Referring to the hope that a considerable part of this stream from Russia may be diverted to other lands, Mr. Weber quoted the statement of an emigrant at Kovno:

"I am going to America, for in that direction lies hope. Here I have only fears to confront me. The hope may prove delusive, but the fears are a certainty. My great ambition is to breathe at least once the free air with which God had blessed the American people."

"These," said the speaker, "are the words of an uncultured Jew and these are the sentiments in the heart of every Jew in Russia."

Continuing, he said: "Be patient with these unfortunate people and do not judge them by the ordinary standards. Their lives from the cradle up have been passed under extraordinary conditions. The grown up generation can never forget their mistreatment; they cannot banish fear and suspicion on command, but their children can be fitted to enter upon our citizenship and made to glorify your race and reflect credit upon our American institutions."

POPE'S END DRAWS NEAR

Indications of Approaching Dissolution

USE OF STRONG STIMULANTS

To Retain Spark of Life In the Aged Pontiff—Feeling of Fatigue and Indifference Interpreted as Sign That Vitality Is Fast Ebbing Away

Rome, July 14.—Dr. Lapponi succeeded in reanimating the pope this morning with stimulants. He also gave him a little nourishment. The patient's breathing is again difficult. He says he feels very tired.

"While there is life there is hope" was all the consolation that Dr. Lapponi could give in admitting that Pope Leo's condition was very grave.

The pontiff has suffered another relapse and he lies this morning in a more critical condition than at any time since the middle of last week. The semi-comatose condition into which he fell at midnight and the confused state of his heretofore lucid mind on his awakening at an early hour this morning, accompanied by still greater depression than during yesterday, are regarded as symptoms of the gravest nature and as point to an imminent dissolution.

Dr. Mazzoni expresses the belief that unless the disease takes an unexpected turn there is no rason to apprehend death for two or three days. This statement, however, does not relieve the anxiety of those who know what powerful stimulants are being constantly administered. Some attribute the pontiff's extreme weakness to the severe mental and physical efforts undertaken in receiving visitors, hearing masses, etc.

Never before has the patient's weakness progressed as it did yesterday. For the first time since his illness the pontiff asked to have the shutters almost closed, as the light hurt his eyes, and at the same time, contrary to his custom, he begged to be left as quiet as possible. Another noteworthy symptom of his weakening condition was the docility with which he took medicine and nourishment. Previously, indeed during his whole life, Pope Leo has been against the prescriptions of doctors or anything which had the aspect of being forced upon him.

His feeling of fatigue and indifference was interpreted as a sign that his vitality was fast diminishing. Late last evening nine cardinals were admitted to the sick room, but the pope could not even speak to them, merely giving them his hand to kiss.

Dr. Rossoni was reported to have said in an interview yesterday: "The pope's pulse reaches 90 pulsations and over. Just calculate how many times it has pulsated in 93 years and you understand that in his present condition all his organs and the pulse must end by getting so tired that they will stop forever."

At the American embassy it was stated that no request, official or otherwise, had been received up to yesterday for information regarding the pope's condition. King Edward has instructed the British ambassador, Sir Francis Bertie, to telegraph twice daily the state of the pope.

The Tribuna last night printed a statement that the pope's real ailment was cancer of the liver. Dr. Maxzoni characterizes the statement as a stupid falsehood without an atom of foundation.

Murderers May Be Murdered

Bucharest, July 14.—It is said that the Servian authorities have unearthed a conspiracy to avenge the late King Alexander. A lieutenant of a frontier garrison has been arrested, charged with making threats against Colonel Maschin. A search of the lieutenant's quarters disclosed evidence that 12 officers had formed a league to take vengeance upon the regicides.

Sticks to Old Tricks

Springfield, Ills., July 14.—Adolph Itgen, who was brought here from the Newark, N. J., penitentiary, where he has just served a term for impersonating a pension agent with intent to defraud, was arraigned here on similar charges. He was placed under $1000 bonds to await trial. He has served terms in Ohio, Connecticut and New York for the same offense.

Police Feared a Lynching

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 14.—Eli Brown, a negro coachman, was shot and killed by Terry Griffin, also a negro coachman, in front of the city hall. The murderer was taken to police headquarters surrounded by a guard of six policemen, as the crowd had become excited and it was feared it might possibly attempt lynching.

General Miles' Stunt

Fort Reno, O. T., July 14.—Lieutenant General Miles left Fort Sill at 4 o'clock this morning for a 90-mile ride on horseback to Fort Reno. Relays of fresh horses are arranged for each 10 miles of the distance. General Miles is familiar with every part of the route, having hunted and soldiered in this section for years.

Tragic Death on Towpath

Syracuse, N. Y., July 14.—Thomas Clifford of Buffalo, aged 19, was driving a team of mules on the Erie canal towpath, attached to two boats, when the whiffletree broke, striking him in the abdomen. He died 15 minutes later. Clifford with his sister, was earning his way to New York on a pleasure trip.

TOY PISTOL NUISANCE

Brought Suffering and Death to a Number of Children

Kennebunk, Me., July 14.—Richard Russell, 12 years old, died last night from tetanus, following a slight wound received from a blank cartridge July 4.

Utica, N. Y., July 14.—Fred Inglehart, aged 14, of Bellwood, died last night from tetanus, the result of a Fourth of July wound caused by a toy pistol.

Ithaca, N. Y., July 14.—Harry H. Bishop, 13 years old, died last evening of tetanus, caused by the premature explosion of a toy pistol on July 4.

Harrisburg, July 14.—Four deaths from tetanus of boys ranging in age from 8 to 16 years occurred here within 24 hours, resulting from slight wounds inflicted on July 4 from toy pistols.

Detroit, July 14.—Barrett Snow, aged 12, died last evening from tetanus, which resulted from a wound received in the hand by the premature discharge of a toy pistol on July 4. He suffered great agony and was kept under the influence of chloroform up to the time he died.

Yonkers, N. Y., July 14.—Thomas Fitzgerald, 9 years old, died yesterday from tetanus. On July 4 he was injured in the abdomen by the discharge of a toy pistol.

Inspectors Question Masten

Washington, July 14.—Postmaster General Payne has no developments in the postal investigation to announce. John M. Masten, assistant superintendent of the railway mail service, was examined by the inspectors in the private office of Mr. Bristow. The inspectors wanted information about certain matters that occurred while Masten was acting first assistant postmaster general, at which time he approved the contract with a Binghamton company for time clocks and had occasion to pass on other important matters.

Break In New York Strikes

New York, July 14.—The united board of building trades held a long and stormy meeting last evening. The four unions that accepted the plan of arbitration offered by the Building Trades Employers' association, and which placed their men back at work yesterday, were expelled from the board. The four unions were those of the Mosaic and Encaustic Tile Layers, the Hexagon Labor club of Tile Layers' Helpers, the Electrical Workers and the United Cement masons.

TENT ENDEAVOR COLLAPSED.

Dr. Clark Argues for Union of Young People's Societies---Bishop Joyce Against.

Denver, July 14.—Rev. Dr. Clark, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, has replied to the statement made by Dr. Berry of the Epworth league that "union between the different young people's societies is impossible."

"If Dr. Berry's remarks were correctly reported," said Dr. Clark, "he must have forgotten that such union has already been accomplished to a large degree. The Christian Endeaor society has already united the young people of 27 denominations in this country alone, and more than as many more in foreign countries. Several denominations that have distinct young people's societies of their own also unite in this inter-denominational union movement, adding the inter-denominational name of their own denominational one.

"Dr. Berry says the denominational young people's is as noticeable as the denominational church or Sunday school. So say I, but the denominational Sunday school is not called by some other name to make it distinct from other Sunday schools, nor is it kept out of the fellowship of the Sunday schools.

"Every Christian Endeavor society is a denominational society of the same denomination as the church to which it belongs and just as loyal to the church as any can be. It simply adds broad-minded fellowship to its denominational loyalty. The Christian Endeavor is, in this respect, on exactly the same basis as the inter-denominational Sunday school movement.

"Dr. Berry says the Methodist and Baptist denominations would never consent to have their young people furnished with literature by outside persons. But will not the Methodist church allow its young people to read any other books or papers beside those its own denomination publishes? No one asked or expected Methodist young people to give up their denominational provisions. The Christian Endeavor society does not force its literature on any one, and does not exist to sell its publications.

"The petition started in Denver only asks that the young people of all the churches of all the denominations be allowed to have the freedom for fellowship which most of them now enjoy. Endeavorers refuse to believe that what Dr. Berry says will always be true, and that union with the Epworth league is utterly impossible. Many Epworth leaguers have already spoken heartily in favor of the petition."

Opposed to Clark's Idea

Minneapolis, July 14.—Bishop Isaac W. Joyce, president of the Epworth league, does not believe that the Christian Endeavor suggestion for the amalgamation of the Christian Endeavor, Epworth league and Baptist Young People's union is practicable. Each, he says, stands for its own denomination, the Christian Endeavor society being Congregational. The Epworth league represents all branches of the Methodist church in America.

Tent Endeavor Collapsed

Denver, July 14.—The big tent Endeavor, where the Christian Endeavor convention has been held for the past four days, was blown over late yesterday afternoon, more than 8000 people being in the tent at the time. The injured numbered nearly a score, but fortunately none of them was seriously hurt. The presence of mind of A. H. Ramsey of Chicago, who called to the people to hold up the canvas and poles, undoubtedly prevented many from suffocating. As it was many women fainted and were extricated from the folds of the canvas with much difficulty. A feature that showed the religious nature of the participants was seen when those who were extricated from the canvas folds all gathered around in the open air and held an impromptu praise service.

The final meeting of the convention arranged for this evening at the big tent was abandoned and praise meetings were held in some of the principal churches. At the Central Presbyterian church banners made by Christian Endeavorers in Oriental countries were presented to state unions, showing an increase of 10 percent in the year.

Political Differences Buried

Yokohama, July 14.—The political crisis resulting from the resignation of Premier Katsura has been settled, and the premier has resumed office. Marquis Ito, whom it was thought would be called to succeed Katsura, has closed his connection with the opposition political party and has accepted the presidency of the privy council.

Weather Not Fit For Racing

New York, July 14.—Shamrock III had no opportunity yesterday for the anticipated first test since the increase in her sail area by stepping her taller mast. Both of Lipton's racers were towed to Sandy Hook, where they lay at moorings for the remainder of the day, for part of the time in drizzling rain and wind too light for racing.

Woodworkers Win Strike

Chicago, July 14.—The 2500 woodworkers employed in the bar fixture factories in Chicago who went on strike 10 days ago for a uniform wage of 25 and 28 cents an hour returned to work today, their demands having been acceded to.

ORDERS AND SALES.

National Education Convention Good for Quincy Granite Trade.

Although July is usually a quiet month in the granite business, a trip through the yards at South and West Quincy finds all the firms busy and none of the firms have found it necessary to reduce their gangs. As a rule the orders this year have been for medium-sized work, although some large jobs have been cut.

New orders have been coming in fairly well and it looks as though business would hold good until late in the year. A number of western dealers took advantage of the teachers' excursions to Boston last week, and not a few of them paid a visit to the granite yards in Quincy.

All of them combined business with pleasure, and a number of orders were left with different dealers. One western man bought a car load of odd pieces which will be shipped west and set up in his yard.

Many of the dealers only knew of Quincy by reputation. These were taken for a trip through the quarries, and expressed surprise at the number of quarries and the inexhaustible supply of granite. It was a revelation to them, and cannot fail to work other than benefit to Quincy.

Granite Firm Assigns.

A dispatch from Farmington, Maine, to the Herald reports that the Maine & New Hampshire Granite Company has assigned to Henry P. Cox of Portland and George P. Martin of Auburn. Only two of the creditors have signed off so far. They are George C. Wing and the National Shoe & Leather Bank of Auburn. The assignment is the result of the recent failure of Asa Cushman Shoe Company of Auburn, Mr. Cushman owning nearly all the stock in the quarry. The embarrassment of the company is only temporary, as its assets are greatly in excess of its liabilities, although a statement of its condition has not yet been prepared.

AT CAMP NORFOLK.

Wollaston Boys There This Week With Rev. F. W. Pratt.

A happy party of boys left the Wollaston station Monday morning, under the care of Rev. Frank Pratt for Camp Norfolk. They took the Plymouth boat from Rowe's Wharf, which left at 10 A. M., and arrived at Plymouth at 1. P. M. Upon the arrival of the boat a large barge was in waiting to convey the members to the camp a distance of about eight miles and situated on a slope of the shore of the beautiful College pond in the town of Plymouth.

The site was selected for its retired location, its beautiful scenery, its pure water, its dry soil and its facilities for boating, bathing, fishing and athletic sports.

Camp Norfolk was established by the Norfolk conference of Unitarian churches, and boys will be admitted for the week of July 13-20, and girls for the week of July 20-27. Those boys who took advantage of such an outing were: Frank Bishop, George Brown, Carlton Cummings, Ned Hall, Edmund Taylor, Harry Hooper, Lucien Thayer, Charlie Thompson and the son of Charles H. Johnson of Quincy.

Peabody Tax Rate.

The population of the big towns is often larger than the small cities. Peabody with a population of 12,000 reports a tax rate of $18 per $1000. The assessors' figures are: Resident real estate, $4,602,550; non-resident real estate, $1,478,050; resident personal estate, $1,420,650; non-resident personal estate, $604,300; resident Warren bank shares, $120,000; total valuation, $8,225,550; number of polls, 3,445; amount voted raised by taxation, $136,000; state tax, $7,100; county tax, $8,950.88; total amount raised by taxation, $152,050.88. The net gain in real estate is $134,900 and in personal $77,800.

County Offices.

This year the voters of Norfolk county will be asked to cast their ballots for four county officials, but it is not probable that there will be any hot contests even for county commissioner. The present incumbents who are candidates for reelection are:

Commissioner, — James Hewins of Medfield.

Treasurer, — Charles H. Smith of Dedham.

Register of Deeds,—John H. Burdakin of Dedham.

Register of Probate and Insolvency,—Jonathan Cobb of Dedham.

Gloucester's Big Gain.

The assessors of Gloucester have jumped up the valuation of that city in a remarkable degree, the increase being about $3,500,000 or eighteen per cent., largely on personal property. The valuation is $21,704,355, all the wards except Ward seven contributing to the increase. As a result of the big increase the tax rate will be $15.40 per $1,000, against $17.60 last year.

THANKS FOR MANY.

Work of All in Connection with N. E. A. Convention Appreciated.

To the Editor of the Ledger:

May I make use of your paper to thank publicly those who helped the Teachers' Association entertain the teachers who visited Quincy during the N. E. A. convention the past week? The generosity of Mayor Bryant, members of the School Committee and a number of business men of the city, who guaranteed to be responsible for certain definite sums of money, enabled the committee to assume the expense of admitting free all teachers visiting the tombs of the Presidents. The number of visitors, however, was not large, and the Reception Committee are able to meet the expense from the treasury of the Association without drawing upon the guarantee fund so generously offered.

Thanks are also due to a number of ladies who assisted the committee in the keeping the John Quincy Adams birthplace open in the absence of the custodian.

I desire especially to thank the young men who served as guides. They were Raymond Parlin, Marden Hayward, Carl Hayward, Herbert Arnold and Lawrence Allen. Inasmuch as an editorial in another paper published in the city likens them to decoys drawing unsuspecting flocks to the payment of ten cents at the First church and ringers outside a circus looking for marks, let me say, in justice to them, that they served at my personal request without pay, devoting a considerable part of a very hot week to this most fatiguing kind of work.

They were not, as has been implied, serving the church committee, and they received no portion of the fees paid. Their services were willingly given, and their courtesy and their efforts to give visitors a thoroughly good time were more than once alluded to in enthusiastic terms by those whom they guided about the city. They deserve the hearty thanks of every one who desires Quincy to have a good name with visitors.

GOVERNOR AT CAMP.

Reviews the Cadets, Takes Dinner, and Scores a Bullseye.

Gov. Bates showed himself a good marksman Monday at the camp of the Cadets at Hingham, scoring 17 out of a possible 25 at 200 yards. The excellence of the score is shown from the fact that only eleven Cadets made 19 or better during the day and Gen. Dalton was unable to score.

The Herald reports the shooting as follows: After dinner Gov. Bates and his party paid a visit to the rifle range, where Lieut. Hayes, the battalion inspector of rifle practice, succeeded in inducing some of the guests to try their hands at the target. Gov. Bates readily accepted the invitation, and stepping to the firing point, took a Krag rifle from the hands of Armorer Anderton, had the sights adjusted nicely, levelled it at the target 200 yards away across the pond, and fired. A white disc came up, and a great shout went up from the spectators. His excellency had scored a centre bullseye. He continued to fire, making an inner, and then another bullseye rewarded his efforts. The next shot went wild, but the last one was a good centre. Officially, the score looked like this: 5, 3, 5, 0, 4—17.

The Governor arrived by steam yacht about noon, accompanied by staff. The party was met at the wharf and driven to camp. After dinner in the mess hall came the visit to the rifle range, and at 4 o'clock the Commander in Chief reviewed the corp.

Gov. Bates returned to Boston before the evening parade, which was witnessed by hundreds.

Q. Y. C. LADIES' DAY.

Program for the Event with the Sailing Orders.

The program for ladies day of the Quincy Yacht club is much the same as in recent years which have proved so popular. It includes a review by Commodore Sheppard and sail from 3 to 5.-5.30, lunch on return at the club-house, promenade concert from 5 to 7, and dancing from 7 to 10.30.

High water will be at 3.55, and the sailing orders of Fleet Captain Wilkins are as follows:

At 2.45 o'clock, a preparatory gun will be fired from the flagship, and the number of the course to be sailed displayed from the club float. At 3 o'clock a second gun will be the signal for the fleet to pass in review and sail over the prescribed course:

Course No. 1. Passing in review, leaving flagship on port, thence leaving Jack-knife Ledge buoy on port, Pig Rock beacon on starboard, Black Can buoy off Bumkin island on starboard, to club house, passing between Sheep and Grape islands.

Course No. 2. Passing in review, leaving flagship on starboard, thence leaving Pig Rock beacon on starboard, Black Can buoy No. 1 in Hingham bay on starboard, Jack-knife Ledge buoy on starboard, Red Spar buoy No. 2 off Sheep island on port to club house.

Arrangements will be made to give all guests a sail. The lunch will be served by Whittemore & Girard.

The House committee this year is composed of Frank F. Crane, Arthur W. Harris, Eben W. Sheppard, Herbert W. Robbins, Dexter E. Wadsworth, Joel F. Sheppard, 2nd, Elmer F. Ricker Herbert A. Billings, Ira M. Whittemore, Geo. H. Wilkins, George D. Follett.

That Curse Called Rumor.

Between the Incendiary who fires his neighbor's barn in secret vengeance, and the Worthy who starts a "run" on a Bank with malicious gossip, there is only a technical difference.

Gossip-with-a-purpose has too often been used to stab a character and to wreck fortunes, and it is a great pity the law cannot better reach those who employ such intangible and insidious methods to achieve their ends.

Scarcely any enterprise, or individual, no matter how deserving, is safe from the subtle danger of the Gossip-monger, and human nature so loves a morsel of such "news" that it can be relied upon to "push along" a rumor when once it has been judiciously started.

A vivid illustration of the gross injustice such a rumor can do is seen in the "Force" Food Company's advertisement of this date, wherein a reward of $5,000 is offered for the conviction of the parties who initiated the suggestion that "Force" was drugged.

A further offer of $5,000 for evidence that a single package of the fifty million sold contained anything except Wheat, Barley and Table Salt is, of course, a complete refutation of the rumor, even if the State Supervision of Foods was not in itself ample protection.

People who love fair play in business, as well as in other matters, will read with indignation that it has cost The "Force" Food Company over $50,000 to publish a refutation of this "rumor" in the newspapers of the United States and Canada, and, probably, as much more in loss of sales resulting from the baseless gossip which did the harm.

The absurdity of the rumor is apparent when it is known that the public has consumed fifty million packages of "Force" without a single instance of any ill effect upon anyone of the users.

The "Force" Co. are evidenty suffering the usual penalty for success.

Very Affecting.

His Guess.

"Where were they married?"

"I ain't jest sure," answered the small boy, "'cause they left me home, but I guess it was in the steeple."

HAS A LONG RECORD.

The Alleged Pickpocket Has Served Time in Boston and Elsewhere.

Robert Hilpan the alleged pickpocket arrested in Quincy proves to be a fellow with a long record. After the hearing in court on Monday he was taken to a photographers where his picture was taken. Later Inspector McKay took the picture to police headquarters in Boston where a number of inspectors immediately recognized him.

To the Boston police he is known as Michael Donovan and Michael Dooley He has been arrested in Boston no less than eight times upon some of which he has done time to the house of correction.

In 1898 he was arrested at Hartford, Conn., for robbery and received a sentence of four years. His term expired late in 1902 so that he has not been out of jail a great while.

It is the general impression that last Sunday if he had remained on the electric car instead of jumping off and running he would still be at liberty.

Palaces of Waters.

The principal Palace of Waters is an immense hall which stretches in mysterious grandeur far beneath the city of Constantinople. Its roof is formed of wide spanned arches supported on massive marble columns. These stand some ten feet apart, and their capitals are elaborately wrought.

This marvelous building springs from an expanse of waters which underlies the foundations of the city for miles. Its origin and extent have been shrouded in mystery ever since its discovery about seventy years ago, when some of the arches gave way. All attempts to explore by boat this marvel of construction have been either fatal or fruitless.

Another palace of waters was the stately Palace of Ice which was built in 1739 at the command of Anne, empress of Russia, to honor the nuptials of the Prince Gallitzin and a simple peasant girl. In this novel palace bride and bridegroom were housed, in rooms of which the walls and furniture and bed were constructed wholly of frozen water.

Magnet Finds Needles.

"John, buy a magnet while you're out. Ruth has lost the old one," said the head of a big dressmaking establishment to her errand boy.

"What do you do with magnets here?" a woman who was being fitted asked.

"We find needles with them."

"How do you mean?"

"Every day it naturally happens that my forty-five assistants drop a great many needles on the floor. To stop and look for these needles would take time. They are all left lying, therefore, till the day's end, when a cleaner goes over the room with a magnet, holding it close to the floor. Every lost needle instantly, then, jumps up on the steel and in that way all are recovered in a few minutes. To recover them by any other means would take at least an hour."—Philadelphia Record.

Desert Gems.

In 1889 a hunter in the northwest of New South Wales wounded a kangaroo. The animal went off through the mulga and the salt bush at a pace too fast for the hunter to follow and was soon out of sight. The hunter was a bushman and did not despair. He followed the blood trail, hopeful of a short search and a speedy bag. At one point of the pursuit it may be that the trail grew faint and necessitated a closer inspection. Anyway the hunter stooped and picked up a piece of stone. This he examined. The red spot was not on it. It was in it. It was not blood that he saw; it was opal. Such was the beginning of the White Cliffs opal fields.

King James' Last Straw.

The stodgy faced boy at the last table in the public library reading room is having a struggle most serious. He has covered both sides of a foolscap sheet with a vague smudge over which he still labors. His twisted mouth follows the motion of his creaking pencil. Before him Greene's "Shorter History of the English People" lies open at the year 1688. Of all the two pages only so much is decipherable: "The Abdication of Jams II. The english people had born a grate deel from James 2nd but when at last he gave birth to a son they said this thing must end."—Adele Marie Shaw in World's Work.

Dangerous Smoking.

Natives of Central America are inveterate users of pimento tobacco, which they make from dried pimento berries, or allspice. It invariably gives the smoker a sore throat and often causes cancer of the tongue. The natives of South Africa are affected in a peculiar manner by the smoke from the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly those who use it.

A Martyr to Etiquette.

In the antebellum days a charming Virginia hostess "rather than disturb her company" sat still through the long dinner in silent torture. A hornet got caught under her cape and traveled about searching for an outlet, stinging as it went. When coffee was served in the drawing room she had to "retire." Fever came on, and she was really ill, but the force of etiquette and hospitality combined had made it an occasion to die at one's post.—Good Housekeeping.

FOR TWENTY CENTS.

A Four-Hours Trolley Trip With Variety of Scenery.

Probably the longest trolley ride from Quincy for ten cents is that to Arlington Heights, which can be reached by several routes. It is a very pretty ride offering great variety of travel scenery.

The [illegible] Metropolitan System, every one of them armed a revolver, made a tour of the rict in which they were employed, ened to shoot the workmen unthey stopped labor, and within two had forced 450 men to lay down ols and completely tied up work dam. None of the strikers was sted.

e trouble was caused by a desire nore pay and a shorter working on the part of the Italians, and the e was rendered remarkable be- the white men of other nationali- the negroes, also employed on forced to lay down their of revolvers, which every side, ville to the Sullivan Square terminal. Transfer there without check to any Elevated train and transfer if necessary at a station on the loop for Dudley Street; thence by a Neponset bridge car without check to Neponset, all for five cents; another five cent fare takes one to any part of Quincy or Houghs Neck.

The above round trip is cheap at twenty cents, but could probably be made for fifteen cents by omitting that part between Arlington Centre and Arlington Heights, taking a free transfer at the former station for Sullivan Square car.

Will someone tell of better trip for fifteen or even twenty cents?

McAndrews Arrested.

John and Charles McAndrews, the two witnesses in the Fore River stabbing case who did not appear in court Monday and were defaulted, were arrested in City Square by Officer Murray this morning and locked up. The men said that they had been to New York and did not get back until this morning. They will have to remain in jail until tomorrow morning.

Wedded to Kansas City Platform

Milwaukee, July 14.—W. J. Bryan was interviewed here as to the Cleveland movement. Mr. Bryan said: "It is a comedy as it now stands, but a tragedy if it should succeed." Mr. Bryan declared that all he desired to see was the nomination by the Democratic party of some one who would "stand by the principles enunciated at the Kansas City convention of the Democratic party, the last opportunity the party had to declare the principle on which it stands."

War Hero Passes On

Philadelphia, July 14.—General John Q. Lane of this city died at Atlantic City, N. J. General Lane fought throughout the Civil war at the head of an Ohio regiment. He was wounded a number of times and early in the war was brevetted brigadier general for conspicuous services. On one occasion, with 800 men, he blocked the advance of the Confederate army under General Hood and received credit for saving the Union army of the west.

Annual Affair For Belfast

Belfast, Ire., July 14.—The procession of Orangemen on returning from a demonstration here were attacked by Nationalists and a serious riot ensued. There was an exchange of missiles, many windows were broken and a number of policemen and civilians were injured. Strong reinforcements of police restored order. Similar rioting occurred at Carrick Hill.

Newspapers Demand Full Sentence

Berlin, July 14.—Admiral Von Koester has given notice of an appeal against the revised sentence of 2½ years' incarceration in a fortress imposed on Naval Ensign Hussner for killing Artilleryman Hartman because the latter did not salute the former properly. This action is taken upon the unanimous demand of the newspapers of all parties.

Tramped For Pleasure

New York, July 14.—Tired and dusty with a tramp of nearly 200 miles about half way across the state, Elihu Root, Jr., son of Secretary of War Root, and his classmate, Frederick B. Bastian, reached here last night after two weeks on the road from Clinton, where they finished the year at Hamilton college.

Richmond Disturbances Continue

Richmond, July 14.—There was some disturbance in the way of stone throwing, hooting, etc., in connection with the opening of the Fairmont line in the northeastern part of the city, but it did not amount to much. With this exception the street car strike situation has remained quiet.

Another Murderer Rewarded

Mice That Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament in the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.

Gladstone and the Actor.

An English speaker related this anecdote to an audience of theatrical employees: "Mr. Gladstone, when Mr. Beerbohm Tree was introduced to him, hardly knew upon what topic to converse with him, but at length asked Mr. Tree's opinion as to the politics of the stage, whether it is, as a rule, Liberal or Conservative. 'Well, sir,' said Mr. Tree wickedly, 'I really have not studied the question, but I should think the actors are mostly Conservative.' 'Dear me,' replied Mr. Gladstone, 'I wonder whether there is any exception to that rule?' 'I should say,' replied Mr. Tree, 'the scene shifters are Radicals to a man!'"

Arsenic a Necessity.

Arsenic—that terrible poison, abhorred of all people for ages, the chief ingredient of the philters of antiquity of the middle ages, when they were designed to get rid of a troublesome enemy—arsenic is neither more nor less than a constituent element of the tissues of all living beings, vegetable or animal. Without arsenic no life is possible. This purveyor of death is one of the great supporters of life. Such is the apparant paradox affirmed by Professor Armand Gautier as the result of physiological and clinical observations. —Paris Nature.

SEQUEL OF FOURTH.

An Arrest of One of the Alleged South Quincy Disturbers.

The first arrest as a sequel to the night before the Fourth deviltry at South Quincy was made by Officer Larkin Monday night, when he took into custody Murdock McKay, aged 19 years, employed at the Fore River Works. The complaint against McKay is for assault on Daniel Doran, a special officer on duty at South Quincy that night. The case was continued in court until Saturday for a hearing.

Sir Boyle Roche.

In every account of the Irish parliament Sir Boyle Roche comes in with the persistency of King Charles' head in Mr. Dick's memorial. His "bird" is as well known as the phenix and bids fair to share its immortality.

"Sure, Mr. Speaker," said Sir Boyle on the occasion that has made him famous, "how could a man be in two places at once—unless he were a bird?"

But Sir Boyle is not a mere creation of legend. He was a real living man, a fine, bluff, soldierlike old gentleman, holding some post at the vice regal court, sitting for a government borough and always voting faithfully for the "castle." The debate one night was on sinecures, which Curran had indignantly denounced, and, twitted by one of the opposite side on some personal inconsistency in the matter, he replied hotly:

"Sir, I am the guardian of my own honor."

To which Sir Boyle neatly rejoined:

"Then the gentleman himself has got a very pretty sinecure."—All the Year Round.

Nature's Kindness.

"There's wan lucky thing about work," said Mr. Dolan.

"What's that?" inquired Mr. Rafferty.

"The fact that it's a gred deal easier to l'ave off than it wor to begin. If it worn't fur that beautiful provision in nature we'd all be dead wid industhry."—Washington Star.

Nothing Dangerous About It.

A gentleman complained to his coachman of the grooms' scarcity of attendance at church. He thought they might go at least once in a day.

"Yes, sir," replied the coachman, "that's what I tell 'em. I say: 'Look at me. I go twice every Sunday, and what harm does it do me?'"—Stray Stories.

The Parrot's Nose.

A small child, having been pecked on the finger while trying to stroke a parrot exclaimed: "Oh, dear; oh, dear! I thought it was going to be a nose, and it's a tooth!"

All the Essentials.

"Was she happily married?"

"Very! Why, her trousseau alone cost over $6,000!"—Judge.

Two Sad Men.

First Fisherman—Why do you come to this lonely place to fish?

Second Fisherman (sadly)—Because I like solitude and silence. I am a widower. And you?

First Fisherman—Because I, too, like solitude and silence.

Second Fisherman—Ah, you also are a widower?

First Fisherman (more sadly)—Not yet.

As Rare as Curious.

"My dear," said Mrs. Jorgson, as she closed the book she had been reading, "do you know what is the most curious thing in the world?"

"Of course I do," replied the brutal half of the combination. "The most curious thing in the world is a woman that isn't curious."—Stray Stories.

Got Rid of Him Quickly.

"Well, I got rid of that life insurance agent in short order," savagely remarked Mr. Higgsworthy.

"You didn't insult him, did you?" asked his wife.

"Insult him? No! I gave him my application for a policy, blame him!"—Chicago Tribune.

She Knew It.

"The longer I live," sighed the sage, "and the more I learn the more firmly am I convinced that I know absolutely nothing!"

"I could have told you that twenty-five years ago," said his wife, "but I knew it would be of no use."—London Answers.

Unappreciative Wretch.

"What did your wife say when you came home so late?"

"I really don't know. I can just remember that I woke up three times, and she was still talking."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lynchers Are Murderers

Milwaukee, July 14.—"Every man who participates in the lynching or the burning of a negro is a murderer pure and simple." This opinion was given by Associate Justice Brewer of the supreme court of the United States, who is in the city on private business. "There may be extenuation which might vary the degree of the crime," said he, "but the principal participants in the crime can be held by any court in the land for murder in the same degree as if the crime were committed by an individual."

Russia's Poor Excuse

St. Petersburg, July 14.—According to the newspaper Novikrai, published at Port Arthur, Russia has informed China that she is compelled to exclude foreigners from Manchuria and postpone the opening of Manchurian ports owing to the presence of Englishmen and Americans, who, in disguise, are engaged in espionage. Russia, according to the paper, promises to open the port six years hence, when the country has been tranquilized and settled.

Cattle Embargo Not Necessary

Washington, July 14.—The department of agriculture has received dispatches from steamship interests at Boston and from exporters at Chicago saying that they understood that the English embargo on cattle from Boston had been removed. The department is unable to furnish information on the subject, although it is understood that the United States recently made representations to Great Britain that the embargo might be safely removed.

Cause of Explosion Unknown

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 14.—Three men killed and two seriously hurt, together with three buildings destroyed, is the result of an explosion at the Laflin powder works at Laflin. The force of the explosion shook every house in the town. The explosion occurred in what is called the press. The men killed were in the press mill at the time of the explosion and no one can tell what caused it.

Woman Convicted of Murder

St. Louis, July 14.—The jury has found Mrs. Minnie Cummings, charged with killing her fourth husband, Dennis Cummings, guilty of murder in the second degree. AGAIN IN THE TOILS

Aged Thief Who Has Spent Three Quarters of His Life In Prison

Arlington, Vt., July 14.—Charles R. Young, aged 60 years, who has served an aggregate of 45 years in prison for various offenses, and who is called the most expert horse thief in New England, surrendered to Sheriff Wilson after having been wounded by a volley from the sheriff's posse. Young escaped from jail and for some weeks has been hunted by the officers. He was cornered near a covered bridge here. Another man, supposed to be a horse thief, was with him. Young put up a fight and was wounded in the abdomen by a bullet. He also was hurt by jumping from the vehicle in which he was riding. The man with him escaped. Young took considerable time to consider his position, and then surrendered. He was taken to Rutland for safe keeping. Young is said to have stolen 75 horses, and few of them were ever recovered by their owners.

Not Enough Evidence to Convict

East Brookfield, Mass., July 14.—Forty young men who were charged with disturbing the peace and assaulting an officer during the celebration of the "night before the fourth" at Spencer were discharged by Judge Curtis, who decided that the evidence offered was not sufficient to connect any of the respondents with the crime alleged. The charge against the respondents was that they were membrs of a crowd of 300 or 400 men and boys who roughly used Officer Wood and Deputy Sheriff Draper when ordered to be quiet.

Drunken Man Used a Knife

Augusta, Me., July 14.—William Henry, charged with assault with attempt to murder William C. Casey, admits the stabbing, but claims self-defense. He was held in $1000 bonds. Henry, while intoxicated, attempted to enter Casey's house, demanding liquor. Casey refused him admittance and says Henry stabbed him twice in the left breast. Henry says Casey struck him and he defended himself. Casey will recover.

Vanderbilt the Complainant

Newport, R. I., July 14.—John T. Ford of this city, charged with violation of the automobile speed law in Middleton, was fined $20 and costs, the largest fine ever imposed in an automobile case in this county. Ford was arrested on a warrant sworn out at the instigation of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who narrowly escaped being struck by Ford's automobile while riding in a trap.

Wanted by Lewiston Police

Lewiston, Me., July 14.—A warrant has been sworn out by the Lewiston police against Joseph Boutin, Jr., of this city, who, it is alleged, is implicated in the robbery of the safe at Hannaford & Kimball company's commission house. Boutin had been employed by the company as a driver and clerk. Boutin is supposed to be in Boston.

A Mysterious Disappearance

Holyoke, Mass., July 14.—The police of this city have been asked to institute a search for Seymour E. Gates, 57, who has been missing since last Saturday. Gates is an ex-assessor of the city, a director of the Home National bank and a trustee of the People's Savings bank. His estate is said to be solvent.

Assaulted Mother With Knife

Derby, Conn., July 14.—George Cam, 24 years old, was taken to the Bridgeport jail last night to await the result of injuries which he inflicted on his mother. Cam did not like the way his mother served his dinner and he picked up a large carving knife and hurled it at her. Her condition is critical.

IN STATE OF SIEGE

Latest Row In Hayti Due to the Discovery of Extensive Frauds

Port au Prince, Hayti, July 14.—The conflict between President Nord and the chambers continues. A state of siege has been proclaimed and the national guard have been summoned to arms.

The conflict between the Haytien president and the chambers is apparently the outcome of the discovery some months ago of alleged extensive frauds in the issue of Haytian government securities. The amount involved is about $2,000,000, and it was alleged that securities were fraudulently issued with the complicity of the national bank of Hayti. The president appointed a committee to probe the matter and the minister of finance, who was opposed to the investigation, resigned. A dispatch from Port au Prince June 29 said the situation was disquieting. In an address to the soldiers of the guard, President Nord on that day vigorously denounced the attitude of the chambers and the national bank as being hostile to the government. The troops cheered the president, shouting "Down with the chambers."

Chicago Strikers Outwitted

Chicago, July 14.—Outwitted by the Chicago Terminal Transfer company, which succeeded in shipping several carloads of the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company's freight out of the city without interference from the freight handlers, President Curran of that organization was aroused and is preparing to enlist the Switchmen's union in his effort to plunge the railroads of Chicago into a general strike. Though the threatened strike failed to arrive on schedule time the situation has grown more serious.

Granite Cutters at Work

Barre, Vt., July 14.—All difficulty between the granite cutters and the manufacturers in this city is at an end. When the sheds opened only four regular cutters out of 1500 workmen were missing.

Alleged Slayer of Sister

Bloomington, Ills., July 14.—A sensation was created here by the arrest of Maude Jordine, aged 17, for the murder of her 2-year-old sister. The baby was found hidden in some bushes near the Jordine home, most horribly mutilated. Maude is charged with the crime and other warrants are in preparation which will prove equally sensational. It is alleged Maude had a special interest in the removal of the baby.

Won't Cross the Ocean

Sydney, N. S., July 14.—Captain Howard Blackburn has reached Sydney in his 16-foot dory America. Captain Blackburn has abandoned his proposed trip across the Atlantic on account of his years and having contracted an attack of rheumatism on the voyage from Gloucester. After resting here for a few days he will start for Gloucester. He intends to call at Halifax and other ports along the coast to exhibit his dory.

A Dangerous Quarter

New York, July 14.—John Boland, a driver for the International Packing company, ran foul of a number of Italians in Union street, Brooklyn, which is in the heart of the Italian colony, and was stabbed to death by one of the foreigners. On the same block, earlier in the day, two shooting affrays, in which two Italians were wounded, took place.

Free Trade Crusade Is On

London, July 14.—The Unionist free traders held a meeting last night in a committee room of the house of commons. A Unionist free food league was formally organized and it was announced that a large campaign fund was accumulating. The league will immediately start an educational crusade.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

BOOM AT A STANDSTILL

New Yorkers Do Not Take Much Interest In Parker

SHELTER FOR HILL'S PLANS

5.30, promenade concert dancing from 7 to 10.30. Who

High water will be at 3.55, and the sailing orders of Fleet Captain Wilkins are as follows:

At 2.45 o'clock, a preparatory gun will be fired from the flagship, and the number of the course to be sailed displayed from the club float. At 3 o'clock a second gun will be the signal for the fleet to pass in review and sail over the prescribed course:

Course No. 1. Passing in review, leaving flagship on port, thence leaving Hook-knife Ledge buoy on port, Black beacon on starboard, Black Derby buoy off Bumkin island. Few of the club house [illegible] and the Hudson river counties, have ever seen him.

His present prominence is due to just such a combination of events as made the state go Republican in 1893. In 1897 Platt forced the nomination for chief justice of the court of appeals of a personal friend who had, a short time before, given a decision from the bench in favor of a company in which he (Platt) was interested. Platt's candidate may have been perfectly honest and impartial, but his nomination was regarded with suspicion. The Democrats nominated Judge Parker. During the campaign much was made of the fact that the Republican candidate was Platt's man and he was beaten by more than 60,000 majority. It was not so much of a victory for Parker as a public notice by the voters of the state that Platt must keep his hands off the judiciary.

New York voters do not mind the theft of a few million dollars from the city or state treasury. They will tolerate blackmail and general corruption in the government for a long while, but the moment a political boss reaches out for the judiciary, there is an uprising which gives that boss a lesson. There are two notable illustrations in recent years. In 1893 the Democrats, who were in power in the city and state, nominated for the court of appeals Isaac H. Maynard, who had helped to steal the state senate the previous year. Maynard was overwhelmed at the polls, carried the whole state ticket down with him and the state has gone Republican at every election since except the year of Parker's election.

In 1898, when Roosevelt and Van Wyck were the opposing candidates for governor, Richard Croker refused to permit the renomination of Judge Daly of the supreme court because, as he openly declared, Daly would not take orders from him in the distribution of court patronage. At the time the chances seemed to be strongly in favor of Van Wyck's election, but Roosevelt understood the public feeling, dropped all other issues in the last week of the campaign, and went through the state denouncing Croker's attempt to control the judiciary. It has been the opinion of most politicians ever since that Croker's break saved Roosevelt.

From this it will be seen that Judge Parker's victory in 1897 means not that he is particularly strong with the people, but that his opponent was particularly weak on account of the circumstances attending his nomination.

The Tammany hall leaders, who may control the delegation from this state to the Democratic national convention next year, cherish no illusions about Parker's strength. There was an excellent opportunity to boom him at the recent Tammany Fourth of July celebration, but his name was not greeted by even a faint cheer, although there was wild applause for Bryan and the names of Cleveland and Hill were received with polite enthusiasm.

Tammany's position in the presidential fight will depend largely on the result of the mayoralty election. If it wins, Charles F. Murphy will undoubtedly follow Croker's example and come forward to contest the state leadership with David B. Hill. Since Tammany has been out of power, Hill has had it all his own way in the state, but once in possession of the city hall again, Tammany will try to control the delegation to the national convention. In that event, it does not appear that Parker will have his own state delegation back of him.

If Tammany loses next fall Hill will control the delegation. What will happen in that event affords a wide field for conjecture. A presidential nomination is the ambition of Hill's life. He has been working for it in season and out of season for a dozen years. He has been governor and United States senator, and there is no other political future for him. Parker is his friend, but nobody who knows Hill believes that he will step aside for friendship's sake unless he sees that his own nomination is impossible. He does not see that now, his friends say. He believes, they add, that the Parker boom will die out in the long year ahead before the national convention and that he will be the only prominent eastern candidate by next spring. It is even rumored that Hill launched the Parker boom so early in order to kill it off before he enters the field himself.

However that may be, it is known that Hill's old lieutenants, Elliot Danforth and Frank Campbell, chairman of the Democratic state committee, make light of Parker's candidacy, and are working quietly for their chief.

$5,000. additional will be paid to anyone proving that "Force" does, or ever did, contain any drug or other injurious or unhealthful ingredient, being composed solely of Wheat and Barley, with a seasoning of table salt, steam cooked, flaked, and roasted.

Do us the justice, if you question the absolute purity or healthfulness of "Force," to send a package to the Health Department of your city for analysis.

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—A rumor having reached me that your product, "FORCE," contained injurious ingredients, I took the occasion to analyze it, in the interest of my own family and of some friends who are liberal users of it.

It may interest you to know that I found it consisted exclusively of Whole Wheat, Barley and Salt, and is absolutely free from any injurious elements whatever.

Permit me to express my sincere regret that such a serious and baseless rumor should gain footing with the public.

You are free to use this letter in any way that will help to do your product justice.

Yours truly,
WILBUR L. SCOVILLE.

Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

BOSTON, June 30, 1903.

To Whom It May Concern:

At the invitation of The "FORCE" Food Company, of Buffalo, I have visited their Mills and made a careful examination of the materials from which "FORCE" is prepared, and the processes which convert it into its finished condition.

I found that "FORCE" consists exclusively of what my previous analysis indicated, viz.: Whole Wheat and Barley, with a flavoring of Table Salt, flaked, cooked and sterilized by 300 degrees of heat.

A feature of the manufacture which impressed me considerably was the fact that the process is entirely mechanical, the food being prepared, cooked and boxed by machinery, without ever coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the mill operatives.

I was also gratified to note that an experienced Chemist daily supervised the entire output, and that each day's manufacture was also tested by an expert cook.

Signed, WILBUR L. SCOVILLE,

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—In view of the rumors regarding the alleged adulteration of "FORCE," it has been a satisfaction to me to visit your Mills, investigate, and analyze your product.

You are free to publish this statement made over my signature, that I found "FORCE" to be absolutely pure, consisting solely of Whole Wheat and Barley, flavored with table Salt, and free from any injurious substance whatever.

I examined, in detail, the various steps in the manufacture of your product, such as the steam cooking, the flaking and the roasting, as well as the packing, and find all to be remarkably clean and of absolute healthfulness. The final roasting is done at a temperature above 300° F., which, with the steam cooking, completely sterilizes the product, and the entire process, from the first step to the final sealing of the package, is a mechanical one, the product at no time coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the persons handling the machines or packages.

Very respectfully,
HERBERT M. HILL,
Chemist to the City of Buffalo.

Copy will be mailed free on request.

Refer also to Canadian Government Bulletin 84 on similar subject, pages 6 and 29, for analysis showing that "FORCE" consists solely of the most wholesome and nutritious ingredients.

Discharged Clerk Was Asked to Buy His Job Back

CHARGES AGAINST MASTEN

Being Looked Into by Inspectors—Payne Leaves Washington and Expects Interesting Grand Jury Developments During His Absence

Washington, July 15.—The postoffice inspectors are investigating charges made against John M. Masten, now assistant superintendent of the railway mail service and formerly chief clerk of the first assistant postmaster general's office. A man named Terry, now in the government service, has made an affidavit before the inspectors alleging that Masten, while chief clerk to the first assistant, proposed that Terry pay him $5 down and $8 or $10 a month to secure reinstatement in a former position in Masten's bureau. Terry charges that he was originally a $600 employe in the dead letter office; that he was removed under an order of Masten and put into the city postoffice; that he protested, and finally that Masten suggested his getting an outside person, a close friend of Masten and a former employe of the postal service, to help him. The affidavit alleges that Masten gave Terry assurance that if he paid the amount mentioned he could get back; that he went to Masten's house about the matter but did not pay the money.

Terry charges that subsequently he made an affidavit making these charges and handed it to Masten to present to First Assistant Postmaster General Johnson, and that the affidavit did not reach Johnson. According to the charges Masten subsequently was asked by Terry for the affidavit and refused to return it, and Terry thereupon placed the information before the civil service commission, who took up the matter with the president.

The federal grand jury in this city is considering several important postoffice cases which are expected to prove of widespread interest. Postmaster General Payne says that he expects there will be some important news during his absence on his trip along the coast and that he expects the grand jury will furnish some interesting developments. There is no definite information available as to the identity of the cases, but the jury has been working on them for some time.

An agreement has been reached between the postoffice department and the civil service commission regarding the transfer of employes from other departments to the postoffice department. The new regulation provides that in such transfers it must be shown that the person to be transferred will be employed on work similar to that previously performed by him and his qualifications which will enable him to perform such work better than a person selected from the eligible register of the commission. The pending investigation has disclosed a number of irregular transfers.

The resignation of George A. C. Christiancy, who was given a leave of absence as law clerk of the department shortly after the sensational riding of the assistant attorney general's safe by Mrs. Tyner, has been under discussion at the department. But there will be no final action before Mr. Payne's return to the city. Mr. Payne left here this morning and will be aboard the revenue cutter while it makes its regular cruise, which will extend as far as Boston and possibly up to the Maine coast. He expects to be away most of August.

Roland Molineux's Claim

Albany, July 15.—Attorney General Cunneen has been served with notice of appeal by Roland B. Molineux from the decision of Justice Howard denying him a mandamus to compel the return to him, by the state prison department, of photographs, Bertillion's measurements and other personal records. These records were made in connection with Molineux's incarceration under sentence of death for the murder of Mrs. Kate Adams. He claims that as he was eventually acquitted the state has no right to record him as a criminal.

Alleged Attempt to Bribe Judge

Butte, Mont., July 15.—The disbarment case of A. J. Shores, chief attorney for the Amalgamated Copper company, charged with attempting to bribe Judge Harney with $250,000 in connection with the Minnie Healy mine decision has been reached. An affidavit of C. W. Clark was read, admitting that he offered Judge Harney the money with the approval of Shores and other Amalgamated attorneys. The trial will probably last two weeks.

BLOODSHED FEARED

Law and Order May Be Overridden by Strikers at Clinton, Mass

Clinton, Mass., July 15.—A body of striking stonemasons employed at the Wachusett dam of the Metropolitan water system, every one of them armed with a revolver, made a tour of the district in which they were employed, threatened to shoot the workmen unless they stopped labor, and within two hours had forced 450 men to lay down their tools and completely tied up work on the dam. None of the strikers was arrested.

The trouble was caused by a desire for more pay and a shorter working day, on the part of the Italians, and the strike was rendered remarkable because the white men of other nationalities and the negroes, also employed on the dam, were forced to lay down their tools, at the point of revolvers, which the Italians displayed on every side, though they are not in sympathy with the strikers.

The situation is a serious one and full of infinite possibilities. The chief danger which the people of Clinton have on their minds arises from the large quantity of dynamite stored near the quarry, about a mile distant from the dam, and which is used in excavating.

Should law and order be overridden, all kinds of danger are possible, for the Italians are of the uneducated class, unreasoning and sullen, and under the influence of 32 stonemasons who struck they influenced the other Italians also to lay down their tools, telling them that they would kill them if they did not.

Malden's Little Tempest

Malden, Mass., July 15.—The long extended hearings upon Alderman Devir's charges of padding the payrolls and general inefficiency on the part of officials of the street department were concluded last night by the board of aldermen. Five members of the board will submit a majority report completely exonerating the street department officials. Alderman Devir declares that this is an attempt at whitewashing, and he will submit a minority report which will contain much of the evidence presented at the hearings.

Alleged Illegal Scheme Nipped

Boston, July 15.—Burton P. Gray has been appointed receiver of the New England Home Buyers' association by Judge Lathrop in the supreme court. The association was one of several that were based on a newly adopted scheme from the west, which the supreme court held was illegal. Under the small payment basis a person might buy a house, although there was no assurance of becoming the absolute owner.

Reporters Were Barred

Boston, July 15.—A stir out of the ordinary was produced in the inquiry by a city council committee into the management of the city institutions on Long Island when an inmate charged that employes of the institution had committed immoral acts. The committee went into executive session and decided that charges of this nature should be heard in private. Reporters were therefore excluded.

End of Rufus Young

Rutland, Vt., July 15.—Rufus Young, the notorious horse thief, who was captured on Sunday, died in jail here. A bullet fired by one of the posse was thought to have struck Young, but no such wound has been found on the body. The man was hurt while jumping from a carriage in which he had been riding, and the act reopened an old wound, causing death.

A $100,000 Residence Burned

New London, Conn., July 15.—Rocklawn, one of the finest summer houses in this part of the country, the residence of Mrs. Lindley H. Chapin, was struck by lightning last night and totally destroyed. The house was situated in the town of Waterford, where there is no fire fighting apparatus. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Lightning Kills Bank President

North Grosvenordale, Conn., July 15.—James Elliot, 55 years old, president of the Thompson bank in this town, was struck by lightning and instantly killed while walking toward his home. He was accompanied by his little daughter, who was temporarily stunned by the same stroke of lightning which killed her father.

House Wrecked by Lightning

Nashua, N. H., July 15.—A severe electrical storm visited this city, during which lightning struck in several places, but doing serious damage to but one house, that of John M. Burgess. The family was visiting a neighbor when the house was struck and so escaped injury, but the interior of the dwelling was wrecked.

Licenses For Tonsorial Artists

Pawtucket, R. I., July 15.—Tomorrow will be the last day on which the barbers of Rhode Island may register under the new law. After that date barbers will have to take an examination at a cost of $5, and if they continue to ply their trade without a license they are liable to arrest and a fine.

CROPS REDEEMED

Recent Weather In New England Decidedly Seasonable

Boston, July 15.—A bulletin describing the condition of the New England crops, issued by the New England section of the United States department of agriculture, makes the following statement:

The outlook, at present, for nearly all crops is reasonably bright. There could not have been more favorable weather for both work and growth than that of the week past. Many fields and gardens had become foul during the wet weather, and the time has been most advantageous for hoeing and cultivating. The weather was eminently seasonable, and precisely what was needed for the crops.

Grain of all kinds has done remarkably well during the week. Haying is better than had been anticipated. In the northern sections but little haying has been done, but to the south every advantage has been taken of the ideal hay weather and much has been harvested. The yield so far seems to be much greater than anticipated, and in some localities not far from the average in amount. The quality is considered excellent, although the hay in many cases is short-stalked.

The favorable weather has given a new lease of life to melons, squashes, cucumbers and tomatoes. Beets are growing well, but cabbages are suffering severely from the root maggot. Other vegetables are making good progress, but are generally from one to two weeks late. Potatoes are in all stages of development. A season like the present shows the great importance of using Bordeaux mixture: the expense is trifling and the time spent in applying it is profitably used.

Shamrock's Sails Stretched

New York, July 15.—A sail stretching trial was the purpose of yesterday's spin of the two Shamrocks down along the Jersey coast. Shamrock III had just bent on a new suit of sails with increased area afforded by her tallest mast. For half an hour before the trial was abandoned the boats had a windy thresh against a 15-knot southerly blow that put their lee rails well down and ironed out the wrinkles in the new sails.

An Important Capture

Boston, July 15.—A prosperous looking individual who gives his name as James Congdon was arrested after a fight with an officer and is held for breaking and entering. The police say he is a professional burglar and one of the smartest in the country. In his pockets were found articles of jewelry later identified as having been taken from a house the window of which he had been seen to pry open.

People Want Priests to Remain

Halifax, July 15.—The recent enactments of the French government against religious orders are being felt in St. Pierre, Miq., and the Christian Brothers and the nuns resident there have received orders to leave their establishments by the last of July. The people at St. Pierre, it is stated, will resist the deportation of the religious people, and it is feared that there will be trouble.

Lost Suit Against Typos

Syracuse, N. Y., July 15.—Justice Andrews decided against C. H. Corregan, who sued Typographical union No. 55 for damages. The union expelled him for remarks made against labor leaders. Corregan in 1900 ran for governor on the Socialist ticket. The justice held that he had not exhausted all opportunities for reinstatement or redress within the organization.

Held on Bigamy Charge

New York, July 15.—Harry Bey, 36 years old, a dentist, was committed to jail for 30 days by Magistrate Mayo to await requisition papers from Massachusetts, where there is a warrant for him on a charge of bigamy. Bey married in this city and his wife lives here with her daughter. Bey is alleged to have left his first wife and gone to Boston, where he married Matilda Richey.

Defaulter's Nerve Forsakes Him

Newburgh, N. Y., July 15.—The preliminary examination of Joseph W. Cummin, the defaulting cashier of the Cornwall state bank, has been adjourned because Cummin is in a condition of nervous collapse in the Newburgh jail. It is said the defalcation will reach $55,000.

POPE LEO A PUZZLE.

He Arises and Receives Four Cardinals Standing---He Transacts Business.

Rome, July 15.—Another remarkable rally in Pope Leo's condition occurred yesterday afternoon after a morning in the course of which he suffered spells of delirium and at times his strength sank to the lowest ebb, and now he lies in no worse condition than he was on Monday evening, except for the steady diminution of his strength. Mgr. Bisleti, master of the chamber, visited the sick room just after midnight and on emerging stated that the pontiff's condition was unchanged. A little later the pope fell into a sleep which was fairly tranquil, although the patient's respiration is troublesome.

Yesterday's rally was characteristically opposed to every medical theory and consisted in getting out of bed, on which two hours previously the pope himself had made all preparations for death. Unsatisfied with this exhibition of vitality he transacted private business and received four cardinals, with whom he talked in an animated way. In fact, Pope Leo's record for yesterday, little of which appeared in last night's official bulletin, would be incredible if it were not confirmed by the doctors and cardinals present in the sick chamber.

None seem more perplexed than the doctors themselves. Dr. Lapponi said, frankly: "I cannot imagine how the pope manages to keep alive." According to the physicians the pontiff may die at any moment, even in the midst of one of these extraordinary intervals when his mind and body present a comparatively sound appearance. All those around the patient have long since ceased to hold definite opinions regarding the duration of the pontiff's existence.

The slow but progressive dimunition of the strength of the patient foretells the approaching end of the struggle with death, but the doctors will not venture to predict how near the end is. Constant relapses, they say, such as created alarm early yesterday, are gradually wearing down the pope's constitution, which seems immune from any specific disease. Most persons are inclined to the idea that Pope Leo may go through perhaps two or three repetitions of yesterday's ups and downs till, as Dr. Rossoni puts it, "His pulse stops forever."

Three causes may accelerate the end: viz, continued inability to take nourishment, which was exhibited yesterday, sudden heart failure, or the progression of pleuric disease. The latter is thought the least probable. As day succeeds day it becomes pathologically clear that it is a case of a very old man dying because he has lived his allotted time.

The pope himself yesterday afternoon ordered the four cardinals to be admitted and received them standing, he, who is supposed to be at the point of death, saying: "Please be seated." He recounted the impressive ceremony of the morning when he received the benediction of the Franciscan order. The cardinals informed him of the world-wide prayers for his life. Pope Leo answered that he was much gratified, but that he was ready for his final departure, concluding by saying: "God's will be done."

Even more striking was the pope's interview with his secretary, Mgr. Angeli. Pope Leo sent for him, saying he wished to see certain papers, which the secretary brought; then, after a short explanation, Mgr. Angeli wished to get the pope's decision on the matter, but Pope Leo said: "Well, well, not today. We will do that some other time."

A curious controversy is proceeding between the Vatican medical body, composed of 10 doctors of lesser importance than Dr. Lapponi, and several foreign physicians over the embalming of Pope Leo's body. Several foreigners having offered processes of embalming, each more wonderful than the other, the papal doctors unearthed pontifical bulls giving the right to embalm the pope solely to the Vatican medical body.

Authoress Takes Her Own Life

Cleveland, July 15.—Mrs. Delight Prentiss committed suicide in her apartments at the New Amsterdam by drinking carbolic acid. She had been in poor health for a long time. She was an authoress of some note, being known to the literary world as "Delight Sweetset," her maiden name.

St. Louis, July 15.—Judge Ryan has refused to grant a change of venue to Julius Lehmann, former member of the house of delegates, and his second trial on the charge of perjury in connection with the city lighting boodle deal has been ordered to proceed. A jury has been selected.

A monument to Pasteur has just been unveiled in Paris, chiefly as a testimonial to his discovery of a preventive of anthrax among cattle.

Six architects have been asked to submit competitive plans for the new $70,000 government building at Nashua, N. H., and it is probably plans will soon be wanted for the Quincy building to be located on Washington street.

There are indications that Speaker-to-be Cannon will take a hand in the financial legislation at the next session of Congress. Mr. Cannon is himself a banker and he has indicated that he does not believe that a small coterie of senators should fix the financial policy of the nation.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The new general manager of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad entered the employment of the company less than twenty-five years ago as a common laborer at $1.50 a day. During his rise he has performed nearly every sort of railroad duty except that of locomotive engineer. He has been brakeman, conductor, telegraph operator, train dispatcher, division superintendent and several other things, and has been on the upward move all the time. Thousands of other young men are making their way upward in the service of the railroads of the United States, where opportunities will always continue to exist for the right man to get into the right place no matter how humble the beginning.—Hartford Times.

☞ Governor Bates is a man of many accomplishments, and he is rapidly approaching the point where nothing that he may achieve will surprise the people of the Commonwealth. On Monday, at Hingham, he reviewed the First Corps of Cadets, but before doing so he proved himself worthy to command the militia by qualifying as a marksman with the regulation rifle on the official range. In the South the rule in the training of boys is to teach them to ride, to shoot and to tell the truth. Our Governor has all these qualities and many others, but in what the Southerner deems the essentials he certainly excels.—Lynn Item.

☞ Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says this hot weather is worth a million dollars a day to the Iowa farmers who own cornfields, and the Des Moines Capital thinks that Iowa can afford to sweat. The rest of the country can afford to stand the heat, too, for a million dollars a day for Iowa means a considerable part of that million scattered around the rest of the country.—Haverhill Gazette.

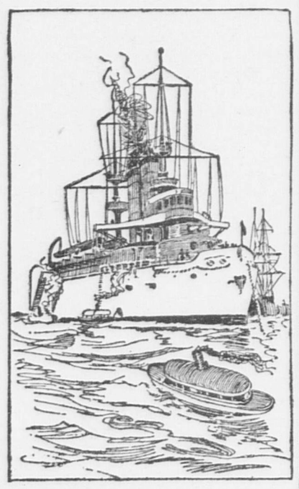

TO SPEED WARSHIPS

The Kearsarge to Race Home Against Time.

On Friday the United States battleship Kearsarge will leave Portsmouth, Eng., for home on a speed trial.

Capt. Hemphill has received instructions to clean the warship's propellers, fill her bunkers with the best coal and go at the highest speed, with natural draft, to Frenchmans bay, Me.

This is said to be the first occasion in time of peace that an American battleship has been subject to such a severe test. It recalls a similar voyage of the battleship Oregon during the war with Spain.

KEARSARGE AT ANCHOR.

Divers have commenced work on cleaning the propellers and 1,500 tons of coal will be put aboard.

By the route that Capt. Hemphill has selected, the Kearsarge must steam 2,852 miles. On her way to Southampton she made 3,245 miles.

Capt. Hemphill commanded the Buffalo, which established the record of 39 days on the run from New York to Manila, and the officers of the Kearsarge are satisfied that with the excellent coal supplied and the vessel's moderately clean bottom; the record for a battleship run will be broken.

It is estimated that 1500 tons of coal will bring the Kearsarge across at 13 1-2 knots an hour within 10 days, provided good weather is encountered.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Extends Welcome to Her Absent Sons and Daughters.

There are in Quincy many natives of New Hampshire and descendants of the old "Granite State," and many will find it difficult to resist the invitation publicly issued by Gov. Bachelder for "Old Home Week," Aug. 15-21. It is addressed to absent sons and daughters of New Hampshire, as follows:

Congratulating the sons and daughters of New Hampshire upon their achievements at home and abroad, and desiring to strengthen the ties that bind them to each other and the state, I do, with the advice and consent of the council and in the name of the state of New Hampshire, invite all former residents to visit the state during old-home week Aug. 15-21, and revive memories of youthful days.

The scenes of youth, although marvelously changed, will interest you. The brambly pastures where, perchance, as a barefoot boy a half century ago you went for the cows at night; the old mill pond where you fished and the streams where you swam; the bench in the old schoolhouse where you sat; the site of the old orchard and the well with its old oaken bucket; the old church on the hill—quaint and of sacred memory; the old cemetery, where hearts will be saddened and tears unbidden flow, all will recall days of yore and inspire nobler thoughts.

We will welcome you with bonfires on the hights, flashing from hill to hill our great joy at your return. Those of us who remain will greet you around the hearthstone with old-time cordiality and we will assemble in more than a hundred towns in true old-home week spirit to give you the glad hand.

Haverhill Valuation.

The city of Haverhill, where Socialism is in control, shows a decrease this year of $43,440 in valuation. The assessors report a valuation for 1903 of $26,573,117. The tax rate however is but $17.60, an increase of forty cents over last year. The increase in polls is 43 making the total 11,157. Haverhill had a population of 27,175 by the census of 1900.

OLDEST MEMBER.

Comrade Leavitt of Paul Revere Post in 84th Year.

Mr. Aaron Leavitt, who was found in an unconscious condition Tuesday morning, near the Quincy Beef Co.'s office on Dimmock street, died that afternoon at the City Hospital where he was taken in the police ambulance, the cause of death being an apopletic shock.

Mr. Leavitt, who was born Oct. 9, 1819, was a native of Scituate, where he was engaged in farming during his early life. Later he worked at the shoemakers' trade which he followed for a number of years.

He was a veteran of the Civil war, serving in the 35th Mass. Infantry from Aug. 5, 1862, until June 9, 1865, when he received an honorable discharge. He was the oldest member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., having joined that organization June 12, 1884. He leaves one son. The funeral will be held Thursday from his home on Canal street.

Q. H. S. Graduates Successful.

The fact that so many of the graduates of the High school are successfully passing the examinations for entrance to colleges and other higher schools speaks volumes for the efficiency of the school and its corps of teachers. The Ledger has already mentioned several who have passed entrance examinations. In addition to those the following might be mentioned:

George Bailey, of the class of '03, has successfully passed the examinations for Harvard, securing 28 points.

Margaret Melcher, '03, has passed the examinations without conditions for entrance to Radcliffe.

George Brown, '04, has passed the preliminary examinations for Harvard.

McAndrews Discharged.

John and Charles McAndrews, the two government witnesses in the Shorter stabbing affray at the Fore River Works, who failed to report at court when the case was called, were arraigned upon a default warrant before Judge Cook this morning. The fellows stated that they were called to New York to meet their brother, who arrived from England and could not get back. They arrived home in Quincy Tuesday morning and learning that warrants were out against them they went to the police and gave themselves up. The court after giving the two men a lecture upon the importance of obeying the orders of the court dismissed the case. The boys had been punished however as they had spent a day and night in jail.

Welcome Shower.

There was a very welcome shower last evening, and the rain did a great amount of good to vegetation. It began to thicken up and look squally during the afternoon and along about 5 o'clock the shower came. It was accompanied by a strong west wind and thunder and lightning and for a few minutes it looked as though a tornado was coming. The thunder was distant and the lightning not very sharp so that the shower proved a blessing and cooled the air. Later in the evening there was another slight shower. The result of these were that this morning the weather proved to be as fine as one could desire.

AN AUDIENCE WITH LEO

Mgr. F. Z. Rooker Describes the Holy Father as He Saw Him.

HIS FACE LIKE GRAVEN MARBLE.

The Bishop of Jaro, Philippine Islands, Who Was In Rome a Few Weeks Ago, Says Leo XIII. Seemed the Same Great Mind Incased In Its Little Frame of Flesh—Incidents of His Memory and Comprehensive Sweep of Intellect.

Mgr. F. Z. Rooker, bishop of Jaro, Philippine Islands, and for eight and a half years secretary of the apostolic delegation at Washington, returned from Rome a few days ago. On June 18 he had a private audience with Leo XIII. and on June 25 saw him at the consistory. He left Rome on June 26 and consequently has a later and more vivid impression of the pope than any American who has recently seen him. Indeed it is probable that Mgr. Rooker was one of the last Americans, if not the very last, to have a private audience with the pope, says the New York World.

"When I arrived at quarantine," said Mgr. Rooker, "I was greatly shocked to hear that the pope was in extremis. I had heard at Paris before I sailed that he was ill, but at that time it seemed no more than an indisposition. The news was particularly sad to me, because I had just come from Rome, where I saw the pope twice, once privately and once at the consistory, and it seemed to me that he was destined to live long."

Mgr. Rooker was called to Rome for instruction in the new duties to which the pope has assigned him. The pope chose Mgr. Rooker and Mgr. Dougherty of Philadelphia as bishops for the Philippines. Mgr. Rooker went to Rome two months ago to study the Philippine question as related to the Roman Catholic church and to fit himself for his new duties. He first saw the pope twenty years ago. When he was appointed secretary to the apostolic delegation, eight and a half years ago, he had several audiences with the pope.

"On June 18," says Mgr. Rooker, "I had my last private audience with the pope. I say private because it was, although Mgr. Dougherty of Philadelphia went in at the same time. We were alone with the holy father.

"Our appointment was for 12 o'clock noon, and we arrived at 11:30. Somebody was with the pope then, and we sat in the anteroom awaiting our time. Shortly before 12 o'clock Mgr. Riggi, prefect of the pontifical ceremonies, went into the room where the pope was sitting. He stayed but a moment. He was followed by Bisleti, the chamberlain. He, too, stayed not longer than thirty seconds. Then the door swung open, and Bisleti beckoned to Dougherty and myself to enter.

"I mention these details because they are necessary to show there was no coaching by these dignitaries and to emphasize the marvelous knowledge of detail the pope has concerning the affairs and people of the church.

"Bisleti stood by the door as we entered. No one else was in the room besides the pope, who was sitting by a table in the center of the room and in a flood of sunlight that fell from one of the great windows. I had not seen him for more than eight years. I observed him closely as we advanced. He had not changed a particle in that time. His face always appeared as if it had been carved out of translucent Carrara marble. It had that look then. His frail body was clothed in his robes of office, and he wore his white cap. He was motionless, apparently in profound meditation. As we reached him he turned his eyes on me. They are marvelous eyes—deep, luminous and full of fire. They seemed to burn under that broad, pale brow.

"The presentations were made. 'Ah, yes,' said the pope; 'Rooker has been our secretary at Washington for the last eight years.' Then, patting the palm of his left hand with the first finger of his right, as if to count, he continued, 'He has served there with Satolli, with Martinelli and with—with'—

"He hesitated a moment. 'With Falconio, too, holy father,' I prompted.

"'Yes, yes,' he said, 'with Falconio too.'

"When he said my name he pronounced it correctly. That amazed me. Eight years before he had given it the Italian pronunciation, the double 'o' and pronouncing it 'Rowker.' He had been corrected then and told that the 'o's were short. He remembered, although to this day Rampolla and the others all call me 'Rowker.'

"That is a little thing, but it shows the character of the mind, the comprehensive sweep of the intellect of this wonderful man. Corrected in so insignificant a thing as the pronunciation of the name of a humble worker in the church, he had remembered for eight years and had spoken the name correctly the first time.

"Greetings over, the pope spoke to Dougherty and myself for fifteen minutes in Italian. He gave us an exhortation on our new duties in the Philippines. He began with the statement that he had sent for both of us so as to save the time. He had the same things to say to us.

"He said we had a very great opportunity to labor for the welfare of the church. He said that to his mind the mission was paramount, in view of the changed conditions in the Philippines. He said the faith that has endured for three hundred years must be preserved, and exhorted us to go with courage to our new field of labor. He said he had especially chosen us for me work, and that as we were both Americans we certainly should go with courage as well as with hope, for he knew our church work would not be hampered in any way and that we could act with perfect liberty. He called attention to the liberal attitude of the American civil government in the Philippines and assured us we should have no impediment.

"The pope then went into a concise analysis of the conditions in the Philippines, especially in regard to the changed conditions since the American occupation. It was the most illuminating address I ever heard. I had been in Rome seven weeks, studying night and day on the Philippine situation. I had access to all the information there was at the Vatican. I had worked some days for twenty hours, and yet in that fifteen minute talk of the pope he condensed every particle of information I had secured and much besides.

"He had it at his fingers' ends, as he has all other matters relating to the church.

"It had been arranged that a party of a dozen Americans should follow us for an audience, and when the pope had finished with us he sent word to admit the party. We stepped to one side. As the people came up the pope had a pleasant word of greeting for each. He blessed such articles as were presented. There were several parish priests, Americans, in the party. He gave them the papal blessing. They asked if they might convey that blessing to their congregations, and he said they might. Then, in order that they might thoroughly understand what he had said, he repeated in Latin the blessing he had previously given to them in Italian.

"While the party was going out there was naturally some little delay, and I stepped over to the side of the pope and said:

"'Holy father, what impresses me more than all else is to find you so little changed in eight and one-half years.'

"He looked up at me and smiled. 'And how do you find me?' he asked.

"'I find you seemingly exactly the same as when I last saw you,' I replied.

"He smiled again, this time a curious, half sad sort of a smile and said, very gravely, 'Ah, well; the years do pass.'

"I had marked him closely during our interview and while he was receiving the party of Americans. I could find no trace of change. He seemed the same great mind incased in its little frame of flesh. He was no thinner, no grayer, no more stooped, and his face had not changed a particle. He displayed considerable physical activity and was earnest and impressive when he talked. His mind was as alert as it was when I first saw him. There was no hesitation for words, no grasping for ideas. He knew what he wanted to say and said it like a master of his subject. I knew he was ninety-three years old. It was marvelous. It almost seemed supernal.

"I saw him again on June 25, the day of the consistory. That was one of the hottest days I have ever known in Rome. When it is hot in Rome it is very, very hot. He went through that long ceremony, lasting more than an hour, without a break or a falter. The chapel was crowded. It was stifling, but the pope fulfilled his offices as calmly and quietly as if he had been in his own chamber, cool and comfortable. I am a big fellow and pretty strong, but when I got out of that chapel I was sick. I could eat no dinner. The pope did not give evidence of the slightest discomfort.

"I was to leave Rome next day, June 26, and before starting I went up to the Vatican to see Centra, the pope's personal attendant.

"Presently Centra came out. This was the day after the consistory, mind you, when the pope had carried on that tremendous ceremony and it had been so hot.

"Centra said, 'Just as I received your card the pope sent for me.'

"'How is he this morning?' I asked.

"'Fine; like himself,' Centra replied enthusiastically. 'He has been a bit depressed for a few days at the thought of the task of the consistory, but this morning, now that that is off his mind, he is feeling better than he has for weeks. It is like old times.'

"That was the last I heard of him directly. When I reached Paris I saw reports in the papers of an indisposition, but had no knowledge of how serious the illness was until I arrived at New York.

"I consider Leo XIII. one of the most marvelous men of the age, church considerations apart. In my capacity as a humble server under his leadership I do him all homage, but considering him from the viewpoint of a layman I think the world does not contain a greater intellect."

Society Men as Harvesters.

Eugene F. Ware, Jr., son of the United States pension commissioner, got together a company of his friends among the young society men of Topeka, Kan., and they left a few nights ago for Hays City to work in the harvest field, says the New York Times. The farmers for whom the party will work have agreed to pay them $4 a day and expenses, including railroad fare, till Aug. 1. Meanwhile their friends are betting on their staying qualities.

Motor Chairs For World's Fair.

The roller chair of Chicago fame will not be found at the St. Louis exposition. In its stead will be a light electric motor chair said to be so simple in its design that it can be easily guided and managed. The most important feature is the guard rail on the sides of the chair. This is connected with the operating mechanism and is so sensitive that the chair is brought to a standstill as soon as the guard rail comes in contact with anything.

INVADING THE THAMES.

Latest Example of American Aggression In England.

MOVE TO REFORM PORT OF LONDON

The American Shipping Combine Wakes Up the British Capital to the Deficiencies of Its River—Long Series of Locks Planned, on Which the Greatest Ships Could Always Float.

Nothing has so startled the English public of late as the "invasion," as they call it, of American capital and enterprise, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. These have certainly taken hold of English business with surprisingly good results. The London underground railways—the "tubes"—and the English trolley system bear evidence of this, and now the invaders are taking charge of the Thames itself, which has hitherto been the very haunt and fastness of precedent and ancient custom. Here red tape and British conservatism have flourished to the detriment of the port.

Take the simple instance of the rights of the watermen. They transport freight up and down the forty miles of river between Gravesend and London. Legions of their barges, steered by one oar, float up and down with the tides. They move slowly, they obstruct navigation, yet no one dares suggest that the barges be towed to hasten matters. The waterman's rights date back into the misty age of fable and are upheld by royal grants innumerable. Therefore wherever Thames water flows the waterman's boat may go without price. The sight of an enormous modern dock being opened to receive a one oared canal boat free of charge while modern liners pay handsomely for the same privilege is a daily scene which illustrates one of their prescriptive rights. No cargo may be moved from dock to wharf or from point to point along the river without calling in a waterman and paying him well. He has other curious mediæval privileges which are innumerable. Yet you cannot abolish the waterman or make him tow his barge.

Then there is the Thames conservancy, which has charge of all matters pertaining to the river. The conservatism of this conservancy is another remarkable thing. All matters under their charge must remain as they have been for the last thousand years.

There is a bar—they call it the Leigh Middle—at the mouth of the river. This obstructs the liners at low tide. It is just a common mud bank that would be ripped out of an American port in two weeks, but the Thames conservancy will not dredge this bar. It has always been there, they say, and it would cost money. Why trouble them with such matters? The only way to get at the conservative conservancy would be by act of parliament, and it would be as hard to abolish them as it would a waterman.

Then over all this are the Elder Brethren of Trinity House. This institution dates back to the reign of King Alfred, and some of the members go back nearly as far. Most of them are over seventy, and some are in the nineties. These take charge of everybody and everything voluntarily and, with that conservatism which is the mark of advanced age, veto all innovations. "Trinity House," says the London Mail, "is an indefensible anomaly, a crusted instance of voluntary management that no other maritime nation would tolerate."

Into this muddle of mud and precedent, then, has come the American invasion. The American shipping combine, representing seven lines, seven score great liners and an enormous tonnage, is now doing business in the American way in London, and the effect is marked. Under the spur of their enterprise the whole system of management of docks and waterways is under serious discussion and for the first time in centuries is about to undergo definite revision.

There are plans for the making of the river below London bridge, forty miles of it, into a series of locks, on which the greatest ships could float at all times. The various authorities of the port are to be combined into one, so that the management of the port may be in the hands of the shipping merchants who are directly interested. The dock companies are to be "expropriated" and combined, the wharf and lighter interests to be included, and one board will manage the whole and the river as well.

If carried out this will make London a shipping port such as the world has not yet seen, and, as the London Times puts it in pithy comment, "they who pay the piper will be able to call the tune." A bill to this effect has actually been introduced into parliament by Gerald Balfour. Whether it goes through or not is a question, but the fact that so much has been done is evidence that the American invasion of the Thames is stirring up the placid waters of precedent, and the result cannot fail to be good. With the dock companies allied instead of jealously competing, with wharfs and lighters under the same management and that of the men who are financially interested in the welfare of the port, the river should surely begin to regain its failing prestige.

The beauty of all this is that the Englishmen themselves are becoming inspired with this spirit and are pushing the reforms that are to help the great port in its new advancement. The American spirit has invaded not only the Thames, but the English merchants and shipowners themselves.

The Frog's Breathing.

The frog's skin is so important as a breathing apparatus that the creature would die at once of suffocation if the pores were closed by a coat of sticky varnish, by dust or in any other way. While we are speaking of his breathing you will notice that his sides do not heave as ours do at each breath we take. A frog has no ribs and cannot inhale and exhale as we do, but is obliged to swallow his air in gulps, and if you will watch this little fellow's throat you will see it continually moving in and out as one gulp follows another. In order to swallow, his mouth must be closed. Just try to swallow with your mouth wide open and you will see what I mean. A frog, then, always breathes through his nose, and if you held his mouth open he would suffocate as surely as though you gave his skin a coat of varnish.—Woman's Home Companion.

Wonders In Nature.

A thousand wonders in nature are lost to the human eye and only revealed to us through the microscope. Think of dividing a spider's web into a thousand strands or counting the arteries and nerves in the wing of a gossamer moth! Yet by the powerful lens of a microscope it is found there are more than 4,000 muscles in a caterpillar. The eye of a drone contains 14,000 mirrors, and the body of every spider is furnished with four little lumps pierced with tiny holes, from each of which issues a single thread, and when a thousand of these from each lump are joined together they form the single line of which the spider spins its web and which we call a spider's thread. Spiders have been seen as small as a grain of sand, and these spin a thread so fine that it takes 4,000 of them put together to equal in size a single human hair.

He Burned Lots of Wood.

A veracious chronicler of the times of Jonathan Edwards gives figures which prove a liberal consumption of fuel in the household of the great theologian. In the winter of 1740-41 the town of Northampton supplied the Edwards parsonage with seventy-five loads of wood. In the next season eighty-two loads were delivered. For the succeeding winter the total was seventy-eight, and a year afterward the astonishing quantity of ninety-five loads was supplied. There was no lack of fire at the Edwards hearth. Is it wonderful, then, that he preached burning sermons?

"I was just thinking, if it's true, Aunt Susan must at least have killed somebody once."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Clever Escape.

Prince Louis Napoleon, afterward Napoleon III., effected his escape from Ham in 1846 in a singular manner. He was imprisoned for his attempts against the French government, made at Boulogne in 1840. At 7 o'clock one morning the prince, having shaved his mustache and thrown a blouse and workingman's trousers over his own clothes and wearing wooden shoes, quietly walked out of the prison, carrying a bookshelf over his shoulder to complete his disguise. He was taken to be one of the painters then at work in the prison and was passed by several persons. A carriage was waiting in the neighborhood, and by 3 o'clock in the afternoon he was at Valenciennes, where he took a train to Brussels, and he arrived in London two days later. Meanwhile in the prison Dr. Conneau, the prince's physician, had placed a dummy in the prince's bed and told the governor that the prince was confined to his room by illness. This satisfied the governor until 7 o'clock in the evening, when he insisted on seeing the prince and discovered the fraud. By this time, of course, the prince was over the frontier. Dr. Conneau got off with three months of prison. Within thirty-one months Prince Napoleon was the first president of a French republic, supplanting King Louis Philippe, who had abdicated.

Bedouins and Water.

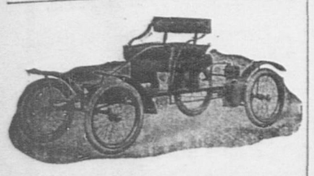

It is not unusual to hear a Bedouin upon reaching a camp where water is offered him refuse it with the remark, "I drank only yesterday." On the Bedouins' long marches across dry countries the size of the water skins is nicely calculated to just outlast the journey, and they rarely allow themselves to break the habit of abstemiousness, as this would be sure to make their next water fast all the harder. They are accustomed from infancy to regard water as a most precious commodity and use it with religious economy. They know every hollow and nook in the mountains where water may be found. Their camels and goats, which they take with them on their marches to supply them with milk and meat, live principally on the scanty herbage and foliage of the thorny mimosa. Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours. No wonder they can subsist where invaders quickly perish.

Rats and Their Food.

The capacity of rats for discovering fresh stores of food is astounding and often leads to those united migratory movements that periodically create alarm and are described as "plagues of rats." These great movements are undoubtedly initiated and "personally conducted" by old and experienced rats, the aldermen of the colony, at once a proof of highly developed intelligence and unselfishness. Rats in large centers of industry, if not present in commercial plague form, do a great deal of good as consumers of garbage that would otherwise become a perilous nuisance. It is also a popular delusion that a rat bite is unusually dangerous from this fact of sewer garbage eating. On the contrary, rats cut as clean as a new lancet.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Ellen Terry's Toe.

When Ellen Terry was a little girl about ten years old she played Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and had to make her appearance through the stage floor on a trapdoor. The trapdoor was shut too soon, and one of the child's feet was caught. She screamed with pain, and Mrs. Charles Kean whispered to her: "Be a brave girl, Nellie. Finish your part, and you shall play Arthur in 'King John.'" The trapdoor by this time was opened, but the child's toe was broken. She, however, pluckily pulled herself together and finished her speech.

THE LYNCHING FEVER

Has Reached as Far North as the Empire State

NEGRO'S LIFE JUST SAVED

Deputy Sheriff Hustled Him Off to Well Built Jail While the Mob Was After Him For Committing Assault on an Eleven-Year-Old Child

Albany, July 15.—The quick wit of a deputy sheriff at Coxsackie prevented the lynching of James Little, a 19-year-old negro hailing from Summerhurst, N. J., who, near New Baltimore, criminally assaulted Emma Cole, aged 11 years, daughter of Joseph Cole, a farmer.

The child, with her 5-year-old sister and Maud Lobdell, aged 12, was picking berries by the roadside in the Long woods between New Baltimore and Coxsackie, a mile from home, when Little accosted them, asking for something to eat. The Lobdell girl went to her home, but her mother was not there, and returning to her companions she found the negro dragging Emma Cole into the woods. She ran to her aid and the negro pulled out a handful of her hair. She then ran away with the little Cole girl screaming for help, while Little dragged his victim into the woods and assaulted her, then escaping after threatening her with death if she moved.

Her father and neighbors met the child coming home, and at once organized a party to scour the woods.

A description of the negro was sent to nearby towns, and an hour later he was captured on the railroad track near Coxsackie. He confessed to the assault and was locked up. In the meanwhile news of the capture reached New Baltimore, and a mob of 150 enraged farmers started for Coxsackie, augmented by a large number of striking moulders and rivetmen, all frankly vowing their intention to lynch the negro.

It was the strikers' "benefit" day in Coxsackie and the town was crowded. Threats of lynching filled the air, and every train added to the crowd.

Deputy Sheriff Vanloon, realizing that the coming of darkness would mean the breaking of the flimsy local lockup and the violent death of his prisoner, smuggled the negro out and took him down the river on the boat to Catskill, where there is a well-built jail.

The Cole child is seriously injured, but may recover. Her father and the neighboring farmers are in a terrible state of excitement, and but for the deputy's quick action would certainly have lynched the negro.

No disturbance has yet ensued at Catskill. There is, however, probability of trouble when the negro is taken to New Baltimore for examination. Precautions are being taken to protect the prisoner, but New Baltimore is in a very ugly temper.

Man's Body Widely Scattered

New York, July 15.—Donati Vaneti, watchman for a Williams bridge contractor, was blown into fragments by an explosion of dynamite last night. He was collecting tools and throwing them into a big tool box. It is supposed there were dynamite sticks in the box and that the concussion of the heavy tools exploded the sticks. Vaneti's head and trunk was thrown 75 feet up the street and his arms and legs were found 100 feet away in different directions.

Manslaughter Charge Not Pressed

Boston, July 15.—Frank McDonald, charged with manslaughter when arrested for causing the death of William H. Worley, aged 60, was only charged with assault and battery in court and Judge Hardy gave him three years. McDonald had been employed at the Forest Hills cemetery and on his discharge he attributed the reason to Worley. The latter was knocked down by McDonald and died four days later.

Oil Takes a Big Tumble

Beaumont, Tex., July 15.—Crude petroleum has taken another big drop in prices, quotations being 37 cents a barrel for Beaumont crude and 25 cents for Sour Lake products, the immense production and lack of storage capacity in the latter field having been the direct causes of the decline. Prices ranged 80 and 69 cents respectively a month ago.

Burning Since June 30

Hanna, Wyo., July 15.—Fifty expert miners have arrived here and others are en route. These men have had years of experience in fighting mine fires and they will make a last effort to extinguish the flames and reach the bodies of the victims of the Union Pacific mine disaster of June 30.

Sanger's Departure Regretted

Washington, July 15.—Assistant Secretary Sanger of the war department, who is to be succeeded in that position by Robert S. Oliver, intends to relinquish his position as soon as possible. President Roosevelt and Secretary Root were very reluctant to part with Colonel Sanger.

Burglar Confesses

Lewiston, Me., July 15.—Joseph Boutin, Jr., charged with burglary at the Hannaford-Kimball store, was arrested last night at his father's house. He had just returned to the city from a trip to Boston. He confessed and told where he had spent the money.

Future of Young Lawyers.

"Young lawyers no longer can create their own opportunities," said a supreme court justice. "All a young lawyer had to do a generation ago was to hang out his shingle and hustle and wait. If he was well equipped for the bar he had a good chance to succeed. About all a young man can do now after he is graduated from the law school is to get in the office of a law firm at a small salary and work up, and if he is successful about the highest goal he can expect to reach is the position of managing clerk, though there is a chance of his being taken into the firm after long years of service.

"The big law firms and lawyers that make a specialty of real estate law, marine law, civil law, criminal law, etc., have revolutionized practice. In the days of Webster and Choate a lawyer was prepared to handle any kind of a case that came up, but now practice is specialized.

"On this account a young lawyer starting alone has little chance of winning fame and fortune unless he is unusually well backed."—New York Press.

Arabian Delicacies.

In a recent Egyptian review may be found some curious extracts from Al Djahez, a celebrated scientist of the tenth century. Speaking of the favorite dishes of the Arabians of that epoch, he says that they considered the flesh of young dogs a great delicacy and also ate grasshoppers and scorpions with much relish. Moreover, they esteemed the flesh of black cats highly, since they maintained that any one who ate it could not be injured either by sorcery or by the evil eye.

Al Djahez also says that he was disappointed when he found that the Arabian tribes of Bassorah did not eat grasshoppers, but, on the other hand, was highly delighted to find his friend, the famous poet Roobah, feasting royally on roast rats and lizards. The Arabians, he says in conclusion, also ate serpents and horses, but took the utmost care only to serve at table horses which had been harnessed, as they did not consider it right to eat those which had been ridden.

Why Men Eat Too Much.

Eating is the greatest of all our standard amusements. A great number of people obviously eat a great deal more than they need, and it is entirely credible that a large proportion of the moderate eaters might thrive as well and look as handsome and work as hard and live as long on a very much restricted diet. But would the joy of life continue unimpaired for them? The native born might raise plenty of children if they could subsist for 11 cents a day, but would they think life was worth living on 11 cents worth of food a day? No, they wouldn't. That is one thing that ails them.—Harper's.

Chairs In the Dark Ages.

The chairs of the dark ages, modeled partly on those of the Romans, were in keeping with the comfortless dwellings in which the people of the north of Europe then passed their lives. The Saxon kings of England are represented as seated on thrones in the form of a box, the ends slightly raised, the bottom advanced to form a sort of footstool. There is always a cushion to add a degree of comfort, and sometimes a back in the form of a crosspiece or remotely resembling the backs of modern chairs.

Courage Begets Courage.

One brave step makes the next one easier. True, the road seems more piled up with obstacles as one goes along; but, then, one is made stronger and more capable with every step, so that relatively we have an easy road always before us. At least if not exactly easy it becomes more interesting—one feels less inclined to grumble.—Cosmopolitan.

Turned Out.

"Yes," replied his son gloomily, "our college turned out the man who was sure to have won the hundred yard dash for us next year just because he didn't pass any of his examinations."—Syracuse Herald.

MILES' LONG RIDE

Demonstrates That He Is Hale and Hearty at Age of Retirement

El Reno, O. T., July 15.—Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles completed a horseback ride yesterday from Fort Sill, I. T., to Fort Reno, a distance of 90 miles, in nine hours and 10 minutes. The first 35 miles was made in record time, the distance being covered in two hours and 25 minutes. Upon completing the trip General Miles showed no signs of fatigue and 40 minutes after his arrival at Fort Reno reviewed the troops stationed at that post. The ride was taken, it is said, to demonstrate that General Miles at the age of retirement is still a sturdy man.

The weather was cool at the start, but became intensely hot. The ride was made in 10-mile relays, soldiers stationed along the line furnishing fresh horses. Lunch consumed 20 minutes and it is estimated that 30 minutes were spent in changing mounts and in other small delays. This made the actual time spent in the saddle eight hours.

A salute was fired as General Miles entered Fort Reno at 2:20 p. m. He showed no signs of weariness as he dismounted and said: "I enjoyed every moment of the trip." Immediately after reviewing the troops at Fort Reno, General Miles drove to El Reno and caught a train for Fort Riley, Kas.

Samoans Appear Satisfied

Washington, July 15.—Commander Underwood, commandant of the naval station at Tutuila, reports to the navy department that he has just concluded a visit of inspection of the towns in the western district of Tutuila. He found the health and sanitary conditions of the various places good and as a rule the roads fair. The natives generally seemed satisfied with the operations of the government. A Mormon settlement was found at Faleal. The elders have cleared 23 acres of land and are teaching the natives to read and write and to plant and cultivate.

Satisfactory Appointments

Washington, July 15.—Augusto F. Pulido, the Venezuelan charge of affairs, called at the state department to formally announce the appointment of General Hernandez as Venezuelan minister at Washington and of himself as first secretary of legation. Secretary Hay took occasion to express his personal gratification at the appointment of the veteran here and Mr. Pulido's promotion from second secretary to be secretary of legation. General Hernandez is expected to arrive here next week.

Cordial Relations Strengthened

Portsmouth, Eng., July 15.—With the reception given on board Rear Admiral Cotton's flagship Kearsarge the official visit of the American squadron to England terminated. "Our reception in England has been most cordial and enthusiastic," said Cotton. "I have no doubt that the result of the visit of the American squadron will prove beneficial in the extreme, and that it will tend to strengthen the cordial relations which have long existed between the two countries."

No Yielding In Textile Strike

Philadelphia, July 15.—Both manufacturers and employes have emphasized their determination not to give way in the textile strike. Over 50 mill owners in the ingrain carpet trade met and voted not to grant any concessions to the strikers, while the executive committee of the Central Textile union adopted resolutions aimed against employes who have given up the fight for 55 hours and returned to work and also voted to continue the strike all summer, if necessary.

A Harlem River Mystery

New York, July 15.—In passing under an L road bridge over the Harlem river a tug sent to the surface for a second a woman's leg, covered with a black silk stocking and a patent leather shoe. It dropped back again and those who saw it believed it was attached to a body which itself was weighted, causing the leg to fall into the water again. Police dredged for the body but could not find it.

Revocation of Crimes Act

Dublin, July 15.—A proclamation is published in the Dublin Gazette revoking the summary jurisdiction powers of the magistrates in these districts of Ireland which still remain under the crimes act. The revoking of the crimes act, coming on the eve of King Edward's visit to Ireland, gives great satisfaction. The king is certain to have a most enthusiastic welcome.

Lieutenant McCarthy Cashiered

Washington, July 15.—The president has approved the action of the court martial in the case of Second Lieutenant McCarthy, Nineteenth infantry, recently stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. He was convicted of duplicating his pay accounts and sentenced to be dismissed from the army.

New Manhattan Bridge

New York, July 15.—The board of aldermen defeated the appropriation of $6,533,000 for the new Manhattan bridge by 41 noes to 22 ayes. It needed only 40 negative votes to defeat the appropriation. The proposed bridge was to connect Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Science and Affection All That Keep Pope Leo Alive

HIS ORGANISM IS PERFECT

But Motor Force Is Insufficient For Complex Functions Essential to Life—Pontiff Sadly Wrecked, but Has Not Yet Completely Given Up

Rome, July 16.—Dr. Mazzoni, in reply to the question "Can the pope recover?" gave The Associated Press correspondent the following signed statement:

"At the present moment the disease of his holiness has lost its character of absolute gravity which it had at its acute period. It might be considered to have entered the period of a possible solution. This might occur in a man of strong fibre and young, but it is impossible to entertain such a hope in the case of a man in his 94th year. With him the physical energy absolutely indispensable for recovery is lacking. Pope Leo's organism is perfect, and as such maintains itself after 93 years of never interrupted work, but his motor force is no longer sufficient for the complex functions essential to life. In other words, the 93 years of Pope Leo XIII bring him into that category of extraordinary longevity when life is destined to flicker out independent of the action of any pathological complication. The only service that science and affection can render is that of struggling to have this precious existence preserved to us as long as possible."

The pope passed a very restless night and his condition this morning is considerably worse.

One of the doctors in attendance on the pontiff gave The Associated Press correspondent a graphic, but horrible, word picture of Pope Leo as he now appears. That smile which lighted up the pontiff's face, even in extreme agony, has disappeared, probably forever. The skin is drawn tightly over the bony framework of his face, leaving the once bright eyes staring dimly from the deeply sunken sockets. A grayish pallor overspreads his countenance, but the most noticeable ravage wrought by his present disease is the dropping of the lower jaw, which has made the pope's features take on the fixed rigidity of death.

Throughout the day the precincts of the Vatican were comparatively quiet and the immediate vicinity of the sick room showed none of the evidences of agitation and alarm so apparent Tuesday. In marked contrast to previous days the patient was kept in almost absolute seclusion, only one person besides the physician in immediate attendance gaining admission. This one was Mgr. Pifferi, the pope's confessor. Others came to the ante-chamber, including three cardinals, but they did not press for admission to the sickroom, being aware of the doctors' earnest wish to afford the patient every opportunity of avoiding exertion and mental effort.

During the day the pope took a slight amount of nourishment. Through the morning he was quite restless, shifting uneasily on his bed and complaining of being unable to secure an easy position. Later he became drowsy and during the afternoon had some sleep. The assembling of the doctors at 5:30, two hours before the usual time, was not due to any alarming turn in the pope's condition, but through the wish to thoroughly go over every detail of the situation. The moderate tone of the bulletin which followed the visit gave an assurance that the patient's condition was practically unchanged.

Last evening the pope complained of a slight uneasiness at the chest, but that he had not yet completely given up hope was indicated by his remark that he expected the oppression of his chest to pass off in a few days. During the day the pope drank a few drops of the healing waters from the shrine at Lourdes, several bottles of which were sent to the Vatican by the French bishop in whose see Lourdes is situated. A local paper gravely announces that from the moment Pope Leo swallowed the water an improvement in his condition became apparent.

The doctors are well nigh exhausted with their unceasing care. Dr. Lapponi in particular spends his entire nights as well as days in the sickroom. An important case now before the British consular court in Rome requires the presence of Dr. Lapponi, but this is impossible because of the pope's condition and also because the Vatican affords extra territorial privileges to all within its precincts.

The total number of dispatches inquiring about the pope's health received at the Vatican yesterday reached 26,000, including some lengthy cables from half round the world. The total cost of the telegrams is estimated at $36,000. This enormous deluge taxes to the utmost the resources of the Vatican administration. A large force of priests and seminarians is temporarily aiding the officials in making responses, which bear the signature of Cardinal Rampolla.

Elevator Fell Eight Stories

Philadelphia, July 16.—The parting of a cable caused a large elevator in the new Hotel Stratford, in course of construction, to fall from the eighth to the first floor. Upon the lift at the time it took its flight were five workmen and a heavy load of building material. All the men were seriously injured.

BRIDGEPORT STRIKE OFF

Trolleymen Lose Their Two Months' Fight Against Railway

Bridgeport, Conn., July 16.—President Wood of the Bridgeport Trolleymen's union last night officially declared off the strike of the employes of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company which was inaugurated two months ago. The strikers are given the privilege, by the union, of applying individually for work at the offices of the company.

President Wood announces that the 45 men who voted to return to work last Saturday, and who did so, are expelled from the union with a $50 fine. He further states that measures will be taken which will prevent their employment anywhere in this country where there is a labor union in force.

The trolley company has refused to take back a number of strikers, and it is hardly probable that Wood and the men who have stood by him will become applicants for their old positions.

Sheriff Hawley has compiled his expense account in connection with the strike in this city. In the aggregate it amounts to about $7600. The Sunday riot, and the precautions which were taken immediately after it to preserve peace, cost the city $3974.48. The balance of the $7000 was for constables who were kept on duty here after quiet had been restored. This latter amount will be paid by the state, but the city will be obliged to stand for the $3974.48.

Coroner Censures Selectmen

New Haven, July 16.—As a result of his investigation of the death of John Pershinski, a Branford man who died at the Middletown insane asylum, Coroner Mix censures the selectmen of Branford. While demented Pershinski hurled himself against the walls of the Branford lockup, inflicting injuries upon himself, and later was found almost naked, with blood flowing from his mouth and ears. Examination at the insane asylum showed that his body was covered with bruises and that four ribs were broken. The coroner said that while facilities for handling insane patients were possibly limited in Branford, there were elements of negligence in the case that called for rigorous censure of the selectmen.

Blaine's Widow Is Dead

Augusta, Me., July 16.—Mrs. Harriet S., widow of James G. Blaine, died at the family homestead here. She came to Augusta from Washington a short time ago in a somewhat enfeebled condition, due to a general breaking down of the system. Mrs. Blaine was born in 1830 in Augusta, whither her parents had removed from Ipswich, Mass. Her father, Jacob Stanwood, was of the purest Puritan lineage, and of extreme pride of ancestry. She was married at Pittsburg in 1851. Mrs. Blaine had been the mother of seven children.

Many Drunks Gathered In

Boston, July 16.—Under the ruling of Chairman Emmons of the Boston police commission that a man who cannot take care of himself and whose breath smells of liquor may be considered intoxicated, 3081 arrests have been made in the past six weeks. By the figures it appears that the number of arrests for drunkenness this year, for the six weeks from June 1 to date, average more than 500 a week, which is said to be the largest in the history of the city.

How Vermont Crops Stand

Chester, Vt., July 16.—Since the late rains grass has grown more than one-half and the outlook is good for an average crop of hay all through this section of the state. Corn and potato fields have improved in appearance, but are at least two weeks backward compared with last year. The apple crop is light in the southern part of the state, but in the north there is an outlook for a good supply. The raspberry and blackberry crop will be a large one.

Many Unsecured Creditors

Boston, July 16.—With debts estimated at $111,079, Ezra K. Pratt of Malden has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He has real estate valued at $125,700, but this is encumbered with mortgages amounting to $97,400. There are more than 100 creditors with claims unsecured.

Small Girl—What do you think about men and boys wearing girls' shirtwaists, anyway?

Small Boy (in his sister's bloomers and shirtwaist, savagely)—I don't like it! It was bad enough when we boys had to wear out our big brothers' old clothes, but I kick at having to wear out my sister's old things, too!

WALL STREET DEMORALIZED.

Decline in Stocks More Violent Than Those of Previous Days.

New York, July 16.—Demoralization ruled in the stock market yesterday, making it, up to the time of the closing rally, one of the most disastrous days since the memorable panic of May 9, 1901. New low records for the year were made in the trading on a heavy volume of business. Some of the declines in high grade investment stocks for the day ran all the way from 4 to 20 points.

In the early dealings there was a rush to sell. Prices dropped sharply, and in some cases precipitately, with active stocks down 2 and 3 points each, and with an extreme break of over 50 points reported in St. Louis and San Francisco. The decline was especially noteworthy, however, in such stocks as St. Paul, New York Central, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, United States Steel and General Electric.

In the last half hour covering of shorts and investments by bargain hunters were responsible for partial recoveries in many issues and complete recoveries in a few, like St. Paul, which closed fractionally above Tuesday's final quotations.

Traders were naturally disposed to view the selling of high grade investment issues with considerable uneasiness, on the theory that it represented forced selling by important interests who were compelled to part with their securities to raise funds to protect speculative accounts elsewhere in the market. Several important market interests were sellers of stocks that had been carried on borrowed money for a long period, the sales being induced by the attitude of the banks, which decided to call in loans 'to strengthen their position preparatory to the expected heavy calls on their resources for crop-movement purposes.

A distinctly unfavorable impression was created by the announcement of an issue of short time notes by the Union Pacific to the amount of $10,000,000; also smaller loans by several other railroad companies. Following the borrowing by the Burlington, the action of the Union Pacific and other roads in going into the market for money naturally afforded ground for uneasiness in speculative circles, particularly as the companies are forced to pay stiff rates for the accommodations. It is believed that the Union Pacific announcement was an important factor in the demoralization, and that the new demands of various railroads for money were responsible for the liquidation of many stock market accounts at serious losses.

The United States Steel issues, which were under pressure the greater part of the day, made new low records. Buying of these shares on the decline was said to be for the account of interests identified with the property, but the support was not sufficient to offset the sales as an influence on values.

To Wall street the unpleasant feature of the situation is that corporate borrowing seems to be becoming greater than less. While this feature persists, it is pointed out, the street cannot hope for easy money.

Twenty-Fifth Week of Strike

Pawtucket, R. I., July 16.—By a unanimous vote the lace operatives on strike at the plant of the American Textile company decided to continue the strike indefinitely. This is the 25th week of the strike and 33 out of the 38 operatives who went out are still receiving the strike allowance.

Cattle Restrictions Revoked

Boston, July 16.—At its meeting in the state house the executive council adopted an order from Dr. Peters, chief of the cattle bureau, raising the cattle embargo in this state. The Brighton market will be reopened and animals moved as formerly within the limits of the state.

Anxious to Catch Firebug

Rockland, Me., July 16.—The city government and citizens of Rockland have offered a reward of $400 for detention of the firebug who has been operating in the city. This sum has been supplemented by a reward of $500 offered by the National Underwriters' association.

Five Thousand New Citizens a Year

Boston, July 16.—The new city directory was issued today, giving the names of 262,390 persons, an increase of 5382 over last year. The total number of changes made to bring last year's book up to date was 195,984.

Dilinquent Cops Punished

Lewiston, Me., July 16.—Officer Houle of the police department was suspended last night and Officer Roche fined five days' pay for withholding information in the Boutin robbery case.

Bridge Advocates Try Again

New York, July 16.—The board of estimate and apportionment has unanimously reappropriated $6,532,000 for the usage of Manhattan bridge (No. 3 over the East river, between Manhattan and Brooklyn). This is the appropriation previously defeated by the board of aldermen. This action sends the proposition back to the aldermen. If an adverse vote is not had within six weeks the bonds may be issued under the section of the charter providing for such a contingency.

Cattle Brought Fancy Prices

Utica, N. Y., July 16.—At a sale of Holstein-Friesian cattle at the Brothertown stock farm Sadie Vale Concordia, champion of the world, was sold for $2200, the highest price ever paid for a Holstein-Friesian cow. L. J. Fitzgarald was the purchaser. He also purchased Sadie Vale Concordia's Paul de Kol for $2300, the highest price ever paid for a Holstein-Friesian bull.

Jury Quickly Convicted Boodler

St. Louis, July 16.—The jury in the case of Julius Lehmann, former member of the house of delegates, charged with bribery in connection with the passage of the city lighting bill, after being out seven minutes returned a verdict of guilty. His punishment was fixed at seven years in the penitentiary, the longest term yet inflicted in any of the boodle cases.

Kountz Sent to a Penitentiary

Pittsburg, July 16.—Dr. Walter P. Kountz, convicted of killing John E. Walsh, a contractor, while the latter was walking on the street with Mrs. Kountz, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

"Breakbone Fever" In Hawaii

Honolulu, July 16.—An epidemic of dengue appears to be sweeping over the islands. More than 1500 cases have been reported, but there have been 10 deaths directly attributable to the disease.

Good Afternoon

Cities and towns about Quincy are taking action regulating the speed of automobiles through the public streets. In Quincy, however, nothing is being done, and some automobile operators seem to think they own the earth. As for speed some of them go through City Square at a very high rate of speed, and pedestrians have to have their wits about them to keep from being run down. If the electric cars should go as fast as some of these automobiles, people would hold up their hands in horror, and the City Council would be flooded with petitions to limit the speed of the cars. When someone gets run over by an automobile the City Council will probably wake up and do something. Until then, pedestrians must keep a sharp lookout for speedy automobilists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Since the inauguration of the pending hot spell reports indicate that the rusher or rumper finds it necessary to take more than a half holiday each week for rest. It is neither a good thing to get overheated nor to try how much more than your butty you can turn out. A fair boss looks for a fair day's work, and although he does not kick against rumping in a public way, privately he has little respect for a man so selfish as to hurt himself in trying to get the best of others.—Granite Cutters Journal.

☞An Illinois minister clafms that the play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" should be abolished, now that the north and south are reunited, and he would have the novel put on a top shelf so high up that it can never be taken down. Very well; but who is going to accomplish the abolition? From the beginning there has always been intense antagonism to both book and play, but people would read the one and would go to see the other. From every point of view much can be said in criticism of both, and yet there is something in both that appeals with certainty to a pronounced element in human nature. The great fascination of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" seems to us inexplicable, but there it is, and talk of abolishing it is rather useless.—New Bedford Standard.

Over 5,000 Tons.

Returns from the shipment of granite from Quincy by the three railroad terminals during the month of June show a total of 10,229,374 pounds or a little less than the previous month but about the same as June, 1902. June is usually one of the quietest months of the year, so that it can be seen that the business is holding its own. The amount shipped from each terminal in June was as follows: West Quincy, 4,193,070 pounds; South Quincy 4,097,624 pounds; Quarry railroad, 1,938,680 pounds.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. CONTRACT AWARDED

For the New Norfolk County Registry Building at Dedham.

The Norfolk County Commissioners at their meeting on Tuesday awarded the contract for the new Registry building for the county to McNeil Bros. of Boston, at $256,506.00, to be completed in sixteen months from date.

The commissioners, especially Marshal P. Wright of Quincy, were anxious that the building should be of granite, and expected that this would be possible when the limit of the appropriation was raised to $280,000 by the Legislature, but the increase in materials and wages have been more rapid, and it was impossible. It was necessary to cut out the granite and also much of the marble inside.

The foundation will be of Quincy granite, with Deer Island stock for the cut work. The superstructure will be Indiana buff limestone.

It will be a building that will be a credit to Norfolk county when completed.

In June of this year the county paid off $15,000 of its debt leaving only $15,000 to pay besides the new loan, which will be in $20,000 instalments beginning in 1905. The county is in an excellent financial condition, and no money is squandered under the present county commissioners.

TODAY'S COURT.

Michael Shea was arraigned for selling mortgaged property at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday.

CLEVER CAPTAIN.

One Company of Cadets Holds Three at Bay.

Were Kept Posted by Signals.

Boys Also Employed to Give Information.

Some visitors to the camp of the Cadets at Hingham on Wednesday were surprised to find it almost deserted. At 8 A. M. camp was struck and almost the entire squad started on a march, through Hingham toward Norwell.

Camp was pitched near the Jordan farm for the night with the little campaign tents. Details were sent for wood and water, and others dug trenches around the tents.

After dinner Co. D under Capt. Rollins marched out to establish and hold a fort. Forty minutes later Cos. A and B set out in pursuit under command of Maj. Talbot, and ten minutes later Co. C took another route under Capt. Blanchard.

The plan of attack was for the larger body of attackers to take a round-about route through the woods, thereby flanking the right of the enemy's position. Co. C was to march straight to the attack on the left flank of the enemy and while this attack was being repulsed the larger body of besiegers intended to turn the other flank, thereby getting them in a position whence they could be attacked from all sides.

Anticipating just such an attack, Capt. Rollins had divided his company into three squads, two of 20 men each, guarding the flanks, while the centre, where he felt there would not be a heavy attack because of the open country, was protected by only 12 men.

Capt. Rollins held the fort bravely but finally surrendered to Major Talbot with a twinkle in his eye and himself gave its explanation. He had left camp mysteriously during the morning and in that time managed to hire three young farmer boys, for 25 cents each, to act as auxiliary scouts for him. In addition he stationed a man in an upper window of a farmhouse that commanded the approaches, who signalled every movement of the enemy to him.

This morning the corps came back to Hingham and with the ball games for the championship and other features, they will be anything but quiet.

Smiths in the lead.

The new Boston directory contains 262,390 names, an increase of 5384 in a year. The Smiths continue to lead as will be seen: There are 17 pages of Smiths, 12 pages of Sullivans, 11 of Brown, nine of Johnson, eight of Clark, eight of O'Brien, seven of McCarthy, six of McDonald, seven of Davis, seven of White, six of Taylor, six of Jones, five of Mahoney, and four of Fitzgerald. The name John Sullivan occurs 103 times and of Daniel Sullivans there are 73. There are 72 pages of names that begin with "Mc".

There are no Theodore Roosevelts in the Boston directory nor can the names of Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses Grant, Thomas Jefferson or Grover Cleveland be found. On the other hand there are four George Washington, 10 John Adamses, four John Quincy Adamses, two James Madisons, one James Munroe and three Andrew Jacksons.

The Hartford Times notes that there are more Johnsons than Smiths in the new Chicago directory. This does not prove that the Smith family is dying out in the United States, but it does show that the Johnsons are all on hand when the directory man comes around to make up his annual list. There was once a president of the United States named Johnson, but no member of the Smith family has yet obtained a four years' tenancy of the White House at Washington.

But the wife of John Adams, the first Vice President and the second President, was a Smith.

$5,000. Reward for the Arrest and Conviction of-—the parties who originated and circulated, the rumor that "Force" Food contained drugs or other injurious ingredients.

$5,000. additional will be paid to anyone proving that "Force" does, or ever did, contain any drug or other injurious or unhealthful ingredient, being composed solely of Wheat and Barley, with a seasoning of table salt, steam cooked, flaked, and roasted.

Do us the justice, if you question the absolute purity or healthfulness of "Force," to send a package to the Health Department of your city for analysis.

The "FORCE" Food Company. BUFFALO, N. Y.

Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

BOSTON, June 25, 1903.

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—A rumor having reached me that your product, "FORCE," contained injurious ingredients, I took the occasion to analyze it, in the interest of my own family and of some friends who are liberal users of it.

It may interest you to know that I found it consisted exclusively of Whole Wheat, Barley and Salt, and is absolutely free from any injurious elements whatever.

Permit me to express my sincere regret that such a serious and baseless rumor should gain footing with the public.

You are free to use this letter in any way that will help to do your product justice.

Yours truly,
WILBUR L. SCOVILLE.

Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

BOSTON, June 30, 1903.

To Whom It May Concern:

At the invitation of The "FORCE" Food Company, of Buffalo, I have visited their Mills and made a careful examination of the materials from which "FORCE" is prepared, and the processes which convert it into its finished condition.

I found that "FORCE" consists exclusively of what my previous analysis indicated, viz.: Whole Wheat and Barley, with a flavoring of Table Salt, flaked, cooked and sterilized by 300 degrees of heat.

A feature of the manufacture which impressed me considerably was the fact that the process is entirely mechanical, the food being prepared, cooked and boxed by machinery, without ever coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the mill operatives.

I was also gratified to note that an experienced Chemist daily supervised the entire output, and that each day's manufacture was also tested by an expert cook.

Signed, WILBUR L. SCOVILLE,
Professor of Theory and Practice of Chemistry.

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—In view of the rumors regarding the alleged adulteration of "FORCE," it has been a satisfaction to me to visit your Mills, investigate, and analyze your product.

You are free to publish this statement made over my signature, that I found "FORCE" to be absolutely pure, consisting solely of Whole Wheat and Barley, flavored with table Salt, and free from any injurious substance whatever.

I examined, in detail, the various steps in the manufacture of your product, such as the steam cooking, the flaking and the roasting, as well as the packing, and find all to be remarkably clean and of absolute healthfulness. The final roasting is done at a temperature above 300° F., which, with the steam cooking, completely sterilizes the product, and the entire process, from the first step to the final sealing of the package, is a mechanical one, the product at no time coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the persons handling the machines or packages.

Very respectfully,
HERBERT M. HILL,
Chemist to the City of Buffalo.

See page 148 of "Cereal Breakfast Foods," Bulletin No. 84, of the Maine Experiment Station, a State Institution, which has analyzed "FORCE" with other foods, in the public interests.

Copy will be mailed free on request.

Refer also to Canadian Government Bulletin 84 on similar subject, pages 6 and 29, for analysis showing that "FORCE" consists solely of the most wholesome and nutritious ingredients.

Any inquiries concerning this subject will be cheerfully answered by

ROUND OF PLEASURE

For the Visiting Granite Manufacturers Next Week.

Word has been received from the Barre Granite Manufacturers Association that they will be in Quincy as guests of the Quincy Association on Friday and Saturday July 24 and 25.

The Committee of the Quincy Association held a meeting Wednesday evening, at which plans for the entertainment of the visitors were discussed.

All of the details of the plans are not completed, but from the outline, if the visitors do not have a good time, it will be their own fault. As now planned Friday will be spent in a visit to the quarries and the Fore River Ship Company plant.

Friday evening there will be a joint meeting of the two associations at Malnati hall, where subjects of interest to the trade will be discussed.

On Saturday the party will go to Crescent Park, R. I., where a shore dinner will be served and various sports indulged in.

The Barre men will probably leave for home Sunday afternoon.

—It is a whole days work for two men to fell even the smallest mahogany tree. On account of the spurs which project from the base of the trunk a scaffold has to be erected and the tree cut off above the spurs, leaving thus a stump of the very best wood from 10 to 15 feet high.

LEO'S LIFE IN VERSE.

Poetic Side of the Great Pontiff's Character.

A BRIEF EULOGY HIS FIRST POEM.

At the Age of Twelve Young Pecci Addressed It to Father Vincenzo Pavani—When Twenty Years Old, He Wrote What He Then Believed His Death Song—A Tribute to New Art of Photography.

Of Leo XIII., the man, genial, affectionate, cultured, with all the qualities of head and heart to make him humanly lovable as well as revered through the dignity of his office, the world knows best through his poems, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

He began writing Latin when he was twelve years old. No biographies, however exhaustive, give, or could give, so clear an insight into the inner heart of the great pontiff as these fine outpourings of his spirit.

The first literary production of the schoolboy of Viterbo, in later years to become pope, was a brief eulogy of Father Vincenzo Pavani, provincial of the Jesuits, who was visiting the village. The author, who was then just twelve years old, was baptized Joachim Vincent Raphael Aloysius Pecci.

The poem reads:

Thy very name, Pavani, Vincent styled,
Was mine—a little child.

What mighty virtues thou didst well pursue,
Would I might follow too!

The next poem was written eight years later, in 1880. It is entitled "On His Sickness" and is a remarkable commentary on his will power:

A youth of twenty years—how sickly and how spare!
Ah, to what natural shock my flesh is heir!

Haply to utter here my memorable grief
May bring, if not surcease, some sad relief.

Through sleepless nights in vain I fretfully compose
My weak and weary limbs to seek repose.

My food no strength affords; my drooping lids complain
Of light, and oft my head is racked with pain.

Anon my parched limbs a wasting ague chills;
Anon with torrid heats of fever fills.

Haggard and wan my face, and laboring is my breath;
Languid I walk the way to dusty death.

Why shall I cheat my heart and years a-plenty crave
When Atropos compels the dreaded grave?

Rather my soul will speak: "O Death, where is thy sting?
With gladness I await thy triumphing!

"The passing shows of life shall not disturb my peace,
Who long to taste the joy that cannot cease.

"Happy the exile's feet to press the fatherland;
Happy the storm tossed bark to gain the strand!"

As illustrating the lofty and ascetic habits of the retiring young student the following "Repelling of the Wanton," put into the mouth of one Ruggero, is interesting:

With red flaming cheek, with gaudy array,
What snare dost thou plan? Amaryllis, away!
For a poison of asps is under thy tongue,
And a hideous ulcer thy bosom hath wrung.

A charming tribute to the new art of photography was written in 1867, while Leo XIII. was archbishop of Perugia. It is:

Sun wrought with magic of the skies,
The image fair before me lies;
Deep vaulted brain and sparkling eyes
And lip's fine chiseling.

O miracle of human thought,
O art with newest marvels fraught,
Apelles, nature's rival, wrought
No fairer imaging!

In 1830, when but twenty years old, young Pecci wrote what he then apparently believed to be his death song. Although he had more than threescore and ten years to live—years filled with an activity of which his delicate frame seemed then incapable—he sang with cheerful joy of the approach of death. The following poem has been translated as follows:

Scarce twenty years thou numberest, Joachim,
And fell diseases thy young life invade!
Yet pains, when charm'd by verse, seem half allayed;
Recount thy sorrows then in mournful hymn.

Wakeful till latest night, thy limbs in vain
Court needed rest, nor sleep nor food restore
Thy strength outworn, thine eyes all darkened o'er,
Dejected sink, while racked the head with pain.

Fever consumes thee; chill as ice congeals
Or parched with burning thirst. Pallid as death
Each several feature; toils the weary breath;
Through all thy fainting form the languor steals.

Why dream of future years, with promise bland,
While swift fate urges? Then I said: "No fear
My spirit shall quell! Draws Death indeed so near?
Cheerful I wait to grasp his bony hand.

No fading joys allurement offer now;
All undelayed, I pant for bliss supreme!
Glad as when wanderer's footsteps home return
Or seaman when to harbor veers his prow.

Q. Y. C. LADIES' DAY

Enough Wind to Ensure a Grand Sail This Afternoon.

The morning gave promise of being a perfect day for Ladies' Day of the Quincy Yacht club. At noon clouds came up accompanied by wind and some rain, and the afternoon may be squally.

The skippers of the club are careful men, however, especially with the fair six on board, and there will be n danger. A good sail is more enjoyable than a drift.

The sloop Cormorant, Capt. James, and the naptha launch Dorothy, and another large yacht engaged by the committee will supplement the yachts of the club.

Hundreds left shortly after noon for Houghs Neck, and another instalment will go down for the hop this evening.

March, "Sheridan Sabres,"	St. Clair

Good College Record.

The college record of Elijah Swift, valedictorian of the Quincy High class of '99, is worthy of mention. He entered Harvard in the fall of that year with many honors and anticipated courses.

During his freshman year he was awarded the Detui, which is a prize of books awarded for scholarship to the best fourteen out of a class of 550. He was also placed in the first group.

In his Sophomore year he was also placed in the first group, and was the only one who received the highest second year honors in mathematics.

In his Junior year he was again in the first group, and one of six who were able to reach the first group three years in succession. This year he was also one of eight selected because of scholarship and elected a member of the Pie Beta Kappa society.

In his Senior year he received the highest final honors in mathematics awarded for the first time in four years, and graduated with a double Summa Cum Laude, which is the highest honor given a graduate. He also received honorable mention two other times.

W. Y. C. LADIES' DAY

A Review and Sail, Followed by Refreshments and Hop.

The program of the Wollaston Yacht club for Ladies' Day on Saturday includes a review and sail in the afternoon, and refreshments and a dance in the evening.

Starting from the club float at 3 o'clock, the boats will pass in review of Commodore Wiley, and then a sail will be enjoyed until 6 o'clock. At the latter hour refreshments will be served at the clubhouse to members and guests.

The hops of the Wollaston club are always popular, but it is expected that the dance in the evening will be even a little more enjoyable, if possible.

Capt. A. T. Nichols is the fleet captain this year, and the House committee is composed of Commodore Wiley, J. A. Fenno and Charles A. McFarland. The Entertainment committee includes F. F. Taylor, William M. Chase and Herman Metcalf.

REWARD SUGGESTED

To Stop the Yacht Thieving Along the Quincy Shores.

The following relative to yacht thieving was in type before notice that Mayor Bryant had offered a reward was received:

The depredations along the waterfront by a gang of pirates are becoming bold and numerous. From Quincy Point to Squantum the cry goes up for protection from the raiders. Nothing is spared, everything is booty to them from Cape cats down a long list to oars and paddles.

But a short time ago the Houghs Neck fleet suffered, even a mainsail was stripped from a big cat as in the case of the "Marvel." Other boats suffered the loss of anchors, line, pumps and other chandlery.

Then the scene of action wes changed to Rufe's Hummock. A pair of paddles were stolen from under the Whiting camp.

Then there was a lull when late Saturday night or early Sunday morning the 23 foot Cape cat "Phyllis" owned by E. O. Cockayne, was stolen from her moorings. At the same time oars, awnings, etc., were taken from the Grant cat boat which is moored near by.

On Monday night a row-boat owned by Mr. Henderson was taken. Mr. Henderson after diligent search found the boat at Hangman's Island. The man who had it said that he picked it up a drift.

The Mayor and Police have been appealed to take unusual measures for the apprehension of this gang of pirates. A great many yacht owners think that the most effacious method is for the city to offer a liberal reward for evidence which will lead to the conviction of the gang.

Here, little boy, what are you doing in my strawberrry patch?

RIOTERS LAID OUT

Chicago Police Put Big Mob to Rout With Fists and Clubs

Chicago, July 16.—Desperate fighting between the police and the strikers of the Kellogg Switchboard company took place yesterday afternoon and last evening, when the company attempted to send freight to the railroad depots. The first fight occurred when a truck loaded with freight escorted by police was passing Harrison and Peoria streets. A howling mob of men and boys was following close upon the police and pelting them with stones and sticks. Teamsters who sympathized with the strikers managed to get their wagons in the way of the Kellogg company's wagon and occasioned a blockade. The police were endeavoring to clear the street when the workmen on an unfinished building showered them with bricks. The police drew their revolvers and fired at the workmen. The police kept up their fire through the windows and drove nearly all the workmen from the place.

A second fight occurred when the police were escorting a wagonload of freight to a warehouse. A mob fully 3000 strong followed this wagon, and although the police were outnumbered a hundred to one, they took the wagon safely to the depot. The mob had greatly increased by the time the wagon was ready to make the return trip and for half a mile it pursued the police, pelting them with sticks and stones.

The climax came when a private watchman fired at one of the mob. The shot went wild, but it inflamed the mob, which charged the police. The latter were waiting for the crowd and when it arrived the officers went at it with fists and clubs. In less than three minutes every member of the mob who could use his feet was doing so to the best of his ability. Fully a dozen men with broken heads were left lying in the street where they had been knocked by the clubs of the officers. About 20 arrests were made during the day.

A Sail-Stretching Trip

New York, July 16.—A fair sky and a splendid racing breeze of 15 knots greeted the two Shamrocks when they left Sandy Hook for another trial off the lightship. Mr. Lipton had hoped to give the boats a race over a 30-mile course, but his advisors were not satisfied with the set of Shamrock III's new mainsail so that part of the trial was devoted to jockeying to stretch the new boat's mainsail. After that Shamrock III led the old boat a reach for eight miles and beat her about a minute and a half.

Kentucky Republicans' Slate May Be Smashed

STRONG BRADLEY FEELING

Delegates Want Former Governor to Be Again Nominated—Resolution Endorsing Roosevelt For Nomination In 1904 Rushed Through

Louisville, July 16.—Spectacular in the extreme was the opening session of the Kentucky Republican state convention here and the situation is full of possibilities for more interesting events. The two salient features of the afternoon session were, first an endorsement of President Roosevelt's candidacy in 1904; second, almost a stampede to former Governor William O. Bradley, who is not an announced candidate for governor.

The endorsement of President Roosevelt's candidacy in 1904 upset the calculations of several shrewd leaders, who, it is charged, were figuring on ignoring that point.

There are three candidates for governor—Morris B. Belknap, a Louisville merchant; A. E. Willson, a Louisville attorney, and Attorney General Pratt, the only man on the Taylor ticket in 1899 to secure his office after a bitter legal contest.

Announcing the names of the members of the resolutions committee Chairman Owens called attention to the rule that all resolutions must be offered the committee without being read, unless unanimous consent should be obtained for promulgating them on the floor of the convention. It had been openly charged that a fight would be made against endorsement by the committee of Roosevelt's candidacy.

Immediately after the committees were announced, former Governor Bradley offered the following resolution: "That we, the Republicans of Kentucky, express our heartfelt approval and admiration of Theodore Roosevelt and that we heartily endorse him for the Republican nomination for president in 1904."

The resolution was read by Governor Bradley without having obtained consent, but it was unanimously adopted by a rising vote, every delegate springing to his feet and cheering. Immediately after Mr. Bradley was given a tremendous ovation. After five minutes uninterrupted cheering he consented to take the stage and speak. The pith of his remarks was an appeal for honest elections and honest conventions and he referred indirectly to the contest over the Louisville delegation by pleading that the delegates nominate only a man whose methods had been fair and honest and one who could command united support.

There immediately began what threatened to become a stampede to Bradley. Hundreds of delegates gathered about him and declared that he was the man who most nearly resembled the picture he had himself drawn. If Bradley had been placed in nomination then he would have received an almost unanimous vote on the assumption that his nomination would wipe out any bitterness caused by the Louisville contest. Bradley has been supporting Willson, who is contesting the entire Louisville delegation. Credentials were given the Louisville delegation by the men at the head of the local party machine.

The report of the committee on credentials, it was announced at the night session, was not ready and adjournment was taken until today. The delay in the committee was caused by the contest over the Louisville delegation, the Willson forces developing unexpected strength. While waiting for news of what the committee would do, the delegates called incessantly for Bradley, showing that the effects of the outburst of the afternoon had not been dissapted. The Bradley sentiment, so suddenly but strongly developed, unsettled the calculations of the politicians and silenced predictions as to the outcome. A ballot in the race for governor may not be reached until late this afternoon.

Former Governor Bradley stated at midnight that he was not a candidate for the governorship of Kentucky and that he was not seeking the nomination. He was asked if he was not a receptive candidate and his reply was that he was not.

It was then suggested that the convention might bring a repetition of yesterday's stampede and the governor was asked if he would not under pressure accept the nomination. "Nonsense," said he, "there will be no stampede."

Demented Man Attacked Nuns

Another Gotham Mystery

New York, July 16.—What may turn out to be another murder mystery for the police to unravel was discovered when a patrolman found the badly decomposed body of a female child about 3 days old in the lawn in Central park. The body was wrapped in cheesecloth upon which was the printed word: "Roxbury." About the neck was two windings of twine. The police believe the child was strangled to death and then thrown on the lawn.

Scientists Got Monster Whale

St. Johns, July 16.—The American scientists who were at Baienate to make a plaster cast of a whale for the National museum at Washington have returned here in the steamer Glencoe, having had the fullest success in their mission. They secured a splendid bull fish, 78 feet long and weighing about 70 tons. They made a cast of this and then, after stripping off the flesh, cleaned the skeleton and brought it with them.

Work Practically Suspended

Clinton, Mass., July 16.—In marked contrast to the alarming situation of Tuesday, when a crowd of striking stonemasons armed with revolvers forced 400 laborers to quit work on the big Metropolitan water works dam, Wednesday passed almost without incident. Hardly more than a score of men were at work on the big dam and no attempt was made to continue the work left undone by the strikers. The strikers make no statement as to what action they will take when the attempt is made to resume operations.

Gibbons a Strong Candidate

Paris, July 16.—A dispatch from Rome is published here giving an interview with a monsignor who is a friend of the United States. He said that if a number of cardinals favorable to Cardinal Gibbons had not died lately, the American cardinal would have had a good chance of being elected. American ideas will play a leading part from the very beginning at the coming conclave and it is sure that these ideas will have a most powerful influence on the future destinities of the church of Rome.

Sought Salvation Through Fire

NO BACKWARD STEP

Russia Will Cling to Her Increasing Power In Manchuria

Port Arthur, Manchuria, July 16.—The conference of prominent Russian officials has ended and the last special train has departed for Moscow. Most of the visiting officials have gone. Exultation over Russia's increasing power in Manchuria was the dominant note in the gathering. The possibility of taking any backward steps is scoffed at, if mentioned by outsiders. It was admitted that the war possibility was discussed, but it was denied that this was the object of the conference.

The evidence of the increase of war-like preparations since the arrival of General Kuropatkin, the minister of war, and of the intention to bring more troops to Manchuria are abundant. Orders were given to Port Arthur contractors last week for an immediate supply of building materials for barracks, to accommodate 20,000 soldiers, to be shipped to Harbin.

The officials explained that Russia's opposition to opening Manchurian towns to foreigners was not based upon opposition to foreigners whose trade is desired and who would in due time be invited into the country. But Russia objected, they explained, to having consuls accredited to the Chinese government in towns which are practically under Russian control, which would give the subjects of countries so represented the enjoyment of extra territorial rights. They asserted that such an arrangement would be certain to result in great friction such as occurred in New Chwang.

Death of Pope Cannot Be Much Longer Deferred

DOCTORS IN A DILEMMA

Another Operation Necessary, but It Is Doubtful If Pontiff Could Survive It—Continues In a State of Great Depression

Rome, July 17.—The pope's condition this morning is even less satisfactory than yesterday morning and he suffered from much uneasiness and difficulty in breathing until relieved to some extent by an injection of caffeine. The new crisis in the pope's condition presented itself yesterday when the doctors were confronted on the one hand with the apparently imperative necessity of another operation and on the other hand with the danger that such an operation in the patient's present enfeebled condition might prove fatal.

This dilemma was canvassed by Dr. Lapponi and Dr. Mazzoni throughout the day. At their earlier conference there was some prospect that the operation might not occur and the doctors left the sickroom without arriving at a definite determination as to when it would take place. They expressed the belief, however, that a delay until today would srve a useful purpose in permitting a large extraction of serum in case the operation was undertaken.

Meantime, the pope continued in a state of great depression. Thanks to a fairly good afternoon's sleep, the physicians were able to issue a bulletin at 7:25 p. m. showing that there had been no vital change in the normal progress of the disease, though the same serious rapidity of respiration as was noticed in the morning had again to be recorded. So painful had the latter become that one of those present in the sickroom described the pontiff as literally panting for his life's breath.

Later the pope was sufficiently at ease to receive Cardinal Rampolla and the pontiff conferred upon him the enlarged authority made necessary by the present illness for the executive administration of papal affairs. It is understood that one result of this action will probably be the speedy appointment of Mgr. Volpini as secretary of the consistorial congregation.

A telegram from The Associated Press having been forwarded to Cardinal Rampolla, informing him that on Sunday, July 12, prayers were offered in Protestant churches in the United States for the recovery of Pope Leo, the cardinal has replied in a letter of thanks for the demonstration of interest of the American Protestant churches. The pope was much pleased when Cardinal Rampolla informed him of the universal manifestation of sympathy towards him, coming from all, even from non-Catholics.

The tenacity of Pope Leo is most admirable, not only in his organism, but even in his feeling. Tht best example thereof is perhaps the continual proofs of confidence that he bestows on Cardinal Rampolla, who, after faithfully serving the pope for 16 years, is now being made the object of most bitter attacks, especially during the last period, because of the Francophile attitude of the papacy. The pontiff seems to have had an intuition that while he lies with one foot in the grave Cardinal Rampolla's adversaries are beginning to take advantage of his tottering power to pull down the idol which until yesterday they worshipped, so the pope leaves nothing unattempted to show the world up to the last moment how much he trusts his secretary of state.

No one was admitted to the sickroom yesterday except the cardinal secretary of state, who was only allowed in on the repeated request of Pope Leo, who said to him that he desired to confirm and extend the power his eminence already exercises because of his position and authorized him to take measures which in ordinary times would necessitate the direct intervention of the pontiff "in recognition of his personal devotion to the pontiff and the services he had rendered to the church."

The Rampolla-Oreglia Strife

Paris, July 17.—The Dix Neuvieme Siecle's correspondent at Rome says that Dr. Lapponi's son, who spread reports favorable to Cardinal Rampolla, has been expelled from the Vatican by orders of Cardinal Oreglia.

According to another dispatch from Rome Cardinal Oreglia has decided that no unauthorized person shall set foot in the Vatican during the conclave. Accordingly he has had a special medal struck bearing on one side the word "Interregnum" and on the other "July 9, 1903," without which no one will be allowed to enter after the pope's death.

Gibbons In France

Havre, July 17.—Cardinal Gibbons spent last night here and proceeded today to Paris, where he will remain pending the announcement of the pope's death, whereupon he will go to Rome.

Oldfield Clips a Record

Jackson, Mich., July 17.—Barney Oldfield lowered his world's automobile record for a mile on a half-mile track here by running his machine in 1:16 flat on the half-mile course.

Platt Amendment Cut Out

Havana, July 17.—The senate has ratified all the treaties with the United States excepting the Platt amendment treaty.

CONVICTED OF MURDER

Knapp Killed Five Women, Including Two of His Wives

Hamilton, O., July 17.—Alfred A. Knapp was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of his wife, Hannah Goddard Knapp. The penalty is death by electrocution.

Knapp confessed to five murders, as follows: Emma Littlemann, killed in lumber yard at Cincinnati, June 21, 1894; May Eckert, murdered in room on Walnut street, Cincinnati, Aug. 1, 1894; Jennie Knapp, thrown into canal at Cincinnati, Aug. 7, 1894; Ida Gebhard, strangled at Indianapolis in July, 1895; Hannah Knapp, murdered at Hamilton, Dec. 22, 1902.

Knapp has spent two-thirds of his life in prison, but for the five murders to which he confessed he had gone unsuspected until a few unguarded words he let drop set the law upon him. For years he had been a strangler, he admitted, pouncing upon innocent children and choking them to death. He was twice in state prison for fiendish assaults upon women. Insanity was the only defense made by his relatives and attorneys.

Knapp's first wife was Emma Stubbs of Fort Wayne. She secured a divorce. Knapp's fourth and surviving wife lives at Indianapolis, where he was arrested last February.

Threat of Strikers

Chicago, July 17.—When efforts of the striking teamsters and their sympathizers failed to prevent the delivery of freight from the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company to the railroad warehouses President Young of the Teamsters' National union announced that he would demand that the Edison company shut off the power at the Kellogg plant. Should he receive a refusal he declared that he would shut off all the Edison company's supplies and force the company to shut down.

Death Followed Prophetic Words

Winnipeg, Man., July 17.—P. M. Arthur, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, dropped dead at midnight while speaking at the banquet at the closing of the annual union convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which has been in session here. Mr. Arthur had just arisen to respond to a toast and repeated the words: "It may be my parting words to many of you," when he fell backwards and expired a few minutes afterwards.

DEATH THREATENED

For Those Who Attempt to Thwart Plans of Wachusett Dam Strikers

Clinton, Mass., July 17.—The police have had their first collision with the strikers on the Wachusett dam since last Tuesday. About 25 strikers had assembled on Boylston street and when a portion of the police force left for dinner they rushed in upon the state land in order to get a view of the dam and see who were working upon it. The two officers remaining on duty tried to drive them back, but were unsuccessful.

The strikers were able to see a single gang of masons that started in to work yesterday afternoon and among them was Dominico Catoni, one of the Italians who had been working with the strikers, but had remained with the contractors. The sight of him greatly enraged the strikers and they started for the dam to drive him from his work. The police ordered them back and succeeded in keeping them in the highway. Police from headuarters were hurried to the scene as well as several special officers who are quartered at the contractor's headuarters, and a semblance of order was restored. The strikers were finally driven from the place and they did not reappear as a body during the afternoon.

The Metropolitan water board took a hand in the existing troubles for the first time by posting notices of warning that all trespassers on the state lands would be prosecuted. Dominico Catoni has aroused the enmity of his fellow-countrymen. The strikers made threats of burning his house and it is guarded by a special detail of officers. Another workman, known as "Little Mike," has been sent to New York to get men to fill the strikers' places. The strikers have threatened to kill him when he comes back.

Knocked Child From Curbstone

Chelsea, Mass., July 17.—A stone team driven by Frank E. Harrington ran over and killed Rosie Elkins, 3 years old, last night. The child was sitting on the curbstone when the wheels knocked her into the street and passed over her body. Harrington was arrested on the charges of manslaughter and drunkenness and his helper, Patrick Garrity, was held for drunkenness. The men attempted to escape after the accident, but were prevented by a crowd of 1500 that had gathered, and the quick arrival of the police alone saved them from threatened bodily harm.

Automobile Ran Away

Providence, July 17.—Through the overturning of an automobile here last night three persons were probably fatally hurt, and one other bruised. The injured are Thomas H. Besse, his wife and her sister, Mrs. Sayles, and Dr. H. A. Besse, the latter escaping with slight wounds. The machine was owned by T. H. Besse, who was in charge of it at the time. While proceeding at a good speed he lost control of the steering gear, and the accident resulted. He is a dealer in bicycles and automobile supplies here.

Wife Murder and Suicide

Lynn, Mass., July 17.—Owen Mosher, aged 30, last night shot and killed his wife, Georgianna, 23 years of age, and then killed himself with the same revolver. No one else was present at the time of the shooting and the occurrences immediately preceding are unknown. Mosher and his wife had been married four years and had lived together in various places until this week, when they separated. The tragedy occurred in the lodging house of Mrs. Celia Downey.

Mayor Flanders Is Wrathy

Haverhill, Mass., July 17.—Mayor Flanders addressed the board of aldermen last night, in a speech in which he sharply criticised the police officials, the aldermen and newspaper reporters, charging that the police were lax in performing their duties, that the reporters attempted to misrepresent him and his party, and that the aldermen have allowed their influence to be swayed by newspaper reports.

Novelty For Boston Navy Yard

Boston, July 17.—For the first time in 30 years there was a launching at the navy yard late yesterday, the craft being the new United States navy tug Pentucket. Many thousands of persons saw the first dip of the new and somewhat formidable craft. The tug is of steel and carries a rapid fire battery of one and six-pounders. She will cost $70,000 when completed.

Girl Stumbled Upon Suicide

Pawtucket, R. I., July 17.—A girl picking berries in Darlington discovered the body of a man about 50 years old and a bullet wound in the temple from a revolver found by his side told the story of his death. In his pockets was a letter addressed to Olaf Nelson.

WAS NO DARK HORSE

Belknap Is Nominated For Governor of Kentucky

LITTLE BOOM FOR BRADLEY

Receives Its Quietus From the Former Governor—Votes Were Cast For Him, but They Drew Strength From Willson and Pratt

Louisville, July 17.—A second day of picturesque political maneuvers in the state convention of the Kentucky Republicans failed to culminate in the final grand surprise of the winning dark horse whose coming had been hinted and whose followers set the political managers to guessing. Colonel Morris B. Belknap of Louisville, a wholesale merchant, received the nomination for governor on the first ballot. His delegates, contrary to predictions, stuck to him, though how much of their tenacity can be charged to the announcement by former Governor Bradley that he was not a candidate can only be conjectured.

Belknap was nominated after an enthusiastic supporter of Bradley had placed the former governor in nomination and the followers of A. E. Willson, the man supposed to be Belknap's nearest competitor, had decided not to present his name. The threatened stampede to Bradley was quelled by a declaration that he would not be a candidate, but for some unknown reason the convention officers called his name during the ballot and he received a greater number of votes than C. J. Pratt, who had made an active canvass.

The convention did practically nothing during the morning session, and the long wait was profitably employed by the Belknap leaders in holding their men in line and chilling the Bradley sentiment. There were two moments during the convention when it looked as though an indication of willingness on the part of Mr. Bradley would have given him the nomination.

The resolutions congratulate the people of the United States and its new possessions on the unparalleled prosperity achieved under national Republican policies; stand for the continuance of existing Republican financial and tariff policies; express the highest appreciation of the record that President Roosevelt has made in continuing the great work begun by William McKinley and by himself in dealing with the new problems that he has had to solve; "he has shown himself a strong executive as he is an ideal citizen and we heartily and enthusiastically are for his nomination for the presidency in 1904;" denounce assassination and lawlessness, whether in Servia or Kentucky; especially arraign the present state chief executive for "so exercising the pardoning power as to subserve political and partisan purposes, with the certain effect of encouraging crime by virtually rendering criminals of Democratic political faith immune from punishment."

No reference to the money question was made in the platform. Nominations for governor were reached late in the afternoon, when the names of Pratt and Belknap were offered. The old custom of nominating speeches was followed.

Judge Breathitt placed Pratt in nomination and George Durelle offered the name of Belknap. Willson backers did not respond when his congressional district was called and this was equivalent to a withdrawal.

The surprise came when the Eleventh district was called and state Senator Kash nominated W. O. Bradley in a speech of the fervid kind, and delegates made a great demonstration which Bradley finally quelled by shouting: "I have declared for 12 months that I would not accept this nomination. I am an honest man, and while I thank my friends, I adhere to my original resolution. I cannot be a candidate for governor."

When the rollcall of counties was started the name of Bradley was retained. As the ballot progressed it showed that Bradley drew the Willson strength and part of Pratt's strength, but failed to materially affect Belknap's vote, and by the time three-fourths of the counties had been called Belknap had received 1147 votes, or 12 more than enough to nominate. Many counties which had voted for Bradley and Pratt then began changing their votes to Belknap. Just before the rollcall was completed Pratt withdrew his name. Bradley reiterated his previous statement that he was not a candidate, only to be interrupted by a delegate who tauntingly cried: "You're beat now."

Bradley turned to the point whence the taunt had come, and shouted: "I don't know who you are and I don't care, but you are a liar."

The interruption subsided. The nomination of Belknap was then made unanimous. After his speech of acceptance adjournment was taken and the rest of the ticket completed at the night session.

CUP HUNTER WON

Although She Lost Time by a Fluke Which Favored Trial Horse

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 17.—After a 40-mile leeward and windward race off Sandy Hook lightship Shamrock III led her trial horse to the finish line by 6 minutes and 30 seconds and won by only 15 seconds less. In the first half of the race the cup-seeker dropped Shamrock I at the rate of 15 seconds and more to the mile, but in the second run off short to the outer mark the old boat was the first to catch a new breeze which set her off at a pace that sliced nearly three minutes off the challenger's lead. It was a clear fluke, which, as usual in a run before the wind, favored the stern boat. Shamrock III had beaten the other by nearly 2 minutes in the first run to leeward, so that the challenger must have lost about five minutes by the fluke. In all she covered 20 miles of windward work 7 minutes and 18 seconds faster than the erstwhile challenger.

The course was a run under spinnakers 10 miles dead to leeward east-southeast from Sandy Hook lightship to the tug Cruizer and a beat back to the starting line twice around. From a nine-knot breeze at the start the wind dropped to three knots at the finish, but held west-northwest all day.

Looking Into Brooklyn Postoffice

New York, July 17.—Charles A. Bonaparte, one of the special counsel in the postoffice investigation, held a long conference with United States District Attorney Youngs yesterday. The postoffice cases were under consideration and a further plan of campaign, so far as the Brooklyn prosecution is concerned, was agreed upon. It was also learned that the case of George W. Beavers was under consideration. Several postoffice inspectors are in Brooklyn, endeavoring to get evidence from the books of various banks.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ A receiver has been annointed for the New England Home Buyers' association. The receiving end of the institution has been active enough in the past. What the stockholders would like is to have a payer appointed.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ The insolvent shipbuilding trust will be reorganized by reducing the capital from $81,000,000 to $43,000,000, which latter sum is somewhere near what the capitalization should have been in the first place. Experience keeps a dear school, but promoters and the investing public will learn in no other.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ In providing a color scheme for the ballots under the Luce joint caucus law, the state authorities have evidently exercised great care not to offend any possible sensibilities which parties may have. Otherwise, instead of choosing fawn colored paper for Democrats, pearl for Republicans and cherry for Socialists, the plain, unmistakable colors of green, blue and red might have been taken.—Springfield Republican.

☞ If ever in the history of the Republican party there was a time when overconfidence threatened that time is now. With nothing at all visible to prevent the triumphant election of Theodore Roosevelt to succeed himself in the presidency, there is a marked tendency of the party to go to sleep. That is not advisable at any time. There never was and there never will be an automatic campaign. There will be need next year of as active and thorough campain work as has ever been done. And the victory will not be won until he votes are cast.—Baltimore American, Rep.

A GRAND LADIES' DAY.

COMMODORE SHEPPARD.

New Arrangements for Serving Refreshments a Success---Good Music and Enjoyable Dance.

One of the annual events in the calendar of the Quincy Yacht club, to which the members and their many lady friends look forward with thoughts of a pleasant afternoon and evening is "Ladies' Day."

It is upon these days that the trim sailing craft look at their best. Every block and tackle is in its place. The seats in the standing room are cushioned. Oil skins and rough and ready costumes are laid aside, and the gallant yachtsmen appear attired in their neat yachting costumes of white and blue.

It almost seemed as though the yachts themselves realized the importance of the day, as they gracefully and impatiently rode the swell, while waiting for their fair freight to be safely put aboard, anxious to be off that they might go bounding over the course assigned for the day's run.

The event this year was scheduled for Thursday, and the early morning gave promise of being an ideal day. Along toward 2 o'clock, however, the west wind freshened a bit and black clouds appeared in the northern horizon, and it looked as though the afternoon was destined to be squally.

A few white caps appeared on the waves and the more timid shook their heads in doubt as to whether it would be better to venture out or to remain on the club house verandas.

As the hour for the yachts to pass in review approached, however, the dark clouds disappeared. The wind died down a little and it was evident that the ideal day promised in the morning would be fulfilled.

Commodore Sheppard and members of the committee were on hand early to look after the comfort of the guests, and in this their efforts were untiring.

The large steam barge "Cultivator," Capt. Robert A. Grant; the sloop "Cormorant," Capt. James; and the naptha launch "Dorothy," had been engaged by the committee for the accommodation of club members and their friends, so that every one who desired to sail could have their wish gratified.

The steamer "Cultivator" which was in charge of Capt. George W. Jones and when she left the float she had over sixty aboard. The sloop "Cormorant" was in charge of Capt. Shedd, and was held back until the last so that late arrivals could be taken aboard.

Riding gracefully at her moorings, a short distance from the float, was the flagship "Folly" of Commodore Sheppard, in holiday attire, and flying the signal code flags.

Shortly before 3 o'clock No. 2 was displayed at the end of the float denoting the course that was to be sailed. Fifteen minutes later a second gun was fired, which was a signal for the fleet to pass in review and sail over the following course:

Course No. 2. Passing in review, leaving flagship on starboard, thence leaving Pig Rock beacon on starboard, Black Can buoy No. 1 in Hingham bay on starboard, Jack-knife Ledge buoy on starboard, Red Spar buoy No. 2 off Sheep island on port to club house.

As each yacht passed in review they dipped colors, the salute being acknowledged by a gun from the flagship.

The passing in review, as witnessed from the club house verandas is a pretty sight, so that those who did not care to sail had some compensation for remaining on shore.

The return from the sail was made at 5 o'clock and the Braintree Orchestra club gave the following selections while lunch was being served:

March, "Sheridan Sabres,"	St. Clair
Morceau Characteristique, "The Dawn of Love,"	Bendix
Waltzes, "Lazarre,"	Blanke
Overture, "Lustspiel,"	Kela-Bela
Entre Act, "Cubanola,"	Blanke
March, "Dixie Land."	Haines
Idyl, "Hiawatha,"	Moret
Waltzes, "Eternelle Ivresse,"	Gaune
Selection, "Prince of Pilsen,"	Luders
Serenade, "Tuscan,"	Langey
Dance, "Zulu Moon,"	Odell
March, "Dallas,"	Hall

The arrangement for serving the lunch were admirably carried out on a new plan. Seats were provided for the guests in the upper hall and on the verandas, and when the last of the boats had returned and their guests were seated, it was served, the yacht captains assisting the committee.

The lunch, which was provided by Whittemore & Girard, consisted of sandwiches, cake of all kinds, ices, olives and coffee.

After the lunch, it not being quite half ebb tide not a few improved the opportunity for a sail in the harbor in the power launches.

As evening drew on, the candles in the many colored lanterns, that had been hung about the club house were lighted making a pretty view from the end of the float. Then the orchestra commenced its evening program and dancing was in order until 10.30.

As a whole, the day was all that could be desired, and not a single thing occurred to mar the pleasure. The committee worked in harmony and the club are to be congratulated on the success of the day.

The yachts to participate in the sail with their guests were as follows:

Flagship Folly—Commodore Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. Sheppard, Capt. Joel F. Sheppard 2d, Carl R. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Hall, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Burke, Arthur S. The New American Navy.

The Outlook Company has in preparation a notable work by John D. Long, ex-Secretary of the Navy, which will be published this fall under the title "The New American Navy." It will be issued in two volumes, and will deal with the history of our navy before, during and after the war with Spain; will tell of the preparation which made the wonderful achievements of the Spanish War possible; of the great actions in Manila Harbor and Santiago; and of the building up of an effective and worthy navy still going on. It will be fully illustrated.

Slight Fire.

The shrill whistle of a locomotive about 10 o'clock this morning sent a crowd hurrying down the tracks toward the Granite street bridge, as it was thought some one had been run over. It was found, however, that the whistle was to call attention to a fire in the railroad tool house in the rear of the cemetery. The fire was extinguished with buckets of water.

SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Lone Camper on Adams Shore May Be Yacht Thief.

The arrest Thursday afternoon by Inspector McKay of Carl J. Thorgumson will probably solve the mystery that has surrounded the thieving among the yachts along Quincy shore.

Thorgumson, who is a sort of hermit, has been camping out along the shore of the Adams farm for some weeks. He is a Norwegian, 58 years of age, and claims his home to be the United States and that he came to Quincy from Brockton. He says his business is that of a fisherman.

Of late he has been living under an old boat, and has been watched by the police for some days. Thursday he was arrested for larceny and locked up.

Upon searching about his camping ground Inspector McKay unearthed a dunnage bag that was buried in the sand and seaweed under the man's camp.

Upon being opend it was found to contain a mainsail, an awning, oil suit, cod lines, hat, two pair of rubber boots, crowbar and two hammers. The police also found a clam digger and a row lock. The latter articles the man claimed as his, but he claimed to know nothing about the other articles. The owners of the other articles have not been located as yet.

It is claimed by people in that neighborhood that the fellow has sold two boats, one of which has been identified by its owner as having been stolen.

The fellow was arraigned in court and the case continued until July 20.

Abner McKinley Dangerously Sick

Somerset, Pa., July 17.—Abner McKinley, brother of the late President McKinley, is dangerously ill here at his summer residence. It appears that Mr. McKinley's illness did not assume a serious form until yesterday. A dangerous symptom developed when a pain struck him in the back of the head, rendering him helpless. That it was a paralytic stroke is the grave fear. His relatives have been sent for.

Secretary Wilson's Warning

Washington, July 17.—Secretary Wilson says that the effort to have the consuls in countries where foot and mouth disease exists attend to the disinfection of hides and wool has not been very successful and that if they continue to meet with failure the government will be compelled, sooner or later, to require the disinfection at the ports of entry in this country or to prohibit the trade altogether.

A Negro Shooting Scrape

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 17.—Warren Welch, a negro, aged 30, lived with a negro and his wife. He went to their bedroom and shot both as they lay in bed. Another negro was shot by Welch as he entered the room. This man is likely to die. The couple who were in bed were not badly hurt. Welch escaped, but was captured later. Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the shooting.

Narrowly Escaped Sister's Fate

New Brunswick, N. J., July 17.—Fred Nelson, brother of Mrs. Charles Fair, who was killed in an automobile accident abroad, and Nat Titsworth were riding in an automobile when the brakes refused to work and the machine rushed down hill and dashed into a tree, badly bruising and stunning both men and wrecking the automobile.

British Troops In South Africa

London, July 17.—During the discussion of the army estimates in the house of commons War Secretary Brodrick said it had been decided to keep a force of 25,000 men permanently in South Africa. He estimated the extra cost of keeping this emergency force in South Africa would be $7,500,000 yearly.

GROSS IGNORANCE.

How Quincy Granite Is Misrepresented in the West.

Some of the western granite agents show a wonderful ignorance of Quincy granite, or else wilfully misrepresent it. They should all be given a free excursion to Quincy that they may know Quincy granite and the magnitude of the quarries and works As noted this week, the output of granite from this city is upwards of 5000 tons a month. Inasmuch as there is no mica in Quincy granite, the following letter is very amusing:

Dear Sir: Upon my return to this city I found a note in regard to your brother Jim's monument, and replying, was just going to say that you got into the wrong pew, but will correct that, and say that Jim got into the wrong pew when he bought the monument.

As a matter of fact, he bought Quincy granite, which has large mica deposits in it, and mica, as you know, is made up of little scales, thinner even than fish scales, and the water gets under the edge of these scales in the fall, and when the freeze comes, and the water freezes under the scales, one of the scales is thrown off, and then another until the face of the monument is left in holes or pits and is rough.

This we could have shown Jim, and would have done so, in some monuments that are in the cemetery here in ————, had he come back (but he did not) before he bought, but he will find it out after he has paid for the monument and it is too late to change it.

You naturally would come here to find out about it, because you would think he would buy from a large concern rather than a small one.

Yours very truly,

Quincy granite is composed of quartz, felspar and hornblende, the hornblende taking the place of the mica found in most granites.

The monuments in the western cemetery alluded to are probably not of Quincy granite, but is some cheap "doctored" stock. The writer should see the front of City Hall in this city, built of Quincy granite in 1844. It continues a handsome piece of work, in as good condition as when erected.

Quincy granite also takes the most enduring polish of any granite. The above letter only emphasizes the need of educational work and advertising on the part of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association, and is a big argument why Quincy should make a big granite exhibit at the World's Fair which opens at St. Louis next May.

Railroad to Shipyard Inspected.

The Railroad Commissioners and directors of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. visited the Fore River shipyard on Thursday on a tour of inspection of the railroad and the new freight branch. The directors car was derailed near the ice house and was unable to reach the yard, but the party of twelve or fifteen proceeded on a flat car with boxes for seats and rather enjoyed it. For about an hour they toured the plant and were pleased that Massachusetts has such a large and flourishing industry. The new freight branch has been more extensively used than anticipated and is bound to increase, and the New Haven road is pleased at the prospects.

Collection of Dog Tax.

The new departure of Mayor Bryant in regard to unlicensed dogs having caused some comment, in an interview yesterday he expressed himself substantially as follows:—"The dog question in Quincy has for a long time been unsatisfactory. The tax is due May 1 and every dog-owner knows it. After waiting until July 1, I am compelled by the State law to appoint one or more officers to kill all unlicensed dogs. Many people act as if these officers were to call on them time after time for the tax, and do not appreciate the fact that the officer's call, if at all, is only outside of their duty. Every owner or keeper of an unlicensed dog is liable to a fine of $15, whenever anybody chooses to complain of him, and he will have to pay his tax just the same after he has paid his fine. I mean to hold every officer accountable for his own locality, and after a reasonable time he will be called upon to complain of all who have not complied with the law. Those who have no dogs, and those who pay their licenses promptly, are alike interested in desiring that all others owning dogs should contribute towards the expenses of the city. By the course taken this year I expect to save the city more that $400."

Climbed Out of Cage.

John Madigan, a well known character about Randolph, is missing and the police of that town hope that he will stay missing.

Madigan was arrested for drunkenness by Officer Heaney who brought him to Quincy early in the morning and locked him in the cage in the court room. The officer then left the court room and went to the street, where he engaged in conversation with other officers. While thus engaged Madigan climbed to the top of the cage and crossing the spikes at the top was soon at liberty. The woman who takes care of the court room saw him and uttered a scream which seemed to hurry Madigan who made his escape.

Officer Meaney did not take the escape at heart and says if Madigan only stays away from Randolph he will be satisfied.

Yachting Corner.

At the celebration in Faneuil Hall for the successful defence of America's cup, Dr. William Everett opened with:

"You all know American history perfectly well, and so I need not remind you that when the voice of Massachusetts went forth in favor of freedom from Faneuil Hall, the first answer was that of Patrick Henry, speaking in the old House of Burgesses in Virginia; and it is now to the House of Burgesses that the United States owe their new Declaration of Independence on the sea."

He closed with:

The Mersey builds her keels of steel,
The Clyde lays keels of fame;
The Burgess lays no keels at all,
But he gets there just the same.

What He Is Worth.

"What a curious habit we have," remarked the street car philosopher, "of saying that a man is worth so and so many thousands of dollars. I know men who have many dollars who, judged from any reasonable standard that I know, are not worth anything at all. It is refreshing to hear occasionally of men who do happen to be worth a great deal even though they are rich and who are anxious that people should forget they have money and think of them only for their qualities. All the same, it always gives me an unpleasant turn when I see a man's worth put down in dollars." — New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Bismarck Incident.

It used to be the privilege of Austria's representative at any conference of representatives of the German states to smoke, the others refraining. This was supposed to be an acknowledgment of Austria's supremacy. At the first conference that Bismarck attended as Prussia's representative he began to puff smoke across the conference table as soon as the Austrian diplomat lit up. That set everybody present to smoking on equal terms, and Austria's supremacy got a blow.

The King Lacked Nerve.

Baroness Bonde wrote in her diary the following account of the abdication of Louis Philippe of France on the day of that remarkable occurrence: "An aid-de-camp of the minister of war, who was in the king's cabinet when he abdicated, gave me a detailed account of this most signal piece of cowardice. He had reviewed the troops in the carrousel on horseback, highly rouged, when a cry was raised, 'Voici les Faubourgs!' No one had any orders; no one gave any. The mob rushed forward, shouting, 'Vive la garde nationales! Vivent les troupes!' and shook hands with the outposts. The king retreated precipitately with his sons, and a sublieutenant of the national guard rushed into the palace asking to see him. He was admitted and in the greatest agitation said, 'Your majesty must abdicate.' 'Very well,' says the king. 'In favor of my grandson.' 'No, unconditionally,' says the young and self elected mouthpiece of public opinion. Would you believe it? Of all who were congregated round the royal person Piscatory alone said: 'Go down and head your troops. Fight for your crown and your dynasty.' He was overruled, and they all marched out of the palace except the Duchesse d'Orleans, her children and the Duc de Nemours."

PLEDGES FROM CHINA

That Several Ports Will Soon Be Open to Commerce

PORT ARTHUR CONFERENCE

Was For Purpose of Unifying Russian Control and Dispelling Suspicions of Bad Faith—Jewish Petition on Kishineff May Be Shelved

Washington, July 17.—The Manchurian question has been settled satisfactorily to this government. Assurances have been received from the Chinese government that it will in the near future open as treaty ports several ports now closed to the world's trade. The Russian government has conveyed formal assurance to the United States government that it will not in any way oppose such opening.

While the ports to be opened are not yet specified it is gathered from the communications received that they are Moukden, the principal inland port of Manchuria, and Ta Tung Kao, at the mouth of the Yalu river. The state department is highly gratified at this outcome, feeling that it has secured not only for American commerce but for the commerce of the world at large a very substantial gain.

It now develops that the meeting of Russian officials at Port Arthur, just concluded, was but one of the steps, though an important one, which the St. Petersburg government had placed in execution of its purpose to put matters of internal administration in Manchuria in such condition that the ports desired by the United States and Japan could be opened to trade without causing disturbance or involving undue sacrifice of proper Russian interests. It already had been represented that much of the friction that had grown out of the Manchurian question was caused by a sort of triple, yet independent administration of affairs in Manchuria, by representatives of different branches of the Russian government. The result was that one official would not feel bound by the pledges made by another, so that foreign nations complained of bad faith. It is understood that now, following the Port Arthur conference, a compact and responsible direction of affairs has been arranged for, and orders issued from St. Petersburg are certain to meet with speedy and exact compliance.

Although no set time is mentioned in the promise to open the ports it is believed that this will follow soon after the Russian evacuation in September.

It is now known that the negotiations which have terminated so successfully so far as broad lines are concerned, for only details remain to be adjusted, were practically brought to their present phase by Secretary Hay and Count Cassini, at a meeting at the Russian embassy on June 28, the day before the secretary departed for Newport, for the ambassador then had in hand the necessary authorization from his own government to make the pledges which are now in process of redemption. These pledges were reduced to writing by Mr. Hansen, the Russian charge, during his call at the state department.

It now remains for Mr. Conger to define in the trade treaty which he is now negotiating with China, the terms and conditions under which the new ports are to be opened. It may be stated that had the United States government cared to pursue a selfish policy in this matter it might easily have secured promises of special privileges from Russia, but Secretary Hay has held to the broader doctrine of the open door in Manchuria for the whole world.

The state department has received a reply from Russia stating that it neither will receive nor consider the matter of the Jewish petition on the subject of the Kishineff incident.

This information came in the form of a cablegram from Mr. Riddle, the American charge at St. Petersburg, to whom was committed the delicate task of inuiring of the Russian government as to its attitude with respect to the presentation of the petition. It is believed that this will end the matter and that no further steps will be taken by this government to bring the views of the petitioners to the attention of Russia, although as yet no consideration has been given by the president to the course to be pursued in the light of Russia's response to our inquiry.

The reply that Russia would make to all suggestions on the subject of the Kishineff massacre was forecasted by The Associated Press some weeks ago in an authorized statement, when the public was definitely informed that Russia regarded the affair as an internal matter as to which she, in the exercise of her own sovereignty, must refuse to receive suggestions from any other government on outside source.

Faith In Hay's Diplomacy

London, July 17.—The morning papers which comment on the announcement that the state department at Washington has received assurances from the Chinese government that it will shortly open several ports to the world's trade congratulate Secretary Hay on the success he has gained in the admission of the principle of the "open door" in China and while expressing great suspicion that Russian diplomacy has left some troublesome conditions in reserve they are inclined to believe that Secretary Hay is too astute to be put off with a mere paper confession.

EXPERIMENT ON SMOKERS.

Dr. Wiley Wants to Learn Effects of Tobacco on Human System.

The United States government, through Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the agricultural department, will investigate the effect of tobacco on the human system, says a Washington special to the New York World.

Dr. Wiley will make these experiments carefully and thoroughly. He will not begin them until he has concluded his examination of adulterated food products. He will probably utilize the same class that has for several weeks been fed on food containing boric acid, and that beginning Oct. 1 will experiment with salicylic acid.

When Dr. Wiley begins with tobacco his inquiry will be pursued along the same lines as in the case of food products. He will take pure tobacco in various forms, smoking and chewing, and see what effect its use has upon the consumer when taken in small quantities and larger quantities. He will then take up the adulterated tobacco or flavored tobacco and ascertain by experiments what effect it has upon the system.

Dr. Wiley has not decided whether he will use foreign or domestic tobacco. It is Dr. Wiley's intention to take men who are regular smokers and ascertain their physical condition as to their heart action, breathing and digestion while continuing the use of tobacco under normal conditions and to have them suddenly cease its use. The effect of such stoppage will be carefully noted, and Dr. Wiley expects to be able to report upon the benefits or injuries in the sudden change of the habits of smokers and chewers.

After the effects of the prolonged use of tobacco have been eradicated from the system it is proposed that the subjects of experiment shall recommence the use of tobacco, beginning in small quantities, which will be gradually increased until they are using as much or more than when the experiments first began.

THE LIFE OF SEEDS.

Agricultural Department to Find Out Their Extreme Vitality.

The United States department of agriculture is making experiments for the purpose of determining the extreme vitality of seeds, says Harper's Weekly. Over a hundred species of plants have been packed in a soil consisting of dry clay inclosed in pots and buried at varying depths under ground—eight sets at a depth of 6 inches, twelve at a depth of 20 and a third set of twelve at a depth of 3½ feet. At the end of 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 40 and 50 years a set from each depth will be exhumed and tested.

The results of the experiment are likely to be of extraordinary value to agriculturists, both commercially and scientifically. Incidentally it may be recalled that authentic cases are on record which prove that certain seeds have the power of sprouting after having been buried for long periods of time, reliable tests having shown that twelve out of twenty-one species have the power of germinating after twenty years.

The Latest Slot Machine.

The latest application of the principle of the penny in the slot is reported from Australia, says the London Chronicle. In the post offices of the commonwealth if time or opportunity does not permit the prompt purchase of a stamp the person in a hurry will in future be able to drop his letter into one orifice of a machine and his penny into the other, and when this process is completed "One penny paid" will be found impressed on the envelope as an equivalent to the orthodox stamp. The innovation has its advantages. Attaching the stamp to the envelope is perhaps the greatest nuisance connected with letter writing. In spite of many sanitary warnings the practice of "licking" is still considerably more the rule than the exception.

A New Explanation For Appendicitis

S. Kellett Smith has written to the London Lancet suggesting that a cause for the increase in the number of appendicitis cases in the last few years may be found in the large quantity of frozen and chilled meats that are now consumed. As such meat is liable to rapid deterioration, it might result in a more septic state of the intestines than prevailed before these methods of preserving meats was discovered. The Lancet answers that the theory is plausible, but suggests that first it should be ascertained whether the number of appendicitis cases has really increased.

Active Remedy For Microbes.

[A Paris doctor declares that the cake walk, freely indulged in, will kill the hardiest microbe.]

The waltz is not without its charm,
The polka has its points;
The barn dance need not cause alarm
To those who've supple joints.
The cellar flap with joy is seen
(Though seldom at a ball),
But when it comes to hygiene
The cake walk beats them all.

There was a time in days gone by
When, if I felt unwell,
Unto my doctor I would fly,
In haste my symptoms tell
And pay the varlet thumping fees—
It seemed my only chance—
But now M. D.'s no longer please;
It's cheaper far to dance.

Should limb or cranium throb and ache,
I don my lightest shoe,
And hired menials music make;
It's what they're paid to do.
"Down South's" exhilarating strains
Burst from the gay banjo;
Quaint ragtime steps dispel my pain
And urge a healthy glow.

Ye invalids, though old and stout,
Accept the proffered boon;
Forgetting gout, step boldly out
To emulate the coon;
Attempt the measures I suggest,
Scorn not what I advise;
The plan, believe me, is the best;
This way salvation lies.

And what is love? It is a thrill
That percolates throughout your breast
And sweetly tickles you until
You're in a state of wild unrest!
It is an effervescing sense
Of sparkling rapture; sort of fizz
Of heavenly nectar so intense
It makes you drunk with bliss! It is
A sweet phantasmagorian dream
That comes upon you while awake
And monkeys with you till you seem
With pent-up bliss to fairly ache!
And that is love; at least that be
The way it always works on me!

Foolish Fear of the Opal.

Many people to this day have a superstitious dread of wearing opals, because they really believe ill luck is attached to this beautiful stone. Three centuries ago the opal was an exceedingly fashionable gem, and the Italian goldsmiths particularly favored its use for their most exquisite settings.

The opal was at the height of its popularity when the plague broke out in Venice. Some especially observant individual discovered that when a plague stricken sufferer was at the point of death the opal, if he wore one, would grow brighter, and after his death it would grow dull. The reason for this appears to have been that the burning fever warmed the stone and that after death the damp and chill of the body dulled it. But many deduced from this a belief that it was the opal that had brought death and misfortune, and with the spread of this superstition the opal declined in popular favor.

Many persons would on no account whatever even accept one as a gift, much less wear what they foolishly deem the unlucky opal.—New York Press.

Courage of Wild Dogs.

The whole tribe of wild dogs, which in closely allied forms are to be found in the wildest jungles and woods of Asia, from the Himalayas to Ceylon and from China to the Taurus—unless the "golden wolves" of the Roman empire are now extinct in the forests of Asia Minor—show an individual and corporate courage which entitles them to a high place among the most daring of wild creatures. The "red dogs," to give them their most characteristic name, are neither large in size nor do they assemble in large packs. Those which have been from time to time measured and described seem to average some three feet in length from the nose to the root of the tail.

The pack seldom numbers more than nine or ten, yet there is sufficient evidence that they are willing and able to destroy any creature that inhabits the jungle, except the adult elephant and perhaps the rhinoceros, creatures whose great size and leathery hide make them almost invulnerable to such enemies as dogs.—London Spectator.

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1762 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen."

It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small cuffs.

The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory similar to those which, according to Planche's "History of British Costume," originated in the seventeenth century.

Lincoln's Fees.

As a rule, Abraham Lincoln's fees were less than those of other lawyers of his circuit. Justice Davis once remonstrated with him and insisted that he was doing a grave injustice to his associates at the bar by charging so little for his services. From 1850 to 1860 his income varied from $2,000 to $3,000, and even when he was recognized as one of the ablest lawyers of the state his fee book frequently shows charges of $3, $5 and $1 for advice, although he never went into court for less than $10. During that period he was at the height of his power and popularity, and lawyers of less standing and talent charged several times those amounts. But avarice was the least of his faults. ▸"The True Abraham Lincoln."

THE NEXT POPE

Some of the Most Prominent Candidates For the Papal Throne

Nine Cardinals From Among Whom Leo's Successor May Be Chosen

Chances of James Cardinal Gibbons For the Seat of St. Peter

TO hundreds of millions of Roman Catholics throughout the world the question of paramount interest is the selection of a successor to Pope Leo XIII. to rule on the throne of St. Peter. More than a quarter of a century has passed since the college of cardinals has been called upon to perform the important duty of choosing one of its number to preside over the destinies of the most powerful religious organization in Christendom, and of all the cardinals who took part in the conclave which elected Pope Leo but one is alive today—Cardinal Luigi Oreglia, dean of the sacred college and camerlingo of the Catholic church, the same office that was held by Leo at the time of his elevation.

While it is generally believed that the next pope will be chosen from among the Italian cardinals, it is of especial interest to Americans that Cardinal Gibbons, the only American member of the college, is considered not to be without a chance for succeeding to the pontifical throne.

That such an event is possible is explained by the fact that many members of the sacred college are said to favor a new policy for the church and the election of a foreigner as pope. Should this plan commend itself to the conclave and a change of policy be agreed on Cardinal Gibbons might be the selection. No opposition to him could be feared from any of the European governments, and no political complications would arise. It is said to be a fact that many of the cardinals think that the selection of Gibbons would happily solve many difficulties. North America has had but three cardinals—McCloskey, Taschereau (who are both dead) and Gibbons.

James Cardinal Gibbons is one of the most popular and respected dignitaries of the Roman church. He was created a cardinal by Pope Leo on June 7, 1886, at the age of fifty-two. He is a native of Baltimore, but spent his boyhood in Ireland, where he received a liberal education. Returning to America he was graduated from the St. Charles college, Maryland, and was ordained a priest in 1861. He is known in Rome as the "democratic cardinal" from his extreme modesty and retirement.

He is frail in appearance, but endowed with tremendous vitality. As a scholar with a wide and intimate knowledge of men and affairs he has few peers and no superiors in the Roman college of cardinals.

But while the election of a foreigner as head of the church has been discussed, it is not considered more than a remote possibility, and those in the best position to know are confident that an Italian will be chosen. The Italian cardinals most prominently mentioned for elevation are Gotti, Satolli, Svampa, the brothers Vannutelli, Sarto, Rampolla and Oreglia, with Capecelatro, Ferrata and Ferrari as remoter possibilities. However, when a choice is finally made it may prove that none of these has been selected and that some cardinal not considered as having a chance has been chosen.

To Americans Cardinal Satolli, next to Cardinal Gibbons, is the best known of any member of the sacred college, for it was in this country, while serving as papal delegate, that he was elevated to the cardinalate and formally vested with the scarlet which marks the rank of a prince of the church. This ceremony took place in the Baltimore cathedral on Jan. 5, 1896, Cardinal Gibbons placing the red hat on his head.

Francis Satolli, titular bishop of Lepanto and for years as close to Pope Leo XIII. as any member of the college, is a native of Perugia and even as a boy displayed gifts of oratory of a high order, and to this accomplishment he added great powers of original thought and marked facility as a writer. Satolli is about sixty-two years old.

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto, patriarch of Venice, who is regarded as a strong candidate for the papal throne, was born at Riese, northern Italy, in 1835. He is noted for his prudence, having never meddled with politics, and for extreme independence. He is also a patron of the arts.

The cardinal is recognized as one of the most learned men in the church and is a stickler for the truth as between the church and the people. Sarto won much renown some years ago by destroying certain relics of doubtful authenticity.

Cardinal Sarto was not discovered until he had reached middle age. He was a parish priest in the province of Venice for the greater part of his life and finally became a bishop. His high executive qualities and unexcelled learning became known soon after his elevation and were recognized by the church. He was created a cardinal in 1893, at which time he was also named patriarch of Venice.

One of the most striking figures of the group of men whose supreme ambition is to succeed to the papal throne is Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli. He is a power in the church by lineage as well as by education and achievement. He is descended from one of those old Roman families whose histories have been linked with the Roman Catholic church for centuries. His brother Vincenzo is also a member of the college of cardinals, although of lower rank, being only a cardinal priest. He was born in 1834.

Pope Leo created Vannutelli a cardinal bishop in 1887 and gave him the see of Frascati. Since then he has lived almost continually in Rome and has been one of the closest advisers of the pope. Vincenzo Vannutelli is two years younger than his more distinguished relative. He was created cardinal in 1889.

Another likely candidate for papal honors is Cardinal Rampolla, who is a Sicilian and was born in 1843 at Polizzo. His family name is Mariano Rampolla del Tindaro, and he was educated in Rome. For some years he was attached to the nunciature at Madrid and was created titular archbishop of St. Heracles in 1882. He became a cardinal in 1887, taking title from the Church of St. Cecilia, and was made secretary of state in the same year. He is administrator of the property of the holy see and is one of the leading diplomats of the world.

Still another possible heir to the pontificate is Cardinal Gotti. Jerome Maria Gotti is a Genoese, the son of a dock laborer, and Pope Leo is said to have long favored him as his successor. Cardinal Gotti was born on March 29, 1834, and attended the Jesuit school, but at the age of sixteen was admitted as a novice into that most austere of Carmelite orders, the Order of Barefoot Carmelites. Upon reaching the priesthood he was assigned to the Church of St. Maria della Scala, and just before the death of Pius IX. he became head of the mother house of the Barefoot Carmelites, and in 1881 he was made superior general of that order.

Taking title from the Church of St. Maria del Scala, he was created cardinal in 1895. He is accounted the best authority on canon law in the sacred college, although his tastes are scientific. He is still a Barefoot Carmelite, but is not now superior general of the order.

Perhaps the most popular candidate in Italy for head of the church is Cardinal Domenico Svampa, archbishop of Bologna, and it is said that Leo himself believed at one time that Svampa would be his successor. He is one of the youngest members of the sacred college, being but fifty-two years old. Like Gotti, he is of humble parentage and has risen to high place in the church by force of personal ability. He was made archbishop of Bologna in 1892 and created cardinal two years later.

Cardinal Luigi Oreglia di Stefano, who is camerlingo or chamberlain of the Roman Catholic church, was born in 1828 and created cardinal by Pius IX. in 1873. He is dean of the college of cardinals, archchancellor of the Roman university, prefect of the congregation of ceremonies and a member of the curia.

It is remarked that according to the prophecies of St. Malachy the symbol of Pope Leo's successor will correspond to the words ignis ardens (glowing fire). The escutcheons of Cardinal Oreglia and Gotti, which bear a burning star, and the escutcheon of Cardinal Svampa, which bears lighted torches, are indicated by the words.

St. Malachy was an Irish prelate who lived in the twelfth century. He wrote a book which was discovered after his death and which contained a motto for every pontiff from the year 1143 until the end of the papacy. It is declared that these prophecies have been fulfilled in a remarkable manner. He foretold that the successor of Pius IX. would have the symbol of a light in heaven (lumen in coelo), and as a matter of fact the escutcheon which fell to Cardinal Pecci, who afterward became Pope Leo XIII., had as its chief feature a very luminous star in the sky. Whether the prophecies of St. Malachy will again be verified can be known only when the sacred college of cardinals has elected a successor to Pope Leo.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 19—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Religion between Sundays.—Acts ii, 42-47.

The Sabbath day is the day specially set apart by God for religious worship and service, but it does not follow from that that it is the only day upon which we are to be religious. Every day of the week is the Lord's day, and there is no day upon which we are not to love and serve Him. These facts are recognized by all people, and yet when it comes to actual practice many seem to think that religion is only for the Sabbath, that it is to be put on and put off with clothes that are worn upon that day, and that between Sundays we can follow our own plans and devices.

But Sunday religion only is not the kind that is taught in the word of God. There it is plainly taught that we are to serve the Lord daily. The sacrifices of the Old Testament were offered daily, although they were doubled in number upon the Sabbath. Christ taught His disciples to pray daily for their daily bread, "Give us this day our daily bread." The Bereans "searched the Scriptures daily" and were commended for so doing. "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica in that they received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily whether these things were so." And Luke, the sacred historian, gives us in the topical reference a beautiful description of the religious faith and activity of the early Christians between Sundays.

In this description we can learn many things that should characterize our lives as Christian upon the days of the week:

1. Religious faith should be exercised between Sundays. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine." It is not only necessary to believe in God on the Sabbath when listening to His word in the sanctuary or reading it in the home, but also when amid the duties and cares of everyday life during the week. The test of faith comes oftener between Sundays than upon the Sabbath, and at such times it should be steadfast.

2. Religious fellowship should be exercised between Sundays. The early Christians continued steadfast in the apostles' fellowship as well as doctrine. They broke bread "from house to house." We should not only know each other upon the Sabbath day, but upon Monday or any other day of the week. It is a low standard of Christian fellowship that only recognizes a brother in Christ in the church upon the Sabbath day and refuses or neglects this recognition during the week.

3. Religious worship should be exercised between Sundays. The early Christians spent much time on week days in worshiping God. Praise and prayer were their daily devotions. "They continued daily with one accord in the temple and, breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God." God should be worshiped during the week. Praise and prayer should ascend to Him daily from the home, and if we cannot go every day to His temple we should at least set aside the time of the midweek service held in almost every church for public worship.

4. Religious work should be exercised between Sundays. They assisted each other. "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." The community of goods proved impracticable, but the principle was sound. Christian people should be interested in each other's daily welfare and should lend a helping hand "to all men, as every man hath need." They also worked for the salvation of the souls of the unsaved. "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved," but this is always done as a result of Christian effort. We should have a daily interest in the salvation of the souls of men.

And what was the result of this carrying religion into the days of the week? (1) They had "favor with all the people!" A religion that is put on and off with the Sabbath has little favor among men, but a religion that manifests itself at all times, that is practical and helpful, that is visible daily in the home, in society and in the business pursuits of life will always find favor with men and influence them for good. (2) They found favor with God. God blessed them by giving them souls for their hire. Finding favor with the people and having the daily blessing of God, it is little wonder that these early Christians "did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God." A religion that is consistent will always bring joy and gladness. Let us therefore serve the Lord at all times, and His favor and blessing will be constantly upon us.

FOR ACCEPTING BRIBE

Warrant Issued For Arrest of George Beavers

A DEAL IN CASH REGISTERS

The Basis of an Indictment Just Found by Federal Grand Jury, Though a Number of Other Matters Have Been Probed Into

New York, July 18.—A bench warrant has been issued by Judge Thomas in the United States circuit court, Brooklyn, for the arrest of George W. Beavers, formerly chief of the division of salaries and allowances in the postoffice department, on an indictment found by the federal grand jury which charges him with accepting a bribe of $840. It is understood that payments to Beavers were traced back to purchases by the government of the Brandt-Dent Cash Registering Machine company. The postoffice inspectors found that Beavers had a large account in the Nassau Trust company, Brooklyn, and are said to have discovered that checks deposited there had been given by ex-Congressman Driggs. The warrant has not yet been served, and it is rumored that Beavers could not be found. It is stated that he will have until Monday to present himself and that an arrangement has been made with his attorneys to enter a plea for him at that time.

Washington, July 18.—The issuance of a bench warrant for the arrest of George W. Beavers, the former chief of the division of salaries and allowances of the postoffice department, is the culmination of an investigation that has been in progress in intervals since his sudden resignation from office last spring. A number of matters affecting his administration have been probed into, one of the first results of which was the cancellation of 3046 promotions that had been passed on by him, to take effect at postoffices throughout the country during the present fiscal year.

Subsequently other matters were taken up by the investigating officials. The case on which the present action of the grand jury is based, it is said, is a more recent development. The inspectors have worked continuously on the investigation and, it is said, that it was only within the past two or three days that the evidence finally was secured that furnished a basis for action by the federal grand jury.

Chief Postoffice Inspector Cochran has made several mysterious trips to New York in connection with the case and Inspector Mayer of Chicago, who worked up the case against August W. Machen, the former head of the free delivery service, has figured conspicuously in obtaining the evidence placed in possession of the district attorney at Brooklyn. Mr. Mayer made a hurried trip here Wednesday night to report the situation to the department.

The authorities are now searching for Beavers to place him under arrest. His present whereabouts are unknown. The postal officials were chagrined to learn of the publicity of the action of the grand jury in advance of the serving of the warrant. They regarded the news as premature and declined to discuss the matter on the ground that the time was not yet ripe to make a statement. Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow conferred with several of his assistants immediately after he learned that the action of the grand jury had become known. Subsequently he refused to answer all questions on the subject.

Unions Pledged to Arbitration

New York, July 18.—The signing of the arbitration plan of the builders and an agreement on the wage scale for another year by the Bricklayers' union, it is said, insures the return to work Monday of 75,000 men and the end of the building trades tie-up. The fact that 16 of the 22 local unions of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners have accepted the arbitration agreement is taken as further assurance that the strike will end.

Big List of Suspensions

Detroit, July 18.—At the first business session of the reunion of the society of Santiago de Cuba here Secretary-Treasurer Sharpe of the society reported that there was a total membership in good standing of 1793. For delinquincy and other reasons, 1596 members have been dropped. Major Sharpe reported a balance of $700 in the treasury.

Colombia Will Ratify Canal Treaty

Bogota, July 18.—Senator Caro, former president of Colombia, who is President Marroquin's political rival and who has been the leader of the opposition to the Panama canal treaty, declares that, although personally still opposed to the treaty, in his opinion the opposition will be beaten and the treaty will be ratified.

Russian Famine Averted

London, July 18.—The Standard's correspondent at Odessa says the sudden cessation of heavy rains, followed by hot ripening weather, has saved the crops at the 11th hour. Harvesting is now in full swing throughout the whole of south Russia, and a fairly abundant yield is assured.

Detroit, July 18.—At the Windsor Driving club races King Charles, owned by D. W. Maloney of White Plains, N. Y., dropped dead on the track at the conclusion of the final heat in the 2:09 pace. Over exertion, resulting in the rupture of a blood vessel, was the cause of death.

ON A STAAIGHT TRACK

Express Dashes Into Passenger Car on a Providence Trolley Line

Providence, July 18.—A serious trolley car collision occured here which resulted in severe injuries to four persons and a bad shaking up for about 35 others. The injured are Mrs. G. J. Vesta, injuries to back and side; George H. Covill, motorman, severe injuries to back; William O. Pratt, face bruised and teeth loosened; Charles A. Fitzgerald, injuries to back.

An Auburn and Eden park car stopped at the corner of Hempstead street and Elmwood avenue when an express car, heavily laden, crashed into it from behind, throwing the passengers roughly about. Motorman Covill was thrown backwards through the open front window of the car, while Conductor George W. Arnold of the same car saved himself by getting quickly into the street when he saw the express car approaching. The accident happened on a straight track and on an up grade.

Found In a Home

Boston, July 18.—Miss Anna R. Borchers of Chicago, a student at Chicago university, who disappeared from Cambridge early in the week, has been located in St. Joseph's home for working girls in this city. Miss Borchers came here with the Illinois delegation to the convention of the National Educational association and contemplated taking a course at the summer school at Harvard college. The young woman had studied very hard and by the time the convention closed she was afflicted with nervous prostration. While wandering aimlessly about she stumbled upon St. Joseph's home and, going in to rest, the idea suggested itself to her that it would be a good place at which to stay and she remained.

Tobacco Crop Below Normal

Hartford, July 18.—Reports from various sections of Hartford county indicate that the outlook for the tobacco crop is unsatisfactory. The cold and dry weather of May, followed by the excessive rains of June, has made the crop very backward, and in some sections the yield will not exceed 50 percent of a normal harvest. The value of last year's crop in this county approximated $4,000,000, but the figures will be much smaller this year.

Manslaughter Charged

Chelsea, Mass., July 18.—Frank E. Harrington, driver of the heavy wagon which ran over and killed Rosie Elkins, was arraigned in court, charged with manslaughter and drunkenness. He entered a plea of not guilty to both charges. Harrington was held in $1000 for manslaughter and $100 for drunkenness. Patrick Garrity, who was the "lumper" on the wagon, was charged with drunkenness and was fined $5.

Training Ship Made Good Time

Boston, July 18.—Massachusetts nautical training ship Enterprise has completed the first stage of her foreign cruise. A cable message reports her arrival at Horta, Azores, with all well on board. The Enterprise sailed from Provincetown July 2, so that her voyage to the islands was made in the quick time of 15 days, considering that she is supposed to have traversed the entire distance under sail.

Railroaded From the Hub

Boston, July 18.—After he had been positively identified as a famous crook and a man who had served time in a Parisian prison for the larceny of 13,000 francs from an employe of the Paris bank, Robert LaBlanche, 35 years old, was sent out of town by the police. There was nothing on which to hold him. He had come here to intercede for a friend who had been arrested for pocket picking.

Train Stopped For Drowning Boy

Boston, July 18.—Francis Mullaney, aged 9, was drowned while in bathing in East Boston. As the boy was struggling in the water a Revere beach train passed. The conductor stopped the train and Brakeman Wentworth dove into the water and got the boy. His efforts were in vain, for the boy's life had gone.

Lynn, Mass., July 18.—A small fire in the building at 15 Munroe street last night nearly caused the deaths of C. O. Wyman and E. Y. Austin, who were asleep in a room on an upper floor. Patrolman Kane broke in the door and got both men into the fresh air in time to save them.

CONSTITUTION WINS

From Reliance on Time Allowance In Cruise of Thirty-Seven Miles

New Haven, July 18.—The latest aspirant for cup defending honors, Reliance, was defeated by Constitution in the initial run of the New York Yacht club cruise from Glen Cove to this port. The new boat led almost from the start and was in her usual position at the finish, but Constitution, after being at one time more than a mile astern, came up with a rush at the close and was only 59 seconds behind her rival at the line. As Reliance allows Constitution 2:17 in 37 miles, the length of the run, the latter won by 1:18.

The day, with its light shifting breezes was long and at times tedious, but the close finish between the two 90's made the end interesting as well as exciting. Starting in the lightest of following winds, the first 10 miles was practically a drift, the yachts of the fleet being spread over the broad waters of the sound, seeking breezes. Half way along a light southeaster came rippling up and helped matters for an hour, carrying the yachts almost within sight of New Haven. Then it gradually worked round and increasing in strength drove the fleet home like a great flock of gulls, the three 90-footers sweeping over the line under all sail, including bellying spinnakers.

Shamrock III's Great Performance

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 18.—That Sir Thomas Lipton's gallant cup hunter was in her sweetest humor and finest racing trim she manifested by showing her clean heels to Shamrock I from start to finish over a 30-mile course and winning by 11:44, elapsed time, a decisive victory. Besides outsailing the old boat Captain Wringe and his cup candidate had to deal also with the shrewd sailing master of Shamrock I, Captain Bevis, and that keen hunter for a favorable slant of wind was a factor to be reckoned with. Twice in the shifting wind the captain of the former candidate got the better of it in a shift of wind after the challenger had established a big lead. Only the challenger's superior heels enabled her to regain her advantage. The upshot of it was the Shamrock III beat Shamrock I by 7:38 going to windward and 4:06 running home. If Captain Bevis had not sailed the old boat like a wizard it would have been minutes better.

Schwab Said to Be Hard Pushed

Pittsburg, July 18.—Rumors have been prevalent here that Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, is in financial distress. It was said that Schwab had been called for loans aggregating $4,000,000 by bankers of this city. Brokers who would not stand any chance of handling stocks for the steel president assert that one broker here was given a big block of stock to sell for Schwab. The size of the order was so great that the brokers split the order up among four other houses, so as not to attract too much attention to the sales.

London, July 18.—Countess Mabel Russell has forgiven and become reconciled to her husband, a coachman named William Brown, who married her at Portsmouth under the title of Prince Athrobald Stuart de Modena, a Bavarian nobleman. Brown, who disappeared shortly after the marriage, was arrested on the charge of making false entry in the marriage register. He pleaded guilty on June 30 of misdemeanor and was sentenced to two days' imprisonment. As he had been in custody some time he was immediately released.

End of Petition Proceedings

Washington, July 18.—It is stated by the secretary of state that the incident created by the presentation of the Jewish petition to Russia is closed. The correspondence consisted of an instruction to Mr. Riddle, United States charge at St. Petersburg, stating in detail the petition and instructing him to present the same to the foreign office if it were willing to receive it. It is stated by Mr. Riddle that the foreign office would not receive it under any circumstances and Secretary Hay so informed the B'Nai B'Rith committee.

Of Interest to Importers

Washington, July 18.—The board of general appraisers has advanced 10 percent the value of a lot of diamonds, valued at something over $175,000, imported by a firm of Cincinnati jewelers. The importers contended that they had bought the diamonds at a bargain and that the invoice correctly stated the price paid. The government, however, holds that duties are assessed on the actual market value of goods imported and that duty must be paid on that basis.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Disappearance of Disturbing Factors Causes Great Encouragement

New York, July 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: During recent months the two disturbing factors have been labor controversies and weather conditions, but each week has brought better things in these two respects until the outlook contains much that is encouraging.

Retail trade in seasonable merchandise is fully up to the average and there is less than the customary midsummer quiet among wholesalers, while the preparations of jobbers and manufacturers indicate confidence in a large fall business.

It is a season of uncertainty in the manufacture of cotton goods and nothing in the nature of improvement can be expected until the artificial position of the raw material is radically altered. Supplies of cotton goods in first hands are low and there is no effort to make spot sales. Buyers fill their requirements for immediate distribution, but in no department of this great industry is there any inclination to anticipate needs of even the near future.

Western jobbers are operating freely in the Boston footwear market, both on contracts for spring goods and supplementary fall orders. Eastern wholesalers are also purchasing additional fall supplies and New England factories are fully occupied.

It was natural that a satisfactory official report as to grain conditions should produce a lower level of quotations. Trade and other private estimates promise a total yield in the three leading cereals fully equal to any preceding record.

A Gay Old Salt

New York, July 18.—Captain Edwin C. O'Bryan, who was arrested for flirting with girls on complaint of his wife, although he is the father of 19 children and has one greatgrandchild, was held in $500 bail for trial in the Yorkville police court. None of the dozen or more girls whom his wife accused him of kissing was in court. The ancient mariner wasn't the least bit abashed by the allegations. "I think, your honor, I have as good a right to tickle a pretty girl under the chin or kiss her if she doesn't object as a policeman has, and they do it right along,'" he asserted. O'Bryan is 78 years old.

Mayor Harrison's Warning

Chicago, July 18.—The riotous conduct of the strikers of the Kellogg Switchboard company and their sympathizers during the last four days impelled Mayor Harrison to issue a proclamation last night declaring that all persons who in any other way interfere with the work of the police will be promptly arrested and punished. Heavy rain yesterday afternoon and evening prevented possible trouble by dispersing the mobs, and the work of handling freight from the plant of the Kellogg company was not interfered with as much as on former days.

Alexander's Cruel Character

Vienna, July 18.—The Zukunft publishes an article written by Georgevitch, who was premier in Servia at the time of the late King Alexander's marriage with Queen Draga, in which he asserts that Alexander hired an assassin to kill his father, King Milan, because the latter opposed his marriage. This scheme proving a failure he had all the radical leaders arrested and gave orders that they should be shot, which would have been done but for the intervention of the Emperor of Austria.

Russia a "Guardian of Peace"

St. Petersburg, July 18.—The relations between Russia and Japan are the subject of much comment in the newspapers here. They attribute the strained situation to the "attitude of the newspapers published in Japan with the aid of English money." They assert that Russia stands as the guardian of peace in Asia and point out the lack of wisdom on the part of Japan in allowing herself to be influenced by Great Britain, "who, in the event of war, would not assist her."

TREASON IN PORTUGAL

Military Implicated In Conspiracy Against King

THE PINCH OF POVERTY

Makes Subjects Restless and Causes Hundreds of Thousands of Public Employes to Clamor For Salaries Which Are Not Forthcoming

Berlin, July 18.—A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Lisbon says that a number of officers from the Fifth Portuguese infantry have been arrested on the charge of conspiring against King Charles. They will be tried by court martial. Suspicions of a widespread conspiracy against the dynasty have been entertained for some time, the instigators being officers who were cashiered some time ago. Other regiments are said to be affected.

A political turnover in Portugal would surprise no one who has made a study of the conditions there. The country virtually is bankrupt. Portugal, like Spain, has drawn always on her capital—the colonies; and the capital has long since been exhausted, and little credit even remains. Little, if anything, in Portugal that means anything is Portuguese. The country produces little of what it needs, and its natural sources of revenue have been sold, as have its colonies, to foreign concessionaries. The country buys everything, and has nothing to sell. And, having long since paid out all its capital of natural resources, it is naturally heavily in debt to everyone. On top of all this poverty the country tries to live up to the old order of prosperity. There are some 600,000 public employes, all drawing salaries, or trying to, in a population of 5,000,000 inhabitants. The small army has 94 generals, and officers of lesser rank are almost an obstruction in the streets. The cafes are full of counts and viscounts, but many of them fail to draw salaries, though they try hard to do so. All this means that, with no money coming in, some one doesn't get paid. But taxation is high, incomes are small, and the great mass of people feel the pinch badly and when poverty pinches hard there is apt to be an outcry from the pinched. This outcry has been heard very ominously in Portugal of late; and the cry is, as always, against the governing class. Republicanism is a great and growing force in Portugal, as in Spain. The Republicans are not sure what they want, but they want a change—and a little money on account. For instance, a regiment of soldiers at Oporto, having had no pay for some time, revolted—while Lisbon was welcoming King Edward—badly mauled their colonel, and "proclaimed" the Portuguese republic. They were quieted, mostly with promises; and, because such an incident would somewhat mar the sentiment of the royal fraternizing, the news of it was largely suppressed, and the cables were watched. But the soldiers want their pay as badly as ever.

Then there is the struggle between the king and government on one side and the clergy and religious orders on the other—the peasantry and the aristocracy, especially the provincial element of the nobility, siding with the church, whereas the cities and towns and what may be described as the urban laboring masses are all for king and for government. One sees there the rare and unusual spectacle of a monarch fighting for liberal doctrines and for the rights of his people against the forces of reaction, the latter being bent upon driving King Charles into exile and determined to place upon the throne in his stead the legitimist pretender, the Duke of Braganza, who, educated by the Jesuits, the son of the only princess of the blood now living who has taken the vow of a nun and become the inmate of a convent, is imbued with all the most reactionary doctrines and looks upon liberalism and constitutional government as a work of the devil. The forces are pretty evenly matched. For if the peasantry are obtuse and ignorant they are at the same time obstinate, while the laboring masses of the cities and towns are too extensively affiliated with socialism to enable the king to rely altogether upon their loyalty and championship of his cause.

Should the civil war break out England would probably take a hand in the game. For she is bound by ancient and modern treaties to protect not only the kingdom from foreign invasion, but likewise its now reigning dynasty from internal revolution; and it was in response of her treaty obligations of this nature that in 1836 she sent an army and a fleet to Portugal for the purpose of restoring to the throne Queen Maria Della Gloria, grandmother of the present king, and driving out of the country her uncle, King Miguel, father of the present legitimist pretender, who had usurped the crown.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Manshester has the largest valuation of all the Essex county towns—about $11,000,000, while Peabody is a close second with a valuation of nearly or quite $9,000,000. But there is a large difference in the number of polls assessed in the two places, Manchester having about 600 and Peabody nearly 3500. One is a town composed largely of workers, and the other a town with some tax dodgers in it.—Lynn Item.

☞ "What shall we do with the Negro? What shall we do with the race which produced Booker Washington and the last friendless black wretch that writhed in the fire to the howling of a mob?" asks the San Francisco Call. Of course. What shall we do with the white man? What shall we do with the race that produced George Washington and Abraham Lincoln and Ralph Waldo Emerson and Walt Whitman, and also the mob that poured kerosene over the black man and took away bits of his charred bone for souvenirs? While we are asking questions, lets ask all we can think of.—New Bedford Standard.

Clerk McLaughlin.

William J. McLaughlin, who for 14 years was an assistant to Joseph O'Kane clerk of the Boston common council, died early yesterday at his father's summer residence at Houghs Neck. He had been ill only two weeks. His death was caused primarily by pneumonia, but it was complicated with rheumatism and peritonitis. He was 28 years old.

Previous to becoming an assistant to Mr. O'Kane, he was a messenger to City Clerk Joseph H. O'Neil, and when Edwin U. Curtis succeeded the latter as city clerk, McLaughlin was promoted to the common council clerk's office.

He was considerable of an athelete, very popular with all who knew him, always courteous and accommodating to whoever called upon for official service.

During the Spanish war he was boatswain in the naval brigade, and at the time of his death he held the position of ensign. He was also a member of council 108, Knights of Columbus.

Surprise Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hayden was given a surprise party last evening by the employes of the Street department, at their home on River street. The employes presented Mr. Hayden with a watch, and Mrs. Hayden with a chair. Mrs. Hayden was presented with a silver berry spoon by Commissioner Knowlton. Refreshments were served and a general good time was enjoyed.

Cadets Break Camp.

The program at the camp of the Cadets at Hingham yesterday included guard mounting, rifle practice, battalion drill, inspection and muster, and battalion parade. For diversion Cos. A and D played baseball for the championship and Co. D won 6 to 2. Today at 11 A. M. the corps broke camp, returning to Boston.

A MODERN PLANT.

And Power Enough to Supply Street Railways of Twelve Towns.

Work on the foundation of the large new power plant of the Old Colony street railway at Quincy Point is progressing favorably, although owing to the nature of the ground work is necessarily slow. The land where the buildings are to be erected is sandy, and in order to get a solid foundation for the heavy machinery it is necessary to excavate quite deep, and as the land is but little above the water level, progress can not be other than slow. After the excavating the holes are filled with concrete so that they are perfectly solid.

A good part of the concrete foundation already in place, and a large gang of men are at work night and day. No less than seven engines are located about the works which are kept at work pumping water and hoisting the material excavated.

One of the two large stacks is nearly completed. This stack is 125 feet high and rests on a foundation 28 feet square.

When completed the plant will be one of the most modern. It will be equiped with turbine engines which are very powerful and occupy but little space.

The station will supply current for all of the lines in Brockton and everything north of Brockton to the Boston line. This included Abington, Rockland, Weymouth, Hingham, Holbrook, Avon, Campello, Randolph, Milton and Quincy.

It is proposed to run the feed lines under ground from the power house to the junction of Chubbuck and South streets from which point they will be on poles through private land to Brockton. The job is an expensive one, and will cost a large sum of money, but when completed will give the street railways in the places mentioned all the power required.

Thomas B. Watson.

[From the Braintree Observer.]

It is with deep regret that we are compelled to chronicle the passing away from this life of one of the most promising young men of our village, Thomas B., only son of Mr. Thomas A. and Mrs. Elizabeth Watson, at the age of only 19 years, 11 months. He was a bright, energetic youth, successful in his undertakings, with apparently a brilliant future in store for him.

He was educated in the public schools and Thayer Academy of this town, also taking a course at the Institute of Technology in the city. He had been out of health for some time, but bore his suffering patiently, always looking forward to a time when he should regain his health and endeavoring to encourage those around him by cheery words and prophecies.

But a little over two years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Watson were bereaved of their second son, Ralph, thus making their present loss all the more keenly felt. The funeral services were held from his late home, Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Rev. Robert Cochrane officiating. Several beautiful selections were rendered by the Ladies' Schubert Quartette of Boston,

The floral tributes were beautiful and completely surrounded the casket.

FAMOUS GIBRALTAR.

Seen by Quincy Young Ladies Under Favorable Circumstances.

A party of five Quincy young ladies sailed from Boston on the S. S. Vancouver, Saturday, June 6, for a three months' tour of Europe. The following letter of Miss Etta M. Prescott was not written for publication, but will be found of interest, and will be followed by others:

On Board S. S. Vancouver.
June 18, 1903.

Well, we are on the blue Mediterranean, but it is not blue. Don't blame the sea though, for the sky has that white grey color. It is lovely sailing these last two days; ever since Sunday in fact. I am dressed thinner than any day before, and those who have cotton waists have brought them forth. We are sitting here on deck without hat or coat or rugs.

We lost time in leaving the Azores, so the next question stirring people all up was "would we get to Gibralter in time to see it before dark?" It is the most amusing thing the different stories that start and float around the ship. They say, and they say, until if one believes all, one worries all the time.

You know I do not cross bridges, etc., and in this case it would have been foolish, for we had the best luck imaginable. We began to see land Tuesday morning at breakfast time, and this was Cape St. Vincent, the first point of Portugal. This we followed along during the forenoon, and then went out of sight of land again as we steamed toward Gibralter.

We did not see land again until about five o'clock. I am becoming very expert in discovering land as it first appears as a dim cloud. As we got near enough to see, there were bald cliffs, reddish sandy looking, reminding me of Mexico. Soon points could be seen on the other side and that was Africa's barren shore. But that did not come up wonderfully bright.

We all got up in the bow to see if there was a chance of getting a glimpse of "Gibbie." But now we know for sure we could not see it before dark. There were sixteen passengers to land there. Passports and lot of red tape needed by people going there to stay, and as it turned out, no landing could be made after a certain hour in the evening. We did not know this and were afraid passengers would be landed and we go on and see nothing.

Well, we just had a treat. We came into the harbor at nine in the evening. There was this great black shadow up in front of us, and hundreds of twinkling lights along the shore, extending half way up its slope. There were dots of light on the water and these were English men-of-war.

As we slowed down, rockets were thrown from the steamer to announce our coming, and soon an answering flash came from the very top of the height where the signal station is. And then a light shot out from the shore and a boat danced toward us. Our papers were examined, and we, not knowing what is going on, are on the anxious seat.

Word comes that we can land at six in the morning, and stay until eight. Whoops of joy! We all troop to the dining saloon and eat, instead of going to bed as we should, in view of the fact that we were to get up at five o'clock. And everybody seemed to talk after they went to bed.

The stewardess poked all manner of fun at us in the morning because she found us up when she came to call us. This is a side of steamer life I did not know about; trotting around to get everybody up. Of course, though, everyone can stay in bed if they want to, and have their breakfast brought to them.

Well, we gulped coffee and ate crackers, and rushed for the small boat. O! it was a gorgeous morning, and if we were not in luck to see Gibralter lighted at night, and then to see it by day too.

It is the quaintest town, and the market place—my—little donkeys with baskets banging on both sides with fruit piled up. Green leaves all around the edge of the baskets. The little donkeys amble through the streets. Some of the baskets hold fish, some, long loaves of bread. Women come out from the house to buy as the donkeys bring up to the door. Such delicious strawberries; very large, piled up cone shape in oval shaped baskets with green leaves fringing the edge.

My next letter will tell of Naples.

—Twenty-five thousand pairs of shoes, the largest shipment ever made in Rockland in one day, were sent out Monday by Rice & Hutchins. Three cars were required, and they were covered with pictorial posters advertising the goods. One car went to a firm in Cincinnati, another to Chicago, and the third to St. Louis.—Stoughton Sentinel.

The lean Meat of Wheat.

GLUTEN—is the prime muscle-making constituent of Wheat, and its flavoring principle.

Indiana Wheat is richest in Gluten, yet 60 per cent of even that best wheat is,—Starch.

Starch is a mere fat-former,—heating in Summer,—dyspeptic,—and a poor strength food.

PRESTO quick-flour is rich in Gluten, with only a low percentage of Starch, and is milled down to such unusual fineness, and uniformity, that it works into pastry twice as quickly, and twice as evenly, as other flours.

Because of this uniform fineness its tiny particles are promptly penetrated, and digested, by the Gastric juices of the stomach, being thus converted into strength long before ordinary flour starts conversion into fat.

Not six per cent. of American flour is equal to PRESTO in nutrition, flavor, and "keeping" qualities.

Yet Cake, or Pastry, made from it costs a trifle less than from common flour—as comparative recipes prove.

PRESTO needs no Baking Powder, and much less than other flours, of that costly and indigestible thing—"shortening."

Note relative costs in next ad.

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

Chas. C. Hearn Offers Popular Medicine at Half Price.

Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money, for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half arice. In addition to this large discount he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty-cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist Chas. C. Hearn, that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment, for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr Howard's specific will cure. But if by any chance it should not, Chas. C. Hearn will return your money.

The specific is very pleasant to take, coming in the form of small granules, and there are sixty doses in every package. It is especially convenient when traveling, and no one should start on a journey without a bottle of this reliable medicine. 18-22-25-29

M'KAY FINED.

One of the Alleged Fourth of July Disturbers.

Murdock McKay, who it is alleged was one of the crowd at South Quincy on the morning of July 4, was given a hearing this morning in the district court, upon a complaint for assault on Officer Daniel H. Doran.

Doran, who is a special officer, said that he went to assist other officers, when McKay was pushing and he told him to stop. That McKay then came through the crowd and grabbed him by the throat. Officer Thorne then came up and pulled McKay off. He also testified that there was a crowd of 3000 or 4000 people gathered in the front of Malnati block, and it was as light as day, as there was a bright fire.

Officer Doran and Thorne identified McKay as the man who made the assault of Doran. They obtained the name of McKay from a man named Morrison who has since left town.

McKay, the defendant, testified he was at South Quincy at the time in question, but he did not fight or push anyone, or have any trouble. Had not seen Doran until in court. Was not on good terms with Morrison as he had had some trouble with him over a woman.

John Clark who was with McKay testified that McKay had no trouble with anyone. Did not see Doran.

John McPherson was with McKay all the evening and said there was no disturbance.

Cassie Forbes was present at South Quincy on the morning in question and saw the assault on the officer. It was not McKay who assaulted the officer.

Miss Chick was also present. She saw McKay and was near him at the time of the alleged assault. She did not see McKay have any trouble or assault anyone.

McKay was found guilty of assault and a fine of $8 was imposed. He appealed.

COURT ON WHEELS.

Law Outfit to Travel Around Indian Territory In a Wagon.

An itinerant court was recently started in the western district of Indian Territory, says a Muskogee special to the New York World. Commissioner Leekly of Muskogee, accompanied by United States Marshal Leo L. Bennett and a corps of deputies, will be conveyed in a wagon to various parts of the district. A tent will be set up at each stopping place, warrants will be issued, and the deputies will round up offenders, who will be tried on the spot.

The court will have the assistance of United States Judge C. W. Raymond and United States District Attorney Mellette. It is expected that scores of boot leggers, horse thieves and other offenders will be bound over to the federal grand jury. In the fiscal year ending July 1 more than 1,000 cases have been disposed of by Judge Raymond in the western district.

A Novel Railway System.

The only suspended electrical railway system in existence is soon to be opened in Germany, says Harper's Weekly. It has been built between Barmen, Elberfeld and Wohwinkel and runs for most of the way over the river Wupper. It was found impossible to make a surface railway of the line, as there was no available land to spare for it, and an underground road would have been too costly, so the plan of a suspended system above the river was decided upon as a way out of the difficulty. It is believed that the suspended railway system will solve the problem of high speed passenger traffic abroad, and already there are projects on foot for a 100 mile an hour suspended line between London and Brighton.

Plan to Benefit Working Girls.

People in Paris who are interested in giving working girls a bit of pleasure now and then have devised a scheme where worthy girls are given two tickets to a good theater once in awhile, says the New York Tribune. The scheme calls for an elaborate system of registration, but it is working to perfection. The kaiser is thinking of introducing the idea into the royal theaters in Germany, and the Parisians want Andrew Carnegie to introduce it into the United States, as they claim that it would do more good than libraries.

A Song of Summer.

This about the summer time—just let the thunder roll!
It's good to just be living, with the glory in your soul!
The light is shining bright,
And the stars are out at night,
And the rivers are a-ripple through the valleys of delight!

This about the summer time—the green in all the trees,
The shadows of the branches, the drowsy hum of bees,
The cool and dreamy dells
Where the cattle shake their bells,
And the quiet of the twilight when the day sighs sweet farewells!

Far sweeter is the summer time than winter with its glooms,
For not a vale or meadow but is beautiful with blooms;
The glory of the light
In the morning and the night
And the singing of the mocking birds in valleys of delight!

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

What is true of an individual is true of a nation. Its character depends on what is back of it.—Rev. Thomas Van Ness, Congregationalist, Boston.

The Love of Christ.

We live in Christ's affections. We live in him because he loves us; he lives in us because we love him.—Rev. T. W. Campbell, Presbyterian, Long Island City, N. Y.

Concern of the Present.

We are not bothering about what kind of a body we are to have after the resurrection, but about the kind of a body we have now.—Rev. I. M. Haldeman, Baptist, New York.

The Sacrificial Life.

How careful Jesus is with the sacrificial life! If a man undergoes suffering, he deserves strength, and if a Christian suffers he, too, gains strength. In the one it is akin to the brute force; in the other it is akin to the angel.—Rev. L. H. Harris, Episcopalian, Atlanta, Ga.

Accuracy of Divine Knowledge.

God's knowledge of men is accurate, and he never makes an undue estimate of character. He knows the reason of every man's peculiar walk, whether it be correct or otherwise, and will duly reward the man who walks uprightly.—Rev. George Adams, Methodist, Brooklyn.

Philosophy of the Happy Life.

Accept the philosophy of a happy life; dismiss anxiety. Anxiety is useless; anxiety is unhealthy; anxiety is paralyzing; anxiety is the foe of faith, hope and love; anxiety is a sin against God, Christ, the church, the family and one's own soul.—Rev. Dr. Landrum, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

Everyday Heroism.

One other indispensable element of heroism is self sacrifice. "Self supreme will blight life; self subdued will find life." Heroism in common life is costly. It carries heavy burdens. It gives self denying service. But it is worth the cost. The selfish life is a libel on humanity and an offense against God.—Rev. George A. Mackintosh, Presbyterian, Cleveland.

The Physical Man.

In primitive times people laid stress upon the physical strength and manly force of their leaders. Now we have different standards, as intellectual and moral excellence count for so much in those who guide and govern us. Then experience has taught us that there may be a small soul in a large body and a great soul in a small body.—Rev. J. S. Lindsey, Episcopalian, Boston.

Mental Evolution.

As there is an evolution on the physical side of things, so there is an evolution on the mental side of things. And as physical forces have played for centuries upon matter and gradually worked up to one giant realization—man—so mental forces have played upon facts for centuries and produced another gigantic realization—the word.—Rev. A. Roeder, Swedenborgian, Orange, N. J.

The Crown of Humanity.

Jesus Christ is the pearl and crown of humanity. He is the loftiest specimen of manhood the race has produced. He is the fullest manifestation of divinity God has given the world. He is the effulgence of God's glory and the very image of his substance. He rises in unapproachable glory not only above men, but also above saints and seraphs and above angels and archangels.—Rev. R. S. McArthur, Baptist, New York.

The Discontent of Man.

Discontent seems to be an integral part of human nature. We are all of us discontented with things obtained in a temporal way. Rising from victory to victory, reaching the summit of earthly things, man realizes at last, often too late, that all is vanity. We can now see truly that Christ was another creator of religion, a bringer of new faith, a definer of the more godly life. Man is by nature religious. Born of God, he yearns for him.—Bishop Spalding, Catholic, Philadelphia.

The Standard of Virtue.

The infallible test of any virtue is to compare it with that which we know is genuine. God has given us a standard of comparison. Jesus of Nazareth is God's idea of genuine manhood. Pilate had the answer to the question if he could only have understood him into whose face he looked. Jesus spoke no word in reply. There was no need of words. Jesus himself was the answer. Here was a union of God and man, without which there can be no genuine, unalloyed righteousness. Here was one who served man, but received his reward from God. Man gave him a cross; God gave him his crown.—Rev. Edward L. Jones, Baptist, New York.

Blotting Out Imperfections.

Never give any man a chance by the recital of some wrong or sin to turn his face for one instant from purity and right. When Leonardo da Vinci finished his great painting, the "Last Supper," he made a cup which was a masterpiece. In form and character and in the luster of the precious metal this central cup was clearly and beautifully wrought out. The common praise which was first heard from every lip was this: "How marvelous is the art displayed in the wine cup." This eulogium so incensed the great Italian artist that he took a great brush and blotted out the splendid cup as he said: "I meant the face of Jesus Christ to be the only and the central and the most important part of that picture. Whatever draws away the eyes of the beholder from that must be blotted out." And so whatever draws away the thoughts and the desires of our hearers and companions from truth and purity and love must be blotted out.—Rev. Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage, Presbyterian, Chicago.

THE DES MOINES

Cruiser Is Being Completed Very Rapidly at Fore River Plant.

The engines of the U. S. Cruiser Des Moines, now nearing completion at the Fore River shipyard, were recently given their dock trial with successful and satisfactory results in every way. The test lasted a couple of hours. With 65 pounds of steam in the cylinders, generated by the two after boilers—which will be the ones used under ordinary conditions at sea—the propellers revolved at the rate of 40 times a minute, and every part of the engines responded to the required demands.

The Des Moines' engines are of 4,700 horse-power, and are considered capable of making a speed of sixteen and one-half knots. The cruiser is being completed very rapidly; the standing rigging is being set up, and she will be ready for the top masts in a very few days. Almost all the interior furnishings of the officers' quarters are in, and the sheathing of the sides on the main deck is nearly completed, while the ventilators are on board ready to be set and the wiring for the electric light service is being rushed.

Another Big Ingot.

The second great ingot of carbon steel of the lot being specially cast for the Fore River Ship and Engine Company is on its way to the works from Pittsburgh. It weighs 109,000 pounds—just 1000 pounds less than the first ingot, received a few weeks ago, which is now being forged into a crank-shaft for one of the engines of the battleships.

Evidently a Misunderstanding

London, July 18.—According to authoritative dispatches received here an American warship visited a number of the islands on the northeast coast of Borneo and hoisted American flags and erected American tablets on seven of the islands, all of which are said to be British. They are all within a few miles of each other and spread over an area of 40 miles. They are all uninhabitated, but are shown on the admiralty charts. The affair is regarded here as capable of easy adjustment.

A Highly Interesting Rumor

Wellington, N. Z., July 18.—A rumor emanating from the French colony at Papeete, Island of Tahiti, is current in New Zealand that France intends to transfer its possessions in the eastern Pacific to the United States. The French possessions in the eastern Pacific have a total area of about 1520 square miles and their population is about 29,000.

Washington, July 18.—In carrying out the program for the reduction of the force in the Philippines, the secretary of war has directed that three regiments of cavalry and three regiments of infantry be returned to the United States as soon as transportation is available.

Held on Murder Charge

New York, July 18.—Charles Jackson, a negro driver, was arrested at his home last night suspected of being the man who murdered Charles W. Roxbury. He says he knows nothing about the murder. A pawn ticket for Roxbury's watch was in possession of Jackson's wife.

Ratification Confirmed

Washington, July 18.—Minister Squiers has cabled Secretary Hay confirmation of the newspaper reports of the ratification by the Cuban senate of the treaties ceding coaling stations to the United States and confirming the title of Cuba to the Isle of Pines.

HIS JUST REWARD

.....By PETER M'ARTHUR

Copyright, 1902, by Peter M'Arthur

BOZRAH could hardly be described as a deserted village because it had never been frequented. It consisted of one store and a station house on an inexcusable railroad that had been built during the railroad craze of a generation ago.

The 7 o'clock express was pulling away from the station and plunging into the darkness of an approaching thunderstorm. Sam McDonald, the storekeeper, who was also postmaster and express agent, was standing in his doorway looking at the slaty curtain of rain that was rising across the sky under a fleecy arch of wind cloud. Every moment the lightning was becoming more vivid and the thunder claps sounded nearer. He was on the point of retreating into the store when the station master called to him through the windy tumult:

"Hey, Sam! Here's an express parcel!"

"Lock it up in the freight room for the night!" he called back.

"But this has a special order with it, and it's insured," said the station master, coming toward the store at a run through the first heavy drops of the storm.

"The order says that it is to be delivered tonight," he continued as they both got under shelter. And he handed a little parcel to McDonald.

"Orders or no orders, it isn't going to be delivered in a storm like this," McDonald growled. Then he lit a lamp, for the darkness of midnight had come with the storm.

"Well, it's no funeral of mine," said the station agent. "You have the parcel, and it's your business to look after it."

In the meantime McDonald looked at the address and suddenly stood bolt upright. After a brief pause he put the parcel in his pocket and started toward the back door which led to the stable.

"Where are you going?" asked the station agent in surprise.

"To deliver this parcel!" McDonald called back with a savage laugh as he buttoned his coat and plunged out into the beating rain. A few minutes later the station agent heard McDonald speaking fiercely to his horse as he mounted in the stable yard and then for a few moments heard the splashing of its feet as it galloped away.

McDonald could see the road only in glimpses when there was a blaze of lightning. His frightened horse was constantly stopping, as if overwhelmed by the rain, but still the rider leaned against the storm and rode forward. The storm in his heart was so fierce that the tumult of the elements almost soothed him. Olive Lucas would have her birthday present even if he died in the attempt to deliver it.

It was a strange fate that made McDonald in his capacity of postmaster and express agent a go between for the scornful Olive and his rival. Letters had been passing between her and Harry Lawson with ever increasing rapidity, and he knew that the little parcel he was carrying was undoubtedly a love token for her birthday on the following day.

Olive Lucas was the only daughter of a farmer living on the rich flats of the Spadina river. As it frequently fell to her lot to go to the post office for the weekly paper and the family mail, and also to do a large part of the family shopping, the taciturn young shopkeeper saw a great deal of her and learned to love her with all the intensity of his repressed nature. The natural result of this propinquity was to waken a responsive feeling in Olive, so that when McDonald declared his heart with sudden vehemence she consented to be his wife; but, being young, she insisted on a year's delay before their marriage, and during that year she learned many things about her lover that she had not previously suspected. He was a man whose nature had not been softened by the fierce struggles of his early life. Instead of broadening him adversity had made him narrow and suspicious, and as soon as he conceived he had the right to dictate to her he developed into a jealous tyrant. As postmaster he saw all the letters she wrote and received and practically established a censorship over her mail. His was a love that demanded sacrifices rather than made them, and Olive was beginning to realize her mistake when Harry Lawson, an old playmate who had gone to Chicago some years ago, returned for a holiday. He was so delighted to find his little tomboy friend developed into a demure but lively beauty that he promptly lost his heart to her, and she reciprocated his affection.

A couple of days after Lawson had returned to the city a letter from him arrived at the post office addressed to Olive. McDonald recognized the handwriting and was unusually surly as he delivered the missive. Olive noticed his anger and knew its cause and received the letter with a defiant toss of her head. The result was a bitter quarrel and the end of their engagement. Next day she posted a letter to Lawson, and from that time on their correspondence was fast and furious.

If he had dared, McDonald would have destroyed the letters; but, with all his faults, his sense of duty was too keen to allow him to commit such a wrong. But to be obliged to take a love token from his rival to Olive instead of merely handing it out at the office was simply maddening.

As he neared the river flats where Olive lived the storm was rolling away to the east, and the moon in her first quarter was casting a faint light through the broken clouds. A short distance from the river bank his horse stopped suddenly and stared before him. McDonald raised his head and peered sullenly into the semidarkness. The little valley through which the Spadina wound was in reality the channel it had originally cut for itself through the plateau which it drained. As McDonald looked at it this valley appeared to be filled with a gray fog. While he was wondering vaguely at the unusual occurrence he became conscious of a dull continuous roar and realized that what he saw gleaming before him was not mist, but water. The little river was flooded and was once more filling its ancient channel. He then remembered that all the previous night and previous day there had been an unceasing series of thunderstorms sweeping across the north, where lay the sources of the river.

Owing to the improved drainage system the rainfall had all poured into the river at once, and the result was a flood as sudden and overwhelming as comes with the breaking of a mighty dam. As he looked at the flood of water he knew that the Lucas house on the river flats must at least be surrounded by water. Urging his horse to a gallop, he reached the river bank and found there a group of farmers who were looking out on the scene of destruction. By the dim moonlight and flashes of lightning that were still vivid they could see all kinds of wreckage floating in the boiling torrent. The Lucas home was already submerged to the second story, and Olive and her parents could be seen huddled on the roof awaiting a rescue that seemed impossible. The few boats owned by the farmers had been swept away by the waves that had rushed down the valley. The water had risen ten feet in as many minutes and was still rising. When McDonald realized the situation he was conscious of a fierce feeling of exultation. This new difficulty would only serve to make his martyrdom more complete, and Olive would get her gift from his rival with a greater sacrifice on his part. He felt that it would be a glorious revenge.

Having been a raftsman on the lakes in his youth, the stormiest water had no terrors for him, and he began to cast about for some means of reaching those who were in such deadly peril. He remembered that the farmer whose barn stood a few rods away had a tank wagon box that was used to carry water to the thrashing machine engine. It was made water tight, and, as it could keep water in, it could also, if closed, keep water out. It would make an excellent float for a raft.

Calling on the men who were standing on the river bank to come and help him, he ran to the barn, telling them on the way what he wished to do. Willing hands carried the tank to the edge of the water, and others lifted one of the wide barn doors from its hinges. This door they spiked securely on the top of the tank, and with a few strokes of an ax McDonald made a rude oar from a plank. This oar he fastened to the end of the raft with a rope, and, taking with him the lantern with which the farmer had been lighting him at his work, he got aboard his strange craft and was pushed out into the stream. With his heavy oar, which he used chiefly as a rudder, he worked his raft out into the current, which bore it toward the Lucas house. Mr. Lucas also had a lantern, and as he saw that rescue was coming he waved it frantically. Calculating his direction to a nicety and fighting the unfamiliar currents with the skill of a raftsman and the strength of a giant, McDonald forced the angry water to drive him straight toward his destination. The raft struck the house squarely, and as it did the building yielded perceptibly and tottered to its foundation. Realizing the danger, Lucas grasped Olive and hurled her forward upon the barn door, where McDonald, who had forsaken his oar for a moment, caught her and laid her in safety. As Lucas followed with his wife in his arms the roof seemed to slip from under him. A moment later they were all sweeping forward over the spot where the house had stood, and a mass of wreckage was plunging and tossing in the current ahead of them. As soon as they had trimmed their raft so that there was no danger of its upsetting McDonald again took the rudder and tried to steer for the shore, but they had been caught in the current, that was rushing like a mill race, and were being tossed along like a cork. Seeing that his wife and daughter were safe, Lucas picked up the lantern that had remained lighted through all the turmoil and held it up so that he could see the face of his rescuer.

"It's Sam McDonald!" he shouted to his wife and daughter over the roar of the waters.

"You have saved our lives, God bless you! You were not a minute too soon."

As Olive heard the name of her rescuer a sudden pain clutched her heart, and she remembered, as one who was drowning might, all that she had ever done to pain him. From time to time he was silhouetted against the sky by the receding lightning flashes, and in those sudden glimpses his stern face seemed almost heroic. As she watched him tugging at the oar she realized as she never had before the force of the man. Even in their terrible predicament she felt a sense of security that gave her leisure to doubt if she had really understood him and treated him right. Try as she might, she could not imagine her soft spoken and white handed favored lover facing such danger for her sake and showing himself so sternly masterful. Of course the time was not one in which to decide the future, but she felt an overpowering longing to at least beg her rescuer's pardon and thank him even with caresses for having saved her life and the lives of her parents.

In the meantime McDonald continued the terrible battle with the flood, but not until a bend in the river was reached was it possible for him to swing the raft out of the current into an eddy and guide it to the shore. When it finally touched land he plunged into the water and pushed the raft securely aground. As they all scrambled on to the land they began to overwhelm him with their thanks, but all he said in reply was:

"I simply did my duty. An express parcel came tonight for Miss Olive, with orders for it to be delivered at once, and now I can deliver it."

As he said this he handed the girl the little package. She detected the note of cruel exultation in his voice, though her parents did not, and she took the parcel from his hand mechanically without speaking a word. At this point a couple of farmers who had been watching the flood and had seen them land with their lantern came running up. After congratulating them on their rescue they insisted that they should go up to the farmhouse and get dry clothes. Although McDonald's errand was performed and he knew that the right thing for him to do was to return to his home, he could not resist the temptation to enjoy his triumph even further; so he yielded to the importunities of the farmers and accompanied them. While Olive was changing her dress in the spare bedroom she looked at the parcel that McDonald had brought so heroically and yet so ungraciously. Then she tore it open. When she saw what it contained she was thrilled with a pleasure that made her forget her recent danger and doubts and decided her as to what she should do. Returning to the general room of the house, she found McDonald standing apart from the others and noticed instantly the flash of bitter triumph in his eyes as he looked at her. Walking directly up to him, she spoke quietly, so the others could not hear:

"You have saved our lives, and for that we can never cease to be grateful, but you did it neither for love nor through humanity, but for hate and spite, and for that you shall have your reward."

Raising her hand, she showed him that it contained a diamond engagement ring, and, looking him fairly in the eyes with a level glance that told him that she would rather be lying at the bottom of the river than to have received her life at his hands when he had saved it in such a spirit, she slipped the ring on her finger and turned away from him.

SCOTLAND'S GREAT CANAL.

Undertaking Which Will Save Many Miles and Cost $50,000,000.

As was recently stated in a cable dispatch, the plans for the construction of a ship canal between the Firth of Forth, on the east of Scotland, across to the river Clyde, on the west, have been definitely arranged. The canal will cost $50,000,000, but powerful support is expected from the British government. One of the great engineering features of the scheme will be the carrying of the canal through the high ground near the Loch Lomond end. Frequent passing places will be made, says the New York Times.

An indication of the saving in distance that would be effected by the canal will be gained from the following figures: From the Clyde to ports on the east coast of Scotland, northeast of England and northwest of Europe, the distance saved would be from 529 miles to 238 miles. From the Firth of Forth to ports on the west coast of Scotland, northwest of England, Ireland, America and the Mediterranean the distance saved would be from 487 to 141 miles. From Tyne ports to the St. Lawrence river the distance saved would be 150 miles. From the west of Britain and northeast of Ireland to middle western ports of the continent the distance saved would be from 377 to 98 miles.

A MOSQUITO PARASITE.

Worm Discovered Which Is Said to Kill the Pest.

Dr. Stiles of the public health service at Washington is of the opinion that there is a parasite of the mosquito which may be employed to reduce the pest, says the New York Times. This is the mermis or round worm. It is a threadlike creature with six papillæ and lives in the stomach of the mosquito.

The insect was brought to the attention of the public health authorities by Professor John B. Smith of Rutgers college, a noted expert on mosquitoes. While little is known yet of the habits of the mermis, it is believed that it fastens on the mosquito in the water and accompanies its host as the latter develops from the pupa.

The infested mosquito is sluggish in its actions and evidently does not like its inhabitants. It has been proved beyond doubt that the mermis finally causes the death of the mosquito, and it is not unlikely that by cultivation the parasite may be made to exterminate or greatly reduce the mosquito pest.

—A New York policeman has just retired from the force as poor as when he entered it some years ago. A policeman in that city, with such a record, deserves a monument.—Old Colony Memorial.

The Busy World of Baseball

"Pop" Anson Says Major League Managers Can Be Improved on In Some Instances. The Davis Case. Quaker Diamond Gossip.

Adrian C. Anson, generally called "Pop," was one of the best known ball players in the country in his day, and in spite of the fact that he retired from the game many years ago he still likes to feel that he has something important to say concerning the great sport that made him famous. Anson recently visited Cincinnati, and the "fans," who, by the way, think he is the "real, real thing," gathered around him in droves to gather up the pearls of wisdom which ever and anon "Pop" lets drop from his lips.

Anson was coaxed into expressing his opinion on certain features of the game as played today, and he began by handing out his compliments to the rank and file of the managers now piloting the careers of the major league teams over the stormy and many times hurricane swept baseball sea.

Anson stated that according to his idea there were several teams in the major organizations, particularly the National, that were in sore need of a change in management, just as some of us poor, overworked, half starved folks are in need of a change of air, diet and, sad to relate, income. After lighting a fragrant perfecto, Pop said:

"I could name two or three teams right now that would be much better off if they had different men to look after the players, and I do not think that it would be such a hard matter to get the right men in their places. I do not wish it understood that I am knocking anybody, but simply stating what is the truth.

"And what applies to the National league teams is largely true of those of the American. Have I any idea of getting back into baseball as a manager again? Emphatically no, although the opportunities are not wanting.

"Since I retired from the management of the Chicago team I have had offers every season to take charge of teams, usually in minor leagues, but I have refrained from going into the game again, preferring to look after my business in Chicago, which keeps me busy and allows me more peace than I could possibly have as a manager.

"I feel certain that the only way in which I ever shall be connected with baseball again will be as a stockholder in some new club that is organized to rival a twelve club league. As a player or manager I am out of the race."

The Davis case came to the surface of the baseball world just at a time when harmony, above all other things, was desired, and if a compromise can be made whereby in the future such disagreements which endanger the supposedly friendly relations of the two major leagues can be placed before an arbitration committee the atmosphere would show fewer clouds. Of course the American league claims that President Pulliam had no right to allow Davis to play with the New York Nationals. Naturally Pulliam insists that his action was justified, and it is probable that the pros and cons of the question will not be thoroughly sifted until the coming of the millennium. Concerning the Davis case, Francis C. Richter, the well known Philadelphia authority says:

GEORGE DAVIS, FAMOUS SHORTSTOP.

"The baseball politicians are again occupying the center of the stage. Scarcely has the consolidation scare died out when another incident arises to disturb the baseball world. In giving the New York club permission to employ George Davis, the player awarded to Chicago by the peace treaty, on claim of a technical violation of that treaty by two American league clubs, President Pulliam caused a renewal of strained relations between the two major leagues and paved the way for a resumption of ruinous hostilities.

"Acting upon President Pulliam's advice the New York club committed the overt act, and it has remained for the National league to indorse or disapprove President Pulliam's course. Either decision will inevitably entail renewed discord within the recently tolerably harmonious organization. Where there was but one dissatisfied club there will henceforth be several disgruntled and distrustful clubs."

Harry Wolverton, the star third baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, may well be said to be one of the most valuable players of "Chief" Charley Zimmer's staff of green diamond artists. He has been out of the game for short periods several times this season, and his absence was directly responsible for the loss of four or five games. Harry is very popular with the "fans," but sometimes his temper gets the best of him, and then there is trouble in store for some one.

Wolverton is now back in the game, covering the third sack with his characteristic dash and accuracy, and perhaps he will be a factor in starting the sudden brace the Phillies are in need of if they wish to finish the season within striking distance of the top of the ladder.

HARRY WOLVERTON, STAR THIRD BASEMAN.

Chief Zimmer, it is reported, has not given entire satisfaction to the new owners of the Phillies. There are rumors in the air to the effect that the former president of the Players' Protective association will be deposed as captain next year, but that he will be given an opportunity to remain on the catching staff of the Phillies if he so desires. However, rumors are only rumors. Charley knows the game as do few others, and the management of the Quakers will go a long distance before they will find so able a man.

A BURKETT STORY.

Hart Tells How He Once Gave Jesse a Scare.

"Wonder if any of the 'fans' remember Jesse Burkett when he was a slim pitcher?" asked Charlie Hart as he watched the Chicago Americans defeat the St. Louis Americans in the Windy City recently.

"I caught Burkett way back in 1888, when we were working for Tom Loftus in Omaha. Loftus used to pay us off in good stories, now and then working the 'wait until I cash this check' game on us and helping us out with 60 cents and a few postage stamps. Burkett had a world of speed. I used to let him do his own signaling except in rare cases—when we were in a tight hole and he seemed to be up in the air.

"Once I frightened Jesse so badly that long after he got big and strong he feared I would get ferocious and turn on him. Big Morrissey was at bat. Morrissey in those days was a regular Brouthers with the stick. He liked best the low, wide ones and often straightened 'em out for four baggers.

"Three men were on bases and only one was out. Burkett began to float 'em up low for Morrissey. The batter reached for one and sent it about a furlong just outside first base. Luckily it was foul. While the boys were chasing the ball I walked out and gave Burkett the awfulest tongue lashing he ever got and drilled it into him that high ones would tie Morrissey in a knot. After that it was easy to backstop Burkett."

—A life prisoner in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus, who has served twenty-three years in confinement, was given permission by the warden on Saturday to pass beyond the walls that he might see for the first time an electric car. Those of us who are in the enjoyment of freedom will find it a hard matter to realize the emotions which must have filled the prisoner's breast as he was confronted by this evidence of the world's advancement within the last quarter of a century. We little imagine how easily we may be left behind in these progressive times. — Milford Journal.

OUR FASHION LETTER.

The Present Summer's Revival of the Old Styles.

A CRAZE FOR LONG SHOULDERS.

The Modes of 1830 Are Admirably Adapted to Evening Wear—Chic Black and White Combinations. Dainty Dress Accessories.

The fashions of this year are many of them revivals of past modes. Witness, for instance, the empire frocks and the pompadour designs in silk and muslin. The majority, however, are improved copies of the gowns worn a hundred years or so ago.

The development of the long shoulder is now a permanent fashion note. The people who most loudly protested against it are now most in favor of it. With the full skirt and the return to panniers, gaugings and plaits of all kinds the long shoulder, always suggestive of the 1830 period, naturally follows.

LINEN GOWN.

These 1830 fashions are admirably adapted to evening wear. Nothing is more becoming to young people than the fichu and the bertha. All angles can be softened by the skillful manipulation of a fichu in chiffon, muslin or lace.

The linen gown in the cut shows to good advantage the cape effect and the long shoulder line.

NEAT WALKING COSTUMES.

There is something very chic about a black and white wrap. Fringes play an important part in the trimming of all such fancy coats.

A mantle recently designed for an elderly woman was three-quarter length in soft moire antique, with a shoulder drapery of plaited silk fringe inserted with embroidered straps of black velvet lined with cream satin.

Walking costumes are increasing in chic, and this is possible because of the greater length of the skirt. The little coats now boast of application, fancy lapels and, in a word, all the ornamentation of a dressy tailor made.

WALKING COSTUME.

The long tailor made, by the way, exists only in a modified form for semidressy occasions.

The extreme fickleness of the weather this season has been exceedingly trying. The result is that modistes are striving to hit the happy medium in frocks for smart functions. Transparent necks have been softly lined, and a thin gown is provided with something substantial in the fashion of a stole, which can be worn on cool days without spoiling the effect of the toilet.

The walking costume in the illustration is of navy blue canvas trimmed with red and black embroidery.

IMPORTANT DRESS ACCESSORIES.

The accessories of dress mean a good deal in the way of its success. Every year more care is exercised in the designing of them.

The wide collar—almost a cape—of lace or any dainty material is the one prominent feature of the summer season, and it is seen on at least one gown or coat in every smart wardrobe.

The fichu, hand painted, embroidered or made of lace, is a welcome addition to a simple gown or to one which has grown narrow through the shoulders.

DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Tassels and applications of all descriptions decorate even the washable summer gowns, and no gown is a success without a few of these little adornments.

Irregular chiffon appliques come in all the pale tints and are so designed that they can be cut up and joined together to form collars, cuffs, etc.

A flat stole seen recently was of finest point de venise laid on ivory satin, and it had a border of marabou in the natural brown tint and round the collar many fascinating tails of the same feathers. Another superb stole of Irish point laid on lime green velvet had the round, flat collar finished with a deep frill of Irish lace.

The cut shows a dainty fichu of mousseline de soie trimmed with silk fringe and embroidered. There is also a collar of louisine silk trimmed with bands of lace.

SUMMER FASHION HINTS.

Unlined dresses of fine white lawn are very pretty and very smart. The waists are made with fancy yokes and fine tucks, while the sleeves are pretty fulled into a tightly fitting upper portion. Some have little turnover collars and cuffs of pale material embroidered in white. This is particularly fetching in pale blue when combined with a ribbon sash and neck ribbon of the same color.

TAILOR MADE HAT.

Dust coats of white sicilienne are very dainty to wear over thin gowns and protect the gowns themselves from the fading effects of the sun. A coat of this sort can easily be run up by the summer seamstress and merely trimmed with a loose collar of lace.

The plain straw tailor made hat is useful because it may be worn with gowns of any color simply by adding a chiffon veil of that hue. Among the novelties in veils, by the way, is one of pale lavender trimmed with an edge of ecru lace.

Floral garnitures are very smart on chip and bass shapes, and the "crushed" roses, bare of foliage and arranged in heavy masses or conventional lines, are extremely popular. Flower trimmed hats also have the addition of feathers, and the plateau now has a broad border of contrasting color.

The picture shows a tailor made hat of yellow straw trimmed with a twist of brown.

The Hull Beacon says: "Never has there come to Kemberma a more desirable family than that of Henry Hardwick, of Quincy. In that city they own a most elegant home and he is from one of the very best families and is senior partner of the Dark Quincy Granite Co., the finest quarry in the city. His father was most successful and left a large business to his two sons. He will doubtless make great improvements at Kenberma as he keeps everything in perfect repair. Not having a stable here his horses are kept in Quincy, but by another year things will be different. Hull has a substantial citizen in Mr. Hardwick and we trust more of his kind will come among us."

IS IN GREAT DISTRESS

Pope Suffers a Relapse and Is Very Restless

COULD NOT REMAIN IN BED

Because Limbs Were Uncomfortable and He Felt Pains All Over His Body—Fresh Proof of Wonderful Memory—Snapshots of Dying Pontiff

Rome, July 18.—Pope Leo suffered a relapse this morning and his condition is again regarded as serious. He slept a short time and when he awoke he was very restless and apparently in pain. He kept calling for Dr. Lapponi and for his valet, and despite all that could be done for him he appeared to be in much distress.

The pope received Mgr. Pifferi, his confessor, late yesterday afternoon.

His condition the latter part of yesterday showed some amelioration. The liquid in the pleura had not continued to rise, and the doctors decided to further postpone the operation.

Shortly after the noon hour the pope complained of suffering from soreness, owing to lying down so long, and succeeded in sitting up. He then arose from the bed, was dressed, and with assistance seated himself in his armchair.

When awake the pope usually appears to retain life only in his brilliant black eyes, though he recovered the lucidity of his mind yesterday morning and gave fresh proof of his wonderful memory, saying:

"Today is the fete of St. Leo. I have never failed to assist at mass since when almost a boy I came to Rome to participate in the jubilee of Leo XII. I wish to hear mass today."

The pontiff's desire was immediately gratified by Mgr. Marzolini celebrating mass, as he did the previous day, in the chapel adjoining the sickroom.

After the visit of the doctors the pope said he could not stay in bed, as it made him restless. His limbs were uncomfortable and he felt pains all over his body. Therefore, he wished to go back to his armchair. No opposition was made, as the doctors think that nothing now can do the pope much harm.

From last night's examination of the pope it appears that the liquid in the pleura remains at about the same level, which is marked with a dermographic pencil on the pontiff's side. Considering the physical condition of the pope the doctors do not believe it possible that his body can absorb it, as might a strong, well nourished organism.

After the visit of the physicians the pope received Cardinal Rampolla, who remained in the sickroom only a few minutes. He again gave the pontiff a full report of the prayers offered in his behalf all over the world. The pope, raising both hands, said: "I bless all those who pray to God for me."

Photographed In Dying Hours

Paris, July 18.—The Rome correspondent of The Gaulois says when Dr. Mazzoni entered the sickroom yesterday and found the pope seated in his armchair and feeling less exhausted, he said: "What would you say, holy father, if the doctor transformed himself into a photographer?" "By all means, my good Mazzoni," replied Pope Leo, smiling. Dr. Mazzoni then produced a camera and took a dozen shots of Pope Leo, who was taken seated with Dr. Lapponi standing beside him and Valet Centra kneeling at his feet.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The Castle Square Theatre attraction next week will be the favorite domestic drama "Fanchon" which has held its place upon the stage for more than a generation and always proved popular when properly presented. The play owes its origin to a tale by George Sand and the English version, known to the stage in this country was made from the German dramatization by Aug. Waldauer. The pretty story told by the play offers many strong dramatic opportunities to the artist entrusted with the title part and Miss Mary Hall possesses the characteristics suited to an ideal presentation of the scenes in which the young girl, who sways all hearts, is given prominence. Some artistic stage settings will be shown in this production and effective costumes will enhance the beauty of the groupings and tableaux.

The usual distribution of souvenir boxes of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The entertainment to be given at Keith's the week of July 20 will be one of the best of the summer season, for the central feature, the Fadettes orchestra, is surrounded by a great list of vaudeville celebrities, including Mayne Remington's quartet of pickannies, the cleverest midget "real coons" ever seen on the local stage; Palfrey and Hilton, trick and comedy bicycle riders; Brothers Tanean eccentric musical comiques; Dave Nowlin, monologue comedian; the Montrose troupe of acrobats, a wonderful organization; Dillon brothers, parody singers; Charles and Florence Gregson, refined singers and dancers, and Auguste Dowell, the noted athlete and physical instructor, who is so well known at Harvard College. An entire change of pictures will be made in vitagraph, including humorous and interesting subjects.

—A surplus of a little less than $53,000,000 resulted from the financial operations of the government during the fiscal year which ended last week. The revenues of the govrnment from all sources for the year ending June 30, were $558,887,526. The sources of revenue were: Customs, $283,891,719; internal revenue, $230,115,256; miscellaneous, $44,880,551.

BUILDINGS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The Illinois Building will stand on high ground. A broad veranda surrounding the building on all sides will form the lower tier of a pyramid. The apartments will form a second tier, and a square dome will crown the edifice. Gigantic statutes of Lincoln and Grant will flank the main entrance, and on each side of the drum of the dome will stand great sculpture groups symbolical of agriculture and other industries.

The main entrance leads to a rotunda reaching from the mosaic floor up through all three floors to the vaulted dome. The State room just behind the rotunda has an area of 50 by 60 feet inclusive of foyer and stage. Its ceiling will be deeply paneled and its walls will be ornamanted with mural painting—an epical frieze 6 feet wide telling the history of Illinois.

It will have parlors included in a men's suite and women's suite, smoking and writing rooms, an executive suite, commissioners' room, a hospital room, private rooms for the two commissioners, storage rooms, janitors' rooms, closets, etc., and is to cost $75,000, of which $25,000 will be expended in furniture and decorations. Watson & Hazelton, of Chicago, are the designers.

England Cannot Have Islands Off Coast of Borneo

OURS BY TREATY RIGHT

Admiral [illegible] Sent Gunboat to Survey and Mark Them and Under No Circumstances Will United States Part With Them

Washington, July 20.—No communication has yet reached the state department from the British government about several islands off the coast of Borneo, now in possession of the United States, which some members of the house of commons seem to think belong to Great Britain. The state department, however, is prepared to give prompt and conclusive answer when Lord Lansdowne's inquiry reaches here. Before leaving Washington Secretary Hay looked personally into the matter and satisfied himself that the British government had not the shadow of a claim on the islands in question.

When the inquiry reaches here acting Secretary Loomis, in replying, will call the attention of the London government first to the treaty of 1885 between Great Britain, Germany and Spain, by which the last named nation was to have title over all the islands outside a marine league's distance of the Borneo coast. Later, in the treaty which this government negotiated with the Sultan of Jolo for the purchase of certain islands belonging to him, a dragnet clause was inserted, claiming for the United States all those islands which had been ceded to Spain by the treaty of 1885.

On file in the office of Rear Admiral Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment, are the charts and maps showing the location of the seven islands in controversy, Baguan, Taganac, Bakkungaan, Libiman, Boaam, Sibaung and Langkayan. The islands are clearly outside of the marine league of the Borneo coast and, therefore, under the terms of the two treaties, belong to the United States.

It is said at the navy department that Rear Admiral Evans, knowing these facts, recently sent one of the Philippine gunboats to the islands to survey them and mark them as American territory.

It is explained that the islands have strategical importance and for this reason the United States under no circumstances would part with them.

MAY NOT SURVIVE THE DAY.

Pope Leo in State of Coma and Expected to Live But a Few Hours Longer.

Rome, July 20.—It is announced this morning that the condition of the pope is apparently stationary.

Now that the supreme last moment in the memorable life and reign of Pope Leo is expected almost hourly, the contrast between the quiet within and the excitement without the Vatican is most striking. In the vast palace there is a hushed calm of expectation, the only apparent wakeful souls being the Swiss guards. The doctors and attendants of the dying pontiff speak in whispers and move noiselessly about so that from the sickroom no sound comes except the heavy breathing of the unconscious pope or his occasional cries for Pio Centra and Dr. Lapponi. His tone is one of fear, as though he felt himself abandoned.

In reality sleep is very far from all eyes. No matter at what hour death comes the whole palace will spring into sudden life as though touched by a magician's wand. In the piazza of St. Peter's, on the contrary, all is movement, there being a regular encampment of journalists before the famous bronze doors, which are now closed in their faces and behind which the regular tramp of the Swiss guards can be heard. Many eyes are glued to the window in the pope's chamber overlooking the piazza, while the nearby cafes, especially those with telephones, are crowded. Bicycles ready for use are piled up outside them and cabs are lingering about in the hope of catching a fare.

The Osservatore Romano, the chief Vatican organ, has received orders to hold itself in readiness to issue almost at a moment's notice a special edition. The only thing wanting to complete the paper is the hour of Pope Leo's death.

The staffs of the other papers are at their posts, ready to issue special editions.

Shortly before midnight Dr. Lapponi said: "The pope at the present moment is in a state of coma which may be called a condition preceding the last agony, the duration of which it is impossible to forecast, although everything leads to the belief that this condition cannot last. To be more exact, he still is in a state of torpor and stupor from which, however, he rouses occasionally when he hears sharp sounds as, for instance, the insistent voice of one of his familiars calling loudly to him. Left alone he relapses immediately into a condition of torpor. At intervals he murmurs in his sleep, continuing to have forebodings that he is being abandoned by his valet, Centra, and myself. These are the symptoms of incipent cerebral anemia and general exhaustion. He can no longer turn in his bed without assistance and is being kept alive by artificial stimulants. During the last 23 hours he has had two injections of camphorated oil, three of caffeine and two of salt water, besides drinking stimulants."

Both the Italian government and the authorities of the Vatican have made final preparations for the pope's death. The government is rigidly censoring all telegrams and telephonic communications btween Italy and the rest of the continent.

Each hour added to the gravity of the reports from the sickroom of the pontiff Sunday, until all Rome has waited in momentary expectation of the announcement of his death. Since the state of depression seized upon the pope during the latter part of Saturday night, his condition went steadily downward and throughout the day the most intense anxiety prevailed. For the first time also the weather was strongly against him. A blistering heat fell upon the city and the great piazza of St. Peter's took up the fierce July sun and threw it back against the Vatican until it was like a fiery furnace.

At the morning conference the physicians noted a distinct change for the worse, particularly in the accelerated pulse, which had risen to 98 after being from 88 to 90 for many days. The patient appeared to have lost all of that vitality which he has hitherto so remarkably maintained. He appealed piteously to those about him, asking not to be left alone. Although his mental vigor was nearly exhausted, he again asked that mass be celebrated. This was performed in the room adjoining that in which the pontiff lay. He followed the ceremony and took communion with extreme difficulty.

Almost immediately afterward he sank into a state of complete exhaustion. At first this took on the character of an unnatural sleep and he lay as one inanimate. But occasionally he started up and cried out as if in fear. Gradually, however, sleep became heavier and the pontiff assumed a condition of semi-unconsciousness. After noonday there was little revival from this continued state of torpor and the doctors remained continuously in attendance.

Meantime the condition of the pontiff had caused intense excitement throughout the city. When the patient sank into a state of coma, the physicians formally communicated the gravity of his condition to Cardinal Rampolla, who, in turn, advised the cardinals of the sacred college. Twice rumors of the death of the pontiff gained circulation.

The condition of coma grew less profound shortly after sunset and Cardinal Vives y Tuto and Mgr. Piffert, the pope's confessor, were called into the sickroom. When they began to repeat Latin prayers, the familiar sound of the language which Leo XIII loved so well penetrated to his couch and he roused from his stupor and showed signs of consciousness. Cardinal Vives y Tuto took advantage of the opportunity to approach the bed and tell the pontiff that some cardinals were in the antechamber. "I myself," said he, "desire to have your benediction."

The pope with great effort raised a trembling hand and in almost inaudible voice, between long pauses, gave the cardinal the pontifical blessing. The effort, however, appeared to have been too much for him and he sank into unconsciousness.

Towards night the reports from the sickroom continued to be of the gravest character. Cardinal Della Volpe, coming from the Vatican, said he had held a brief conversation with Dr. Lapponi and that the latter had made the following statement: "If nothing new happens the patient may live until tomorrow morning, perhaps until evening, that is 24 hours longer. But beyond this his survival is impossible."

The medical aspect of the pope's case is exciting much discussion. One reliable authority who has had opportunities for knowing the private history of the treatment declares that a third operation for the removal of the pleuric fluid actually has been performed, but has not been made public in order to avoid increasing the public apprehension. It is also stated by the authority that Dr. Lapponi and Dr. Mazzoni have made a written statement before a notary giving the exact details of the pope's case and that copies of these statements have been deposited with Cardinal Rampolla and Mgr. de Azevedo, the major domo of the pope. The purpose of this statement is to anwser possible medical criticisms on the treatment of the case, which may subsequently be made. It is understood that the doctors have not been as frank in their bulletins as they personally desired to be, details of some features of the case having been withheld at the earnest request of the Vatican authorities. Their formal statement is expected to clear up the entire medical history of the case.

Response to Roosevelt's Inquiry

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 20.—Late last night President Roosevelt received from the state department at Washington a dispatch from Cardinal Rampolla at Rome in response to the president's message of inquiry and sympathy concerning Pope Leo. Cardinal Rampolla's cablegram to the state department follows:

"I beg of you to present in his holiness' name to his excellency, the president, the warmest and most sincere thanks for his sympathy towards his holiness in this hour of dreadful suspense, and I am very sorry to advise you that unfortunately the condition of the august sufferer is becoming very dangerous."

PLATT NAMES ALDRICH

For Second Place on the Republican Ticket For 1904

New York, July 20.—The World says that Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island is Senator Thomas C. Platt's nomination for vice president; that the nomination was made last night at the Oriental hotel, Manhattan beach, and that Senator Platt also named Chicago as the convention city. After remarking that Senator Platt is widely known as a maker of vice presidents and that he named Mr. Roosevelt for second place in 1900, The World adds:

"So far as is generally known Mr. Platt has no ill feeling against Senator Aldrich and is not trying to sidetrack him, but really wants him as vice president because he thinks he would make a good man for the place."

Senator Platt is further quoted as saying of Senator Aldrich: "The outlook for him is promising now that Governor Yates has removed himself from consideration."

A Poor Old Man's Fate

Northampton, Mass., July 20.—Michael Gallahan, a laborer, was found dead in the room in which he lived alone, having evidently committed suicide by taking paris green. His body was badly eaten by rats. He had been an inmate of the almshouse, but left there about two weeks ago, having obtained temporary employment. His work did not suit his employer and he was discharged. He became despondent and had made arrangements to return to the almshouse. Gallahan was 70 years old and a widower.

The Eastern War Cloud

Pekin, July 20.—According to diplomats here, the greatest factor in the eastern situation is the increasing danger of war between Russia and Japan. They believe it is becoming plain that Russia is willing to fight Japan if convinced that no other powers will assist her. The Russians are said to be anxious to settle definitely her position in eastern politics and end the ambitions to oppose Russia's progress in Manchuria. All Japanese officials in China speak of war as a "probability."

Closing Scene In Mosher Tragedy

Lynn, Mass., July 20.—The double funeral of Oliver E. Mosher and Georgianna E. Mosher, his wife, whose tragic death occurred at the hands of the husband Thursday night, was held at the residence of Mrs. John Foye, mother of Mosher, yesterday afternoon. The services were in charge of Rev. Martha Currie of the Pentecostal church and a quartet from that society sang. The bodies were interred together in the Saugus cemetery.

Cargo of Lime Caught Fire

Portsmouth, N. H., July 20.—Lime schooner George W. Glover caught fire while off Kittery during the night and her charred timbers are now scattered along the low flats of the point. She was bound from Rockland for New York with a cargo of lime and put in here for a harbor. During the evening she set sail, but had proceeded but a short distance when she sprang aleak and her cargo of lime caught fire.

Famous as Fire Fighter

Louisville, July 20.—Major Edward Hughes, Louisville's veteran fire chief, was run over and killed by a trolley car. He was one of the best known fire chiefs in the country and had been at the head of the Louisville fire department for 25 years. Recently he was retired on half pay. He was a picturesque character and had been a fire fighter for more than 50 years.

Assassination Threatened

Sofia, July 20.—A number of domiciliary visits and many arrests have been made as the outcome of the theft of 60 rifles from the arsenal here by members of the Macedonian committee, with the complicity of the master armorer. The Macedonian journals menace the prefect of police with the fate of M. Stambuloff, who was assassinated by political adversaries.

The paving union department employes of Boston will hold their twenty-second annual picnic on Wednesday at New Downers Landing.

HOTEL BURNED.

The Pine Point House Destroyed by Fire Sunday.

The large hotel formerly known as the Monatiquot house but of late years as the Pine Point house was completely destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The building has not been occupied for some time, and report has it that it was being used by a gang of thieves for their headquarters.

Late Saturday night the Weymouth police with Inspector McKay of Quincy drove to the hotel with the intention of cleaning it out.

They searched the place thoroughly but found no lodgers. Later, it was understood that the alleged thieves spent the greater part of the night thieving, and did not arrive at the hotel until late in the morning. The police intended to try again Sunday.

How the building took fire is not known, but with the strong wind that prevailed Sunday it was but a matter of a few minutes before the whole structure was a mass of flames and nothing that the Weymouth fire department could do could save it.

The wind blew the flames across the street, so that for a time it was too hot for the street cars to pass and they were held up for nearly an hour.

The building was owned by Dr. John F. Welch of Quincy, and the loss is estimated at $4,000, and is partly covered by insurance.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. HANDICAP RACE.

The Marvel, Gaycap, Omeme and Betty B. the Winners.

A strong, and at times puffy south westerly breeze greeted the Quincy Yacht club Saturday at the handicap race for club boats. Eighteen boats participated in the four classes and all were sent away under reefs.

The first class got away at 3.30, and there were nine starters. The Marvel was the first to cross the line, and the others followed in procession order. The Marvel held her lead throughout the race and finished with a small margin on actual time, which was increased somewhat on corrected time. The Argestes measurement was protested by Capt. Wilkins.

Several of the boats in this class had not been measured so that their time can not be given.

There were three starters in first special class. The Cleopatra was the first to cross, the Omeme and Enigma crossing neck and neck. It was a pretty brush between the Omeme and Cleopatra and the former won on actual time by two minutes.

The second class had three starters: Gay Cap, Dabchick and Clover, and they crossed in that order. The Gay Cap was a much larger boat than her competitors and carried a larger crew, which put the other two boats at a little disadvantage. She beat the Clover by nearly five minutes on corrected time. The Clover carried away her headstay before the start and cracked her hollow mast during the race but she kept at it and beat the Dabchick twenty minutes.

The one-design class also had three starters. The Betty B crossed the line all right and started away over the course. The Marjory F. got across ahead of time and had to come about. In the meantime the Ethel S had foulded the flag boat and after manœuvering a few minutes about the line both boats withdrew.

The judges were Ex-Commodore C. F. Pettengill, Charles W. Hall, Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., and Dr. F. E. Jones.

The Merrymounts scored their second victory of the season over the Norfolks at Merrymount Park on Saturday. Neither side scored until the fifth inning when two singles and a couple of poor throws gave the Norfolks three. In the seventh the Merrymounts scored one and in the eighth by a grand batting rally helped along by several errors, made nine more. The score was 10 to 3 as follows:

Yachts Adrift.

Sundays blow was a bad one for the yachts and several of the boats of the Wollaston and Squantum clubs went adrift. Among these was the new schooner of ex Commodore Frank Burgess which bit up into the cove and had a narrow escape. The Alva broke her mooring chain and went ashore at Atlantic. The Wavenock also drifted.

C. Patch & Son now have an abundance of coal, as a large barge is now unloading all sizes.

BABE ASSAULTED.

Father and Mother Arrested and in Court.

Both Held in Bonds of $1,000.

Indications that Murder with Carbolic Acid was Attempted.

Lucius E. Whitman, aged 30 years, and his wife Clara H. Whitman, aged 27 years, of 114 Intervale street, were arrested late Sunday night by Inspector McKay and Officers Boutin, Donovan and Cahill and locked up on the charge of assault on their five months old son, with intent to kill.

The attention of the police was call to the case late in the evening by neighbors.

When Dr. McLennan was called in, he found the child's mouth to be terribly burned both inside and out. The phyician was of the opinion that the burns were caused by some corrosive substance.

The woman when questioned said that she had given the child nothing but a little water and brandy.

At the police station, the woman when questioned, said that she had given the child a tablet dissolved in water. The tablet she said was one of three that she had obtained from a hospital in Boston. When questioned as to what had become of the remaining two tablets she said that she had burned them up.

City Physician Welch who had been notified, made an examination. He was of the opinion that the child's burns were not due to corrosive sublimate, but to carbolic acid and he ordered it removed to the City Hospital.

The child's mouth was badly burned but the physician after a thorough examination expressed the opinion that the child had not swollowed any of the substance.

The Whitmans while not intoxicated at the time of their arrest, had the appearence of having been drinking.

Whitman is a stone cutter and was employed a short distance from where he lived.

Sunday Raids.

The police made two liquor raids Sunday, and seized liquor at both places. The raiding squad was composed of Inspector McKay, Officers Murray, Goodhue, Cahill, Corbett and Stewart.

The first place visited was that of Amelio Zechini, at 74 Water street. There they seized 24 bottles of beer, 22 empty beer bottles, and two pint bottles of whiskey.

The second place visited was that of Saverio Di Como at the corner of Water and Phipps street. There the officers seized a small quantity of whiskey, an empty ale keg, 34 empty beer bottles and 40 bottles of ale.

Favorable Impression.

The Rev. J. N. Sproule of New Jersey, who is stopping at the Greenleaf hotel, was the preacher at the Water street Presbyterian church Sunday and the preceding Sunday. Judging from the impression he made, there is a strong probability that he will receive a call to become pastor of the church. There are two other candidates to be heard before a choice is made, but the great majority of the congregation have set their minds on Mr. Sproule and would not care if there were no further candidating. Mr. Sproul is 34 years of age and has been in the ministry about ten years. He is a Canadian by birth and a graduate of Princeton.

FREE OF CHARGE.

"If Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific Does not Cure You, it is Free." Says Chas. C. Hearn.

"Not only will I sell a 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia specific at half price, but I will agree to refund the money if my customer is not satisfied with the remedy," said Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, to a Ledger man. "In other words," he continued, "the specific is free if it does not cure."

Mr. Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles on his special half price introductory offer, and has a few left for those who are fortunate enough to call at his store before they are all gone. It is the regular 50 cent size, containing sixty doses, and is the one remedy for constipation and dyspepsia that makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia is not an ordinary tablet or powder that simply relieves. This remarkable discovery makes complete and permanent cures. Mrs. Charlotte W. Wallace of Manchester, N. H., writes: "A few years ago I had a very severe attack of dyspepsia. Water distressed me as much as food, and I could find no relief My druggist recommended Dr. Howard's specific very highly. This great medicine gave me relief at once, and I have never had another attack of dyspepsia."

Many physicians prescribe Dr. Howard's specific, for they know it cures N. D. Ross, M. D., East Middlebury, Vt., writes: "I prescribed Dr. Howard's specific in the case of a patient who for years had been in the constant practice of taking some kind of a cathartic daily. I saw him a few days since, and he said: 'Dr. Howard's specific is a perfect God send; my bowels are moving every day.' I shall certainly prescribe Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia when indicated."

If you cannot go to Druggist Chas. C. Hearn's store today, send him your order by mail, as he has only a limited amount left to sell at this special half price. 20-23-27-30

MILTON FIRE BUG.

Arthur W. Robinson in Court and Held for the Grand Jury.

Arthur W. Robinson of Milton was arraigned in court at Quincy this morning for arson, and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury. The evidence brought out the fact that Robertson and three other young fellows met on the evening and made plans, for setting a number of fires, which had they been carried out would have resulted in a conflagration. As it was the large stable of Charles Copeland on Tucker hill was completely destroyed.

The boys who were with Robertson testified that a real estate office was first set on fire but they put it out. That they then approached the barn of Mr. Copeland. Here the other boys thought better of their plan and tried to persuade Robinson to give up the plan. He would not however and approaching the barn he lit a match and pushing it through a crack in the door set fire to the building.

LADIES' DAY OF WOLLASTON YACHT CLUB.

Several Yachts Carry Full Complement of Fair Sex — A Sail Enjoyed Under Reef — Dance in Evening.

Although Saturday afternoon was threatening, from fifteen to twenty of the yachts and launches of the Wollaston Yacht club participated in the annual Ladies Day, and all carried several of the fair sex. The rain hung off until the return of the yachts so that the festivities were not marred.

The flagship Claytonia, Commodore Wiley, was early in position for the review which was to take place at 3 o'clock, but the other boats were slow in getting away, and it was about 4 o'clock when the last one passed in review, when colors were dipped.

A delightful sail was enjoyed in the bay for about two hours. There was a strong and at times puffy breeze from the southwest, so that the yachts were under reef.

Many who did not care for the sail enjoyed the pretty sight from the verandas of the clubhouse and along the shore.

Several of the skippers served elaborate spreads on board their yacht, The party on the flagship were in great luck, because the boat was stocked for a long cruise. For Ladies' Day, Commodore Wiley had sandwiches in variety, dainty crackers, olives, salted nuts, etc, but he felt bad when his guests discovered his barrel of homemade cookies which he intended to take to Maine. It is said there were 900 cookies by actual count in stock. The guest disposed of about 400, leaving Mr. Wiley only 500 for the cruise. If one has never partaken of Mrs. Wiley's cookies they cannot appreciate the Commodore's loss and his guests gain.

It was an eventful day for the Wollaston club, also, because of the arrival late in the afternoon of the schooner Romance, recently purchased by ex-Commodore Burgess. The Romance is a large boat for this port, her water line being 56 feet, beam 17 feet and over all 70 feet. Several of the captains enjoyed a short sail on her.

Before the review ex-Commodore A. L. Baker was sailing with his party in the Deutzia off Squantum when he struck a rock. No serious damage resulted; the passengers were landed at Squantum, and the yacht sailed to Wollaston where she was beached for repairs.

Returning from the sail, ice cream and cake were served at the clubhouse.

In the evening there was a very enjoyable dance with good music.

The yachts and guests for the day were:

U. S. Shipbuilding Affairs.

In the United States district court at Newark, N. J., Friday, says a dispatch to the Globe, Judge Kirkpatrick signed an order on the application of counsel representing the Mercantile Trust Co. of New York, permitting the filing of a petition to foreclose the Mercantile Trust Co. $16,000,000 mortgage on the property of the U. S. Shipbuilding Co.

The order permits the petition to be filed with answer in the U. S. district court. The order paves the way for the sale of assets of the U. S. Shipbuilding Co. and if allowed to proceed when the foreclosure suit is heard in court will result in the complete dissolution of the corporation. No date has been fixed for the hearing on the petition, as that must be determined by the court with which the petition is filed. Receiver Smith will undoubtedly oppose the foreclosure proceedings.

Attention is called to the rewards offered in this paper by the commodores of the Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs in addition to that offered by Mayor Bryant for the conviction of the person stealing yachts and yachting property.

He is a wonderful man, and his pontificate will always be illustrious. His successor cannot hope to win higher esteem than that which Leo XIII. has long enjoyed.—Somerville Journal.

SENSATIONAL RAIDS

By State Police Upon Gambling and Liquor Resorts at Revere

Revere, Mass., July 20.—An exciting gambling raid was made by state police officers upon two of the leading hotels at Revere beach, the Lincoln house and the Ocean View house, with the result that gambling paraphernalia was secured in both places, a large amount of liquors seized and 14 persons arrested upon the charge of being present where gambling implements were found.

Officers Neal and Rhodes of the district police and 10 officers of the Metropolitan park police force were the raiding officers and first visited the Ocean View house. Their appearance there created a panic among the 150 or more persons who were in the suspected gaming rooms and there was a wild scramble to escape, many jumping through windows in their hurry to elude the officers, taking the window sashes with them. All but three succeeded in getting away, including the alleged promoter of the game. The place was fitted with all manner of gambling implements, all of which were confiscated. The officers also captured a considerable quantity of liquors.

They next proceeded to the Lincoln house, where 11 alleged violators of the law were captured and, besides an elaborate gambling outfit, between $500 and $600 worth of liquor, more than nine truck loads, was seized in the name of the commonwealth. The bartender was also arrested for the illegal sale of liquor.

The prisoners were all taken to the park police headquarters where they gave names supposed to be fictitious and all were bailed out within a short time. The raid created intense excitement and the fact that it was made by state officers rather than by the police of the town is taken as an indication that the governor has taken official cognizance of the numerous appeals from citizens that the laws be more strictly enforced upon the beach, which is a state reservation under the Metropolitan act.

Manville Strikers to Return

Pawtucket, R. I., July 20.—By a close vote the Rhode Island Mulespinners' association endorsed the action taken by the striking mule spinners of the Manville company, who voted to return to work. A vote of censure was also passed against those officers of the United Textile Workers of America who arranged the conference with the officials of the Manville company when the strike of the mulespinners was practically settled. Manager Lippitt of the Manville company has agreed to take back as many of the strikers as he can make room for.

STORMED COUNTY JAIL

Two Murderers Lynched by a Wyoming Mob

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS KILLED

Sheriff Has Cattlemen Who Are Supposed to Have Killed Sheepman In Range Feud, but Lynchers Threaten Officer With Death

Butte, Mont., July 20.—A special to The Miner from Red Lodge says: Jim Gorman, who killed his brother and ran off with his brother's wife, and a man named Walters, who killed a widow named Hoover at the Hot Springs because she refused to marry him, were lynched at Basin, Wyo., yesterday. C. E. Pierce, a deputy sheriff, was killed during the attack on the jail.

A state of lawlessness now prevails in northern Wyoming as a result of which all law and order seems to have been abolished. Sheriff Fenton of Big Horn county has arrested a number of prominent cattlemen near Thermopolis and has appealed to the governor of Wyoming for assistance of the militia in getting his prisoners to the basin.

It was reported to Sheriff Fenton that a mob was coming to Basin from Hiattsville and Tonslip to lynch Gorman and Walters and the sheriff took these two men and a horse thief from jail and secreted them in a gulley near town under guard.

Gorman managed to slip his handcuffs and make his escape. He swam the Big Horn river and made for the mountains. A posse was quickly organized and he was recaptured about 50 miles from Basin. A mob of about 50 unmasked men rode up the east bank of the Big Horn and compelled the ferryman to carry them across the river. The mob proceeded at once to the county jail and fired a volley into the jail. Deputy Pierce and special Deputy Meade were guarding the prisoners at the time. One bullet grazed Meade's shoulder and entered Pierce's heart. Members of the mob then tore up telephone poles and battered the jail doors down. They first came to Walters, who was crouched in his cell, begging piteously for mercy. Walters was shot instantly. The mob next found Gorman, whose body was pierced by five bullets.

A still more alarming state of affairs is reported from the vicinity of Thermopolis. As a result of the range feud that has been so bitterly waged, a sheepman, Ben Minnick, was killed by cattlemen. The sheriff, it is asserted, has captured the murderers, who are all prominent cattlemen and whose names have been withheld owing to threats made against the sheriff. Sheriff Fenton is unable to get his prisoners to Basin.

It is said the same mob that lynched Gorman and Walters are sympathizers and have declared that Sheriff Fenton will never get out of the locality alive with his prisoners. Sheriff Fenton has wired the governor of Wyoming for permission to use the state militia at Lander and has also sent a telephone message to Basin and other towns asking for volunteers to assist him in upholding the law. Everywhere hardy westerners are responding to the call, arming themselves and hastening toward Thermopolis.

It is probable that the militia will be ordered to the scene and a bloody battle may be fought. The country about Thermopolis is a wild and lawless one. The last message from Sheriff Fenton said he still held the prisoners and that he believed he could hold out until the reinforcements came.

Hotel Burned to the Ground

Portland, Me., July 20.—The Belmont hotel, situated at Cape Elizabeth, was destroyed by fire last evening. The fire caught around the kitchen chimney and quickly spread to other parts of the house, which was burned flat. The house was valued at $10,000 and the contents at $2000. Many of the guests were out of the hotel at the time, but the servants managed to save most of the trunks. Many of the guests lost valuables.

Burning of Opera House

New Britain, Conn., July 20.—The New Britain opera house was totally destroyed by fire this morning. It was situated in the heart of the business centre of the city, but as there was practically no wind the firemen prevented the flames from spreading to adjoining buildings. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss will be about $25,000.

Drowned With Mob In Pursuit

Huntington, W. Va., July 20.—William Vinson was fatally stabbed here by Gustav Epps, a negro. Epps was pursued by a posse to a river, where he was drowned while trying to swim to the opposite shore. Many shots were fired at the negro and he was badly injured before he leaped into the river.

Negro Lynched by Negroes

Lake Butler, Fla., July 20.—A negro named Adams, who assaulted a negro woman near this place, was captured by a mob of negroes and lynched in a swamp. His body was cut into shreds by the mob. The lynching was carried on by negroes entirely.

SIENKIEWICZ IN ECLIPSE.

How the Polish Author Incurred the Wrath of His Countrymen.

Henry Sienkiewicz, the Polish author, who until recently was the idol of his compatriots, the entire Polish people having celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into literature, when they made him a present of a magnificent castle surrounded by a park, seems to have suffered a permanent eclipse in public esteem.

Not long ago a Warsaw paper asked Sienkiewicz what in his opinion was the best Polish drama of recent years.

HENRY SIENKIEWICZ.

The author replied that all Polish literature was worthless. This reply caused a tremendous sensation and a great revulsion of feeling against the author, and since then he has been the object of violent attacks in the Polish press.

Sienkiewicz's most famous book, "Quo Vadis," which was translated into many languages, was published in 1896.

TICKLED THE SIAMESE.

How John Barrett Won His First Diplomatic Success.

John Barrett, who has just been appointed United States minister to the Argentine Republic, for the past year and a half has been commissioner general for the Louisiana Purchase exposition in Asia and Australia, during which time he has traveled 45,000 miles and interviewed fifteen kings and emperors.

Mr. Barrett is a native of Vermont, but for many years has been a resident of Oregon. He is a graduate of Dartmouth college and when only twenty-seven years old was appointed minister to Siam by President Cleveland. The first important task that confronted the youthful envoy was to present a claim for $250,000 against the government of Siam. He was warned by experienced diplomats against using threats in pressing the claim. "Be cunning, avoid arrogance," they urged.

"That is," responded Mr. Barrett, "you favor tickling with a straw to pricking with a bayonet."

The statesmen nodded assent.

When the young minister had finally succeeded in collecting the claim the diplomats asked in astonishment, "How did you accomplish it?"

"By tickling," explained Barrett. "I had to tickle them almost to death, though, before they agreed to pay."

Subsequently he traveled extensively in Japan, China, India and the Philippines, investigating opportunities for American trade. In 1898 he relinquished his post as minister to Siam, but remained in the east as correspondent for various newspapers.

JOHN BARRETT.

In 1901 he was appointed delegate of the United States to the international conference of the American republics at Mexico and since 1902 has been traveling in the far east for the St. Louis exposition. Last December he was appointed United States minister to Japan, but he declined.

While minister to Siam Mr. Barrett obtained the first clear interpretation of the scope of foreign extraterritorial jurisdiction in Asia and was the pioneer advocate of the development of America's commercial opportunities in the far east. The salary of the minister to Argentina is $10,000.

Constitution May Wrest Honors From Reliance

NEW BOAT IS DEFEATED

On Time Allowance on Thirty-Seven-Mile Run From New London to Newport—Lipton's Latest Creation Gives a Fine Exhibition

Newport, R. I., July 21.—The rejected America's cup aspirant of two years ago, Constitution, is rapidly becoming a dangerous rival of this year's production, Reliance, for the honor of defending the trophy, for the older boat defeated the new one in a run of 37 miles, the third of the New York Yacht club cruise from New London, by about a minute and 3 seconds, availing herself of her time allowance, estimated at about 2 minutes and 17 seconds. This is the second time on the present cruise that Constitution has won from her rival on time allowance, and while the victory on the first occasion was due in some measure to changeable breezes, the conditions yesterday were as fair for one as the other. To be sure, Constitution was able, by reason of her getting the freshening breeze first not far from the start, to place herself in a good position over Reliance, but to the surprise of the yachting enthusiasts, after the latter boat had extricated herself she was unable to pull away from Constitution as she has done before in other races this year.

The two yachts sailed on practically even terms for nearly 10 miles along the southern Rhode Island shore, with sheets well flattened, and it was not until half the course had been covered that Reliance was out from under Constitution and safely in the lead. And even then she could not get away far enough to save her time allowance, for Constitution was only one minute and 45 seconds behind at the finish.

Columbia sailed a lonesome race, dropping behind from the start and finishing more than 10 minutes behind Reliance. It seems to be generally conceded that Constitution is sailing faster every day and the future runs of the cruise and the official trial races off this port are being looked forward to with great interest.

The times of the 90-footers were as follows:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time.
Reliance.	10:30:36	1:56:36	3:26:00
Consti'n	10:30:54	1:58:20	3:27:29
Columbia	10:31:02	2:07:56	3:36:54

Reliance beats Constitution by 1:29 and Columbia by 10:25. Constitution beats Columbia by 9:25.

UNDER THREE HOURS

Shamrock III Goes Thirty Miles Over International Race Course

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 21.—Ten miles an hour for 30 miles, windward and leeward, was the rattling pace set by Lipton's cup challenger in a race with Shamrock I in the waters of the international race course off Sandy Hook lightship. The challenger's exact time for 30 miles was 2:59:20, very nearly record time for a cup event and on a par with Reliance's splendid performance off Newport in June when the American yacht covered 30 miles in less than three hours.

Shamrock III's windward leg was, however, not a beat to windward. A shift in the wind after the start made it possible for her to fetch from the starting line to within two miles of the turn in quicker time than if she had to beat all the way. Her reach of 15 miles in 1:09::08, at an average pace of rising 13 knots, is near the record for a cup race. Despite her splendid performance she beat Shamrock I by only 1m. 22s. elapsed time, but the new boat had lost at least two minutes by the parting of her jib topsail sheet when she was four miles from the finish line. The race was sailed in a splendid wind, rising from 10 knots at the start to 15 at the finish, and a good part of the time the yachts were dragging their lee rails through the froth from under their bows.

Death of Archbishop Katzer

Fond Du Lac, Wis., July 21.—Archbishop Frederick X. Katzer of Milwaukee died last night after a long sickness of cancer of the liver. He came to Fond Du Lac for rest and treatment four months ago. He was born in 1844 in Austria. He came to America in 1864, studied in Milwaukee and was ordained to the priesthood in 1866.

TORPEDO BOATS' BAD DAY

Accidents Overtake Two Loaded With Training Ship Supplies

Newport, R. I., July 21.—While leaving the torpedo station with supplies for the training ship Hartford, somewhere outside, the torpedo boat Winslow was run into by the schooner yacht Clytie, and so badly crippled that she was obliged to put back to the station. The torpedo boat Craven, to which the stores were transferred, also was disabled soon after leaving the station by the blowing out of one of her tube sheets and she was towed back to the station. One of her crew was badly scalded by escaping steam.

The Winslow and the Clytie were in collision at the south side of Goat island. The yacht's bowsprit struck the torpedo boat well forward, carrying away her military mast, her food chests and her after smokestack, and also making a hole five feet in length in her starboard quarter. Ensign Marble, in command of the Winslow, says he was crowded so far inshore that he was unable to go farther without grounding the vessel. He lays the blame for the collision on the commander of the Clytie.

The torpedo boat limped back to the station and the stores were transferred to the Craven, which was soon on her way to the training ship. She had proceeded but a short distance, however, before she lost her steam through the blowing out of one of her tube sheets. Watertender Jones of the Craven's crew was badly scalded about the head by escaping steam.

Expert Found No Poison

Boston, July 21.—Professor Wood has reported to District Attorney Stevens his failure to discover any traces of poison in the organs of the late Edwin M. Thayer of Newton, which were submitted to him for chemical analysis. Thayer carried about $470,000 life insurance, of which amount nearly $400,000 was withheld subject to the report of several physicians who were called by interested parties to investigate rumors that death was caused by other than natural means. These physicians reported that death was from natural causes. The district attorney then took up the matter and ... portion of the organs sent to Professor Wood.

Cow Derailed Car

Marlboro, Mass., July 21.—Two men were seriously hurt and several others considerably shaken up when a trolley car was thrown from the track by coming in collision with a cow which suddenly ran out of a pasture and tried to cross the track. That the car was not dashed over a 15-foot embankment and the occupants more seriously injured was due to Motorman Wood, who stuck to his post and brought the car to a standstill on the edge of the embankment.

Strikers Returning to Work

Clinton, Mass., July 21.—The strike of stonemasons, which for 10 days has practically tied up all work at the Metropolitan water board's big Wachusett dam, is broken. Two strikers who had returned to work were joined by a dozen more, bringing the number up to near one-half the original number of men who went out and, armed with revolvers, forced 400 laborers to quit work. Their action was accompanied by no demonstration.

Mathes Arraigned and Held

Dover, N. H., July 21.—Albert O. Mathes, formerly treasurer of the Strafford savings bank at that place, and an alleged embezzler from that institution, was arraigned here on the charge of embezzling $15,000 from the Strafford bank. He entered a plea of not guilty. Judge Frost ordered that he be held for the September term of the grand jury and fixed the bail at $6000. Bondsmen were secured, and Mathes returned to Milton.

A Boston Boy's Mishap

Bangor, Me., July 21.—Snowden Rackliffe of Boston, aged 13, was climbing through a fence at Dover with a rifle under his arm when it was discharged, the bullet entering the leg and passing upward through the abdomen. He is in a precarious condition at a hospital here. The boy was visiting his uncle.

Town to Buy Water Works

Wakefield, Mass., July 21.—In special town meeting last night the town voted, 126 to 4, to appropriate $230,000 for the purchase of the plant and franchise of the Wakefield Water company. This matter has been agitated for several years, but the price asked had hitherto been $300,000.

Chicopee's Alleged "Grafting"

Chicopee, Mass., July 21.—The board of aldermen met last evening to close the investigation of the junk license extortion charges, and decided to have all the evidence collected by the city clerk handed over to the district attorney and presented to the grand jury.

Wright Extradition Paper Signed

Washington, July 21.—Acting Secretary Loomis has issued his warrant for the surrender to the British authorities of Whitaker Wright, the London promoter, charged with large financial irregularities.

POPE'S PARTING WORDS

Were Benediction Upon Those at His Bedside

DEATH CHAMBER SCENE

Was of Profoundly Impressive Character—Blessed Nephews, Members of Sacred College and Papal Court With His Dying Breath—Passed Away In Paroxysm of Choking—"The Piedmont Bear" Practically Pope For the Time Being—Leo's Successor Will Be an Italian

Rome, July 21.—The emaciated and lifeless frame of Pope Leo XIII, which held so brave a spirit, lies on the bed in the Vatican beside which almost all the world has prayed. The red damask coverlet rests lightly over the body, the cardinal's scarlet cape is about the shoulders, while on his head has been placed the papal hood of velvet, bordered with ermine. A white silk handkerchief is bound about his chin and in the hands which have blessed so many thousands has been placed a crucifix. Pope Leo is watched by uniformed officers of the noble guard and rough clad Franciscan penitentiaries, who will keep a ceaseless vigil until the burial takes place.

The sacred college of cardinals will assemble today for the impressive ceremony of officially pronouncing Pope Leo dead. After this sad function has been performed the body will be taken to the small throne room adjoining the death chamber, where it will be embalmed. The funeral ceremonies will extend over nine days, the remains being removed to the cathedral of St. Peter's, where they will lie in state. The ultimate resting place of the dead pontiff will be in the magnificent basilica of St. John the Lateran.

Pope Leo's final moments were marked by that same serenity and devotion and, when he was conscious, that calm intelligence which was associated with his 25 years' pontificate. His parting words were not of the physical anguish that he suffered, but were whispered benedictions upon the cardinals and his nephews, who knelt at the bedside, and the last look of his almost sightless eyes was towards the great ivory crucifix hanging in the death chamber. Practically all the cardinals now at Rome, kneeling at the bedside, watched the passing of his soul.

The pontiff's last breath was taken exactly at 4 minutes past 4. Dr. Lapponi approached a lighted candle to his mouth three times, according to the traditional ceremonial, and afterwards declared the pope to be no more. He then went to inform Cardinal Oreglia, the dean of the sacred college, who immediately assumed full power and gave orders that the Vatican be cleared of all persons having no right to be there. Contemporaneously the cardinal instructed Mgr. Rigli, master of ceremonies, to send the Swiss guards from the Clementine hall to close all the entrances to the Vatican and dismiss all persons from the death chamber, the body being entrusted to the Franciscan penitentiaries.

The final scene in the death chamber was profoundly impressive. The pope's death having been expected since noon, his deathbed was surrounded by practically all the members of the sacred college now in Rome and the whole papal court, while the pontiff's nephews remained in the papal library until they received word from the doctors which announced that his expiring breath was approaching. Then they moved silently within the death chamber.

Profound silence reigned in the pope's bedroom, only broken by the doctors rising to render their expiring patient more comfortable, by the sobs of the over-faithful valet, Pio Centra, or the murmured prayers of Mgr. Pifferi, the papal confessor, himself 84 years of age, who had to be assisted to the bedside. The dying pope murmured something to himself, in which those bending over him heard the words "father" and "mother."

Dr. Lapponi felt the pope's pulse grow gradually weaker and weaker, and at the same time the pontiff's extremities began to get cold, his lips became blue, his eyes sank more deeply into the head, his breathing became even more difficult and there were strange rattlings in his throat.

Finally the pope was asked to bless his nephews and all the others present. The portiers dividing the door were drawn back to the utmost, to admit as much air as possible, while the light filtering through the green shades of the window rendered his sunken eyes and shrunken features absolutely ghastly.

It was a most solemn moment. The head of the pontiff, with its white skull cap, no whiter than the fringe of silver hair, rising above the crimson coverlet, his hand raised in the familiar gesture of benediction, the kneeling assemblage being too earnestly absorbed in deep affliction, veneration and weeping, to even make a movement.

The doctors again examined the dying pope and this time found that he was at the extreme limit of his powers of respiration. His eyes began to become dull and clouded and Leo XIII entered into the real agony of death, which was recognized by all present kneeling.

The last conscious act of the pontiff was to turn his eyes towards the great crucifix on the wall, after which he suffered from a paroxysm of choking, during which he passed away.

Then the silence of the awestricken assemblage was broken by the sonorous, solemn voice of Cardinal Vannutelli, the grand penitentiary, intoning the requiem aeternam (rest eternal).

This was the signal for an outburst of tears and the sound of weeping which could no longer be repressed, all the kneeling prelates and others kissing the dead hand—that hand which had dispensed so many benefits, charities, and benedictions.

Outside the death chamber expectation was intense, but the sight of the sorrowing faces of those leaving the room was sufficient, without words, to announce the sad news, which was not long in spreading throughout Rome.

The occurrences in the death chamber immediately following the pope's demise were of impressive solemnity. Couriers had been dispatched to summon those who are delegated to perform the first religious offices toward the dead pope and soon the chanting of the Franciscan monks was heard as, two by two, in coarse brown habits and sandaled feet, they proceeded to the room in which Leo lay dead. From time immemorial the Franciscans have been penitentiaries of St. Peter's. Following them came the noble guard to watch over the pontiff's remains, the brilliancy of their uniforms contrasting strikingly with the sombre attire of the quaintly garbed monks and the solemn dignity of the chamber itself. The only sound heard was the measured chanting of the psalms of penitence by a group of monks kneeling beside the couch of death. Two noble guards took up positions at the foot of the couch and stood there, rigid and silent as statues, with swords drawn and reversed.

The body lay exactly as it was at the moment of the pope's last expiring breath. A white veil was thrown over the dead man's face, while awaiting the solemn entrance of the camerlengo, who was to officially pronounce the pontiff actually dead.

The gruesome details of the embalming will not be performed until after the lapse of 24 hours. Then the body will be robed in full pontifical vestments for the imposing funeral ceremonies.

The great piazza of St. Peter's was soon a scene of wild confusion. As word of the pope's death became known, although the public had day after day expected the tidings, the shock of the actual event was none the less profound. Everywhere people stopped to bless themselves and to say whispered prayers, while here and there were seen women on their knees before the street shrines offering prayers for the soul that had just taken its flight.

Within the massive colonnade fronting St. Peter's great crowds surged to the very doors of the Vatican, even struggling to gain access to the corridors leading to the death chamber. Soon the whole square was in tumult, but the government troops hurried from the neighboring barracks, where they had been held in reserve, and restored order. They flanked the esplanade and took possession of every artery of the Borgo district, leading to the Vatican. For the time being all traffic was suspended and the whole region, from the frowning walls of St. Angelo castle to the door of St. Peter's, was within the firm grip of the Vatican authorities and the government troops.

In the downtown portion of the city the most perfect order prevailed. Outward evidences of mourning soon began to appear along the corso. Many of the shops were closed and funeral emblems hung upon the buildings.

"THE PIEDMONT BEAR"

Has Supreme Church Power Until New Pope Is Elected

Meantime, events of momentous importance to Catholic christendom were occurring. The death of Pope Leo meant the passing of the supreme power into the hands of the sacred college of cardinals as its temporary custodian during the interregnum. The perfect administrative machinery of the church provided against the slightest interruption of the governing authority. As the senior member of the sacred college, Cardinal Oreglia, to whom the pope solemnly confided the interests of the church, has now become the exponent of the cardinals until Pope Leo's successor has been elected. This has brought forth Cardinal Oreglia as the striking personality of the hour.

The cardinal is the exact antithesis of Pope Leo, having none of the late pontiff's sympathetic and benevolent characteristics. He comes from a noble Piedmontese stock and his nobility is shown in his haughty and austere bearing. He is not popular among his colleagues or the Romans and his brusque manner has earned him the title of "the Piedmont bear."

He is tall and robust and his 74 years are shown by the whiteness of his hair. His face has the tawny hue of old parchment and is deeply lined. Despite his austerity, the cardinal's learning and piety are universally recognized. This is the man who for the time being is practically pope. It was he who issued the orders to clear the Vatican from intruders and brought tranquility out of the confusion immediately following Pope Leo's death.

THE NEXT POPE

Certain to Be Chosen From Among Numerous Italian Candidates

The greatest interest is now centred in the work of the holy conclave which is to elect the successor of Leo XIII. Speculations, prophecies and predictions come from every direction in favor of the various candidates. The comparatively long illness of Leo has had the effect of narrowing the chances of some who entered the contest with what was thought to be the brightest prospects, while it has brought forward the prominence of others who at first were hardly considered. The result is that they are all now on about the same level.

There are a half dozen, at least, who are entering the conclave with equal chances of success. It is believed that the foreign cardinals will ultimately give the casting votes, as, living far away from Rome, where different factions form and flourish, they will be more impartial, especially as it is admitted by all that the new pope will be chosen from among the Italian candidates. For this latter reason there cannot be national rivalry among the foreigners. The most prominent candidates for the succession are Cardinals Gotti, Oreglia, Agliardi, Serafino, Vannutelli, Capecelatro, Sarto, Rampolla, Di Pietro, Swampa, Ferrari, Satolli and Richelmy.

President's Profound Regret

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 21.—President Roosevelt was deeply touched by the death of Pope Leo. On being informed of the demise of the venerable head of the Catholic church, he dictated the following:

"The president expresses his profound regret at the death of the venerable pontiff, whose long career, no less than his exalted character, has commanded the respect of all Christendom. The president said that in uttering these sentiments he was giving expression to the feeling of all the people in the United States, wholly without regard to their religious faiths."

Grover Cleveland's Estimate

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 21.—When informed of the death of Pope Leo ex-President Grover Cleveland, who is at Gray Gables, his summer home, said: "Although of course not unexpected the news of the death of this distinguished man cannot fail to awaken regret in the minds of all those who are sincerely solicitous for the betterment of humanity. I have regarded Pope Leo XIII as a most important factor in the advancement of civilization and man's improvement. Though at the head of a church to whose interests he was constantly devoted, he seemed never to forget that all mankind is akin when manhood's development and the promotion of universal brotherhood is in the balance. Not only his church, but the cause of humanity has lost a strong advocate and a sincere friend."

Praised by British Press

London, July 21.—The English papers all teem with expressions of the warmest sympathy and deep regret on account of Pope Leo's simple, saintly life, and admiration for the statesmanlike qualities displayed by him throughout his pontificate. A contrast is drawn between the unique position the papacy now holds in international consideration compared with its shattered, discredited position at the time of the death of Pius IX, and the editorials dilate upon the successful manner in which he reconciled himself to the spirit of modern times in his dealings with France, America and England.

Good Afternoon.

"City Square" will continue under the name by which it has been known since Quincy became a city, the City Council having refused to change the name to Presidents Square upon petition. City Square is not as limited as any other name would be, but includes most of the business centre of Quincy. It has been suggested by a Councilmen that a granite boulder be located on the church grounds north of the church, if the society is agreeable, which shall state the fact that the resting place of President John Adams and Presdent John Quincy Adams with their wives is beneath the entrance to the church, etc, etc. It has also been suggested that that portion of Adams street in front of the Adams homestead be named Presidents Square. Both these suggestions are worthy of consideration.

Protestants unite with Catholics in their tributes to Pope Leo. All recognize the high character of the late Pope, and there is an absence of bigotry which should do much to unite the common brotherhood of man.

Odd Fellows Play Ball.

On Saturday afternoon the Brockton lodge I. O. O. F. ball team of Brockton defeated the Mt. Wollaston I. O. O. F. ball team of this city by a score of 14 to 13 in a very close and interesting game at Merrymount park. The score was close throughout the whole game, which was won after two men were out in the ninth by error of the home team.

After the game all present went to Mt. Wollaston lodge rooms and enjoyed a supper prepared by the defeated team. After supper the captain of the Mt. Wollastons called on several of the visiting team members who responded with very interesting remarks.

The party then adjourned to the large hall where a social hour was spent during which the Brockton lodge quartet gave several selections to which those present gave continued applause. There were also vocal and instrumental solos and dancing and the home team feel that although defeated at base ball the affair was a most enjoyable one and long to be remembered in connection with Mt. Wollaston's first season at base ball.

Car Run Down.

One of the large red automobiles crashed into the rear of a West Quincy electric car near the Catholic church at Atlantic Sunday evening about nine o'clock. The car was in charge of Motorman Abbott and Conductor Kane, and had stopped that the conductor might set the block. The conductor was just returning to his car and had a very narrow escape. The occupants of the auto were thrown forward, but otherwise no one was hurt. The car had about 30 passengers.

HANCOCK STREET LIGHTING.

The Mayor sent a communication stating the necessity of the better lighting of Hancock street.

Laid on the table until later when Councilman Nichols offered an order discontinuing 49 incandescent lights on Hancock street between Adams street and Neponset bridge and substituting 21 enclosed arc lights. To joint Committee of Finance and Streets.

UNNECESSARY POLES.

The Mayor sent a communication relative to telephone poles on Washington street.

Laid on table until later when an order was adopted ordering the Telephone Co. to remove two unused poles on Washington street between Coddington and Hancock street.

NEW CONSTABLES.

The Mayor announced the appointment of Charles J. Nord and Alphonse Williams as constables. Confirmed.

The auctioneers bonds of Stephen E. Wilson and Harry Johnson were approved.

PETITIONS.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

J. W. Belanger petitioned to have the brook running through his property removed as it was detrimental to health. To joint Committee on Health and Sewers and Drains.

The Committee on Streets reported reference to the Executive department on the order for street lights on Coddington and Sea streets.

The Committee on Streets reported an amendment to the order granting the Old Colony street railway permission to lay conduits on Washington and Chubbuck streets, providing that one duct should be reserved for city wires. Rules suspended and order passed.

JOHN HANCOCK SQUARE.

The Committee on Streets reported an order naming the square at the junction of Adams and Hancock streets, John Hancock square. Adopted.

CITY SQUARE.

The Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw on the petition to name square bounded by Hancock, Temple and Washington streets, Presidents square. Accepted.

The Committee on Streets reported favorable on the order granting the street railway an extension of time for building on its location in City Square until Jan. 1, 1904.

Councilman Nickerson thought the company had time enough. He saw no good reason for extending the time. If extended October 1 was late enough.

Councilman Nichols believed the company had made every effort to get its rails and complete the construction. If the Council refused to grant further time the railway company would come here and ask for the same location on another petition. It would save time by granting the request for an extension of time. It was doubtful if the company were able to construct this year and he thought they would have to come later and ask for a further extension of time. He would therefore offer an amendment extending the time to July 1, 1904.

Amendment adopted and order referred to Ordinance Committee.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

A public hearing was given at 8 P. M. on the extension and acceptance of Penn street through property of the city near the old pumping station to land of the Adams Real Estate Trust, which it is proposed to develop. No one appeared in favor or against, and it was referred to the Committee on Streets.

A hearing was also given on the acceptance of that part of Federal avenue between Goddard street and Indedendence avenue. J. W. Pratt, who appeared in favor, said the other portion had been accepted. That there were now seventeen houses on the extension assessed for over $40,000, and the street was fairly well built. Referred back to committee.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Telephone Co. a location for twenty-five poles on Palmer street.

The Committee on Public Buildings recommended that the order for $1500 for additions to the Willard school be referred to the joint Committee on Finance and Public Buildings.

HOUSES ENTERED.

Robbed in Daylight While the Families Were Away.

People should be careful how they go away for the day and leave their windows unlocked, as there are sneak thieves about. These thieves are constantly on the watch and will take everything they can get their hands on.

Two cases were reported to the police Monday. The first was the house of John Tomkinson at Newcomb place. While the family were away some one took a pair of outing trousers, a vest and a shirt. Entrance was made by forcing a door in the rear of the house.

The house of William F. Sidelinger on Washington street was also entered through a rear window. The house was ransacked from top to bottom, but the only things missed by the family was a gold filled watch, with the letters M. A. S. on the outer case, a gold pen with a pearl handle, and a pocket book containing $8 in money.

Sometime prior to the two breaks which are supposed to have been between 10 o'clock and noon, a strange man was seen about the premises. He is described as being about 25 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches tall, dark complexion, medium build, dark clothes and black derby hat. He carried a dress suit case.

LATE POPE LEO XIII.

Pope Leo's encyclical of 1891, in which he took up the socialism of the day in America, his action in the case of Dr. McGlynn of New York and the appointment of Cardinal Satolli to the post of papal delegate to America are too well remembered to call for more than a passing mention.

Pope Leo celebrated two jubilees, the first in 1888 in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of his elevation to the priesthood, and the second in 1893 on the 50th anniversary of his being raised to the rank of archbishop.

Leo's Daily Life.

Pope Leo XIII passed the most of his time, while head of the church, in the Vatican, the official residence of the pontiff. In fact, it used to be said that he never left the Vatican for fear of being jeered by the Roman populace. It is, however, believed by many that he drove about the streets by night in a closed carriage. A few years ago, when his brother was dying in the Palazzo Barborini, the pope went to see him.

The Vatican is an enormous structure. It is said to contain 4,000 rooms. Its museum is one of the most celebrated in the world. It contains the finest statuary, greatest paintings and the most valuable books, both printed and in manuscript, that its occupants have been able to collect, and many of them are freely shown to visitors.

Leo's sleeping room was a large, bare apartment, with a high ceiling and tiled floor, unvexed by covering of any kind in the summer. Its sole contents are said to have been a small iron bedstead, a little table, a writing desk, a priedieux and a few chairs. In winter time two or three rugs were laid on the stone floor, and the bedstead was shut off from the rest of the room by a curtain.

Leo rose every morning at about 6 o'clock, and in the dress of an ordinary priest said mass in his private chapel at 7. When this mass was finished, another was said by a minor ecclesiastic, to which the pope listened while kneeling. These devotions lasted until 8 or 9 o'clock, when he partook of a cup of chocolate or coffee with bread, and then began the work of the day. He examined documents of various sorts and dispatched such correspondence as awaited his attention till 11. Then after partaking of a light broth, which sufficed till dinner time, came general business and the reception of officials and guests. This lasted until 2, when dinner was served according to the old Roman custom. This repast was not elaborate. It consisted of soup, boiled beef and vegetables, occasionally a roast, a glass of Burgundy and sometimes a dessert of fruit.

Traditional etiquette requires that when in Rome the pope shall eat alone, so Leo never had guests at his table in the Vatican. After dinner he slept for a short time, and later, if the weather was fair, until his strength failed him, he used to walk in his garden. During his later years he was either carried in a sedan chair or driven in a carriage. One of his guards always attended him, walking a few steps in the rear. Frequently a bishop or some important person with whom the pope wished to confer walked beside the chair or occupied a seat in the carriage. When the walk was over, such other business as remained undone was attended to. At 8 o'clock he received the newspapers, reading those printed in French and Italian himself, while those printed in other languages were translated to him. At 9:30 he performed his devotions. At 10 he took supper, consisting of soup and an egg, some salad and a little red wine. Then he withdrew to his private room for the night.

During Lent his life was much more severe than at ordinary times. He used to rise at 4 and say mass at 6. Before beginning this service he listened to a sermon by a Capuchin monk. The discourse invariably closed with the words "et redde spiritus." As they were uttered the pope left the apostolic chair, supported by two cardinals, and kneeling upon the lowest step of the altar repeated three times the last words of the monk. Then, robed in his violet vestments, he said mass.

On Good Friday Leo used to pass almost the entire day in the church, and on that day he partook of only one meal, at 12 o'clock noon. Easter Sunday was the great day of the year. The services in St. Peter's were always very imposing, and most of the ecclesiastical dignitaries in Rome had audience with the pontiff during the day. If there was any ill feeling between any of them Leo, used to make it a point to strive to heal the breach, and on one occasion, when two cardinals had declined to speak with each other for some time, he brought them together in a most characteristic manner, thereby undoubtedly averting a serious church scandal.

The pope was very economical in his personal expenses. Of his table it has been said that it did not cost more than $6 or $8 a week.

The Pope's Income.

Leo's fortune, left to him by Pope Pius IX, was not less than $45,000,000. Much of this was used in purchasing Roman building bonds and in property investments, because the small rate of interest received from the Rothschilds and Blount was not sufficient. The subsequent shrinkage in value of these bonds reduced the aggregate of this large sum very considerably.

The running income of the pope comes from collections known as "Peter's pence." Both Pius IX and his successor proudly declined to receive a cent from the $600,000 of the annual revenue which the Italian chambers ordered by the law of guaranties to be set aside for the pope, and which since 1870, when the temporal power disappeared, has accumulated in the Italian treasury.

The origin of the name "Peter's pence" is British, for the voluntary tribute, which the ancient kings of England raised for the papacy was known under the name of "S. Peter's penning." The collection of Peter's pence was not systematized until 1861, just after the first dismemberment of the pontifical states, by which 15 out of the 20 provinces were taken from the pope. Previous to that time the pontifical revenue had amounted to nearly $14,000,000 annually. Since 1870, when the temporal power disappeared, Peter's pence has been the only source of revenue, and the devotion of Roman Catholics throughout the world has always been strong enough to meet the necessities of the case—about $1,500,000 a year.

Though the pope is practically imprisoned within the walls of the Vatican, he is obliged to provide from Peter's pence for the universal administration of the churches. He has to maintain nuncios in different capitals of the old and new world, to correspond with more than 1,000 episcopal sees in every part of the world, to support missionary work abroad, to maintain at Rome the congregation and schools and ecclesiastical tribunals, to pay the cardinals' salaries and those of the dignitaries and other employees of the pontifical guard, and to keep in order the sacred churches, like St. Peter's and St. Mary Major's, and to preserve intact and even improve the libraries and museums of the Vatican.

It is easily understood from this why Leo was personally so economical. Although the gross sum of Peter's pence is large, it is only by the most systematic expenditure thereof that it is made to meet current expenses. Long before his death Leo notified his relatives that nothing should go to them out of the innumerable and precious gifts sent to him from every part of the world on the occasion of his jubilee of 1888. The only advantage he conferred upon any of his relatives so far as reported was the title of count upon his nephews, which helped them somewhat in contracting advantageous marriages.

Of the total amount of Peter's pence, two-thirds have come from France of late years. Italy has not produced more than 15,000 lire ($3,000). The offering is free and anonymous everywhere. Collections only take place twice every year in the churches. On some occasions a supplement of revenue comes to the pope—as, for instance, on one 1st of January, when he officiated at what was called his "Golden Mass," he received more than $600,000 in fees.

Leo as a Writer.

Pope Leo XIII wrote a great deal during his life, mostly Italian and Latin verse. When he desired to write, he used to lock himself up in his room and allow no one to disturb him. His abstraction was so great that he used to wipe his pen upon the sleeve of his white soutane, and his faithful body servant, Centra, lived in morbid terror lest his master should be seen in this spotted state, and on days of audience personally examined him, ready to invest him, if necessary, in a clean robe.

Much of his verse was of course religious in its character, though not all. In rhythm it is Virgilian, being sauve, elegant and of easy, smooth phrasing. "His epigrammatic poems," writes one familiar with the pontiff's writings, "are light, lively and strike where they ought, but they have not poisoned barbs.

"One of the verses has this subject: A youth asked one day for an audience and avowed that his life had been too free for virtue. The holy father advised him to retire to a convent for some time and to banish from his mind every thought that could defile it.

"This is a prose rendering of what he wrote: 'Florus, my child, a furious fever burns you; a foul plague softens your body and your soul. You have been drinking, and without shame, of an infernal and poisonous cup. It is the cup of Circe. It evokes in your mind images of animal bestiality. If you care to be saved, fly from the siren's song and from the inhospitable shore. Take good courage and fight temptation while fleeing from it. If you do, God will fight for you and look on you with a favorable eye. Already the hideous serpent, full of rage at the prospect of defeat, plunges into the black waters of the Styx. 'Florus, my son, be saved.'"

Stories of Leo XIII.

Joachim Pecci was of a most impressive presence, even when a young man, and in his old age, when pope, he seems to have been positively awe inspiring. Most readers will remember the reports of the meeting of the pontiff and the young emperor of Germany a few years ago. The Teutonic monarch, who had never before been abashed, so far as the records go, was as timid as a schoolboy before the serene, white haired old man, who, though his rule was entirely spiritual, was the acknowledged head of the greatest division of the Christian church. His personal appearance is thus described by one to whom an audience was accorded in 1892:

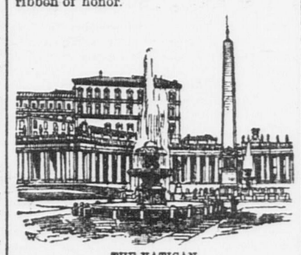

"He was tall and slender to attenuation. His visage was an almost fleshless mask, his complexion of a waxy pallor, but his eyes were clear and luminous. He would be ascetic of look under one aspect and penetratingly keen under another, but the general one was of sweetness and kindliness. Judging from his face and general appearance, the first impression given by him was that of a man largely endowed with common sense. The full, broad brow likewise indicated a brilliant intellect, and the passing smile which occasionally flitted across a countenance worn as if with much care spoke rather of melancholy than of mirth."

At an audience described by an American who was present all fell upon their knees when the pope came in, but at a sign from one of the monsignores, who acted as chamberlain, all resumed their places. With a mechanical air the pontiff, after bowing, began talking with the man who sat nearest the door. Individual intuitions were followed as to etiquette by all present. When the pope gave his hand, some raised it to the forehead and others to the lips; others, falling on their knees, kissed the cross on the pontiff's foot. One man shook the pope's hand heartily.

There was no talking except between the pope and those to whom he found time to give attention. No one was passed entirely unnoticed, and in one case in which a poor woman cried with a sob in her voice, "O holy father, give your blessing to our son!" Leo's eyes were suffused with tears, and he bent over her and talked for some time. One woman tried hard to impress him with her own importance by declaring that the cardinal in her town was a great friend of hers. When the round of the room had been completed, the pope stepped into the center of the apartment, and making the sign of the cross in the air gave the apostolic blessing and retired. The audience was at an end.

Leo was often annoyed by anonymous communications, and it was his custom to give to them as little attention as possible. On one occasion, shortly after he was made pope, he received one in which severe criticisms were passed upon the papal bodyguard of nobles. He had not read more than half a dozen lines when, calling to the officer on duty, he handed the letter to him, saying: "I have not read it through. Peruse it if you like and then throw it in the fire."

Great alike in great things and small, the late pontiff had the royal faculty of forgetting neither persons nor things. In 1887 all the old pupils of the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Belgium, to whom he had distributed prizes in 1843, when he was papal nuncio at Brussels, united in sending him an address. Glancing over the signatures, he recognized the name of one who, when a girl at the convent school, had won the "ribbon of honor," a very rare distinction. At once he made inquiries about her later life and sent her a kind message recalling her school days and her reception of the ribbon of honor.

THE VATICAN.

Leo was noted for the attention he used to give to missionary fathers who went to Rome from their distant fields of labor to obtain audience with the head of the church. His information regarding the status of the Catholic church in the United States was notably full and accurate. On one day he gave audience to a bishop whose diocese included a large portion of Alaska, a priest whose work was conducted under the burning skies of Borneo and a native Syrian, newly ordained as a priest, whose field was located not far from the scenes of Christ's life on earth. Of the details and difficulties of the labors of each of these three fathers the pope informed himself accurately, and to each he made suggestions that were of much practical value.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

Wonderful Success of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific's Half Price Offer.

Chas. C. Hearn the popular druggist, who introduced in Quincy Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia with such wonderful success, says that he is hearing from druggists in other parts of the country, where the plan that he urged the Dr. Howard Co. to adopt (introducing their specific by selling at half price) had been followed.

Chas. C. Hearn showed the Ledger man a letter he recently received from C. S. Ingraham of Elmira, one of the best known druggists in New York state. Mr. Ingraham writes: "I have never undertaken the introduction of a new remedy with such satisfactory results, both to myself and to my trade. My average sales have been nearly a hundred bottles per week, and I have every reason to think this will be doubled within a short time.

"The specific gives remarkable results in the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia and constipation, and although every package has been sold under my personal guarantee to refund the money if it did not give satisfaction, not one has been returned."

My experience has been a duplicate of my Elmira friend's," said Chas. C. Hearn, "except that I have had one customer ask for her money back, which I returned without any questions. However, I do not think she could have given the remedy a fair trial. I am still selling the specific at half price, a fifty cent bottle of sixty doses for 25 cents, although I do not know how long I shall be able to do so, and your readers had better take advantage of this chance before it is too late." 21-24-28-31

WOMAN HELD

For Assault on Babe with Intent to Kill.

Mr. Whitman Testifies on the Stand.

The Doctors and Neighbors Also Heard.

Lucius E. and Clara H. Whitman were given a hearing this morning on the complaint against them for assault with intent to murder. The defendants were represented by J. J. McAnarney, Esq.

Dr. McLennan testified he was called to see the sick baby last Wednesday and found child very sick suffering from apparent indigestion. He called again on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

On Saturday he found the child dangerously sick. Its mouth was burned on the inside and there was a burn on the chin. The child appeared to be chocking. Suggested taking to hospital but father refused. The mother said that the child was crying and that she gave it a little brandy and hot water. On Thursday he left some tablets for pain. The woman appeared intoxicated when he was sent for by neighbors on Saturday. The whole mouth of child was burned.

City Physician Welch testified he was called Sunday at 11 o'clock; found child as described by Dr. McLennan. Found by examination of mouth indication that something had been put into the mouth hot and swallowed. Questioned woman, who said she had given the child a tablet she had obtained in Boston to use as a wash. That she had probably made a mistake in giving that instead of one of those left by Dr. McLennan.

Dr. Welch testified the burn must have been caused by something more powerful than the tablet she spoke of.

Officer Boutin testified to visiting the Whitman house Saturday night and detecting the odor of carbolic acid.

Alexander W. Russell testified to going to Whitman's house on Saturday with the officer and to seeing burns on child's face and to detecting odor of carbolic acid.

James Marr, who resides in the other half of Whitman house, testified to hearing the child cry severely on Saturday night, and to going to the police station to ask them to send a physician.

Margaret Kelley testified that Mrs. Whitman came after her Saturday night. She said she was all alone and her baby was very sick. After she went to the house Mrs. Whitman laid on the floor and went to sleep. Later when she learned that the child had been given something Mrs. Kelly asked her what it was. Mrs. Whitman said she had given it a little hot water and brandy and the water was too hot.

Henrietta Marr testified to hearing the baby cry, and to going after a physician. Also to going in and helping take care of the child.

Mary A. Cowe, a neighbor, testified to the illness of the child and to helping her take care of it. That Mrs. Whitman said she had taken it to Boston and the doctor there said it was dying of consumption of the blood. She also testified to the pain the child was suffering, and to finding her holding it tightly in her arms and that she took it away from her. Also to the exciting manner in which Mrs. Whitman was acting.

Hester Moser testified to having her attention called to the crying baby and to being told that the baby was dying, and to going over with other ladies. Mrs. Whitman had it in her arms squeezing the child which was frothing at the mouth. Told of other women taking the baby from Mrs. Whitman.

Inspector McKay testified to securin a warrant against the Whitmans, and to placing them under arrest. Mrs. Whitman said she give baby hot water and brandy. Later she said she had given the baby a tablet she had got in a Boston hospital, and that the other two she had burned up as she called them dangerous.

This closed the government case and the court discharged Mr. Whitman.

Lucius E. Whitman for the defence testified to working for J. R. Qualey. That he got home Saturday about 6 o'clock. The baby was in a woman's lap. The medicine the doctor left was kept in the kitchen closet on a shelf. My wife said they were going to take baby to hospital and I said the child is not going to any hospital. I lay down about 8.30 leaving child in charge of my wife. Sunday gave it the medicine Dr. McLennan left.

I heard no one Sunday night until heard officers coming up stairs. Had heard no one rap at the door. Understood child was ill with stomach trouble.

The defence rested its case here.

The court found probable cause, and held Mrs. Whitman in $1,000 for the grand jury.

TODAY'S COURT.

Edward P. Dugan was sent to the State farm at Bridgewater for being a tramp at Milton.

William Robertson was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Charles W. Johnson was arraigned for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk on the Blue Hills Reservation. He was fined $5.

Patrick Callahan was fined $3 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Martin Fitzgerald was arraigned for assault on Timothy Ford at Quincy. He was discharged.

The continued cases of Lucius E. and Clara H. Whitman for assault with intent to murder came up. Mr. Whitman was discharged and Mrs. Whitman was held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

THE LATE POPE LEO XIII.

Sketch of the Life of the Deceased Pontiff.

EPOCHS IN AN HONORED CAREER.

His Great Ability Shown All Through His Life—As Head of the Church He Did a Great Work—His Career In Detail—His Daily Life.

The exceeding ability of the late pope, the genius which enabled him to transform a friendless church into a church having friends everywhere, lay in several great qualities of mind. He had a patience which nothing could tire. He could wait months or years, as need be, until his time came. He had no delusions. Joachim Pecci saw things as they were, not as he would have liked to have them. He had no animosities. He believed an enemy an enemy only until he could make him a friend, and he was always ready to welcome a friend. He recognized talent at once and never sooner than in those opposed to him. A good idea was a good idea to him, no matter who proposed it, and he never committed the mistake of undervaluing the forces against him. He had that genius which can tell what is possible and what impossible. As easily as he could weigh others, so easily could he weigh himself. He knew his own limitations.

He was a great man among the great men of his day. He played a part amid some of the most tremendous dramas of history, and he played it successfully. With no force of arms he made men who ordered armies to obey him; out of enemies he created friends; a church which he found the prey of all he left strong in the circle of her defenders. Leo XIII will go down in history as one of the greatest among the long line of great men who have filled the papal chair.

Personally the late pontiff was tall and slender, and his hair was snow white. His face had the kindliest of expressions, and his smile was ready when anything amusing was said. His keen wit was tempered by a charitable wish not to wound the feelings of others. His manner was high bred and finished, and he possessed a most charming courtesy, which placed all who saw him at their ease. He loved to chat on literary topics, and to the last found pleasure in reading the great authors of antiquity. His experience of life was so vast that his remarks were full of a quiet wisdom. He impressed every one who met him. His personal habits were simple to a degree, for he lived the life of an ascetic. His industry and power for work were extraordinary, and the labor he daily went through while pope was enough to exhaust a much younger and stronger man.

Chronology and Early Life.

Joachim Vincent Raphael Lodovico Pecci, afterward Pope Leo XIII, was born March 2, 1810, at Carpineto. He was sent to the Jesuit college at Viterbo in 1818, where he remained till 1825, when he entered the Collegio Romano, just restored by Pope Leo XII. In 1828 he took first prize in physics and chemistry. In 1830 he was matriculated as a divinity student at the Gregorian university. In 1832 he won the degree doctor of theology and entered the College of Noble Ecclesiastics, where those who design to serve the pontifical government diplomatically or administratively are trained. In 1837 he was made subdeacon, then deacon, then priest. In 1838 he was made delegate or governor of the province of Benevento. In 1841 he was appointed governor of Spoleto. In 1843 he was made apostolic nuncio, or papal embassador, to Belgium and titular archbishop of Damietta. In 1845 he was made bishop of Perugia, where he arrived in 1846. In 1853 he was made a cardinal. In 1877 he was appointed camerlingo. In 1878 he was chosen pope to succeed Pius IX, deceased.

Joachim Vincent Raphael Lodovico Pecci was the son of Count Domenico Lodovico Pecci of Carpineto and Anna Prosperi Buzi. The family to which he belonged came originally from Siena. Its chiefs having taken sides with the Medici in the long struggle between Siena and Florence found it necessary to emigrate to the states of the church. They settled in Carpineto, a rugged mountain town nestled down between two great crags. Count Lodovico Pecci's wife was the daughter of a noble Volscian family living in the ancient city of Cora, the modern Cori. She brought with her a dower which notably increased the fortune of the family but she brought far more when she came herself. She was a woman of extraordinary ability and strength of character. Joachim, or, as his mother always called him, Vincent, was the fourth son.

That Joachim Pecci should, under the training of such a woman as the Countess Anna, turn his attention to the church was only natural. She belonged to the Third Order of St. Francis, an association founded to bring men and women closer to the church. From his earliest years the boy had been accustomed to seeing the brown habit and sandaled feet of the brothers and to listening to the story of the life of St. Francis of Assisi, as told by his mother. These lessons were driven in when, in his 14th year, his mother died in Rome and he followed all that remained of her to her grave in the Observantine Church of the Forty Martyrs.

In 1828, when at the Collegio Romano he gained the first prize in physics and chemistry at the end of the college year, he was chosen to defend in public against all objectors theses chosen from the subject matter of the three years' course. In getting ready he so overworked himself that his physicians absolutely forbade the trial, but the university granted him a certificate attesting his complete preparation for the test.

While he was a student in the College of Noble Ecclesiastics, Cardinal Sala took the warmest fancy to the young scholar and gave him much advice of the greatest value. Cardinal Paca also admired Joachim Pecci and recommended him strongly to Gregory XVI, who appointed him one of his domestic prelates and soon afterward the referendary to the court of Segnatura. He now had his foot on the first round of that ladder he afterward climbed so steadily.

Cardinal Sala saw to it that Joachim Pecci was attached to the Congregation of the Propaganda, and Cardinal Lambruschini, who was the pope's secretary of state, had him appointed official to many important bodies. He also placed him under the immediate charge of the learned prelates (soon to be cardinals) Trezza and Brunelli. The superiors of this young man realized the character of the material before them, and they shaped the weapon with exceeding care.

Career as Governor.

Joachim Pecci's first position of importance was that of governor of Benevento, a small territory situated in the midst of what was the kingdom of Naples. When the French withdrew from Italy and Naples was restored to the Bourbons, Benevento reverted to the pope. It was then an independent principality in the midst of a kingdom. The men who had been foremost in their opposition to Napoleon had gradually become guerrillas and bandits, levying blackmail and smuggling. They found their refuge in the high and broken lands of Benevento until that state had become a menace to all about it.

This was the condition of things with which this young man of 28 was expected to grapple. He went to Benevento and on the third day was taken down with an attack of typhoid fever, during which he nearly died. The result was that the opposition, which had been excited by the news of his coming, was killed by the sympathy which his illness called forth, and when he rose from his bed he found all the people favorably disposed toward him.

Mgr. Pecci was a man who might be depended on to make the most of such a state of affairs. At the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of a new church in honor of Our Lady of Graces he had an opportunity of meeting all classes in the little state. The gratitude he felt for sympathy extended to him in his illness lent an additional charm to a manner and utterance always full of courtesy and high breeding. It was natural perhaps that the lawless element should suppose itself more than a match for the gentle ecclesiastic who in years was not much more than a boy, and whose physical weakness showed itself in the pallor of his face. The surprise felt at measures adopted by the new governor was no small part of the force which gave him the victory.

One of the most dreaded chiefs of the lawless bands who were smugglers, bandits or guerrillas by turns was Pasquale Colletta. He had his center of operations in the Villa Mascambroni, where, with a band of 14 men, each as desperate as himself, he levied blackmail on all about him. One morning bright and early the people of Benevento saw this man, together with his whole band, led through the streets in chains by the pontifical soldiers. The governor was inflexible; no intercession was sufficient to save those who were convicted of murder, robbery and rapine.

The execution of Pasquale Colletta struck terror into the minds of those who had so long fattened on crime. But some offenders against the law were those who should have upheld it. A nobleman of Benevento was one of the greatest smugglers in the land, and when the gendarmes threatened to search his castle he went in great wrath to complain to the governor. Vainly did Mgr. Pecci endeavor to convince his visitor that law must be obeyed by all. The marquis told the governor he would go to Rome and return with an order of recall for the young ecclesiastic who was upsetting all the established customs of Benevento. The governor smiled and asked, "Have you given this matter thought, my lord marquis?"

"Certainly," was the reply.

"I fail to agree with you," replied the governor. "One cannot reflect too much in these matters. I shall therefore request you to remain here as my prisoner for a time."

That night while the marquis was reflecting on the matter his castle was surrounded, and 28 offenders were captured.

The reform of political and social evils did not take up all the time of the young governor. He devoted himself to a study of the economic conditions of his territory and decided that roads must be built connecting Benevento with the adjoining provinces of Molise, Terra di Lavoro and Avellino. He made a journey to Rome to confer with Gregory XVI and his ministers and returned with full powers. The roads were built. More than that, the taxes were reduced, and, brigandage suppressed, agriculture revived until commerce sprang into new life with the opening of new markets. Benevento was transformed—and in less than three years.

In May, 1841, Mgr. Pecci was recalled from Benevento and appointed papal delegate to Spoleto. This sent him to Perugia, one of the hotbeds of the revolutionary societies, and here began a contest between Joachim Pecci and the organized opposition to the church, which was to be the man's work for many years. The various secret societies which were born in Italy as the result of the disturbance following the Napoleonic invasion had all a common object—the attainment of social and political liberty. The efforts for greater liberty made by such societies as the Carbonari (the charcoal burners) took the form of an attack on the church. They believed that under no circumstances would the church lend itself to change, and they therefore determined to destroy it if possible.

Such a man as Mgr. Pecci would naturally come to the front in such a fight. In Perugia, where he now ruled, he found the societies very strong. Welded together and given form, as these had been, by the genius of Mazzini, they were powerful and able enough to demand the greatest ability of the young ecclesiastic. He began in a thoroughly characteristic way. The old road leading up to the city from the plain was impractible for vehicles, and in 20 days Mgr. Pecci had built a new one. One of the first to use it was Gregory XVI, who visited the old city and was received gladly by the people. The governor followed up the building of the road by a personal visit to every commune. He examined closely into every detail of administration, informed himself of the needs of each locality, corrected abuses and removed incompetent officials.

While he put down the secret societies whenever he could, he deprived them of their power over the people by making the reforms they talked about. He fostered agriculture and encouraged commerce, he secured an inexpensive administration of the laws, and he put down lawlessness with a heavy hand. In one year he had reformed the town councils, gathered all the courts into one building, established a savings bank, opened schools for the children and given new life to the college of Rosi Spello, of which the pope appointed him the apostolic visitor.

Embassador, Bishop and Cardinal.

Joachim Pecci was in his 33d year when Gregory XVI appointed him apostolic nuncio, or papal embassador, to the kingdom of Belgium. The embassador reached Brussels and found that secret societies were represented there in force. When he appeared at the court of King Leopold, he produced a most favorable impression. It was apparent that he was an accomplished scholar, a well bred man and one who had not a little wit.

In the difficult task which was before him Archbishop Pecci had the benefit of the counsels of Queen Louisa Maria, who was a most devout Catholic. To protect the Belgian Catholics against the opposition to them in the Belgian parliament was the embassador's first duty, and, as usual, he found a very practical way of going to work. He began the visitation of the great Catholic schools and stirred up those who controlled them until it became known that more work and better work was done in them than in their rivals'. In the College of St. Michael he made his influence especially felt, it being directly under the eyes of king and minister.

When Perugia lost its bishop, Mgr. Cittadini, the city magistrates, the nobility and clergy petitioned that Mgr. Pecci be appointed to the place. The pope consented, provided the consent of the archbishop could be obtained, and this was given as soon as asked for. Before going to Perugia Mgr. Pecci visited England, Ireland and France. He arrived in Rome when Gregory XVI was lying at death's door, and the letter which Leopold I had written could not be read by the pontiff. In that letter the king of the Belgians had urged the pope to make Mgr. Pecci a cardinal and had spoken very strongly of his services as a diplomat.

The archbishop, bishop of Perugia, entered the old city on July 26, 1846. Here he was destined to remain for 32 years directing his diocese, fighting the influence of the secret societies, encouraging education in every possible way and becoming, through his letters, the defender of the papacy among the Italian bishops. Diplomacy, his chosen field, was deprived of his services for a long period. It is, however, a question whether Mgr. Pecci did not do more for the church from the quiet of his library by the famous letters he found time to write than he could had he served as an embassador.

On the 26th of February, 1834, Perugia celebrated the elevation of her bishop to the cardinalate, in which celebration all ranks and orders of society joined, for Cardinal Pecci was most popular even among men who did not belong to the church, and all delighted to do him personal honor. There was a similar tribute paid on the 17th of January, 1871, when the cardinal celebrated his silver jubilee.

Elected Pope.

Pope Pius IX appointed Cardinal Pecci camerlingo in 1877. This office gives its occupant charge of the temporalities of the church during any vacancy of the papal chair, and with it came Cardinal Pecci's residence in Rome. The jubilee of Pius IX had brought throngs of pilgrims to Rome, and the opposition of the government of Victor Emanuel to the papacy had thereby been much increased. In January, 1878, Pius IX died, shortly after Victor Emanuel, and with King Umberto there was to be a new pope. The question whether the Italian government would allow a free election was warmly debated, and many thought it would not.

As camerlingo it was Cardinal Pecci's duty to make arrangements for the conclave in which the new pope was to be elected. No opposition came from the government, and the preparations in the Vatican went rapidly forward. On Feb. 18, 1878, the 61 cardinals present in Rome entered the apartments of the conclave. Prince Chigi, hereditary marshal of the church and guardian of the conclave, locked the door outside, and the cardinal camerlingo locked it within. Mgr. Ricci Parracciani, governor of the conclave, examined the inclosure so as to be sure there was no method of communication with the outside world. The conclave assembled in the Sistine chapel, in which 64 seats, each shadowed by a canopy emblematic of sovereignty, had been erected.

The places taken by the four candinals created by Gregory XVI were marked with green hangings, all the others being purple. In front of each cardinal was a small writing table, and to each was given a schedulla, or ballot, in the center of which he was to write the name of his choice. A full two-thirds vote was necessary for an election. On the altar stood a large chalice with its paten, and one by one the cardinals advanced, knelt before the altar and declared he chose the man he considered most fitted. Then, rising, he deposited his ballot on the paten.

Three scrutineers were chosen to count the ballots. On the first vote the name of Joachim Pecci appeared 23 times. On the second he received 38. On the third, taken on the morning of the 20th of February, 1878, he received 44 and was declared elected. The subdean, the senior cardinal priest and cardinal deacon approached the seat of Cardinal Pecci.

BIRTHPLACE OF THE POPE.

"Do you accept the selection made of you as supreme pontiff of the Catholic church?" asked the subdean, and Cardinal Pecci responded, "I accept." The cardinals rose as the subdean knelt. "By what name do you wish to be called?" "By the name of Leo XIII."

The announcement of the election was made in St. Peter's church by Cardinal Caterini. The coronation took place on the 3d of March in the balcony of St. Peter's.

Leo XIII and the Italian Government.

The great question in the minds of all men after the election of the new pope bore on his policy toward the Italian government. His predecessor, Pius IX, had never given up the claim to the temporal power of which he had been deprived, and it was soon seen that Leo XIII insisted as strongly on his rights as a temporal sovereign. In the first encyclical letter this position was taken in the plainest possible way. The pope also renewed the protests which Cardinal Pecci had made against the civil marriage, which had become the law of the land.

From the first the new pontiff saw that the field of influence open to him was that of the peacemaker. He put himself into communication with Germany, offering his services as mediator between the government and the Catholic population, and these were accepted. He interested himself in eastern nations. He complained most bitterly of the action of the Italian government, on the ground that priests were subject to military conscription; that the institutions of charity in Rome were no longer in charge of the church; that heterodox schools were opened; that the bishops had been deprived of all their functions and revenues, and that the government had taken to itself the patronage of the dioceses.

The Italian government was at that time led by Prime Minister Depretis, a man to whom the idea of the temporal power of the pope was an abomination. The minister's policy was to deprive the papal government of all power except in things spiritual. The diplomatic training and subtle brain of Leo XIII enabled him to see that his only chance to influence the government of Italy was by influencing that of other countries, and his foreign policy became the leading motive of his reign. He restored, as one of his first acts, the hierarchy of Scotland, and he declared in the strongest way there could be no compromise with revolution.

In February, 1879, deputations representing all Roman Catholic journalists arrived at Rome and were received by the pope. To them Leo XIII spoke strongly, outlining the policy they should take. In September of that year he, with marked liberality, threw open to the scholars of the world the treasures of the library of the Vatican. He wrote the encyclical letter on socialism in 1878, a letter which did much to win Prince Bismarck, and during 1879 he established the council of education for Rome.

In 1880 the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the coronation of Alexander, czar of Russia, gave Leo XIII an opportunity of reopening relations with the Russian court and of pleading the cause of Russian Catholics. He seconded this by proclaiming a solemn office of honor to the memory of the Russian saints, Cyril and Methodius, and in 1881 he established a hierarchy for Bosnia and Herzegovina. He encouraged the Greek college in Rome and enlarged it. He brought about concord between the papacy and the eastern schismatics, and the government of Turkey acknowledged the benefit derived. In Persia the efforts of Leo XIII were most successful, and in Japan he made his diplomacy felt.

The famine in Ireland in 1879 enabled Leo XIII to take a strong stand with the Irish people and to express his belief in the ultimate success of their efforts.

In 1884 Leo XIII convened a plenary council of the church at Baltimore. The archbishops were summoned to Rome to consult over the schema or outline of discussion, and as a result of the council strong ground was taken on the spread of infidelity, and the movement to form a great Catholic university at the city of Washington was inaugurated.

The Pope and Bismarck.

The work accomplished by Leo XIII in Germany, because of the enormous difficulties he was forced to face, illustrated better his exceeding ability as a diplomat than any other during his reign. The opposition to the Catholics as formulated in the celebrated Falk laws, so called from the name of Dr. Falk, their author, was the result of two movements antagonistic to each other, yet working to a common end. When Pius IX called the council which put forth the dogma of infallibility, Prince Chlodwig Hohenlohe and Dr. Joseph Ignatius von Dollinger formed a party among the Bavarian Catholics in opposition, which eventually became that section known as Old Catholics. The distinguishing plank in their platform, to use a phrase which thoroughly expresses the idea sought to be conveyed, was a denial of this dogma.

In point of fact this denial was really an expression of opposition to the claims of the papacy to temporal power. It was the desire of Dr. Dollinger, who was the brains of the whole movement, that the pope should become the spiritual sovereign of the Catholic world, and that he should, so to speak, modernize the theory of the papacy in accordance with the change brought about by the greater freedom of the people. On the other hand, the Ultramontane party believed it was right for the papacy to insist more strongly than ever on all powers ever held by it. As we all know, the Ultramontane councils prevailed, and the Old Catholics were thrown into direct opposition.

Count von Bismarck, in his desire to establish an imperial government in Germany with as much absolute power as he dared give to it, found himself face to face with the movement going on in men's minds in the direction of greater freedom. He sought and found in the Catholic church that sop which he might throw to the growling Cerberus of the people in order to divert their minds from what was being done. He took advantage of the Old Catholic movement to increase the opposition to the papacy, and then to the Falk laws sacrificed the interests of the Catholics who were loyal to the pope. It was skillfully done, and Pious IX was powerless.

When Leo XIII was elected, he found himself face to face with the Falk laws, then in full force. But the oppression of the Catholics in Germany had weakened the hold of all religious bodies on the people, and this in turn had given strength to the propaganda of the socialists.

Leo XIII saw his opportunity and wrote his encyclical letter on socialism. Prince Bismarck found an ally where he least expected one. He was unable to refuse the help offered, and once more the prince chancellor and the papacy were working side by side. From this as a starting point Leo XIII, as the months rolled by, made advance after advance until Prince Bismarck, protesting he would not "go to Canossa," found himself before the castle gates. The Falk laws were abrogated, bit by bit, until they disappeared, and the triumph of Leo's diplomacy was complete.

Japan Wants Russia to Evacuate Manchuria at Once

ASKS ENGLAND TO JOIN HER

In the Effort to Have Numerous Ports Opened to World's Commerce—Russia Said to Be Mobilizing Troops For Service In Far East

London, July 22.—It is learned that Japan is not satisfied with the assurances Russia has given the United States with regard to Manchuria and has been actively urging Great Britain to join her in a more energetic attitude towards Russia. Great Britain, thus far, has been disinclined to take any action, but Japan is persistent in urging the immediate evacuation of and the restoration of the status quo at New Chwang and that a number of additional ports be opened to the commerce of the world.

Japan has informed the foreign office here that Russia has not ceased to present for Chinese acceptance the conditions which she presented some time ago and which Russia denied submitting.

If the ports are opened in compliance with the Japanese proposal Manchuria will be honeycombed with trade routes. The Manchurian ports suggested by Japan are Fuinhanchen, Tagustian, Siuyan, Liaoyan, Semminchin and Tunhua.

The Standard's Odessa correspondent sends a report that 128,000 troops are being mobilized from central and northern garrisons in Russia for immediate dispatch to the far east in case of necessity. He also reports that on the return of General Kuropatkin, the Russian war minister, an extraordinary meeting of the imperial council of the state, which will be attended by the czar, will discuss Manchurian and cognate questions.

Russian Opposition Not Withdrawn

Pekin, July 22.—According to the representations of Prince Ching, president of the foreign office, Russia has not informed China of the withdrawal of her opposition to the opening of Manchurian ports, and according to the same representations negotiations between China and Russia have been suspended for the past month. United States Minister Conger yesterday conferred with M. Lessar, the Russian minister, supposedly regarding Manchurian matters. The representatives of all the governments have received copies of Russia's note and the clause prohibiting foreign settlements in towns to be opened excites opposition.

Regarding the Yalu Cable

Yokohama, July 22.—Replying to a protest made by the Korean government, M. Pavloff, Russian minister to Korea, has explained that the laying of a cable across the Yalu river was entirely non-official and was undertaken by the newly formed Russian timber company which, added M. Pavloff, was entirely within its rights, since the American and British concessionaires enjoyed the same privileges.

Trial Horse Caught In Calm

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 22.—After her narrow margin of victory Monday Lipton's new challenger for the nautical blue ribbon was again in racing form and trimmed her trial horse by 33 minutes, 17 seconds in a 20-mile race. Much of her big victory was due to a fluke in which she covered miles of water while Shamrock I hung idle in a calm. Another thing which the sailors say brought good luck to the new boat was that Sir Thomas, after watching the race from the Erin for several days, sailed on the challenger. Her crew declares that he rarely fails to bring good luck.

Islands Claimed For England

London, July 22.—At the annual meeting of the British North Borneo company the question of the recent occupation by the United States of the seven small islands off the coast of Borneo came up. Chairman Marten, M. P., said the islands, of which Great Britain had been in possession for 25 years, were derelict and had not been referred to in any treaty with any power. It was a simple misunderstanding and the United States would, when the matter was explained, waive its claim to the islands.

Steel Shares Suffer

New York, July 22.—Bear attacks, coupled with further forced liquidation, resulted in a new low level for a number of securities in yesterday's stock market. Declines ranged from 15 points to 3. The United States Steel shares were most severely pounded, with net losses of 2 3-4 and 3 7-8 in the common and preferred respectively. Sales of these stocks aggregated over 186,000 shares.

Don't Want Jury Trials

Washington, July 22.—United States Minister Merry, at San Jose, has informed the state department that the congress of Costa Rica has abolished trial by jury. Ignorance and personal prejudices on the part of the people were mainly responsible for this action.

Christiana, July 22.—The police here have receive no intimation from abroad of intended visit of American anarchists. A prominent American anarchist is staying in Christiana, but there is no intimation that her presence has anything to do with a plot against the German emperor.

England's Deal With Cunard Line

London, July 22.—It is announced that the government has completed the agreement with the Cunard Steamship company whereby it will pay considerably over $5,000,000 for the construction of two additional steamers and that the whole fleet of vessels will be at the government's disposal as cruisers.

Tilton, N. H., July 22.—Fire which destroyed the Lovering hotel, the hotel stable containing 17 horses, and a tenement, besides damaging the town hall block and other buildings, caused a loss of about $50,000. There is a theory that the fire originated in a quantity of waste.

VATICAN CEREMONIES.

Preparations for Funeral and Conclave—400 Church Bells Clang for an Hour.

Rome, July 22.—The body of Leo XIII lies in the hall of the throne room, a few steps from the room in which his death took place. The same vestments, the Comauro hood, the rochet and the white gown which were put on Monday, cover the form, which rests in semi-state, surrounded by lighted candles, the noble guard and Franciscan penitentiaries.

This morning the diplomatic body, the high dignitaries and the Roman aristocracy entered the hall and paid their tributes of respect to all that remains of the pope. This afternoon the body will be arrayed in all the glory of the pontifical robes, the mitre replacing the hood, and at sunset it will be taken into the chapel of the sacrament of St. Peter's, where, for three days, the public will be given an opportunity of paying a last farewell. The interment will occur Saturday evening.

Tuesday was notable for the impressive ceremonial of the recognition of the death of the pope, which occurred in the chamber in which he died. Thereafter only those were admitted who were concerned in the embalming of the body, an operation which occupied six hours. Meantime the authorities of the Vatican proceeded with the preparations for the funeral and the conclave and the acknowledgment of the condolences which had been received.

It is not the custom in Italy to wear the conventional emblems of mourning and hence the crowd which, in consequence of the closing of many places of business, wandered the streets, had more the appearance of an aimless holiday making throng than one sorrowing for the death of the pope.

The quiet of the evening was broken by a chorus such as the world has seldom heard. On the stroke of 8 all at Rome's 400 churches commenced to toll bells for the passing of the soul of Leo XIII. From the seven hills and from every quarter of the city which contained churches came the constant clang until all was one vast reverberation. The harsh jingle of the smaller chapel bells, striking quickly and more often, was not drowned by the solemn strokes that came in mourning measure from the great dome of St. Peter's. It was as if a great fire raged and every bell in Rome were vieing with every other in anxiety to warn the populace. Except in its common motives and common sorrow it was an amazing discord, which continued an hour, and which will recur nightly until the obsequies are over.

A death mask of Leo XIII has been taken by Commendator Galli, director of the Vatican museum. The delicate work was successfully executed and the result is considered highly satisfactory.

The viscera of Pope Leo, which were placed in an earthen urn and provisionally deposited in the crypt of St. Peter's, were removed at midnight to a magnificent urn which, carried by Mgrs. Marzolini and Angeli, was taken in a Vatican carriage to the church of St. Vincent Anastasius. The mysteriously picturesque scene was such as is only possible in Rome. The carriage was met at the door of the church by priests carrying torches which flared in the breeze, the flickering light having a weird effect on the faces of those present.

The viscera of all the popes except Pius IX were deposited in this church, which was selected because it stands in the parish of the quirinal, formerly the home of the popes. The viscera of Pius IX was not taken there as it was feared at that time that some untoward incident might take place during the transportation. The peaceful manner in which the ceremony was performed last night is regarded as a fresh proof of the improved relations between the church and the state.

The Vatican authorities are very much pleased with the messages of condolence received from United States Secretary of State Hay. They feel a special gratification over messages from Protestant countries or those having no representative of the holy see.
representative at the holy see.
cardinals at the meeting of the congregation took an oath of most rigorous secrecy, it has leaked out that, contrary to what happened in 1878, nobody has yet proposed to have the conclave meet outside of Rome.

The will of Leo XIII has not yet been opened. Consequently all alleged news concerning it and the millions he is said to have left to the church is merely imaginary.

Cardinal Oreglia, in giving instructions to the commanders of the papal assembled bodies, said: "Although the relations between the church and the government of Italy are less strained than in 1878, so that certainly order will be maintained outside the Vatican, I remind you that it is your duty to watch closely inside the Vatican to prevent, especially during the conclave, the interference of any extraneous influence."

Cardinal Oreglia's request to Rampolla that the latter should remain at the Vatican is considered a most diplomatic move, being perhaps the first step for an agreement between them, and might entirely change all the prophecies hitherto made concerning the issue of the conclave.

Indeed, some profess to see a result of this in a skirmish at the first meeting of the congregation of cardinals over the appointment of a secretary to the consistorial congregation. After the discussion of several candidates, among whom was Mgr. Gaspari, known to be Rampolla's protege, someone suggested Mgr. Merry Del Val. He was immediately supported by the whole anti-Rampolla element merely to test the strength of the ex-secretary of state, but this strategem was unsuccessful, as Oreglia made it manifest that he was not personally interested in the matter, while Rampolla swung his followers to the support of Merry Del Val and thus avoided a measure of his strength at this juncture.

The embalming of the pope's body began at 4:45 p. m. in the little throne room and was performed by Dr. Lapponi, assisted by his son, Dr. Guido, and the four physicians of the apostolic palace and the doctor of the Swiss guard. The body was carefully washed and then the doctors proceeded with the anatomic search of the arteries into which were injected a special disinfectant for preventing decomposition. They then proceeded to make an injection in the parenchyma, waiting afterwards some time for the diffusion of the disinfecting fluid throughout the body.

Then began the dissection of the corpse, with an incision made in the chest bone, beginning in the centre, but a little to the left, so as to end at the external left margin of the chest bone, thus laying bare the thorax, which was afterward opened. This was followed by tying all the arteries which in that part of the body are in connection with the remainder of the organism and extracting afterwards the viscera of the thorax.

Dr. Lapponi then made a prolonged cut lower down, extracting the abdominal viscera, which was washed, disinfected and put in an enameled earthen urn, to be deposited in the crypt of St. Peter's, instead of in the church of St. Vincent Anastasius, as was done before 1870, when the transportation of the urn was a public ceremony, the procession passing through the streets.

BILL OF $21.15.

The Former City Scavenger Sues Henry H. Faxon.

Heard at Special Session of Court.

Mr. Faxon on Stand Two Hours Out of the Four.

A special session of the district court was held Tuesday afternoon, and for four hours the court listened to the evidence presented to show whether or not Henry H. Faxon shall pay Charles L. Prescott the $21.15 which the latter claims Mr. Faxon owes him for cleaning out various cesspools and vaults in 1902.

When the court adjourned a few minutes before 6 o'clock the case had not been completed and an adjournment was taken until Friday.

Edward J. Parker, Esq., represented Mr. Prescott and J. W. McAnarney, Esq., looked out for the legal rights of Mr. Faxon. The plaintiff's declaration contained eleven items, and the answer of the defendant was a general denial, and that if he ever owed Prescott anything the same had been fully paid.

At the start Mr. Prescott's contract with the city as scavenger was admitted. This showed that he was to charge $1.65 for each tank of 400 gallons of cesspool matter, $1.20 for one family vault one year and $1.70 for two family vault one year.

Mr. Prescott testified to receiving orders by letter from Mr. Faxon to clean cesspools and vaults.

The first item was for cleaning a cesspool on Revere road. This order was received from the tenant and plaintiff did not know until he arrived that Faxon owned the property. He went there to do the job and found cesspool running over. He made no entry in his books until men returned at night. He gave his men orders on a blank form. He charged $1.65 for a load which was anything from a spoonfull to a tank load.

Counsel for plaintiff wanted to offer the slips given to the drivers of the teams by Mr. Prescott. Lawyer McAnarney objected. After a cross fire between counsel the blanks were admitted as the original entries of work done and charges made.

The next charge was July 9, which was cleaning a vault and two cesspools on North street. Plaintiff did not visit place while work was being done. His man Shea returned the slip that night, and he completed the entry upon it.

July 25, received order and cleaned cesspool on Howard street. Did not get a full load but took what he found. The work was done as well as anyone could do it.

August 16, cleaned three cesspools on the corner of Franklin and School streets.

Sept. 3, cleaned cesspool of one Joyce on Sargents lane. The slip read two loads, but that was an error, and but one load was charged.

Sept. 13, cleaned cesspools at 44 and 66 Water street.

Oct. 22, cleaned cesspool at 18 Howard street.

These aggregated $21.15. Sent Mr.

Miss C. S. Hubbard—Goods that are selling.
To Let—House and Stable.

Good Afternoon.

Wonder if it would have been pleasanter today were the grocers at home. We hope they are having a pleasant time.

It is to be regretted that the street railway does not double track City Square as authorized some months ago. It would improve the street car service greatly. Besides it is delaying improvements as a new crossing from Chestnut street to Briesler's corner is waiting.

The granite city of Massachusetts might well imitate the granite city of New Hampshire. Certainly, we have the granite, and better granite, and we have history too. Where Concord had one president, Quincy had two. As a part of Concord's semi-centennial celebration on Aug. 19 and 20, it has been decided to mark with appropriately inscribed granite tablets, 14 historic sites. In addition, others will be similarly marked through the public spirit of their present owners. Among those to be marked by the city are the sites where the first legislature met in 1782; where the first block-house and meeting-house was located in 1726; where the first child was born in 1728; the different garrisons; the home of President Franklin Pierce from 1856 to his death in 1859, etc.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Every farmer boy wants to be a school teacher, every school teacher hopes to be an editor, every editor would like to be a banker, every banker would like to be a trust magnate, and every trust magnate hopes some day to own a farm and have chickens and cows and pigs and horses to look after. We end where we begin.—Saline County (Kan.) Index.

☞ There is need of a new barber in the city institutions on Long Island. One razor, one lather brush and two towels were all that he considers needful for 80 hospital patients, some of whom are afflicted with infectious diseases. He admitted that he could have extra soap and water and towels if he wanted them, but he said he could not get through his work if he had to give every one fresh water and towels. Is the Boston institution on the island restricted to the employment of one barber? Where is the Board of Health?—Lynn Item.

☞ It is announced that some thirty colonels of the regular army are to be immediatly put through the mill of promotion to brigadier-generalship and subsequent retirement upon their own application. This is strictly proper, of course, because it is according to a custom that has become law in the army, but in reality there is no more justification in finding improved berths for these men to rest in for the remainder of their lives, other than such as would come to them in the ordinary course of service, than there is for finding better berths than men are actually entitled to in the postal service. Sift the matter finely and the action is found to be beyond the authorization of the law in principle if it does keep within its letter.—Haverhill Gazette.

FIFTEEN DELEGATES.

To Republican State Convention from Quincy.

Caucuses to be Held Sept. 23.

Chairman Selected for the State Convention of Oct. 2.

Quincy cast 17 less votes for Gov. Bates in 1902 than it did for Gov. Crane in 1901, and the Republicans will have one less delegate this year to the State, the Councillor, the County and the Senatorial conventions.

The loss was in Ward One where the Republican vote was 252 in 1901 and 242 in 1902. Eight more votes (a total of 450) would have given four delegates instead of three. As the same time 27 more votes would have given Ward Five an additional delegate.

The Republican State Committee at a meeting on Tuesday decided on the same basis of representation as in 1902, for all conventions except the Representative, as follows: One delegate for the first 75 votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor at the preceding election, in each ward of a city and in each town, and one for each succeeding 150 votes, or for a fractional part as large as 75 votes, but each ward of a city and each town to have at least one delegate.

No Representative convention will be held in Quincy this year, the nominations being by direct vote as last year. Had there been a Representative convention the apportionment would have been as follows: Ward One, 9; Ward Two, 5; Ward Three, 7; Ward Four, 5; Ward Five, 8; Ward Six, 4; a total of 39.

The above basis gives the Quincy wards the following representation to the State and other conventions except Representative:

	Delegates.	Vote Cast
Ward One,	3	442
Ward Two,	2	247
Ward Three,	3	355
Ward Four,	2	240
Ward Five,	3	423
Ward Six,	2	219
	15	1,926

The State convention will be entitled to 1533 delegates against 1609 last year, a decrease of 76. Quincy and Norfolk county lose but one.

The State Committee selected Congressman Samuel L. Powers of Newton as chairman, and selected the following committee at large on resolutions: Ex-Governor W. Murray Crane of Dalton, Congressman F. H. Gillett of Springfield, Hon. John M. Raymond of Salem, Hon. John J. Whipple of Brockton and Matthew J. Whitall of Worcester.

Caucuses will be held in Boston Sept. 22 under the Luce act, and in all other cities and towns Sept. 23. The State convention will be held in Tremont Temple Oct. 2.

—Savings banks now only pay 3 or 3 1-2 per cent., and good mortgages are being placed at 5 per cent. and the banks have to meet the new rates. SKILLED IN SURGERY.

Sir Frederick Treves, Who Operated on King Edward of England.

Sir Frederick Treves, the famous English surgeon who has just retired, goes into private life with the unparalleled record of having performed over a thousand operations for appendicitis without a death.

It was Sir Frederick who, as surgeon to King Edward, was called upon to

The great surgeon, who is but fifty years old, was educated in London and won his reputation in the London hospitals. When the Boer war broke out he threw up his practice and went to South Africa as consulting surgeon of the army. On his return to the British capital he was knighted and later was appointed sergeant surgeon to the king.

A YOUTHFUL SCIENTIST.

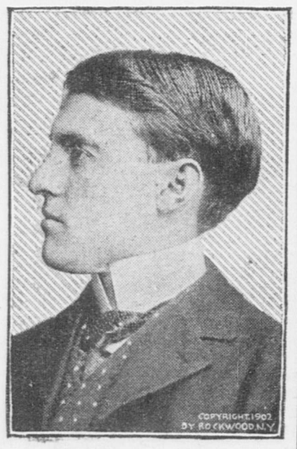

Inventor of a Wonderful Device to Make the Deaf Hear.

Scientific men all over the world are deeply interested in the discovery made by Miller Reese Hutchinson, a young inventor, who by means of an electrical device has seemingly demonstrated that the deaf can be made to hear.

The instrument as explained by the inventor is an application of the combined principles of the telephone and the microphone, the latter being a very sensitive scientific instrument for the magnifying of sound. By the combination sounds are vastly magnified through the outer and middle ears to the inner ear and the auditory nerve.

In operation the instrument sends the air waves against the tympanum and forces it to vibrate, thus vibrating the middle ear and loosening the three vibratory bones so that they perform their functions. It was the use of this appliance, it is said, that enabled Queen Alexandra of England to regain her hearing, which for some years had been impaired. Mr. Hutchinson is the happy possessor of a gold medal given him by the queen "for scientific research and investigation."

While pursuing his investigation the inventor made a study of the human ear under one of the leading aurists of the country, acquiring a thorough knowledge of its mechanical construction. Speaking of this phase of his research, the inventor said: "I am an engineer, electrical and mechanical, and the human body is mechanism. The perfecting of my invention has been due to the application of sound mechanical principles and mathematical facts to the mechanical aspects of the ear as an organ."

Miller Reese Hutchinson is a native of Mobile and ten years ago, when but sixteen years of age, began working on the problem, which even at that age had engrossed his attention. He was educated in the public schools and at the Alabama Polytechnic institute, graduating from that school as an electrical engineer. After his graduation Mr. Hutchinson applied himself to the perfecting of two instruments by means of which, it is said, persons who have never heard a sound in all their lives have been enabled to hear with distinctness music played on a piano and the tones of the human voice in ordinary conversation.

Had Reason For It.

"The only trouble with my pipe," remarked the stingy smoker, "is that it gets so hot."

"Humph!" retorted the man who speaks his mind. "I don't wonder, considering the kind of tobacco you stuff into it."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE GROCERS OFF.

Annual Outing This Year to Rocky Point.

Includes a Trip on Steamer.

Rhode Island Clambake One of the Attractions.

Today is Grocers' Day and business in the grocery and provision line in Quincy is generally suspended while the proprietors and their friends are sporting at Rocky Point, R. I.

The day is not being so generally observed as a holiday as usual, as the dry goods, jewelry, clothing and furnishing stores, banks and drug stores are open for business.

Although the morning did not give promise of being a very good day for an outing, a hundred or more ladies and gentlemen gathered at the Quincy depot to take the special train.

The special of twelve cars arrived in Quincy at 8.06 and five minutes later was speeding away toward Fall River. Stops were made at Quincy Adams and Braintree where others of the Old Colony association joined the party.

Upon arriving at Fall River a steamer will be taken for a sail to Rocky Point where a Rhode Island clambake will be served. An orchestra furnishes music on the boat, and a general good time is anticipated.

Another Launching.

The six-masted steel schooner building at the Fore River shipyard is so nearly completed that her launching is likely to occur about the middle of August. The plating is nearly finished, only a few alternate strakes at bow and stern remaining to be put on, the spardeck is all laid, and the interior bulkheads and tanks are practically all up. The restraining timbers on which the frames rest have been removed, so that at last the hull's graceful lines appear. The masts are ready to be stepped as soon as the vessel is afloat.

Cadillac Beats Detroit.

The first races of the annual meeting of the Interlake yachting association were held Tuesday off Put-In-Bay. There were 19 starters. Interest centered in the Detroit and the Cadillac in the 30-foot class. They worked to the front and the Cadillac won from her rival by seven seconds in one of the hottest contests of the many between the two boats. The Cadillac was built by Hanley at Quincy, Mass.

BILL OF $21.15.

Faxon bills the first of every month.

Upon cross-examination, Mr. McAnarney went into each charge in detail and witness was questioned as to just what work was done at each place. Mr. Faxon had complained on the sidewalk as to the manner the work was done, but not to witness.

A letter of Mr. Faxon was offered in relation to order for cleaning cesspool at the corner of Franklin and School street, which was to clean one cesspool. Two had been cleaned.

In regard to letter of Sept. 26, he had cleaned out another old trap by mistake, but he made no charge.

Sometimes the foreman filled out the slips and sometimes plaintiff did. If he did not know party's name that was not filled out until night. Some of the slips introduced were duplicates some originals. Could not tell which was which.

Was busy during summer months and to a certain extent was engaged in general contract work.

James Ryan, foreman for Mr. Prescott, testified to cesspools he had cleaned out. After completing work he put figures down in some cases. If he did not he made a memoranda on a slip of paper, and when he got home at night he told Mr. Prescott, who completed the charge. He had always cleaned out cesspools and vaults in a thorough manner.

Cross-examined, he said some days he could clean out a number of places. He always received a slip with the order. He made memoranda on pieces of paper as he did not wish to soil the slips. At night Mr. Prescott filled out what I had not on the slips. He was at all but two of Mr. Faxon's jobs. There was no reason for leaving matter in the cesspools. They were hogsheads with boxes on top.

Thomas Shea, another workman of Mr. Prescott testified to cleaning two cesspools and a vault on North street. Was given a slip with writing on it. He could not read. Prescott told him where to go. Work was done as well as could be.

This closed evidence for plaintiff.

Mr. Tupper testified to measuring hogsheads of Mr. Faxon to get contents. The largest he measured held 158 gallons. A double hogshead of which he was given measurements held 295 gallons.

Henry H. Faxon, the defendant, then took the stand and was under fire for two hours.

Mr. Faxon testified that work done at Revere road was on June 28. On July 1 he examined premises. Found it full and above drain that leads to it. It was the usual size molasses hogshead with a box 3 feet, 6 inches square on top. It was used by two families. He had cleaned it himself twice a year previous to new rules.

Work was done on North street July 11. Was present while work was being performed. The man was at work with a steel cart. He had taken one-third or one-half load from one cesspool. The horse got stuck and the man suggested dumping load on the lot. The cart was loaded by a scoop. Cart was not half full. On July 16 the cesspool was running over. My men went there. Found one of the two cesspools had not been cleaned. The ends of the plank were covered with grass, dirt and weeds. The planks had not been opened. The other place was a small one and was full to near top of the ground.

July 25 work was done at Howard street. Examined place July 27. Found it full over the inlet. It was a hogshead that would hold about 150 gallons. Was used by only one family.

At the house corner of Franklin and School streets there were two hogsheads connected so that they would fill at the same time. They were set on stones. The capacity of the two was 295 gallons each. The other cesspool was entirely independent and was not ordered cleaned. Work was done Aug. 15. On Aug. 20 went there and found it within seventeen inches of being full. This was cleaned out by Prescott but not ordered. He charged for three tank loads.

The cesspool at Sargent's lane was cleaned Sept. 3. Was there Sept. 13 and it was filled up and overflowing.

Sept. 13 the Water street job was done. Went to the vault the men pretended to have cleaned out half an hour later. They were not cleaned as they should be. There was filth and water left.

The work was done at 18 Howard street Oct. 22. Was there an hour after work was done; there were seven inches of thick matter in the bottom of cesspool not touched. Mrs. Sullivan, the tenant, saw it. The vault was in the same condition. Not thoroughly cleaned out.

Had Mr. Tupper make measurements of hogsheads. Those I submitted were from School and Franklin streets. Took him to stable where I have a dozen hogsheads and he measured the two largest.

Mrs. Mary F. Sullivan testified: Lived at 18 Howard street. On Oct. 22 Prescott's men cleaned out cesspool. Later Mr. Faxon came and I saw him measure the matter in the bottom with a stick.

Mrs. Mary L. Joyce of Sargents lane said she remembered Prescott's men cleaning her cesspool. A lot of settlings were left in the bottom. Was nearly filled up two weeks after Prescott cleaned it. Was the only family that used it. Previous to that Mr. Faxon cleaned it once in six months before. It had the same use after Prescott's men emptied it as before.

The cross examination of Mr. Faxon and the two witnesses brought out nothing additional.

The case was then continued until Friday morning.

The Fall River Steamers.

Work is advancing fast on the Fall River line boats building at the Fore River shipyard at Quincy, the upright keel of the passenger steamer having been set on the keel-plates and the lower deck beams of the freighter being already well up, while the shapes for the remainder of the hull are awaiting the shipfitters. In the machine shop most of the parts of the engine shafting are finished ready for assembling.

☞Take our word for it, and the experience of the careful, calculating business man. There is more pleasure to be obtained from the little excursions of a day or two days' duration, when you start up and go just as the spirit moves and as you feel like doing, without great preparation, than in the long planned talked about and postponed vacation of several weeks' duration which only the few can take without neglect of business or bread-winning. It is the little excursions, the short vacations, that break the monotony of the summer life and help us over the periods of heat and depression. Let us enjoy them to their utmost.—Bangor Commercial.

CZAR'S LATEST MOVE.

Reforms Instituted to Show Mercy to His Prisoners.

CHAINING CONVICTS PROHIBITED.

Only Criminals Convicted of Unusually Brutal Conduct In Jail to Have Heads Shaved—Russia's Ruler Abolishes Some of the Worst Tortures—Remarkable Effect of Blows Delivered by a Flogger In Siberia.

The czar sent a confidential official to the principal central prisons in European Russia and in Siberia last February to get an absolutely impartial, uncolored report about the state of the prisons and the nature of the punishments inflicted on prisoners for refractory conduct.

This official, a former colonel in the guards, named Zabelnikoff, has now returned to St. Petersburg and made a full and fearless report to his imperial master, as a result of which some improvement in the condition of things has already been made, says the New York World.

For instance, no political prisoner's head is to be shaved—only those of criminals convicted of unusually brutal conduct while in jail.

No woman and no male under eighteen is to be subjected to blows or stripes from a stick or whip for any offense, and in all cases where whipping is regarded as necessary by the prison authorities the consent of the governor of the province must be first obtained and full reports of circumstances be sent to St. Petersburg.

The practice of chaining refractory convicts to cars in mines or elsewhere has been abolished.

The minor punishments, such as confining a prisoner in a totally dark cell underground, have been much modified. No prisoner is to suffer this punishment for more than three days. The doctor who accompanied Colonel Zabelnikoff on his journey says a week's confinement in a totally dark underground cell injures the eyes beyond recovery.

Colonel Zabelnikoff's attention was especially directed to complaints which had reached his imperial master's ears that in the military prisons Jewish soldiers suffered far worse treatment than Christians. Zabelnikoff found this to be the case in only isolated instances and that any difference in the treatment of the two religions was due rather to the attitude of the lower ranks of wardens than to the action of the prison directors.

A Russian traveler and litterateur named Doroshevitch recently returned from Sakhalin, a penal island off the east coast of Siberia. While there he had an interview with one Komleff, a man employed to flog prisoners. Komleff is an "artist" with the whip.

Doroshevitch asked him with how many blows he could kill a man.

Komleff answered, "Two." Then, reflecting, he said, "With one," explaining that he thought he could break the backbone.

Komleff distinguished between apparent blows and real blows. He told Doroshevitch to lay his thick notebook on the flogging block. The traveler did so, and with one whizzing blow Komleff shattered it into a thousand fragments.

"Now put your hand on the block," said Komleff.

Doroshevitch complied and heard the same dreadful, whizzing sound, but his hand was only gently touched by the whip.

It is optional with Komleff what sort of blow to inflict. He said:

"I can either torture or tickle, as it pleases me."

When Doroshevitch told this terrible man that sort of punishment would now be abolished the executioner responded fervently:

"God grant it may be so!"

A Novel Industry.

"Song spotting" is a new industry described by T. A. T., the new English penny magazine-journal. The "song spotter" is the accredited and responsible agent of the big London music publishing firms—or some of them, at all events. His business is to go from one seaside resort to another all the summer round, spending a week or so at each and "spotting" which ditties "go" and which do not. He knows that some among the songs whose choruses are hummed upon the sands this summer will be the favorites during the dark winter evenings. So he reports each evening to his principals in London. These latter have, of course, other "song spotters" working on similar lines in other districts, and should the reports coincide regarding any particular ballad negotiations are at once opened with the composer for the acquisition of the copyright.

RIFLE SHOT TROPHIES.

Two New Ones to Be Competed For by National and State Riflemen.

Riflemen, national and state, are taking an extraordinary interest in this year's rifle matches, and it is confidently predicted by those in authority that the present will be a "record" year in all the principal contests, says the New York Tribune.

This impetus to proficiency in marksmanship is due directly and indirectly to United States Senator John F. Dryden of New Jersey, who by his official and personal acts has furnished the country two of the most valuable trophies ever contested for on the rifle range. It was through Mr. Dryden's personal and persistent efforts that the military committees of congress last year agreed to insert a clause in the army appropriation bill authorizing for the first time "a national trophy, medals and other prizes to be provided for and contested for annually * * * by the army and national guard or organized militia of the several states and territories and of the District of Columbia."

This national trophy, coupled with an especially valuable and handsome one which Mr. Dryden recently presented, has naturally aroused a spirit of the keenest interest among those ambitious for honors for the small arm.

The Dryden trophy is to be shot for on the range at Sea Girt, N. J., under the auspices of the New Jersey State Rifle association. It is to be of bronze, 5 feet 7 inches high, mounted on an ebony base eighteen inches high, making a total height of about seven feet. The cost will be about $3,000. The general design represents a banner bearing on the front a wreath in relief and twenty-five convex disks for the names of the winners of each year. The panel at the top bears the words "Dryden Trophy." The letters themselves will be of 14 carat gold in relief. The figures of the infantryman (on the left) and marine (on the right) will be in full relief. The coat of arms of the state at the top will also be in full relief. The panel at the bottom bearing the inscription will be of bronze. The trophy will be open to teams from the army of the United States, one team from the troops stationed within each of the military departments; United States navy, one team; United States marine corps, one team; national guard or uniformed militia of the several states and territories, including the District of Columbia, one team from each state or territory.

BOYS DIVED FOR DIMES.

New Christian Endeavor Way of Inducing Newsboys to Bathe.

If any one has an idea that the Christian Endeavorers are sparing with their money those persons would have changed their minds if they had seen how eagerly they threw nickels, dimes, quarters and even half dollars into the north fountain at the courthouse in Denver for the sole purpose of compelling our street newsboys to take a bath, says the Denver Post.

"They have already begun good work," said one bystander.

This sort of new amusement did not fail to attract attention. There were about 150 of Denver's business men in the audience who began to enjoy this new fad and soon followed suit. One little fellow who had joined the money searchers came out $2.94 ahead; another who, besides getting rid of a layer of real estate about half an inch deep, had added $1.94 to his capital.

PIGEON FED BY LEO IN BED

Picturesque Incident of the Late Pontiff's Illness.

The Rome correspondent of the Berlin Lokalanzeiger wired his paper of a picturesque incident of the illness of Leo XIII. For a long time a pigeon had been in the habit of flying to the window of the pope's bedchamber daily to be fed. It grew to know its gentle benefactor and would feed from the pontiff's hand and allow him to stroke its head.

A few days ago it flew to the window. No one came to feed it, and it tapped with its beak until the pontiff ordered the casement opened. Then it flew into the room and perched on the pope's bed. Centra, the valet, was dispatched for bread crumbs, and the pope fed the bird and caressed it. He instructed Centra to see that the bird was fed after his death.

The Sock Fad.

There's been a lot of talk about
The women's latest fad,
The style of wearing socks so short
They'd barely suit a lad.
Some men are saying it's a shame
That women thus conspire
And to their use appropriate
Things meant for male attire.

But when one thinks of other things
That women took for dress
'Tis plainly seen that this new fad
Need cause no man distress,
For long ago the women donned
Hats made like those for men,
And when they wearied of that fad
They started in again.

They took to shirts of mannish style,
And, though that caused surprise,
They promptly added mannish cuffs,
Man's collars and man's ties.
And when cold weather came along
Some thought they were not dressed
Unless they wore a mannish coat
As well as mannish vest.

They've broken into many sports
Man thought were all his own,
And on the field athletic girls
Their prowess oft have shown.
We've heard them at the baseball games
Join in the fans' refrains,
And we have seen them promenade
While pertly swinging canes.

So when we think of all these things
There's no excuse for shocks
Because the women have a fad
Of wearing half length socks.
Don't make a fuss about the style,
Don't say that it's a shame,
For no odds what the fair ones wear
They're charming just the same.

MORTAR MIXERS' STRIKE

Threatens to Tie Up All Building Operations at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., July 22.—As a result of a strike of half a dozen mortar mixers employed on a new shoe factory the Master Masons' association last night voted to suspend all building operations in the city. While only 125 hod carriers will be directly affected by the lockout, more than 600 building trades employes will be forced to quit work immediately, and in event of the trouble continuing a few days longer fully 3000 men will be forced into idleness.

The action of the Master Masons' association was due to the fact, members of that organization say, that the strike inaugurated by the mortar mixers is in direct violation of an agreement by which the strike begun May 1 was terminated early in June, when mortar mixers were given $2.50 a day and brick carriers $2.35. Under the agreement the mortar mixers were to begin work 15 minutes earlier in the morning and at noon than the other tenders, to have the mortar in readiness when the masons began work. It was in consideration of this, the employers say, that the mixers were allowed 20 cents a day more than the brick carriers. Now, however, the mortar mixers demand additional pay for the extra half hour work, and when it was refused they left work. The contractor immediately discharged all his brick carriers and reported the trouble to the Master Masons' association. Last night's meeting and the vote to begin a lockout followed.

Dublin's Reception to King

Dublin, July 22.—The entry of King Edward and Queen Alexandra into Dublin was made the occasion for a general holiday. The decorations of the city surpassed anything hitherto attempted by Dublin. The grand stands were crowded, while the people were massed on the sidewalks. Their majesties continuously bowed their acknowledgments of the warm greetings. The day's proceedings were no marred by any unpleasant incident, beyond the absence of the ceremony of handing the keys of the city to the king. The city hall alone, of all the public buildings, was not decorated.

Poker and Pistols

Jackson, Ky., July 22.—In a pistol fight at a schoolhouse three miles from here between James and William Barrett on one side and Mack Howard and his 14-year-old son on the other James Barrett was shot in the head, Mack Howard's elbow was shattered by a bullet and James Vires, aged 12, who was sitting at his desk in the schoolhouse, was shot in the abdomen. The boy may recover, but the two men are thought to be fatally hurt. The fight followed a dispute over a poker game The civil authorities declined to take action and soldiers from here made arrests.

Cattlemen May Fight Soldiers

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 22.—A battle between troops and armed cattlemen is believed to be imminent in Big Horn county. Sheriff Fenton and deputies have left Thermopolis for Basin with Jim McCloud, charged with the murder of Ben Minnick, a flockmaster. The party is escorted by the Basin light battery of 40 men. It is reported that a large force of cattlemen have fixed an ambuscade and will endeavor to deliver McCloud and assist him out of the country. State troops have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to take the field at a moment's notice.

FIERCE BATTLE IS ON

Between Rebel Forces and Venezuelan Troops

LATTER'S SUCCESS CERTAIN

Cuidad Bolivar In Possession of Revolutionists but They Are Hard Pressed and Must Either Surrender or Die—No Water or Provisions

Caracas, July 22.—A passenger who has arrived here from Ciudad Bolivar reports that the city has been captured by the government troops.

Soledad, Venezuela, July 22.—A battle between the revolutionary forces at Cuidad Bolivar and the Venezuelan government army, commanded by General Gomez, has raged madly. Block after block was destroyed.

At 3 o'clock Monday morning when the inhabitants of the commercial and foreign parts of the city near the alameda saw the advance of the government troops they all abandoned their homes and sought refuge in other parts of the city, crossing the streets amidst a hail of bullets and shells, the women carrying their children, the strong helping the weak. What with the firing, the yells of the wounded and the crying of the women and children, a terrible scene was witnessed. The government troops, however, acted with humanity, especially the forces of General Rivas, who, fighting bravely, was the first to order the attacking force to be merciful.

At 8 o'clock the government officials having effected a junction of their forces, north and south, and having received further supplies of ammunition, decided to push the attack on the centre of the city. At 10 o'clock the government troops had charged the north side of the alameda, the public park of Ciudad Bolivar, which has been defended by a double row of barricades. Behind one of these were found more than 30 dead soldiers, while wounded men were seen on all sides.

The government commanders, seeing that only the artillery could make a breach in the remaining barricades of the alameda, ordered 12 guns to open fire on them and at the same time the Venezuelan fleet, which had changed its anchorage so as to bring its guns to bear effectively on the city, opened fire.

The sight is now horrible and the only places which still resist the onset of the government troops are the jail and the capitol. Early in the afternoon the government troops, which had received all the reinforcements available, together with ammunition, and who numbered in all 5200 men, were ordered to make a general attack upon all positions still held by the rebels.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the "zamora," called the Sebastopol of Ciudad Bolivar, was stormed and captured. Ninety-four dead rebels were found inside, among them being General Azanza, one of the revolutionary leaders. It is impossible to render an idea of the carnage which occurred at this point. At the same time General Rivae, General Gomez's chief lieutenant, with 2300 men, succeeded in destroying a barricade erected around the Miranda plaza, the key to the capitol, where all the survivors of the revolution were concentrated.

All the roads and streets running into the capitol are guarded by government troops and the escape of the revolutionists after the capture of the capitol, which is inevitable, seems impossible. They must either surrender or die. At 7 o'clock at night the custom house was taken after a 10 hours' fight. A press representative counted 60 killed as a result of this fight.

The Dalton block, where the American consulate and most of the foreign business houses are located, was captured at 5 o'clock. The revolutionists are without provisions and water, the supply pipe having been cut. Their situation is considered desperate and hopeless. The shops are being pillaged.

James a Desperate Criminal

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 22.—Warden Dero of Clinton prison announces that the $250 reward offered for the capture of Peter James, who, with three other prisoners, escaped from the prison Saturday last, will be paid for him dead or alive. This indicates that the prison officials expect James to fight to the death before being captured.

Battle With Rebels at Albay

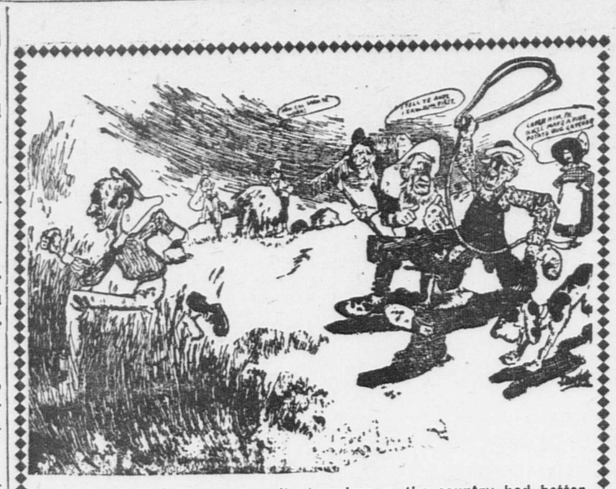

Manila, July 22.—The Philippine scouts and rural constabulary defeated 250 rebels in the streets of Albay, killing 15 and wounding 35. The combatants entered the town from opposite sides and street fighting continued for three hours. Four non-combatants were killed. The scouts lost one killed and two wounded.

Uncharitable Bishops

Famous Chemist Kills Himself

Farm help being scarce, city boarders in the country had better look out.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LIGHTNING'S HAVOC

Crops Damaged, Four Houses Struck and Two Persons Receive Shocks

Athol, Mass., July 22.—A severe electrical storm swept over Athol and surrounding towns, causing a financial loss estimated at not less than $20,000 and serious injury to two persons. Four houses were struck by lightning, telephone and telegraph wires were prostrated for hours, hundreds of tons of partly cured hay in the meadows was submerged and practically ruined, street car traffic was suspended, traffic on the Fitchburg division of the Boston and Maine was held up for eight hours by three big washouts between Athol and Royalston, and hundreds of acres of growing crops were damaged.

Mrs. Frank Hurbeck, whose home in Orange, was struck by lightning, received a severe shock and is in a critical condition. G. V. Goddard received a severe shock from a bolt which practically tore his house to pieces, but he probably will suffer no permanent effect from his injuries.

The storm continued for hours. Rain fell in torrents, the thunder crashed and lightning played almost incessantly.

Liabilities of Over $200,000

Pawlet, Vt., July 22.—The assignment of William H. Hughes of Granville, N. Y., is having a much wider effect than it was at first supposed that it would have. His interests in the slate business in Rutland county were almost as large as they were in New York state. Not only has it disrupted business in Granville but in this town fully as much. Hughes was a director of the Farmers' National bank of Granville, at which a greater portion of the slate producers of this section do their business. The directors of the Farmers' National bank refuse to make any statement about his relations with the bank. From all appearances his liabilities will amount to from $200,000 to $250,000.

Entertainment Job Transferred

Providence, July 22.—Governor Garvin has received a communication from Secretary of State Hay calling attention to the fact that foreign vessels will visit the waters of Narragansett bay this summer, and asking that the customary courtesies be extended to the representatives of these nations. As the governor has no Newport residence and cannot personally extend the courtesies to the visitors, Mayor Boyle of Newport has been requested to entertain the visiting foreigners.

Where Hedgehogs Are Plentiful

Concord, N. H., July 22.—The last legislature placed a bounty of 25 cents a head on all hedgehogs destroyed within the state. In 20 towns there have been killed in three months 7906 hedgehogs, for which the state has paid in bounties $1976.50. The 464 people in the town of Washington have killed in 90 days 1240 hedgehogs. Canaan comes next with 1021. There are 200 towns yet to hear from.

To Have 600,000 Idle Spindles

Fall River, Mass., July 22.—The three mills of the Union Cotton Manufacturing company will close tonight for the rest of the week, and the Globe and Sanford mills of the New England Cotton Yarn company will close Thursday night. This addition to the curtailment will make a total of 600,000 idle spindles in the city for the week, due to the conditions in the cotton market.

No Maine Guides' Union

Bangor, Me., July 22.—The surprising news has just reached Maine, through an article published in a New York newspaper, that the registered guides of this state have formed a union and that they are about to establish some rules and regulations that would prove very objectionable to sportsmen. No one can be found in the game regions who knows anything about the guides' union.

Man Killed and Wife Escaped

Attleboro, Mass., July 22.—While walking on the railroad track at Mendon's crossing F. J. Sheldon of Chatham, N. Y., was struck and instantly killed by an express train. Sheldon was accompanied by his wife, who jumped and escaped injury. The Sheldons came to this town to visit friends.

Wholesale Murder Was Intended

Roanoke, Va., July 22.—Detective Baldwin has arrested John Bailey and John Kennedy, charged with wrecking a passenger train near Greenville, when Engineer Bailey was killed. In a sworn confession they say they planned with Mrs. Ellen Painter to wreck the train and kill any passengers who might escape from the wreck Only the engineer was killed and the plan for wholesale murder was abandoned. Mrs. Painter will be arrested later.

Leading Negro Citizen Dead

Newport, R. I., July 22.—George T Downing, one of the leading colored men of the United States, died at his home here last night after a long illness. His death removes one of the leading representatives of his race, who has been identified with Douglas and Garnet of his own race and with Sumner and the abolitionists of Boston in their long fight for the freedom of the colored people. He was born in New York in 1819.

Prohibition's Great Victory

Austin, July 22.—The local option elections in Texas have resulted everywhere in victories for the Prohibitionists. They have already carried two-thirds of Texas counties, and the saloon men see that unless they can stem the tide they are doomed to lose all Texas. The liquor party has sought injunctions and other legal means to avert or overcome defeat, but thus far to no purpose.

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money, for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price. In addition to this large discount he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty-cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist Chas C. Hearn, that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment, for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr Howard's specific will cure. But if by any chance it should not, Chas. C. Hearn will return your money.

The specific is very pleasant to take, coming in the form of small granules, and there are sixty doses in every package. It is especially convenient when traveling, and no one should start on a journey without a bottle of this reliable medicine. 18-22-25-29

LEO AT ST. PETER'S.

Pen Picture of the Late Pontiff at Mass.

VIVID EFFECT OF HIS PRESENCE

As the Great Pageant Swept On, Mrs. Humphry Ward Says, the Crowd Sank Down and Their Heads Fell Like Corn Before the Wind—Remarkable Features of the Pope's Chanting.

The following description of Leo XIII., the late pope, from "Eleanor," by Mrs. Humphrey Ward, is published by permission of Harper & Bros.:

There, there he is—the old man! Caught in a great shaft of sunlight striking from south to north across the church and just touching the chapel of the holy sacrament, the pope emerges. The white figure, high above the crowd, sways from side to side; the hand upraised gives the benediction. Fragile, spiritual as is the apparition, the sunbeam refines, subtilizes, spiritualizes, it still more. It hovers like a dream above the vast multitudes—surely no living man, but thought, history, faith, taking shape, the passion of many hearts revealed. Up rushes the roar toward the tribunes.

Lucy—the alien and Puritan Lucy—surrenders herself completely. She betrays nothing save by the slightly parted lips and the flutter of the black veil fastened on her breast, but it is as though her whole inner being were dissolving, melting away, in the flame of the moment.

In a proud timidity, as one who feels herself an alien and on sufferance, she hangs again upon the incomparable scene. This is St. Peter's. There is the dome of Michael Angelo, and here, advancing toward her amid the red of the cardinals, the clatter of the guards, the tossing of the flabella, as though looking at her alone—the two waxen fingers raised for her alone—is the white robed, triple crowned pope.

And august, unheeding, the great pageant swept on. Close, close to her now! Down sink the crowd upon the chairs. The heads fall like corn before the wind. Lucy is bending too. The papal chair, borne on the shoulders of the guards, is now but a few feet distant. Vaguely she wonders that the old man keeps his balance as he clings with one frail hand to the arm of the chair, rises incessantly and blesses with the other. She catches the very look and meaning of the eyes, the sharp, long line of the closed and toothless jaw. Spirit and specter—embodying the past, bearing the clew to the future.

The pope and his cortege disappeared behind the confession, behind the high altar, and presently Lucy, craning her neck to the right, could see dimly in the farthest distance against the apse and under the chair of St. Peter the chair of Leo XIII. and the white shadow, motionless, erect, within it amid a court of cardinals and diplomats.

One more "moment," however, there was—very different from the great moment of the entry, yet beautiful. The mass is over, and a temporary platform has been erected between the confession and the nave. The pope has been placed upon it and is about to chant the apostolic benediction.

The old man is within thirty feet of Manisty, who sits nearest to the barrier. The red cardinal holding the service book, the group of guards, clergy and high officials, every detail of the pope's gorgeous dress, nay every line of the wrinkled face and fleshless hands, Lucy's eyes command them all. The quavering voice rises into the sudden silence of St. Peter's. Fifty thousand people hush every movement, strain their ears to listen.

Ah, how weak it is! Surely the effort is too great for a frame so enfeebled, so ancient. It should not have been exacted—allowed. Lucy's ears listen painfully for the inevitable break. But no! The pope draws a long sigh—the sigh of weakness—("Ah, poveretto!" says a woman close to Lucy in a transport of pity)—then once more attempts the chant—sighs again—and sings. Lucy's face softens and glows; her eyes fill with tears. Nothing more touching, more triumphant than this weakness and this perseverance. Fragile, indomitable face beneath the papal crown! Under the eyes of 50,000 people the pope sighs like a child because he is weak and old and the burden of his office is great, but in sighing keeps a perfect simplicity, dignity, courage. Not a trace of stoical concealment, but also not a trace of flinching. He sings to the end, and St. Peter's listens in a tender hush.

Then there seems to be a moment of collapse. The long, straight lips close as though with a snap, the upper jaw protruding; the eyelids drop; the emaciated form sinks upon itself.

But his guards raise the chair, and the pope's trance passes away. He opens his eyes and braces himself for the last effort. Whiter than the gorgeous cape which falls about him, he raises himself, clinging to the chair; he lifts the skeleton fingers of his partly gloved hand; his look searches the crowd.

TAKEN TO ST PETER'S

Pope Leo Clad In Robes Emblematic of His Office

AN IMPOSING PROCESSION

In Which All the Members of the Papal Household Took Part—"Prisoner of the Vatican" Lies Behind Iron Gates With Feet Protruding, to Be Kissed by the Faithful

Rome, July 23.—At 8 o'clock last evening all was inreadiness to take the body of the pope from the Vatican to the basilica of St. Peter's. The mournful procession gathered around the bier, which was gently lifted by the sediari who, in the lifetime of Leo XIII, had carried him in the sedia gestatoria.

The dead pontiff was clad in all the pomp of his holy office. About him had been placed the sacerdotal robes, used only when he celebrated a grand mass. The vestments were those which he wore for the last time in life in the hall of the consistory when he confirmed the appointments of Archbishops Farley of New York and Quigley of Chicago June 25 last. The golden mitre, the gilded stole, the white cape, the red thasuble, the pontifical pallium and the papal tunic all were there. Nothing which was emblematic of the power wielded by the dead man for more than a quarter of a century, and for centuries by his predecessors, had been omitted.

Leading the procession as it passed out of the throne room came the grooms carrying lighted torches. Behind them, waking with measured tread, were the aged mace-bearers and other domestics of the papal household. The picket of the noble guard and all the clergy of the Vatican, wearing their surplices, followed.

Immediately in front of the bier the pontifical silver cross was held aloft. Behind the bier came the three nephews of the late pope, Counts Ricardo and Camillo Pecci and Count Canarli. The air was heavy with incense from the censors swinging constantly beside the body. The Franciscan penitentiaries still kept up the unceasing refrain of intercession.

At the hall of Palafreniere the cortege came to a standstill. There the cardinals, who had been waiting in the hall of the consistory, took their places immediately behind the nephews. Their scarlet had been put aside for the violet robes which are only worn when princes of the church are in mourning.

Once more the procession, now flanked by the Swiss guards, moved on. After the cardinals came the whole diplomatic body accredited to the Vatican and the representatives of the Knights of Malta. The latter were followed by the marshal of the conclave, the master of the holy hospice, and the commander of the noble guards, all in magnificent uniforms. Then came the prelates of the chamber and knights of the cape and sword, in their mediaeval Spanish robes. The United States was represented by Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American college. The noble and Swiss Palatine guards brought up the rear.

No monarch was ever followed to the tomb by a more imposing array. Led by the cardinals the prelates and clergy recited prayers and psalms for the dead as they slowly entered the Sistine chapel, where the chapter and clergy of St. Peter's awaited the procession. The latter formally received and took possession of the body. The torch, mace and cross-bearers started forward, giving an opportunity to the chapter to take up a position immediately preceding the bier.

The final stage of bearing "the prisoner of the Vatican" to his resting place then commenced. From the Sistine chapel the procession wound out around the loggia immortalized by Raphael, encircled the court of San Damaso and descended the private staircase, still chanting, into the basilica. The moment the flaring torches, which still led the cortege, entered St. Peter's, the choir which was waiting there commenced to sing in sorrowful cadence "Libera me Domine." Mgr. Carcani, the canon of St. Peter's, solemnly sprinkled holy water over Leo's body and pronounced absolution. As it was borne across the threshold the cathedral choir, still singing, took the lead of the row lengthy procession. The intense silence which prevailed was broken only by the chanting, which echoed and re-echoed from the huge dome and deserted aisles of the chapel as the body was borne down the nave to the chapel of the sacrament. There candles burned brightly. In this chapelle ardente the body was stretched behind the iron gatee and two members of the noble guard took up positions on either side of the bier.

The procession then reformed and returned to the Vatican, leaving the body of Leo XIII in the greatest church in the world, alone, except for the faithful guard and penitentiaries whose prayers could be heard in the immediate vicinity of the chapel of the sacrament. Throughout the remainder of the vast basilica silence reigned.

The body of the dead pope lies on the high catafalque with his slippered feet protruding through the gates to be kissed by the faithful when they will be admitted to the chapel today and the two following days.

While the remains of the pope were being carried into St. Peter's the private ceremony of depositing the urn containing his viscera in the church of St. Vincent and Anantasius was taking place. A curious hitch occurred when the solemn procession arrived at the door of the special depository in the crypt. It was stopped, as the key was not to be found. The attendants hunted high and low and finally were obliged to break down the door. The depository had not been opened since 1846, as contrary to custom, the viscera of Pius IX are at St. Peter's. The rector of the church of St. Vincent and Anastasius will ask that the viscera of Pius IX be transferred to his church also in order to make the sequence complete.

The will of the late pope is still unopened, as proved by the fact that his apartment is sealed. Otherwise the objects there would have been distributed in accordance with the instructions left by him. Leo's intimates say, however, they know that the testament begins with advice about religion and morals and that it declares his firm intention to leave all he possessed to the church, including presents which might appear to be personal property, on the ground that no one could claim anything he had during life as he had generously provided for those bound to him by ties of blood and affection.

The report published in the United States on the authority of The Tribuna here to the effect that the will had been opened by Cardinal Oreglia and that it showed the pope had left a private fortune of $15,000,000 was premature and was retracted in a later edition of The Tribuna itself.

Contracts Will Not Be Held Up

Portland, Me., July 23.—At the close of a two days' hearing in the United States circuit court, on the bill in equity brought against the United States Shipbuilding company for the appointment of James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey as ancillary receiver of the company for Maine, Judge Putnam affirmed the action of the New Jersey circuit court, but placed certain restrictions in relation to the Bath iron works and the Hyde Windlass company so that those plants should not come into possession of the receiver until after the completion of the existing government contracts on warships.

The Burglar Got Away

Lynn, Mass., July 23.—Although caught in the act by a policeman, a burglar who trie to break into a liquor store at the corner of Commercial and Charles streets succeeded in getting away. The policeman was just trying the side door of the saloon when the burglar began work on the door with a jimmy. As the man saw him he grabbed the patrolman by the throat. After a few moments' struggle the patrolman got his revolver out, and then the burglar broke away and ran. Three shots from the revolver did not stop him, and he disappeared.

$9,000,000 OUTSTANDING

In Contracts Held by Firm Which Goes Into Receivers' Hands

Boston, July 23.—Contracts to the amount of $9,000,000 are involved in the embarrassment of the Norcross Bros. company, the extensive contractors and builders, for whom receivers have been appointed by Judge Brown in the United States circuit court. The failure was not generally anticipated by the real estate world. It is estimated that the corporation has net liabilities in excess of $500,000.

The Norcross Bros. company of Worcester, Mass., was incorporated Jan. 1, 1902. It consists of Otis W. Norcross, president; Albert J. Park, treasurer, and William J. Denholm. The capital stock is $1,500,000, in 100 shares at $15,000 a share. The business of the company is general building, quarrying, structural manufacturing and keeping of building materials.

It has brown stone and granite quarries at East Longmeadow and Braggville, Mass., and Stony Brook, Conn., and controls several allied concerns, which may not be seriously affected. The firm has offices in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York.

Norcross Bros. employed thousands of men and carried contracts with steel mills which enabled them to do business on an enormous scale. The firm had many government building contracts and had constructed custom houses and postoffices all over the country.

Will Try to Pay Dollar For Dollar

Worcester, Mass., July 23.—"We hope to pay dollar for dollar in time," said O. W. Norcross last night, in a statement to The Telegram. "The finishing up of a large number of contracts in which the delays caused by strikes and other labor troubles and the stringency of the money market, all operated to bring about these conditions. The contracts on hand are about $9,000,000 of which $6,000,000 worth are unfinished. The work on these contracts will go on the same as usual."

Alleged "Graft" at Revere

Boston, July 23.—The Post says that the allegation is now freely made that for months Revere has been ruled by "graft," and all sorts of sensational developments are expected when the matter gets into court. It is now asserted that the state officials will push the matter with the utmost vigor. They have been waiting for the opinion of Attorney General Parker, and that official, in a letter to Chief Wade yesterday, said the condition of things brought to his attention "might well be brought to the attention of the courts."

Building Laborers Locked Out

Lynn, Mass., July 23.—The master masons, some 35 in all, promptly locked out all building laborers, members of Building Laborers' union, as the hod carriers are known. This is in accordance with the vote passed by the association in considering the action of six mortar mixers in striking on a shoe factory for overtime pay. At least 500 mechanics are idle in consequence.

Investigated Collision

Newport, R. I., July 23.—A naval investigating committee has made an inquiry into the causes and responsibility for the collision between the torpedo boat Winslow and the yacht Clytie, which occurred off Goat island. The hearing was held behind closed doors, and the findings of the committee will be reported to the navy department before it is made public.

GROCERS' OUTING.

Were Favored with Pleasant Weather.

The Sail Was Greatly Enjoyed.

Rocky Point, Newport Harbor and Other Places Visited.

The best time we ever had! This was the verdict of every one of the 707 who participated Wednesday in the annual outing of the Old Colony Grocers Association to Rocky Point.

When the special train that conveyed the party to Fall River left Quincy the weather indications were anything but auspicious. This did not keep many of those who had planned to go from carrying out their plan and they are glad that they did.

When the train arrived at Fall River at 10.30 the sun was shining brightly, and there were no signs of a storm. The special steamer chartered for the party was tied up to the wharf with steam up, ready and waiting, so that it was but a few minutes after arriving before the lines were cast off.

The band played and everybody was in good spirits as the steamer ploughed her way toward famous Rocky Point. The sail was an invigorating one, and when at noon the party embarked all had appetites with razor edges.

Three hours were passed on land, during which time dinner was served. There were no sports other than a scrub game of ball between some of the drummers. There were plenty of other amusements, however, so that time did not hang heavily.

The party left Rocky Point about 3 o'clock for a sail. This proved to be one of the features of the trip. They steamed into Newport harbor where they saw hundreds of handsome steam and sailing craft riding gracefully at anchor.

Some one said the Reliance and Constitution were there, but there were few who were able to distinguish the defenders. The sight of Newport harbor was worth going miles to see. From there the steamer continued, passing the government training school and new coaling station and arriving in Fall River at 6.30.

As the steamer came up the harbor at Fall River sharp lighting could be seen toward the north, and it was concluded that Quincy must be catching a thunder shower.

The special train was in waiting, and at 6.45 the trip home was commenced. On the way home in the train the New York Biscuit Co., furnished fancy crackers for lunch, and the Columbia

Good Afternoon

Zanesville, O., with a population of 27,000 is to have a government building to cost $110,000. Quincy would be satisfied with a $70,000 could we have a larger lot for the same.

The highest wage in the world is $78,30 a minute for a day of six hours. It is received by the Czar of Russia and it is doubtful if many people would care to thread his way amid plots and dynamite bombs even for the wage.

With a couple who have been married 69 years, and another 63 years, Quincy has another marvelous record. We doubt if there is in the United States a couple who have been married as long as Mr. and Mrs. Wendell W. Williams of Farrington street.

The Barre granite manufacturers should be given a hearty welcome Others besides the granite men should extend the glad hand. Barre and Quincy have much in common and good feeling should exist. The tide will be high at 11 A. M. tomorrow, and a dip in the ocean has attractions for men from Vermont. Take them down to the city bathhouse, and also to the shipyard.

Clinton with a population of 14,000 should become a city. The assessors this year find it necessary to place the tax rate at $20.50. The valuation of the town is $8,029,000, an increase of $155,000. The amount raised by taxation is $164,000, an increase of $6,000. In 1890 Clinton's tax rate was $20.40, and in 1873 it touched $23.50. The tax rate of Quincy was never $20, and it has been above $18 but three years of the 111 years we have been a town and city.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Taunton's tax rate is over $20, yet she has the license money to help her, and no great new problems to vex her, as we have here. Who was it that used to say the license money kept municipal tax rates low?—Brockton Enterprise.

☞One of the most important lessons which the present antics of the stock market teaches is that people should no more think of buying what they cannot pay for in full and put away in their strong boxes than that they should sell what they do not own. Just now the rapid sagging of Wall street values is crushing those who have been foolish enough to purchase stocks on what is called "margin account," while in a few months, perhaps, those who are encouraged by the present course of prices to "sell" stocks or go "short of the market," will experience a misfortune similiar to that which now overwhelms the too confident buyer. In this huge gambling game, termed "stock speculation," business conditions are but a false light to lure the unskilful and unwary speculator to destruction; for usually it is when business conditions warrant a certain course for the stock market that those who control it, and play with it, turn it in precisely the opposite directions, the consequence being that the millions of dollars placed on "margined accounts" are diverted into the pockets of the manipulators.—Providence Telegram.

COMING TOMORROW.

Large Delegation of Barre Manufacturers Expected.

Tomorrow is the day that the Barre, (Vt.) Granite Manufacturers Association will be in Quincy as guests of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association. Advices from the secretary of the Barre association say that seventy-five are coming.

Private letters received however say that there will be a number of guests with the association and that the party will number fully 125.

They will leave Barre tonight and will show up in Quincy sometime Friday morning.

No definite plans have been made for Friday, although if any of the visitors desire they will be taken to the Fore River Ship & Engine Co. plant. Otherwise from that the visitors will do as each individual desires.

Friday evening a joint meeting of the two associations will be held at Malnati hall, when topics of interest to the granite trade will be discussed.

Friday night many of the visitors will be entertained for the night by friends. Others will find beds at local or Boston hotels.

Saturday the party with the Quincy association will take the 8.10 A. M. train for Boston from which point a special train will be taken for Crescent Park, R. I.

As each member of the Quincy Association has two tickets it is probable that the party Saturday will number upwards of 500.

In connection with this trip President W. S. Alexander and Secretary James Campbell of the Barre Association have issued the following notice to members:

"At a regular meeting of the Granite Manufacturers' Association, it was voted to accept the invitation so cordially extended to them by the Granite Manufacturers' Association of Quincy, Mass.

"The committee in charge have made the following arrangements:

"A special train made up of two regular cars and two Pullman sleeping cars will leave Barre at 9.30 o'clock on the evening of Thursday, July 23; returning, leaving Boston at 1 o'clock A. M. Sunday morning, July 26. The sleeping cars will be at the disposal of members until Friday morning, July 24.

"Tickets can be procured on application to the secretary, July 21. Any member having a friend who wishes to go on the train may procure a ticket on application to the secretary.

"Hope everybody will come and have a good time."

Cadillac vs Detroit.

A Toledo dispatch to the Herald says Wednesday's racing in the Interlake Yachting Association regatta at Put in Bay furnished another day of good sport. After a splendid exhibition of seamanship, the Cadillac won by two minutes, but on time allowance the Detroit beat the Cadillac by 13 seconds, This gives each of these yachts one heat on the trophies.

Happiness.

We are forever children. When we are infants we cry for the moon; when we are grown up we cry for happiness. And we always cry for the wrong thing because we never know what is good for us. It is a man's lot to mistake his wants and to be disappointed. It is his purpose in life always to grasp for the useless thing, to strive for that which has no merit, to hope for that which perishes as soon as he holds it in his hands. We have our ideal of happiness, but we endeavor to realize it in ways which are not good for us.

Happiness, as we perceive it in this terrestrial sphere, is a saddening illusion. It never lasts, because it cannot. It never satisfies, because it is not made to satisfy. The land of El Dorado forever remains east of the sun and west of the moon—that is, nowhere. It is the fatal morgana, the mirage of the desert of life. Happiness remains happiness while it is an illusion. Mortality is not made to hold and to enjoy it. It is mortality's lot to chase jack o' lanterns—to cry for the moon, which cannot be obtained because it hangs so high up in the heavens.—Valley Magazine.

A New Type of Collier.

The value of colliers to accompany fleets in time of war was thoroughly demonstrated during the Spanish war. Germany at the recent maneuvers along the Spanish coast experimented with coaling at sea, and now the British admiralty is considering plans for an entirely new type of collier. The proposed vessel is 550 feet long, 66 feet wide, with a draft of 27 feet when carrying 10,000 tons of coal. The most interesting fact about it is that the plans call for a speed of eighteen knots, or as high as that of the latest battle ships. The estimated cost of these ships is $1,250,000, which will include patent apparatus for unloading them at sea.

Railways Plant Trees.

A number of western railways have found that the growing of trees along the right of way is profitable, both for ties and snow breaks, and are setting out millions of cuttings.

WEDDED 69 YEARS.

Quincy Couple Who Hold the Record.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell W. Williams.

Parents of Edward C. Williams of Farrington Street.

Rounding out the golden autumn of married life, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell W. Williams, formerly of Rochester, Vt., are spending quiet, happy days at the home of their son, Edward C. Williams, 219 Farrington street, Wollaston.

It is probable, says the Boston Herald, that Mr. and Mrs. Williams hold the record for New England of long-married couples. A few days ago the palm was awarded a Vermont couple who had been joined in wedlock for 65 years, but Mr. and Mrs. Williams can go this record four years better, and, if both live till April 3 of next year, they will observe the 70th anniversary of their wedding.

Mr. Williams is a native of New Hampshire, but lived most of his life in Vermont, the native state of his wife. In Vermont both are well and favorably known throughout a large part of the state. Mr. Williams has served in the state senate, and was an intimate acquaintance of Senators Morrill and Edmunds, when those famous statesmen were young men and making their first bid for political honors.

Another intimate acquaintance of Mr. Williams is Col. Albert Clarke of the Home Market club of Boston. Both were great friends when Col. Clarke was a young man up in Vermont, when the later was superintendent of schools in Rochester, Vt., and was afterward a member of the Vermont legislature.

Mr. Williams was born in Walpole, N. H., Dec. 3, 1813. When a boy of four years he moved to Boston with his parents and lived in the Hub till he was 13 years old. As a bare-footed boy he attended the exercises attendant upon the laying of the corner stone of Bunker Hill monument by Gen. Lafayette in 1825, and remembers the occasion distinctly. In Mr. Williams' boyhood days Boston Common was a cow pasture and he laughingly declared the other night that he bore a scar on his head received from a fall caused by jumping over the tombstones that stood in the "pasture" of those days. While a resident of Boston, Mr. Williams received his education in the old Mason street school.

In 1829 Mr. Williams taught school in Vermont, and on April 3, 1834, he married at Westminister, Vt., Sophia Campbell. Mrs. Campbell was the daughter of Edward R. and Clarissy Campbell and is a descendant of the Campbell clan of Argyle. She was born Jan. 18, 1815, at Westminister. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Timothy Field of the Congregational church of Westminister. Two years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Williams moved to Rochester, Vt., where they lived for 66 years. Mr. Williams occupied a prominent position in the town affairs of Rochester, and in 1863 and 1864 he represented the district in which Rochester was situated in the state senate.

After his service in the senate, Mr. Williams was, by a vote of the town, made historian of Rochester, and in 1874 he wrote the official history of the town.

Eight months ago Mr. and Mrs. Williams consented to come to Wollaston to make their home with their son, Edward C. Williams, who had succeeded in obtaining a prominent position with a manufacturing concern there some four months before. Besides this son, Mr. and Mrs. Williams have another child. Miss Sarah J. Williams of Rochester, Vt.

At Mr. Williams' home in Wollaston five grandchildren help to make the declining years of the old couple happy and free from care.

Aside from a slight deafness, Mr. Williams is in excellent health and takes walks every day when the weather is fine. A short time ago his wife suffered a shock of paralysis, but she has been recovering slowly and enjoys good health. Both are great readers, and take an active interest in everything that goes on in the world today.

—Mrs. Arthur Jones was killed on the tracks of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. at Randolph on Wednesday.

MR. GRAHAM'S WORK

It Is Appreciated in Bangor and Vicinity.

The Bangor News in a three column illustrated article says in part:

"There are very few Bangor people, or people in this vicinity at the present time, who have the correct idea as to the extent of the operations of the Public Works Co. To many the name suggests merely a syndicate which is controlling the running of street cars and small lights in Bangor—it carries nothing of the significance of the real field of enterprise.

"Since John R. Graham, one of best known electric railroad managers in the eastern part of the country, took charge, the first of last August, the field has undergone a great change—the entire system has been shaken up, new men have been put in, dead wood has been extracted, new machinery has been installed at Veazie and a new lease of life taken on generally.

"This not only applies to the railroad side, but to the water and the lighting. The company at present furnishes power for every railroad around Bangor with the exception of the farther section of the Penobscot Central; it lights Bangor, Veazie, Orono, Stillwater, Brewer and Hampden; it furnishes water to Brewer, Veazie and Old Town.

Up to June first $87,000 had been expended since last August in improvements. New cars have been purchased, track have been repaired, new machinery has been added to the station and a thousand and one other things have been done to make things better.

Models of Cup Racers.

The Victor Metals Co. of East Braintree are rushing work on the new extension of their plant, the rolling mill. It will by of one story, 50x100 feet, of brick and stone. The company is anxious to have it ready for use as soon as possible, as they have large orders ahead for that department in plates and bars of their non-corrosive metal, Victor bronze, manganese bronze and ordinance and composition metals. They have some large government orders for turrets, conning towers, propellers for torpedo boats and monitors, on which they have been busy for months.

A very interesting piece of work is a large order for 15,000 sets of extrac models of the cup defender and challenger, each eight inches long of Victor silver metal, a set consisting of one model of each mounted on a back of nicely finished wood.

Heavy Thunder Shower.

A heavy thunder shower passed over Quincy early last evening, but as far as known no serious damage was done, other than to gully out the streets in places.

It was shortly after 6 o'clock when the sky began to grow black. This was followed by the roll of distant thunder which gradually grew heavier as it grew nearer. The rain commenced to fall about 6.30 and at 7 o'clock the shower had reached its height. The lightning was sharp and vivid, although it lacked its usual whip-like crack, the thunder was heavy and the rain came down in torrents.

The shower continued for nearly an hour when the sky lighted up again, and the shower was over. The weather continued threatening however until late in the night.

—Berlin, Germany, is a city that has many charms for the traveller, and many are the tales of its beauty. Yet in that city over forty per cent of the population live in one-room apartments, and are therefore huddled together like sheep. One room with a kitchen attachment is frequently all that a family of nine can call home, and a two-room apartment often shelters from ten to fourteen persons. To a greater or less degree what is true of Berlin is true of other places. London has its beautiful West End, but it has also its Whitechapel and St. George's-in-the East, so that one can well understand why Shelley said, "Hell is a city much like London."—Boston Home Journal.

GROCER'S OUTING.

Ketchup Company served sandwiches.

When the train arrived in Quincy at 9 o'clock the ground showed that there had been quite a heavy fall of rain and the party congratulated themselves upon their good fortune in being able to dodge all the showers.

The grocers have had many pleasant trips in the past, yet it seemed to be the verdict that this was the best of all, and that next year the trip would be well worth repeating.

MILTON.

The young men who think that the proper way to celebrate the Fourth is to set fire to property have found out that it is serious business. When it became known that the fires of July 4 were incendiary, Chief Pierce went to work upon the case and did not allow grass to grow under his feet until the alleged fire bugs had been brought to court and held for the grand jury.

Milton grocers did not participate this year in the outing of the Old Colony Grocers' Association.

The Mission of Our Savior church will hold its annual picnic Aug. 6 at Nantasket.

Clarence Leavy is substituting as driver of Hose 2 during the vacation of driver Clements.

One Man in Party.

Maple lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor is holding its annual outing today at Nantasket point. With them as guests are members of the Woman's Relief Corps.

There are fifty in the party and they left by a special electric at 10.40. The party was composed largely of ladies. In fact it was all ladies but one, and he would be a lady if he could. He was the only one of the party who was noticed to have anything that resembled a lunch.

What he carried was a paper bag said to be filled with doughnuts hot from the frying pan.

For the most part the ladies were of the married persuasion, although there was a sprinkling of those who as yet prefix their signature with "Miss."

However as the one man is not matrimonially inclined at present, he will probably be safe, and the ladies will see to it that he has a good time. He will come in handy to run errands, tie loosened shoe strings, and pay for the soda water and peanuts for the party. When it comes to dancing the ladies will have to look elsewhere for partners, but he will be with them when dinner is served, and will stand on shore as guardsman while they are in wading.

TODAY'S COURT.

Wesley L. Woodsum was arraigned for keeping a liquor nuisance at Braintree. Case continued until Monday.

VAGARIES OF WHISTLER

Stories of the American Artist's Eccentricities.

ALWAYS WANTED TO BE UNIQUE.

Once Wished to Have a Hansom Made of Gorgeous Design—How He Prepared For a Party Breakfast at a Famous Artist's House—One of His Fishing Experiences—Novel Reply to a Millionaire.

Many contradictory traits blended in that strange personality, the late James A. MacNeill Whistler, the eminent American artist, are preserved in the anecdotes which will be known to posterity as the Whistler stories, says the New York Herald.

Whistler was inordinately vain, yet the things which he did were in a measure due to his peculiar philosophy of life. Those who knew him best and liked him maintain that beneath all that he did the painter who gloried in "the gentle art of making enemies" had a sound basis of reason. His leading appetency was a desire to be unique.

"I'm going over to London," said he once to William M. Chase, "and there I shall have a hansom made. It shall have a white body, yellow wheels, and I'll have it lined with canary colored satin. I'll petition the city to let me carry one lamp on it, and on the lamp there will be a white plume. I shall then be the only one."

One of the affectations of Whistler was his apparent failure to recognize persons with whom he had been on the most friendly terms. An American artist once met the impressionist in Venice, where they spent several months together painting, and he was invited to call on Whistler if he should go to Paris. The painter remembered the invitation. The door of the Paris studio was opened by Whistler himself. A cold stare was the only reply to the visitor's effusive greeting.

"Why, Mr. Whistler," cried the painter, "you surely haven't forgotten those days in Venice when you borrowed my colors and we painted together!"

"I never saw you before in all my life," replied Whistler and slammed the door.

Whistler's habit of forgetting persons or pretending to do so, for nobody ever knew when the lapses of recognition were due to intention or absent mindedness, often tempted other artists to play pranks upon him. He was a man who resented a joke at his own expense, except on a few occasions, and this trait was often turned to good account.

He was at Naples shortly after the account of the experience of the American visitor had gained wide circulation. A conspiracy was entered into whereby the Whistler worshipers there were to be unaware of his presence. He tried to play billiards with a company of young artists. They met his advances with a stony glare.

"Oh, I say," persisted he, "I think I know something of that game. I'd like to play."

A consultation was held, and the artists shook their heads, inquiring of one another, "Who is he?" Whistler retired crestfallen, and a roar of laughter which rang through the room added to his discomfiture.

"Oh, well," he said, pulling nervously at his mustache, and his tone was petulant, "I don't care."

Whatever whim seized James A. McNeill Whistler he lost little time in following it. His studio in Paris looked out upon a garden on one side, and under one of his windows was a small tank containing goldfish. Whistler rigged tackle from string and a bent pin, and in the course of an hour he had landed every fish. He cooked the spoils and, finding them not at all to his taste, wrapped them up in paper and, after pinning to the packet a note to the owner of the garden that the fish were not fit to eat, threw the package on a path.

Among the anecdotes related about James MacNeill Whistler, the American artist, here is one dealing with a visit Whistler paid Sir Alma Tadema, the famous artist. On the night of his arrival Whistler's host announced that he intended to give a breakfast next morning. "There will be a number of ladies present, Whistler," he said, "and I want you to pull yourself together and look your best."

"All right," said Whistler.

Early the next morning Whistler's voice was heard ringing through the magnificent halls of the Tadema mansion: "Tadema! Tadema! I want you, Tadema!"

Thinking nothing less than fire, Sir Alma rushed to the room of his guest.

"For heaven's sake, Whistler, what's the matter? You've waked up every one in the house. What is it?"

"Oh, don't get so excited, Tadema," drawled Whistler. "I only wanted to know where you kept the scissors to trim the fringe of cuffs with. Thought you wanted me to pull myself together for the ladies."—Ladies' Home Journal.

"A Colorado millionaire who was getting up an art gallery once went to Whistler's studio in the Rue du Bac," said Vance Thompson in his Paris letter to the Saturday Evening Post. "He glanced casually at the pictures on the walls—'symphonies' in rose and gold, in blue and gray, in brown and green.

"'How much for the lot?' he asked, with the confidence of one who owns gold mines.

"'Four millions,' said Whistler.

"'What!'

"'My posthumous prices,' and the painter added, 'Good morning.'"

ASSAULT ALLEGED.

Two Prominent Wollaston Men the Defendants in Case.

Eugene H. Sprague and Eugene F. DeNormandie were arraigned in the court this morning for assault on Arthur H. Doble. The alleged assault took place July 12 and is said to have been the outcome of an argument as to ownership of the ice business of Eaton Bros.

John McAnarney, Esq., appeared for the government and Wallace Wilson, Esq., for the defendants.

When the case was called, counsel for government asked for a continuance, as the complainant was unable to be present on account of illness due to asthma. The request for continuance was granted and the case went over until Tuesday, Aug. 4.

It was rumored that Mr. Doble has also entered suit against one or both both of the defendants for $10,000.

You look disappointed, Jones; been investigating in the stock market?"

No, I have had my summer cottage wired with electric bells.

Convenient that.

Hum, you ought to be there. All the natives think they're hat nails and when the head gear drops to the floor they think I'm a practical joker.

Well what of them?

Hum, and they try to get in return jokes. I hardly dare move for fear I'll fall into a pit or have a bucket of water drop on me.

Norwich, Conn., July 23.—Daniel Maher, aged 10, was accidentally shot by a playmate named Keenan last night and died within half an hour. The boys had been shooting with a 22-calibre rifle at a target, and just as Keenan was in the act of firing young Maher stepped in front of the weapon.

Mill Burned and Life Lost

FREE OF CHARGE.

"If Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific Does not Cure You, it is Free." Says Chas. C. Hearn.

"Not only will I sell a 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia specific at half price, but I will agree to refund the money if my customer is not satisfied with the remedy," said Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, to a Ledger man. "In other words," he continued, "the specific is free if it does not cure."

Mr. Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles on his special half price introductory offer, and has a few left for those who are fortunate enough to call at his store before they are all gone. It is the regular 50 cent size, containing sixty doses, and is the one remedy for constipation and dyspepsia that makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia is not an ordinary tablet or powder that simply relieves. This remarkable discovery makes complete and permanent cures. Mrs. Charlotte W. Wallace of Manchester, N. H., writes: "A few years ago I had a very severe attack of dyspepsia. Water distressed me as much as food, and I could find no relief. My druggist recommended Dr. Howard's specific very highly. This great medicine gave me relief at once, and I have never had another attack of dyspepsia."

Many physicians prescribe Dr. Howard's specific, for they know it cures N. D. Ross, M. D., East Middlebury, Vt., writes: "I prescribed Dr. Howard's specific in the case of a patient who for years had been in the constant practice of taking some kind of a cathartic daily. I saw him a few days since, and he said: 'Dr. Howard's specific is a perfect God send; my bowels are moving every day.' I shall certainly prescribe Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia when indicated."

If you cannot go to Druggist Chas. C. Hearn's store today, send him your order by mail, as he has only a limited amount left to sell at this special half price. 20-23-27-30

IN GREENE-GAYNOR CASES

Accused Men Had Been Discharged by Canadian Judge After Cases Had Been Withdrawn From Extradition Commissioner

Washington, July 23.—The department of justice has received a cablegram from Mr. MacMaster, Canadian counsel for this government in the Greene and Gaynor cases, stating that the application to the privy council of England for leave to appeal from the decision of Justice Caron of Quebec discharging the accused has been granted. The cablegram said that the lord chancellor in granting leave to appeal stated that one judge could not interfere with another in proceedings upon a serious and important matter of this nature; that the offences were clearly extraditable, and that while there was conspiracy, there was also something more.

Pending the examination of the accused before an extradition commissioner in Canada, who was fully clothed with jurisdiction, the case was withdrawn from him under applications for habeas corpus, and was finally decided by Justice Caron and the accused discharged. The United States contended that the proceedings before the extradition judge could not thus be interfered with and that view had been sustained.

One ground upon which Justice Caron decided the merits of the controversy was that the case involved mere conspiracy; that however serious the substantive crimes were, the real charge upon which they would be tried here, and which was involved in the complaint preferred in Canada, was conspiracy to commit these crimes; and that conspiracy was not an extraditable offense under the treaties.

Counsel for the United States earnestly contended against this view, arguing that the facts and the charges show that Greene and Gaynor were actual participants in the frauds of Captain Carter, and that these substantive offenses and participation in them were clearly covered by the provision of extradition treaties with England and by the laws of both the United States and Canada. It is believed that the privy council will sustain this contention also, indicating that while the case involved conspiracy, there was also something more, viz., participating in the substantive offenses actually consummated.

While it is not possible to state accurately the immediate effect of the judgment of the privy council, it is regarded as a notable victory for the United States. The case will now go up on appeal, for deliberate consideration of all the questions involved, from the decision of the single Canadian judge to the privy council of England. It is not yet known when the case will be heard on the merits by the tribunal. The brief report received seems to show plainly that the contentions of the United States on the merits have been sustained, and the final result of the surrender of Greene and Gaynor by the Canadian authorities is foreshadowed.

Got His Head Stabbed

Lynn, Mass., July 23.—A man who said his name was William Brown and his residence at Boston was taken to a hospital last night suffering from two knife wounds in the head which he said he received in a fight at a Greek boarding house. His condition is not dangerous. Brown was brought to the police station by two men about 11 o'clock and given in charge of the officers. The men left without giving any information about the case.

Denies Marriage Contract

New York, July 23.—An appeal to District Attorney Jerome will be made by Miss Lillian Joven, who is claimed by James F. Fairman as his bride, and who emphatically insists that she is not. Miss Joven insists that Fairman, by the exercise of some hypnotic power, compelled her to accompany him to the lawyer's office, where the marriage contract was acknowledged. Miss Joven denies having signed any marriage contract.

Lumbermen Pay Good Prices

Fredericton, N. B., July 23.—Spruce logs brought a good price at the annual sale of unmarked lumber rafted by the Fredericton Boom company. John E. Moore bought 345,000 feet of spruce and paid $15 a thousand feet. A lot of 18,000 feet of hemlock sold at $4.50 a thousand; 67,000 feet of cedar at $10.25 and 11,000 feet of pine at $11.23.

Glen Falls Track Sold

Glens Falls, N. Y., July 23.—The famous mile track leased by the Northern New York Horse Breeders' association was sold at foreclosure sale here. It was bid in by C. W. Cool, president of the association, at $10,242.82. The track is acknowledged by horsemen to be one of the finest in the country.

A Drinking Man's Deed

Knoxville, Ia., July 23.—Because his son Charles, aged 10, refused to get up when called, William Liard shot and killed the boy as he lay in bed, chased a younger son to the home of a neighbor in an attempt to kill him also, and then turned the weapon upon himself with fatal effect. Liard was addicted to drink.

YACHTS GROUNDED

But Accidents to Ninety-Footers Left Them Apparently Uninjured

Newport, R. I., July 23.—The last run of the New York Yacht club cruise back from Vineyard Haven was very disappointing. Within a mile of the start Reliance and Columbia struck bottom on the eastern end of the middle ground in Vineyard sound, and only the quick turn of the wheel saved Constitution. Reliance came off within two minutes, while Columbia, held onto the shoal by a strong tide, stuck there for over an hour, being finally assisted off, apparently uninjured, but out of the race. The other two boats kept on, but on getting out beyond Gay head a stiff puff of wind snapped off the topmast of Constitution. After the wreck had been cleared away she proceeded and crossed the finish line nearly three-quarters of an hour after Reliance, so that the latter boat had practically a walkover. The cruise ends with two wins to the credit of both Reliance and Constitution.

A diver examined the fin of Reliance after her arrival in port, but could discover no damage. Constitution has procured a new topmast.

Accident to Shamrock

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton watched anxiously from the deck of the Erin while for an hour his cup challenger was temporarily lost to his view behind a blank wall of blinding fog. When the yacht came limping out of the fog with her gaff broken Lipton was so pleased to see her safe that the accident was of little importance to him. The steel gaff was bent as the yacht jumped into a sharp tumble of sea. It did not break entirely in two. The yacht has a spare gaff at Erie basin and it will be in place today.

Betting on Cup Races

New York, July 23.—With the approach of the international yacht races the brokers in Wall street are becoming more or less interested. Betting is at 10 to 7 in favor of the American boat. These prices will probably be lowered in a few days. Fred H. Brooks, who is making the odds on the racing event, says that the betting will probably be even money before the first race on Aug. 20.

Found In the Woods

Boston, July 23.—Luella Cossabcom, 19 years old, who mysteriously disappeared nearly two weeks ago and for whom searching parties have been scouring Dorchester district, was found in the woods off Idaho street, Dorchester. When discovered she was seated on the ground under a tree gazing about in a most bewildered manner. The girl was not in a condition to tell anything about her wanderings since leaving home, but her appearance would indicate that she had not spent all the time in the open air. She is resting comfortably and it is thought she will soon be able to tell the story of her wanderings.

Explorers Meet With Disaster

Aden, Arabia, July 23.—Details of the failure of the expedition headed by W. N. MacMillan of St. Louis show that it started down the river in iron punts and that while passing the rapids between precipitous cliffs struck on the rocks and sank. The occupants swam ashore and the entire party camped there. A hurricane swept the gorge on the following night and further damaged the expedition, which returned by forced marches and abandoned its task for one year.

An Interesting Experiment

Cleveland, July 23.—President Dickson of the Cuyahoga Telephone company of this city announces that one-fifth of the surplus earnings of the company will be set aside and distributed among its employes in proportion to their salaries. The plan is adopted in the belief that it will result in a more efficient service, greater economy and larger earnings, and if successful will be permanent, after a trial of six months.

Postoffice Axe Again Falls

Washington, July 23.—Charles Hedges has been removed from the office of superintendent of free delivery of the postoffice department on the charge of falsifying his diary and loaning his traveling commission. It is charged that he reported himself at various places when in fact he was not at those places on the dates mentioned, in some instances being hundreds of miles away. Hedges' salary was $3000 a year.

Failed to Score Knockout

Boston, July 23.—While Young Corbett, champion featherweight of the world, got the decision over Jimmy Briggs in their 10-round bout here last night, the Boston boy gained considerable prestige by staying the limit. It was the second time the two had met and in each instance Briggs managed to stay with the champion the full length of the bout.

Irishmen Welcome King

Dublin, July 23.—The king drove to Trinity college yesterday afternoon and received an address of welcome. He was accorded a great reception by the students and faculty. He spoke briefly. The king, on his return to the vice regal lodge, received a continuous ovation from the crowds in the streets.

UNDER THE LEGAL AGE

Children Are Said to Be Working In Lowell Mills

MANY VIOLATIONS FOUND

According to the Labor Leaders Appointed to Investigate Conditions In Massachusetts—Law In Other Part of State Better Observed

Fall River, Mass., July 23.—Joseph G. Jackson of this city and Charles H. Winslow of Fitchburg, second and third vice presidents respectively of the state branch of the American Federation of Labor, and both members of the legislature, were recently appointed to investigate reported violations of the child labor laws in Massachusetts, the complaints being made to the state branch. On Monday they were granted a conference with Chief of Police Wade and the state factory inspectors at the Boston headquarters and were told that the laws were being observed so far as the officials knew. There was a long discussion concerning the difficulties of preventing the hiring of small help and the officials said they would gladly act on any cases brought to their attention. The two men felt that it was the duty of the officers to enforce the law without throwing the burden of investigation on others.

After leaving the state officials the two men instituted an investigation into child labor conditions in Lowell and they now make the statement that Massachusetts child labor laws are not enforced or properly administered. In this city Mr. Jackson gave some details of his observations and he says a report has already been filed with the president of the state federation, and further investigations will be made before the next meeting of that body.

Tuesday morning early, he stood at one of the Lowell mills gates, he says, and he saw several children who were very much under the legal age, going to work in the mills of Lowell. They were not carrying dinners, but were going into the mills shortly after 6 o'clock, apparently to begin a day's work. He called at the school superintendent's office and had an opportunity to witness the method of granting certificates to children applying for them. These certificates were made out by the truant officers. He is sure that one of these who received a certificate while he was present was not 14 years of age. One boy was refused a certificate, although he told Mr. Jackson afterward that he worked last year. The law provides that the persons granting certificates may call for certified copies of the date of birth of the applicant but this was not done, although Mr. Jackson thinks it should be done in every instance.

Asked what he thought about the observance of the law in the southeastern section of the state, Mr. Jackson said he thought there was not any such violation as he saw in Lowell, but he had not looked into the matter closely as yet. In the summer months when the children are not at school the demands upon the school authorities for certificates are very numerous and urgent. Parents of children press hard to get permission to put the children at work, as much to keep them from the streets, as to secure the small wage that is paid. In some instances parents take their children to the mill with them so that they may know where they are.

Law Violated at Leominster

Leominster, Mass., July 23.—The first move by organized labor against the illegal employment of children in mills and factories was made when Charles A. Dam of the district police made an official call upon all local manufacturers, finding several instances of violation of the law, which says that no person under 14 years of age shall be employed in any factory. Inspector Dam does not intimate what disposition will be made of the matter.

General Clay Is Dead

Richmond, Ky., July 23.—General Casius M. Clay, ambassador to Russia under Lincoln, abolitionist and author, is dead at his home at Whitehall at the age of 93. His children were all at his bedside. Some of them have not been in their father's house or seen him in years because of his peculiar hallucination that they were in a vendetta sworn to kill him.

Talked on Finance

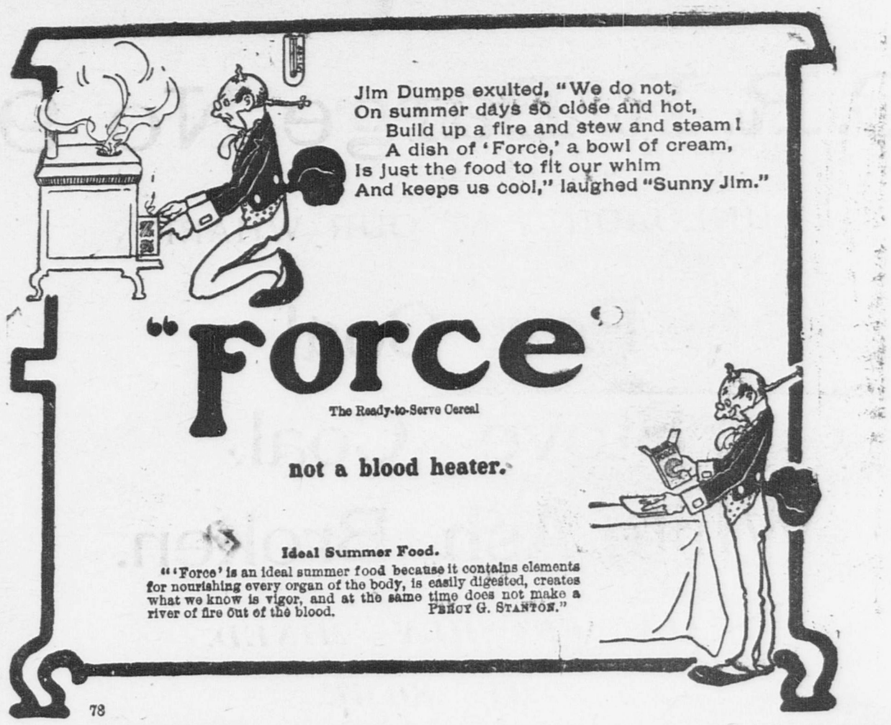

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 23.—Mr. Cannon admited before he left for New York that proposed financial legislation was under consideration here. He said it was not certain whether or not the house would take up for consideration financial legislation at the extraordinary session in November. That could be determined finally only by the house itself.

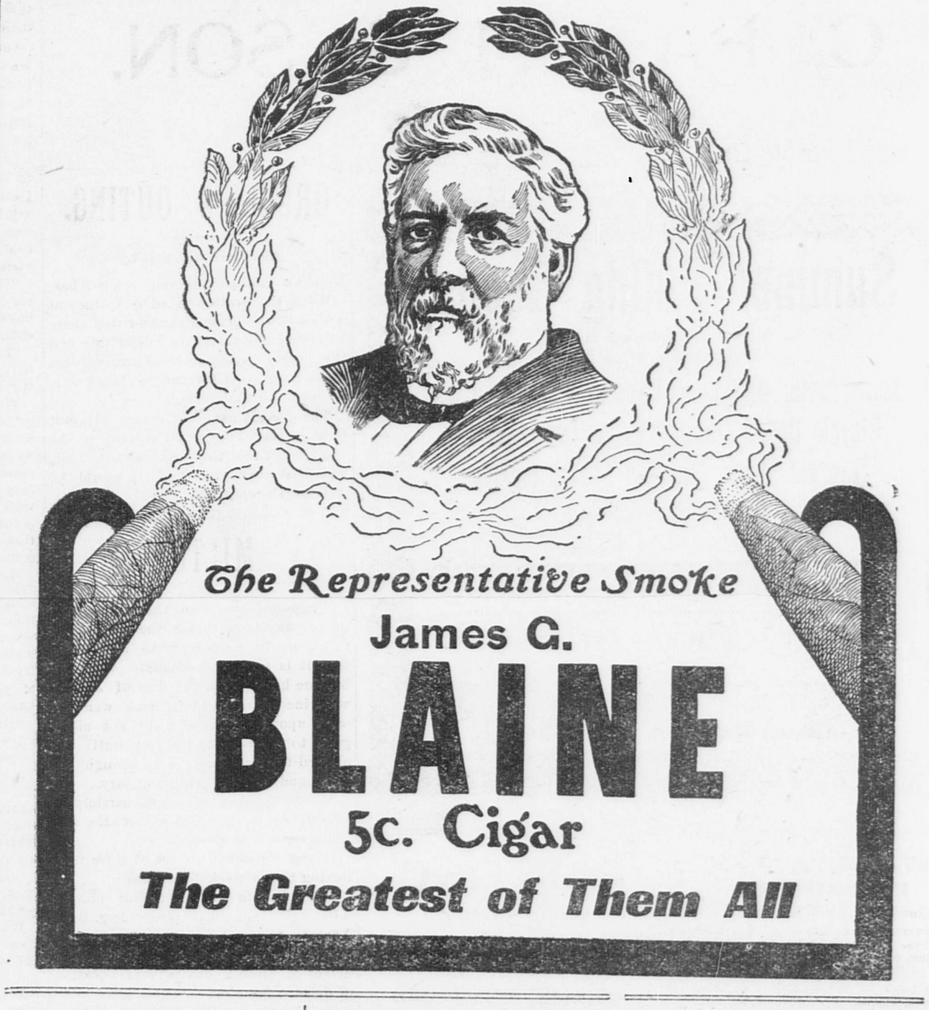

Cuban Veterans Pledge Loyalty

Havana, July 23.—President Palma is receiving telegrams from all parts of the island from veterans' clubs declaring their loyalty to the government and condemning all agitation of the question of paying them. Very few of the veterans are demanding immediate payment for the army.

Offered $250,000 For Confession

Butte, Mont., July 23.—In the Shores disbarment case the deposition of Charles W. Clark states positively that the deposer alone was the man who offered Harney $250,000 to confess that he had been bribed in the Minnie Healy case.

Pope's Funeral Will Occur Sooner Than Planned

A GREAT POLITICAL FACTOR

Introduced by Entry of Italian Soldiers Into St Peter's—Leo's Will Leaves All His Property to His Successor For Benefit of Church

Rome, July 24.—From sunrise until sunset yesterday thousands passed before the body of Leo XIII lying in state in the basilica of St. Peter's. It was originally intended that this opportunity to publicly view the remains should extend through three days, but the funeral may occur tomorrow instead of Saturday night, owing to the evidences that decomposition is setting in. This is due to severe heat, from which no embalming could completely protect the body.

The will of the dead pope was opened at a meeting of the congregation of cardinals. It consists of 35 pages, in the handwriting of Leo XIII, and leaves all the property of which he died possessed to his successor for the use of the church. To each member of his family he leaves a present to be chosen from the valuable objects in his apartment. Similar presents are bequeathed to his physicians. The total amount of the property which he left is not yet known.

The prevailing impression of those who passed before the iron gates of the chapel of the sacrament to view the remains was one of intense pity, combined with a certain sense of horror. The body was tilted up on the catafalque in order that all might see the terribly shrunken face. An ordinary skull in a frame of gold, lying in the midst of a mass of red robes, could scarcely have been more typical of death.

An important political factor was introduced into the ceremony by the entrance into St. Peter's of Italian soldiers, who remained there throughout the day to preserve order. Their presence there in such a capacity, unprecedented in the history of modern Italy, is important as an indication of better relations between the government and the Vatican, as it was by the consent, if not by the desire, of the Vatican authorities that they employed the troops of the quirinal in papal territory.

Another feature which is causing comment along the same lines is the fact that Cardinal Oreglia, in receiving a group of the city fathers of Rome, who represent the clerical party, charged them to thank also their liberal colleagues for the manifestations of sympathy which they showed during the illness of the pope. The cardinal indicated especial satisfaction over similar manifestations coming from several constituted bodies of the kingdom of Italy, such as communal councils and provincial deputations, including that of Rome, which is presided over by Prince Felice Borghese. "It is an unexpected tribute," exclaimed the cardinal, "which no one would have imagined 25 years ago."

After the will of Leo XIII had been opened it was the intention of the cardinals to maintain the strictest secrecy concerning its contents, but it is learned that the 36 sheets were in the handwriting of the late pope, except some additions evidently made in his later years, when the pope found considerable difficulty in writing, owing to the trembling of his hand, which was so pronounced before his death that he was obliged to hold his right hand with his left when he made his signature. The earlier portions of the testament include the recommendation which the testator addressed to his executors, Cardinals Rampolla, Mocenni and Cretoni, on the best way to continue the religious impulse given to the church as well as the policy followed by the holy see during later years. The document then enumerates all the property which Leo possessed and provides that it shall all go to his successor for the benefit of the church, including even the presents which might perhaps be considered personal rather than gifts to the pontiff as such. The money which the pope left is in a closed safe in his bedroom and the keys have been given to different persons mentioned in the will.

All the land purchased and buildings erected for institutions personally founded by Leo are put in the name of the holy see to avoid possible claims from relatives, as the pope probably remembered that some time after the death of Pius IX the latter's nephews instituted a suit against the church, claiming 15,000 francs as their portion of his estate. The will ends by providing that his remains shall be buried in the basilica of St. John Lateran in the tomb which he had already chosen.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA

Both Appear to Be Making Active Preparations For War

London, July 24.—The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent sends rather an alarming view of the situation in the east to his paper. He says that Russia's retention of Manchuria, the increase of her fleet, the dispatch of reinforcements to Manchuria, the southward movement of the occupying army in Manchuria, and the defiant conduct on the Corean frontier alarms the Japanese, many of whom are convinced that it would be better to fight now than risk the eventual loss of Corea and the relegation of Japan to a secondary place.

He says the Japanese are accumulating stores and negotiating the purchase of ships; that a squadron is off Vladivostock, to which port Russian vessels have been sent as a precaution, and that both fleets are ready for action at any moment. He says that a perusal of the Siberian press reveals the aggressive spirit of the Russian military party; that the Russians believe they will lose prestige if they give way now, with the result that their far eastern empire will be lost and Japanese influence will become predominant. The correspondent says that Russia must retreat or there will be very grave danger of war. He says the Japanese believe that France and England will join in the expected conflict, which diplomatists at Tokio think might, if once begun, continue for years, involving disastrous results to Japanese finance and the creation of a sort of Balkan difficulty in Corea. He adds that confidence is shown in the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Convicts Caught In Woods

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 24.—After searching five days and nights John Elliott and Edward Kennedy, two of the four escaped convicts from Dannemora prison, were captured in the woods near Barnaby's corners. Peter James and John Collins, the other two, were run down and captured last night less than a mile from where Elliott and Kennedy were taken.

Prince's Life in Danger

Vienna, July 24.—Belgrade papers publish rumors of a revolution in Bulgaria and say that Prince Ferdinand, on the advice of his government, is about to flee, or has fled, to Belgrade. Thus far the rumors have not been officially confirmed. It is said at Belgrade that there have been 54 night assassinations, mostly of soldiers on duty in Prince Ferdinand's palace.

RACE FOR THE ASTOR CUP.

The Reliance Outfooted and Outpointed the Columbia, and Led over 18 Minutes.

Newport, R. I., July 24.—In a race for a special cup Reliance gave Columbia the worst beating she has ever sustained in a contest sailed in a good, whole sail breeze. Sailing over a course 38 miles in length, nearly 20 of which were dead to windward, the new cup yacht finished 18 minutes 49 seconds ahead of the old champion.

With the exception of one of the drifting contests on the sound earlier in the season, when Reliance was favored by capfuls of wind that did not reach Columbia and Constitution, the new boat has not heretofore made the showing over a measured course that she did yesterday. Constitution went up to Bristol Wednesday evening to have a new topmast put on and did not arrive back here until too late to go out to the starting line.

With Belmont's yacht out of the racing a sharp duel to windward was looked for between the other two 90 footers. For a few minutes the older boat held her own, but as soon as Reliance got her wind clear she shot through the lee of her rival and crossing her bow on the next tack, worked steadily out to weather of her and at the same time outfooted her rival. To give Columbia such a drubbing in weather that the sharps said was just suited to bringing out the old boat's best speed, is looked upon by the yachtsmen here as nothing short of a wonderful performance. It could easily be seen that Reliance has improved greatly since her last race over a regular course.

Besides the special event for the 90-footers, there were races for the single stickers and schooner yachts of the New York Yacht club fleet that have not been hauled out for cleaning since the annual cruise began. The trophies were presented by Captain John J. Astor and consisted of a cup valued at $1000 for the schooners and one worth $500 for sloops, cutters and yawls.

Mr. Morgan, who steered Columbia, and Captain Barr of Reliance had a lively fight for the start and it resulted in the amateur skipper gaining a decided advantage, although both craft were more than two minutes behind the handicap gun in getting away. Morgan went away at 11:45:10, while Reliance had to ease off and run around under the stern of the committee boat in order to make a real start. The new craft was handled so prettily that she was but 39 seconds behind Columbia in starting.

As soon as Reliance was over the line Morgan berthed his ship on her weather bow. Barr tacked repeatedly during the next few minutes in an effort to get the wind clear. At 12 o'clock Columbia crossed the bow of Reliance and was again perched on the new boat's weather bow. Barr gave his sails a good full while the old cup defender was in the wind and gained such headway that his charge was able to drive through Columbia's lee and get a free wind. The pair made a few more short hitches until, at 12:06, Reliance crossed Columbia's bow and took up the coveted weather berth. From this time on it was only a question of how much the new boat would beat the old one out to the weather mark.

Reliance behaved handsomely in the rough water and outfooted and outpointed her rival all the time. As usual they went in under Narragansett shore when beating out. Off Point Judith heavier seas were encountered, but the two racers made easy way through them. Reliance drew away steadily and Columbia wore around the windward mark 4m. 21s. behind the leader. Adding the 39 seconds actual start the old boat had over her rival, Reliance had beaten her an even five minutes in a 13½-mile thresh to windward.

Spinnakers were set for the run to the second turn and Reliance increased her lead in every mile. A slight fog was encountered near the second turn, but Barr had steered a true course and hit the mark so exactly that he was able to gybe around at 4:08 ahead of Vigilant, which had worked off to the southward of the turn. Columbia also failed to hit the mark plump and was a little to the north of her course when Reliance passed her on the way to the finish line.

It was a close lay to the line from the second turn, but the wind hauled to the westward still more and Reliance was obliged to make a short tack to off-shore before she could fetch to the line.

The Ingomar led the schooner class around the course, but lost the prize to the Elmina on time allowance. Vigilant was the first of the single stick vessels to finish and while she has not been officially measured, her length compels her to make big allowances to the other yachts in the class. It is figured out that the Isolde takes the cup on time allowance. Summary of special class 90-footers:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time.
Reliance	11:47	3:50:49	4:03:49
Columbia	11:47	4:00:38	4:22:38

Annual Carnival at Houghs Neck about Third Week in August.

The weather the past two weeks has not been of the best for the beach. The trouble is that there has been too much rain. When the weather is pleasant and warm there are many visitors and everybody looks happy. On stormy days the beach is dead and the store keepers are gloomy.

For all the weather this summer has not been seasonable, there are a great many at the beach for the season and there has been a great demand for cottages.

Thomas F. Dwyer, who has charge of many of the cottages, reports that the demand for cottages this year has been greater than before. That nearly everything in the shape of cottages has been let for the month of August, and that there are but few desirable cottages remaining unlet. These, he says he will have no difficulty in letting. The only thing he fears is that he cannot fill the demand.

James Cavanagh, another real estate man, reports that the cottages of which he has charge are nearly all let for the present.

It will be seen from these reports, that in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions the season in point of number of residents, has been a successful one.

The residents have begun to talk up the annual carnival. No meetings have as yet been called in regard to the matter but the general sentiment is that the carnival if held should be the third week in August.

That petition and subscription paper that was being circulated to water the streets has been lost. The general complaint is that there has been too much water.

H. A. Brown and family of Dorchester are in the Newton cottage on Great Hill.

E. L. Adams and family of Roxbury are in their new cottage on Rock Island road.

If the weather conditions continue favorable today and tomorrow the laying of the new rail will be completed Saturday night as far as the Casino.

George Stratton and family of Malden are in their new cottage on Darrow street.

P. F. Mooney and family of Brockton are in the Foxey cottage on Winthrop street.

John W. Collins and family of Boston are in the Wabaso cottage on Centre road.

William Wilson and family of Quincy are in the Brown Bank cottage on Island avenue.

The tent over the merry-go-round blew down Sunday and will probably not be raised again. The flow of five cent pieces was not so great as was anticipated and the apparatus will be given a rest.

Joseph Donohue, of the Boston Pilot, is in the Tilley cottage on Great Hill.

Mrs. W. H. Mayforth and family of Springfield are in the Mayforth cottage.

Dr. Drummie of Roxbury is in his cottage on Manet avenue.

There will be a large number of yachts at the Quincy Yacht club next Wednesday on the occasion of the open race.

It is expected that the section of the Metropolitan sewer, between Mt. Wollaston cemetery and Great Hill, which has been under construction for three years, will be completed by the first of October. It has been a long job but has been done in a thorough manner.

Good Afternoon

The Quincy manual training building at Good Will farm in Maine will be dedicated next Monday. Thus we are advertised.

The Ward One Republicans should muster those additional eight votes, and Ward Five those additional twenty seven votes this fall, that Quincy may have two more delegates next year to the Congressional, Senatorial and other conventions.

Representative Landis has a new remedy for lynching. He would have every state legislature pass a law making the sheriff from whose custody a prisoner is taken, lose his position and become ineligible to any other. He would further make the county in which the outrage is committed liable to damages of from $1,500 to $2,500 to be forfeited to the heirs of the lynched.

Another of those two column illustrated fashion letters will appear in the Saturday eight page Ledger, commenting on muslin and lace gowns, up-to-date modes, hats for demi-toilets, and dressy summer gowns.

The sportsmen will find a two column illustrated letter on grand circuit events, and an automobile column.

A three-colmmn illustrated story, the Christian Endeavor lesson, Social Realm and Sunday services will supplement the local and telegraphic news of the day.

Drift of Opinion.

☞As in most things, we have hitched the cart before the horse; built palaces for our students in the universities before obtaining the best teachers; imagined that a great house will engender the humane beings fit to dwell therein. The demand was for thoroughskilled artisans, and we have tried to produce easel painters; for men who build a comfortable and beautiful dwellings, and we have architects who engineer ugly enormities. All the libraries in the world, all the art museums are not going to produce learning, literature, or art. They may be helpful in time, but at present they are premature. What the great cities of the Union lack most of all are workshops where boys and girls can put their hands to immediate useful labor. When we have these the fine arts will take care of themselves.—New York Times.

The cruiser Galveston was successfully launched on Thursday at the yard of the Trigg Company at Richmond, Va.

AT NAVY YARDS.

More Warships May be Built by Government.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Ship building in government navy yards has at last found favor with high officials of the navy department and may be recommended to Congress as the alternative to be taken in case the troubles of the ship building trust come to a crisis and delay work on the 13 warships now contracted for by the companies composing the trust.

Rear Admiral O'Neill, president of the board of construction, regards the question of ship building the most serious obstacle to the immediate needs in the navy. When Congress is asked to authorize additional ships, the first question will be, "Where will they be built?"

Admiral O'Neill takes the position that the navy yards of the country will be greatly increased in value if given constant work, that at least three navy yards on the Atlantic coast, New York, Norfolk and Boston, have the facilities for turning out battleships and that by inaugurating the policy of building its own ships the government will be able to command better terms from private ship builders.

Moreover, with the three yards supplied with constant work, there will be less likelihood of labor troubles, as the men will not be forced to seek work elsewhere at certain seasons of the year, as is now the case.

Rear Admiral Bowles, chief constructor of the navy, has given the matter considerable study and is preparing for the secretary an exhaustive statement based on the work of the battleship Connecticut now building in the government yard at New York.

Admiral Bowles has made the important discovery that in inspection alone, the government will save 2 per cent. in the total cost of the ship. The government is to finish the cruiser Galveston at Norfolk, and will build the sailing vessels Intrepid and Cumberland. The training brig authorized by the last Congress will be built at the Portsmouth, N. H. yard.

There is no disposition to enter into competition with private concerns, but naval officers contend that the upbuilding of the new navy will furnish more work than the private concerns of the country can attend to.

Waterhouse—Morse.

At the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Morse of 8 Forest avenue, Haverhill, Miss Clara Mildred Morse and Mr. Harold Dennett Waterhouse of Wollaston were married on Wednesday at half past twelve.

It was a quiet family wedding, Miss Maud O'Neil of Somerville being the maid or honor and Mr. R. Garfield Wright of Wollaston was the best man.

The bride was dressed in crepe de chene and bore a large cluster of white roses. The maid of honor was dressed in Swiss muslin and carried a cluster of pink roses.

The ushers were intimate girl friends of the bride.

Miss Morse was graduated at the Haverhill high school and well known in the social circles of her city. Mr. Waterhouse was graduated at the Chauncey Hall school, Boston, and is now engaged in the Maine brokerage business, with an office in Boston. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Waterhouse.

There was a large number of fine gifts, and relatives were present from Haverhill, Atlantic, Somerville and Wollaston. After the ceremony an excellent marriage breakfast was served. Then the newly married couple started on their wedding trip.

They will be at home at No. 8 Forest avenue, Haverhill, after October 1.

To Visit Quincy.

Albert Keating of the Quincy Co-operative Bank will entertain tomorrow, and show the historic places about Quincy to president Gerald Fitzgerald of the United States league of Co-operative Banks, also delegates from Ohio, and Pennsylvania. It will be doubly interesting to the president, as he has a daughter named Dorothy Quincy. Today the delegates are on a harbor excursion.

—At last the three-masted schoone Elizabeth T. Doyle was launched at East Boston, Thursday evening.

—The special commissioners have decided that the town of Gardner shall pay the Gardner Water Company $274,000 for its plant and franchise.

They are attended by pimples, boils, the itching tetter, salt rheum, and other cutaneous eruptions; by feelings of weakness, languor, general debility and what not.

AGAINST FAXON.

Court Found for Mr. Prescott for $16.20.

Defendant Must Pay the Costs.

Saved $4.95 and Satisfied to Pay Costs of $20.

The hearing on the suit of Charles L. Prescott against Henry H. Faxon, to recover the sum of $21.15 alleged to be due for cleaning cesspools and vaults was continued this morning.

The first witness was Mrs. Abrams, who occupied the Faxon tenement on North street. She testified that she remembered Prescott's men coming last summer and cleaning the cesspool on premises. She had made no unusual use of the cesspool after it was cleaned out.

Mrs. Stephen Riley occupied Faxon's house at 92 School street. She remembered cesspool being cleaned out last year, but did not remember whose team it was. Had five in her family at that time. Made same use of cesspool since it was cleaned as before it was cleaned.

Wilson E. Webb was employed by Faxon as a carpenter. Last summer he visited premises at 11 Revere road after June 28, at request of Mr. Faxon. Found the cesspool full up to the outlet. He visited 18 Howard street with Mr. Faxon, and cesspool was running over. He examined the Abrams premises with Mr. Faxon last summer, the cesspool looked as though it had not been cleaned. The planks were covered with grass and dirt. He took up one and it looked as though it had never been disturbed. The vault was running over.

Jeffrey Vincent examined cesspools on Abram place on North street last July. One was partly full and the other looked as though it had not been cleaned. The planks over it were covered with loam and grass.

Edward J. Lennon, inspector of the Board of Health, testified that as far as he knew no permits were issued by the Board of Health to private parties to do scavenger work. Knew Mr. Faxon had applied for permit and had been refused.

Question—Do you know of any complaints being made last summer as to the manner in which work was being done by Mr. Prescott.

Question ruled out.

Mr. Faxon recalled, testified that none of the premises in question were connected with bath rooms.

The defense rested at this point.

The government then offered Francis M. Curtis, who testified he did some collecting for Mr. Prescott last summer.

In June, this year, presented bill for $21.15 to Mr. Faxon. Faxon said bills were mislaid and he would look into matter and would tell me when to call. He asked why Prescott did not come himself. I replied that he probably thought I could get along better with him.

Saw Mr. Faxon about ten days later. He said he had examined the house on North street. The bill called for $3.30 when it should be $1.65.

I told him I had no authority to make any reduction and I would see him later. Saw Mr. Faxon the next morning and told him Mr. Prescott said to take off the $1.65 and settle the bill. He replied that on further consideration it might have a bearing on other cases and he refused to pay.

Under cross-examination, counsel for Mr. Faxon brought out the fact that he felt that Faxon was unjustly persecuting Prescott.

Mr. Prescott recalled, testified that he used the Edison Diaphram pump in cleaning cesspools. Also told of other appliances he used.

It was more difficult to clean a hogshead cesspool than one made by masons as the bottom of a mason-built cesspool had a basin. The hogshead could not be pumped to within three inches of bottom as the pump sucked air.

This completed the evidence, and the balance of the morning was taken up in the arguments.

After hearing the arguments the court found for the plaintiff in the sum of $16.20. The judgment also carries the costs of the case which must be paid by Mr. Faxon. The costs will amount to at least $20.

Mr. Faxon expressed himself as satisfied with the verdict.

The original amount of the bill in question was $21.15, and in making the finding the court disallowed $4.95 which is the amount that would be charged for cleaning three cesspools.

The cost of counsel and witnesses in fighting the case must have amounted to considerable, but as Mr. Faxon succeeded in getting a reduction in the bill he is satisfied.

West Quincys vs. Dorchesters.

The two old rivals, West Quincys and Dorchesters, cross bats for the second time this season at Dorchester on Saturday.

As West Quincys won the first game it is expected Dorchesters will try hard for a victory this time and as they have added several new players since the last game a hot time is expected by the fans.

West Quincys have also strengthened their team, having secured through friends of the management two of the strongest amateurs in New England for this occasion.

Forbes, catcher.
Pagum, pitcher.
Birnie, 1st base.
Kiley, 2d base.
Storey, 3d base.
Tate, short stop.
Duffy, left field.
Donaher, center field.
McCabe, right field.

Burglars Last Night.

The store of the Hardware Supply Co. on Hancock street was entered by burglars sometime during Thursday night. Entrance was made by forcing one of the windows in the rear of the store. As far as known from 75 to 100 pocket knives and 12 razors were taken. They were in one of the show cases.

King Snake and Water Moccasin.

"Two years ago," says a writer in the Scientific American, "it was my good fortune to witness a combat between a king snake and a water moccasin. I was attracted to the scene by a negro laborer. When I reached the spot I found the snakes coiled together in a pool of water, the king snake gripping his enemy with the tip of his tail just back of the head. It was clearly his intention to drown the moccasin. For the purpose of taking a photograph I lifted the two struggling, writhing serpents to a rock. Just before I took my photograph the king snake pulled the moccasin's head in the exact position he wished and quickly stretched his jaws over it. Thoughtlessly enough, I put the snakes back into the water, thinking that the king snake would also drown. Very soon, however, he left the pool, stretched his victim straight out before him and leisurely began to swallow him. In my efforts to take another photograph he was frightened away. Both snakes were nearly the same size, being about three and a half feet in length."

The Art of Listening.

There is a grace of kind listening as well as a grace of kind speaking. Some men listen with an abstracted air which shows that their thoughts are elsewnere, or they seem to listen, but by wide answers and irrelevant questions show that they have been occupied with their own thoughts as being more interesting, at least in their own estimation, than what you have been saying. Some interrupt and will not hear you to the end. Some hear you to the end, and forthwith begin to talk to you about a similar experience which has befallen themselves, making your case only an illustration of their own. Some, meaning to be kind, listen with such a determined, lively, violent attention that you are at once made uncomfortable, and the charm of conversation is at an end. Many persons whose manners will stand the test of speaking break down under the trial of listening.

Hastings and Tilden.

Hugh Hastings, when editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser, was incessant in bitter attacks upon Samuel J. Tilden. One day he received a letter from Henry F. Spaulding, then president of the Central Trust company, to the effect that his attacks upon Mr. Tilden appeared unwarranted, and unless he could give some satisfactory explanation Mr. Spaulding would discontinue taking the Commercial Advertiser.

Mr. Hastings replied, "When I was a clerk in Albany Sam Tilden was known as the boy who sold grated turnips for horse radish, and he has been doing it ever since."

Mr. Spaulding did not stop the Commercial Advertiser.—New York Times.

A Lot of Sick Ones.

A delegation of clergymen once called on President Lincoln to recommend one of their number as consul at the Hawaiian Islands and in addition to qualifications for fitness appealed to the president's sympathy on the ground that the candidate was in poor health and a residence in that climate would be of great benefit to him. Lincoln questioned the man closely as to his symptoms, then remarked:

"I am sorry to disappoint you, but there are eight other men after this place, and every one of them is sicker than you are."—"The True Abraham Lincoln."

Control Your Thoughts.

In the firm control of our thoughts lies the secret of the most wonderful possession of which we can boast—character. It is quite as much a matter of habit as of will, this being honorable, truthful, just; having formed our principles of right living, conscience invariably points to a whole hearted loyalty to them. And when baser motives plead, why, here is just where your will power may profit by exercise.

Chas. C. Hearn the popular druggist, who ntroduced in Quincy Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia with such wonderful success, says that he is hearing from druggists in other parts of the country, where the plan that he urged the Dr. Howard Co. to adopt (introducing their specific by selling at half price) had been followed.

Chas. C. Hearn showed the Ledger man a letter he recently received from C. S. Ingraham of Elmira, one of the best known druggists in New York state. Mr. Ingraham writes: "I have never undertaken the introduction of a new remedy with such satisfactory results, both to myself and to my trade. My average sales have been nearly a hundred bottles per week, and I have every reason to think this will be doubled within a short time.

"The specific gives remarkable results in the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia and constipation, and although every package has been sold under my personal guarantee to refund the money if it did not give satisfaction, not one has been returned."

My experience has been a duplicate of my Elmira friend's," said Chas. C. Hearn, "except that I have had one customer ask for her money back, which I returned without any questions. However, I do not think she could have given the remedy a fair trial. I am still selling the specific at half price, a fifty cent bottle of sixty doses for 25 cents, although I do not know how long I shall be able to do so, and your readers had better take advantage of this chance before it is too late." 21-24-28-31

BARRE MEN ARRIVE

Several However Have Tarried in Boston.

Some Ladies in the Party.

A Visit Made to the Shipyard This Afternoon.

Many of the granite men from Barre, Vt., arrived in town this morning and are busy making fraternal calls about South and West Quincy. The train with the party on board arrived at the North Union station about 3 o'clock this morning and the party remained on board the train until daylight. Some of the party are in Boston making business and social calls. Quite a few however came direct to Quincy.

They state that there were about 110 in the party including several ladies.

In honor of the arrival of the Barre manufacturers, Swingle & Falconer have their flags out. The large flag raised on a staff at the extreme top of their large derrick, which is located on a very high pinnacle in West Quincy, can be seen for many miles in all directions. Swingle & Falconer extend a hearty welcome to Barre people and will do their part to have the visitors enjoy their vacation. Swingle & Falconer are well known in Barre, as he firm handles a great deal of Barre granite in connection with the large Quincy product.

C. D. Swasey.
G. E. Bond.
Francis Rogers.
Alex. Duncan.

At the Hancock House are two from Montpelier, Vt., but only one has registered; that is L. Lemons.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock a special car left City Square for a visit to the plant of the Fore River Ship & Engine Co., and quite a number availed themselves of the opportunity to visit this great industry.

Tonight a joint session of the two associations will be held at Malnati hall, and tomorrow the Quincy and Barre men go to Crescent Park, R. I.

—Maynard will have a woman as principal of its high school, Miss Jane E. Warfield, recently a teacher at Melrose.

BIG BATTLESHIP.

The King Edward VII Launched Thursday at Davonport.

A London cable of Thursday says: The new battleship King Edward VII, the largest in the world, was successfully launched by the Princess of Wales at Devonport this afternoon. Among those present were the Prince of Wales, Princess Henry of Battenburg and the lords of the admiralty. King Edward laid the keel plate March 8, 1902. The vessel cost $7,500,000.

The King Edward VII, is of 16,350 tons displacement, only 350 tons more than the Vermont, now building at Quincy, and the Connecticut, building in New York. She is 425 feet long, has 78 feet beam, has a draught of 26 3-4 feet, and has 18,000 indicated horse power. Her armor belt is from 8 inches to 12 1-2 inches Krupp steel in thickness, her armament consists of 4 12-inch guns, 49 2-inch guns, 10 6 inch guns and 24 guns of smaller calibre; she has two torpedo tubes, her estimated speed is 12·5 knots, she carries 950 tons of coal, and she has a complement of 800 men.

The Vermont, building at the Fore River plant in Quincy, is 450 feet long and carries more guns than the King Edward VII. The Vermont's coal supply is 2200 tons, and indicated horse power 20,000, and the cost a little over $4,000,000.

The other boy did not obey and Ryan shot Jones in the forehead. He said afterwards he did not know the revolver was loaded. Jones may recover.

A TEST OF TELEPATHY.

Stead Tells of Remarkable Experiments In England.

COLLUSION BARRED IN ADVANCE.

Every Precaution, Says Noted Editor, Was Taken So That Telepathists Could Have No Prior Communication—Three Messages Sent From Nottingham to London Without Aid of Wires or Power.

From positive evidence that I have at hand I have to make without qualification the statement that the transmission of long distance messages by direct mental vibration—i. e., telepathy—is an accomplished fact, says William T. Stead in a special cable dispatch from London to the New York American and Journal.

To myself and a committee of other gentlemen the seemingly improbable feat of mental telepathy at great distances was shown to be absolutely possible. Indeed, it was positively proved. It has been demonstrated in a manner that has left none present with the shadow of a doubt in his mind. Every precaution was taken to prevent imposition. Imposition was impossible.

From London to Nottingham is a distance of 125 miles. In Nottingham was Mr. Franks, a telepathist, stationed. In London was another telepathist, Dr. Richardson, who is an American and New Yorker and who had undertaken to receive from Mr. Franks the telepathic messages.

From the hour of 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, July 16, Dr. Richardson was kept under observation. It was left to the committee to choose three messages, or more, for that matter, that were to be transmitted by means of telepathy between the men.

At the time that Dr. Richardson was put under observation (5 o'clock in the afternoon) the committee of which I was a member telegraphed to Mr. Franks, and absolutely without Dr. Richardson's cognizance, the three messages that he was to send telepathically to Dr. Richardson.

Following are the messages: The word "Scotland," the number "579," the hour "7:20 p. m."

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, after Dr. Richardson had spent the time in serene mental contemplation, he received faultlessly the three messages telepathed to him by Mr. Franks. I repeat that there existed absolutely no chance of his learning what the two numbers and the word were in any other manner than by telepathy.

Experiments were made afterward with three other messages telepathed by Dr. Richardson to Mr. Franks, and two of these three were correctly transmitted. At the third a certain mental weariness had come over Dr. Richardson, which was only natural under the circumstances, and further exertions were postponed.

This is but the beginning of wireless telegraphy without electricity or electrical machines.

Here let me avoid the personal and add to what I have said the story of what took place, as related by an unprejudiced observer:

"The most astonishing experiments in thought transference were made in the offices of Mr. William T. Stead at the Review of Reviews. A committee of six distinguished men, that included Mr. Stead himself and the noted Dr. Wallace had the matter in charge, and none who witnessed the experiments doubts in the least that what he witnessed was a genuine psychological accomplishment, too marvelous to credit though it might at first have seemed.

"Telepathic messages were successfully transmitted between Nottingham and the Review of Reviews office instantaneously. Nottingham is 125 or more miles from London. Franks was stationed at Nottingham, and was told to expect the messages from the committee by telegraph that he was to transmit back to Richardson telepathically.

"The eminence of the men who formed the committee makes the thought that there was any collusion in the wonderful results subsequently attained absurd. Besides Dr. Richardson, the American, was closely guarded in his room after 5 o'clock. There was no opportunity for a confederate to pass to him what went on in the committee room. As for Franks at Nottingham, he had no possible way of sending information other than the manner in which he did—telepathically.

"The first test was a telepathic transmission from Dr. Richardson to Franks at Nottingham. The committee gave him the number '579.' At 6:34 Dr. Richardson went into an adjoining room. This was done for the purpose of allowing him the solitude necessary for the concentration of his mind.

"Even had he wished to do so there was no possibility of his establishing any normal means of communication with Franks from this room. At 20 minutes of 7 o'clock the committee got an answering telegram from Franks. It read, '579.'

"Then Mr. Stead's secretary sent by telegraph to Franks three messages—a time, a number, a name. In the course of an hour Richardson received three telepathic messages from Franks. The first was that of a time, "7:20; the second was that of a number, '777,' and the third was the name 'Scotland.'

"These were the identical things that Mr. Stead's secretary had telegraphed earlier to Franks at Nottingham. The telepathic communications were instantaneous.

"When the test had ended there was not one who had been privileged to witness the extraordinary demonstration who felt himself assailed by the least doubt as to its genuineness."

MAN WITH HOE WINNING.

Wresting Fertile Texas Lands From Cowboys, Says a Cattleman.

"The man with the hoe is slowly but surely conquering Texas, and the acreage held by the cattlemen is steadily growing less," recently said R. H. Logan, a cattleman from Abilene, Tex., to a reporter of the Kansas City Star at the Coates House.

Mr. Logan, who left Missouri when he was a boy, says the farmers of Texas are beginning to raise a variety of crops, and cotton no longer is king. Under the varied crop system the farmers are getting rich.

"Cotton is late in Texas this season," said Mr. Logan, "but there will be a big crop. The most serious question that confronts the cotton raisers of Texas is the boll weevil, a small insect that attacks and destroys the cotton blooms. Nothing has yet been discovered that will exterminate the boll weevils or check their ravages. They came into Texas from the south, and it is said they travel northward at the rate of about seventy miles a year. They constitute a serious menace to cotton growing in Texas, but it has resulted that their presence is not an unmixed evil. The Texans had planted cotton year after year, and they struggled along to make both ends meet. When their cotton crops began to be destroyed they were compelled to turn to other crops, and they began planting corn, various cereals and to go into truck farming. Now they raise watermelons, tomatoes and so on. They are getting rich. Texas farmers were never so well off as now—many are really getting rich."

Mr. Logan says that the "glory" of the old time Texas is all gone. "The picturesque cowboy, with his sombrero, his buckskin leggings, his six shooters, has practically disappeared. The cowboys no longer go to town to 'shoot it up.' Texans don't even go armed. Probably," continued Mr. Logan, "many of the citizens of this town go armed, but in Texas we have dropped all that—of most of it, anyway."

CHINA WANTS OUR MEN.

Its Army Officials Offering Commissions to Soldiers In Philippines.

The reduction of the army in the Philippines will be welcome news in the Chinese empire, says a Washington special to the New York World. It will enable the military men in China to get what they are looking for—a lot of good drillmasters. They have learned there are many men in the army in the Philippines who feel that they will never see any more active service if they remain under the stars and stripes.

Chinese officials have been sending agents into the archipelago offering subalterns commissions in the vice regal and imperial armies. They have been offering sergeants' commissions. Their offers have been accepted by, it is estimated, several dozen youngsters who would rather continue the free and easy life of the orient than return to the United States and settle down to the humdrum of civil life. These Americans are wanted chiefly for the purpose of drilling the Chinamen under enlistment in the various armies.

INDIANS TO HUNT BUFFALO.

Novel Contest to Be Held on an Oklahoma Ranch.

Perhaps the very last big hunt which the Indians of the territories will ever have will be held on the famous "101" ranch near Bliss, Okla., next fall, says the Kansas City Journal. The plan is to secure a number of buffaloes, give them a mile start of at least fifty Indians, who, armed with bows and arrows and stripped the same as they were in the days when they roamed the plains, will hunt the buffaloes. The Indian bringing in the first buffalo tongue is to get a big prize, and it is being so arranged that the contest will be one possible to be witnessed by thousands of visitors.

Already the animals have been secured and are being prepared for the race. And invitations have been sent to the Poncas, Cheyennes, Otoes, Kaws and other tribes.

DYING CHILD'S KINDNESS.

Summoned Playmates to Bedside and Divided Her Toys Among Them.

Swathed in bandages and dying from terrible burns, little Johanna Johnson, twelve years old, recently gathered her playmates about her bedside in the South Chicago hospital and distributed her toys among them—"Just to remember me by," she said. She gave to the little group all her possessions, while her mother, heartbroken, clung to her hand and wept, says the New York Press.

Her playmates had gone to the hospital not suspecting that she was dying. The child seemed pleased when they entered. Then, as she lay talking to her little friends, the last terrible agony that preceded death seized her.

"Ask them to sing," whispered the child and fell back on her pillow dead.

A New Kind of Crookes Tube.

Dr. J. Mount Bleyer of New York writes to the Medical Record to describe a form of Crookes tube with which he is experimenting for therapeutic purposes. He seeks to obtain from this object the violet and ultra-violet radiance ordinarily obtained with a powerful arc light. The outward form of Dr. Bleyer's bulb is the same as that of any other X ray tube, and it may be excited by either a static machine or an induction coil. The only novelties in the construction relate to the degree of vacuum and the placing of the poles or terminals inside. The color of the light given off differs from that of an ordinary Rontgen tube in being dark purple instead of green.

A PUBLIC SCOLDING.

The Way a Scotch Minister Rebuked His Wife In Church.

"I cherish a story I once heard in Scotland," said a well known author, "a story that is, I think, typical of a certain portion of the people.

"This story concerns a minister who caught a member of his congregation sleeping and rebuked him from the pulpit. 'Awake, Saunders,' he said. 'Man, it's a disgrace to sleep in the kirk.'

"Saunders was much hurt. He spoke up and said:

"'Look to yer ain pew, an' mayhap ye'll find ithers sleepin' here besides mysel'.'

"The minister looked, and there was his wife slumbering soundly. He awakened her, and he told Saunders that if she fell asleep again he might call attention to her by holding up his hand. Then he proceeded with his sermon.

"Some weeks went by, and one Sunday Saunders, sure enough, put his hand up. The wife was asleep again. The minister thundered out her name, bade her rise to her feet and said to her before the whole congregation:

"'Mrs. MacGregor, anybody kens that when I got ye for a wife I got no beauty; yer friends ken I got no siller; now, if I dinna get God's grace I shall have a puir bargain indeed.'"—Kansas City Journal.

ARREST AT REVERE

Of Man Alleged to Be at the Head of Beach Gambling Resort

Revere, Mass., July 24.—The state police last night arrested the man whom they allege is the king of the Revere beach gamblers. He is patrick Hanlon, a resident of Lynn. An indignation meeting of citizens to be held next Monday evening in Grand Army hall and the rumored intention of several selectmen to accomplish the dismissal of Chief of Police Edward H. Oakes at a session of that body called for tonight are among the latest developments. S. A. Segee and Simon J. Nevins are the selectmen said to be desirous of taking Oakes' scalp. Segee opposed his appointment from the very outset, while Nevins, at one time a staunch supporter, recently underwent a change of heart. It has been learned that these two wanted Oakes deposed one month ago, but were unable to gain the necessary majority. The other three members of the board remained loyal to the chief and the movement resulted in failure. Oakes' opponents are reported to have the assurance that at least one of the trio, aroused at the sensational incidents of the past two weeks, will join forces with them.

Missing Man Was Killed

Boston, July 24.—Workmen who were excavating near the State street end of the East Boston tunnel discovered the body of Peter Carline in what is known as the east drift. The man lost his life in the cave in of the section of the tunnel under State street on June 12. William Uovitch was the only one reported killed. Two days after the accident Carline was reported missing by his friends, and although he was a tunnel workman, the authorities maintained that Uovitch was the only workman killed.

Old Man Put Up Good Fight

Brunswick, Me., July 24.—Abram Bouchard, aged 65, while crossing a bridge across the Androscoggin river last evening, was set upon by three young men, who dragged him from his team, and, it is alleged, tried to throw him overboard. He put up a good fight and got away. William Larock was arrested as one of the assailants, after a hard fight, but the other two escaped.

Real Estate Man Kills Himself

Boston, July 24.—After carefully placing his business card within his cap, which he laid in a conspicuous place on the bridge, Abel W. Phinney, a real estate dealer, ended his life by jumping into the Neponset river. Phinney is survived by a widow and one son. Neither of them can assign any cause for the act.

Bycycle Rider Killed

Springfield, Mass., July 24.—William Sullivan was killed in a peculiar manner last evening. While bicycling with a companion, Charles Downey, their wheel slipped in such a way as to throw them. Downey is supposed to have fallen on Sullivan's neck in such a way as to have ractured the base of the skull.

May Survive Scalping

Lowell, Mass., July 24.—Lillian O'Hare, aged 14, while working in the card room of the Appleton mill, got too near the frame of another girl, her hair was caught in the machinery and her scalp, part of her forehead and her eyebrows were torn off. The scalp was stitched on and she will probably recover.

MUST DEFEAT TAMMANY

New York Mayoralty of National Importance

ROOSEVELT IS INTERESTED

Is Watching Developments Closely and Will Give Advice—Wants the County Committee to Realize Importance of Work on Hand

New York, July 24.—President Roosevelt is showing a deep interest in New York local politics in the last few weeks. Mayor Low had a long conference with him on the subject last Saturday. Next week Senator Platt, Colonel George W. Dunn, chairman of the Republican state committee, and other prominent Republicans will journey to Oyster Bay to have talks with the president. Later, it is said some of the Citizens' union leaders will confer with him before they set about the work of making up the fusion municipal ticket.

All reports from those who have talked with the president are to the effect that he believes that the local fight will have an important bearing on the presidential contest next year. A member of the Republican state committee, who was a close friend and adviser of Roosevelt when he was governor of New York, said at the Fifth Avenue hotel:

"I had a chat with the president about New York politics and I found that he has a thorough knowledge of the local situation and is watching developments closely. It is not his intention to interfere in the local fight, but he will give his advice if he is asked for it, and he will be asked. The president thinks that the mayoralty contest has more than a local interest, as it will take place on the eve of the presidential campaign. If Tammany wins, it will have control of the police next year, and nobody knows better than the president what control of the police by Tammany means, especially in a presidential year. He was the head of the police board himself a few years ago and he understands its workings.

"The president, and all the Republican state leaders as well, believe that a victory by Tammany next fall will make it difficult, to put it mildly, for the Republican national ticket to carry the state next year. The day of walkovers in this state is passed. The Democrats will drop free silver and other issues, put up a strong conservative candidate and make a fight on the old lines. Under these conditions New York is always doubtful, and the result of the presidential contest may depend upon its electoral vote, as it did in the campaign before the Democratic party fell into the hands of the Bryanites.

"The importance of the vote in New York city, therefore, cannot be overestimated. The Republicans up the state will do their duty, but a Democratic tidal wave below the Bronx, like that of last year, might prove fatal to the Republican ticket. The president is strongly impressed with the necessity of keeping down the Democratic vote in New York city, and he thinks that the effective way to keep it down next year is to defeat Tammany this year. A Tammany defeat would not only have a depressing effect on Tammany hall, but it would encourage the Republicans of New York and of the whole country."

From other sources it is learned that the president hopes that M. Lynn Bruce will improve the condition of the local Republican organization, notwithstanding the fact that he was openly selected by Senator Platt. Mr. Bruce received recently a letter from the president congratulating him and urging him to awaken the county committee to a realization of the importance of the work they have on hand. Mr. Bruce will confer with the president within a week and tell him what he expects to accomplish.

When Governor Odell returns from the west he will also go to Oyster Bay. It may be stated here that Odell is just as earnestly in favor of Roosevelt's nomination as Senator Platt is, although Platt loses no opportunity to spread intimations that the governor is a disappointed man and would not grieve over the president's defeat. Odell will not only do all in his power to elect the fusion ticket next fall, but he will work as hard for Roosevelt in the presidential campaign as he did in the gubernatorial campaign of 1898. The president understands this and laughs at the "old man's" sly hits at Odell.

Strikers' Proposition Fails

Chicago, July 24.—The counter proposition made by the striking unionists to the Kellogg Switchboard company that the company reinstate within 30 days all the strikers who applied for reinstatement within five days was rejected by the Kellogg company and peace negotiations are at a standstill.

Gaffney Must Face Charge

New York, July 24.—Justice Mayer has denied the motion to dismiss the charges against Alderman Gaffney, accused of being interested in the lease of a pier while holding public office, and ordered the prisoner held. Since his arrest Gaffney has been indicted by the grand jury.

Policeman Shot, Assailant Killed

Beaumont, Tex., July 24.—Hooney Allen, a negro, tried to shoot his wife. Policeman Kensbury appeared and the negro fatally shot him. Allen then ran and after a long chase by citizens he was killed by the crowd.

STOCKS AGAIN DECLINE

Copper Suffered Severely and Sold at Practically Any Price

New York, July 24.—There was a further decline in the stock market here, the industrials being the most affected, but the railway list, including a number of high grade issues, suffered in sympathy. A number of causes contributed to the break. In addition to adverse crop reports and further wild speculation in cotton, Wall street showed considerable anxiety over the news of the failure of an important building firm in New England, as it was believed to involve ramifications in the New York department of that industry.

The break of 5 1-4 points in Amalgamated copper is rather more far-reaching than is generally supposed. Much of the stock was purchased outright at prices fully 50 points above yesterday's quotations and the latest shrinkage was as a last straw to many holders. Large quantities of copper were thrown overboard at practically any price that was offered. Boston, according to all accounts, was forced to let go 20,000 shares, and the same doubtless applies in a lesser degree to numerous other places. Sales of amalgamated copper aggregated over 83,000 shares. Some new low records were registered.

Shamrock I Beats Sister

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 24.—A fluke and a shift of wind cheated Shamrock III out of a victory in a drifting race with Shamrock I off Sandy Hook and gave the old boat the first victory she ever had over the new challenger. The boats had drifted about nine miles of the run before the wind to the turning mark, with just enough to keep them moving, when Shamrock I's sails filled with wind and for 20 minutes she slipped away, leaving her sister racer almost becalmed. Beating back to the finish line a shift of wind gave the old boat an advantage. Shamrock I gained five minutes by her good luck. She finished 1m. 52s. ahead and beat the challenger by 3m. 50s. elapsed time.

Taylor's Great Performance

Detroit, July 24.—John Taylor, the gelding that ran away after an accident in the third heat of the merchants and manufacturers' $10,000 stake Wednesday and then won the fourth in impressive fashion, yesterday afternoon won the fifth heat and the race from Wainscott, the heavily played favorite. John Taylor is owned by John Merrill of Lockhaven, Pa. It is said that Merrill was offered $10,000 for the horse yesterday afternoon and refused it.

Renewal of Richmond Disorder

Richmond, July 24.—A quite general outbreak of street car strike disorder occurred in the city last night. Two cars were blown up and one of the motormen suffered severely from the shock. Another motorman was shot at and a window of his car broken by a would-be assassin and a woman passenger was struck by a stone thrown at a car. The disorder has the appearance of preconcerted effort to prevent people from riding on the cars.

Shooting Parson Lands In Jail

Middleburg, Ky., July 24.—Robert Lee, a minister at Linnie, became involved in a quarrel with Ellis Woods and the latter's son and shooting followed, in which the preacher proved himself more than a match for both of his opponents, for he killed Woods and fatally wounded his son. Lee was arrested and taken to jail, where he peacefully said grace at the table with the other prisoners.

Boston Embargo Removed

Washington, July 24.—Secretary Wilson has issued an order removing the prohibition against the exportation of cattle, sheep and other ruminants and swine from the port of Boston on account of the existence of foot and mouth disease. Shipments will be resumed as soon as the British government removes the embargo which it has had in force against New England ports.

Aimed at United States

Wellington, N. Z., July 24.—In the house of representatives Prime Minister Seddon introduced a bill to prevent vessels registered in countries where British shipping is prevented from engaging in coastwise trade from engaging in coastwise trade in New Zealand waters. The bill is regarded as a retaliation against the coastwise trade laws of the United States.

More Postal Indictments

New York, July 24.—Among the indictments handed up by the federal grand jury last night it was said by those who professed to have a knowledge of the fact that there were two additional indictments found against former Congressman Driggs and two against George W. Beavers, superintendent of allowances and salaries in the postoffice department.

World's Largest Battleship

London, July 24.—The new battleship, King Edward VII, the largest in the world, was successfully launched by the Princess of Wales at Devonport. Among those present were the Prince of Wales, Princess Henry of Battenburg and the lords of the admiralty. King Edward laid the keel plate March 8, 1902. The vessel cost $7,500,000.

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

Vol. 15. No. 172. QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 25, 1903. PRICE TWO CENTS.

The Social Realm of Greater Quincy.

In slumber sweet, the dying day,
Lies on the breast of night—
Her rosy lips caressing
His brow, so cool and white.
Her eyelids gently drooping
O'er her cheek with crimson flushed
Like a dew kissed rosebud half asleep,
By wanton zephyrs hushed.
Her crown of amethyst and gold
King night has laid away,—
And now the jewelled stars keep watch
O'er the golden couch of day.
The pa'e bent moon sails proudly
In a glittering sea of blue—
And the vesper bells chime softly,
"Adieu, sweet day, adieu!"
Then one by one night's tapers dim,
The white moon fades and dies,
And like a radiant crimson rose,
Day opes her beaming eyes,
She slips from out the arms of night,
With a kiss on his brow so fair,
And goes on her mission, with flowers of hope,
Scattering them everywhere.

—AGNES HELEN L'CKHART.

BIG MUD HOOKS.

Those for Battleship Vermont Building at Quincy, 17,600 Pounds.

The Boston navy yards has just received orders, says the Herald, for 28 of the heaviest anchors ever made for first-class battleships Connecticut, Louisiana, Vermont, Kansas, Mississippi, Minnesota and Idaho, and eight anchors 16,500 pounds each for the first-class armored cruisers Tennessee and Washington. Each ship is to have four of these mud hooks. Those for the battleships will weigh 17,600 and will take chain cables of 2 3-4 inch wire, 120 fathoms long. Each ship is also to be supplyed with shackles mooring swivels and other fittings, all to be made here.

Work is now being done on the anchors and chains for the battleships Virginia, Nebraska, Georgia, New Jersey, Rhode Island and the armored cruisers Pennsylvania, West Virginia, California, Colorado, Maryland and South Dakota, as well as the protected cruisers Denver, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Charlestown. The Galveston's outfit is ready, but has not been delivered owing to the long delay in getting the ship ready for sea. In addition to this work the department is also manufacturing numerous other outfits for smaller ships.

The New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont are building at Quincy.

—There seems some reluctance on the part of officials of the Commonwealth to bring to a test the question of Sunday recreation. This is wise. Public opinion is superior, in every instance to harshly interpreted statutes. We do not understand that the Medford Golf Club by the recent amendment of its rules intends a challenge to the Sunday laws of the Commonwealth. On the contrary the amended by-law seems calculated to sustain and enforce the statutes. It provides that "no contest or match, either against a record or against bogey, or against any actual competitor, shall be allowed on the club grounds on Sunday." This action of the Medford Golf Club has more than a local importance, since it offers a test of the statute regarding Sunday sports which is applicable to the whole Commonwealth. The contention of the Sabbatarians is that the law forbids recreation as well as public contests of skill. If this view is correct, we shall have to stay at home and read the Bible all day Sunday, for nothing else will be permissible. But if the more liberal interpretation of the law prevails we shall be allowed to take such pleasure on that day as does not interfere with its observance by other people.—Boston Beacon.

Boston now has a young edition of Coney Island just along shore at Revere. It's a lively and growing child, too.—Boston Courier.

Stolen Yachts.

Inspector McKay reports that four parties have identified property thought to have stolen by Thorgumson. William M. Tuttle says a boat at Houghs Neck is one that was stolen from him at Hingham, and Washington James of Hingham claims another. Mr. Vinquist also identifies a boat stolen from him, and a man at Rufes Hummock has identified some of the property found buried at Thorgumson's camp at Adams shore. New warrants will be issued.

Man and Woman Capsized.

A man and woman had a narrow escape from drowning off Houghs Neck yesterday. They were fishing at anchor near Raccoon island in one of Harveys boats when they were run down and capsized by a stone sloop. Both clung to the boat until rescued by two launches. They were taken to the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht club, where W. J. Tilley supplied dry clothes.

A Long Dance.

William Kemp, an English comic actor who flourished during the last years of Queen Elizabeth and who belonged to the same company as Shakespeare and "created" Dogberry, danced from London to Norwich, a distance of 114 miles. He was accompanied by a servant, an umpire and a man with a tabor and pipe. Crowds hindered his start on Feb. 11, 1600, and many met him at every place. Several tried to dance with him, but none could rival his pace. The most successful were women. Although delayed by a snowstorm, he did it in nine days, and on the way accepted a challenge or two, each time coming off best, except when a Chelmsford maiden of fourteen danced till he was "ready to lie down." On his return he wrote an account of it, which ends with a warning to those with whom he had made wagers that if they did not pay up he would publish their names. The "Nine Daies' Wonder," as the title runs, is a merry, readable pamphlet. Among other curious information in it is the statement that the customary way to deal with pickpockets at the theater in those days was to tie them to a post.

No Language of Their Own.

Among the peoples of the world the Swiss are alone in having no language they can call their own. According to a recent visitor to the little country, about three-fourths of the people of Switzerland speak German, while the remainder divide four other languages among them, mainly French and Italian, the languages varying as a rule according to the proximity of the people to each country whose tongue they speak. Public documents and notices are printed in both French and German.

In the Swiss congress, or national parliament, the members make their speeches either in French or German, for nearly all the members understand both languages. The orders of the president are translated by an official interpreter and furnished to the newspapers in both languages.

OUR FASHION LETTER.

Muslin and Lace Gowns Are as Numerous as Ever.

POMPADOUR DESIGNS POPULAR.

The Pelerine Wrap Is an Important Feature of the Demitoilet—A Pretty Race Gown—White Still Worn. Some Modish Hats.

Muslin and lace gowns really deserve a page to themselves. A pale green muslin has bunches of orange pomegranates on it and is a complete mass of tuckings, shirrings, etc. A very charming addition is a pelerine of hand worked lawn bordered by green silk fringe. The waist of this frock is enriched by a band of orange panne, which, although it does not sound like a very summery fabric, runs taffeta a close second in the matter of trimmings.

A very smart gown seen at the races recently was of Limerick lace over an accordion plaited white chiffon underdress, the lace held across with ropes of chenille and tiny jet and paste buckles. The hat to go with this was of pale green straw. For trimming it had a single mauve ostrich feather.

Some very smart girls are appearing in fine white silk muslin or mousseline de soie made with a big fichu and a much befounced skirt. After all there are not many ways of making up muslin. To look well it must be made rather fussily. Severe lines are distinctly out of place.

Soft, semitransparent fabrics are ideal for summer and evening gowns, and a most charming effect is obtained by using two or three harmonious colors in tulle or chiffon over a foundation of pale satin. A soft pink satin, first veiled with a pinkish gray chiffon and again with a silvery gray, gives a misty pastel effect which is both dainty and uncommon.

UP TO DATE MODES.

A very smart yet simple French frock is in a periwinkle blue cloth edged with a cream lace application outlined with black and white chenille braid. This is made in the form of a tunic fastening with early Victorian buttons and finished with a black panne belt, with straps of embroidery decorating the full, rather round skirt, which barely touches the ground all around.

In direct contrast to a costume of this sort there are some glorious hand painted muslins on a silky ground. Pompadour designs are of course the favorites, and their beauty is much enhanced by the addition of little coats, either in very fine old fashioned lawn or some real lace. The skirts in such cases are accordion plaited or finely gauged, and most of them are made with a flounce starting below the knees to give the necessary fullness.

The muslins this year are works of art, consisting of masses of tuckings, shirrings, laces and fine embroidery.

The hat of white, coarse straw trimmed with a single feather is rich, simple and economical, for it may be worn with many gowns.

The hat in the picture is of pale pink chiffon trimmed with roses of a darker shade.

HATS FOR DEMITOILETS.

There is always a certain amount of difficulty about choosing a hat to wear with a demitoilet. When in doubt it is ever safe to adhere to the all black or white picture hat, with its ostrich plume or simple lace curtain.

A really good black straw hat looks well on many occasions. The shade to the face is nearly always becoming, and such head gear never seems to become rumpled or soiled. Feathers are not a necessity, but good feathers pay, as they keep in curl longer and with a little skill can soon be restored to their original beauty.

The pelerine wrap is an important feature of the demitoilet, and we certainly need a wrap of some kind. In Paris cream silk coats with shawl-like draperies of black chantilly lace lined with accordion plaited chiffon are much in vogue.

A beautiful race gown of palest pink crepe de chine, powdered with black chantilly medallions, having a broad insertion of the connected motifs, has pink panne drawn in and out and fastened with little tassels of black passementerie. Another lovely gown of pastel blue chiffon has a foamlike edge made of many tiny gathered frills, over which wander little sprays and medallions of fine lawn and ecru lace.

Many white gowns will be worn during the summer. Embroidered lawn has its votaries, and when combined with handsome lace makes the smartest of summer frocks. Gowns entirely composed of lace have deep plaitings of chiffon, or flat frills of chine silk are inlet between tucks.

The cut shows a hat of white fancy straw trimmed with huge rosettes of liberty silk.

THE CREAM AND WHITE VOGUE.

There is no doubt that we are following the fashion set by Paris by making this a white season.

There has been a practical reason for the wearing of so much white this year. In the cold weather from which we suffered in the early summer white wool fabrics gave a suggestion of spring and yet were as warm as the darker tones. Hopsacks, serges, cloths and a hundred and one new canvas materials in cream and white have been much in vogue during the past month or so.

The dressy summer gown is made of very gorgeous materials, such as crepe de chine, oriental satin, mousseline de soie and linon de sole, and the majority of these are white or cream color. There is, however, a growing fad for rose pink and pale green, especially for young girls' dresses.

The glorified tailor made is very useful for many occasions when it would be impossible to wear a more elaborate and perishable costume.

The picture shows a smart three-quarter tailor made of fawn novelty goods trimmed with deep red silk and embroidery.

THE FINANCIAL STORM

Causes Failure of Two New York Brokerage Houses

VERITABLE BLACK FRIDAY

Closes With Investors In an Unhappy Frame of Mind and With Commission Houses Squeezed Almost to the Bursting Point—Many Are In Dread

New York, July 25.—The announcement on the stock exchange of the suspension of the firms of Talbot J. Taylor & Co. and of W. L. Stow & Co. was the sequel to a period of excited selling of stocks and wide cuts in prices which has not been equalled before since the present movement to liquidate set in. There is nothing in either failure than can be traced to business or industrial conditions outside the exchange, the case lying close to a diagnosis of speculative collapse.

Both firms have been largely concerned in speculative stock market pools, formed for the purpose of taking on a line of stocks, sustaining their price by supporting orders, real or manipulative, and seeking to realize profits by selling out to outsiders at the high prices. Such operations have suffered from increasing difficulties with the growth of the stringency of money, the solicitude of bankers over loans employed in such projects and the jaded appetite of the public for securities.

It was a veritable "Black Friday" and although the market rallied very decidedly at the close and the general situation in the minds of some was much improved, a great many persons having interests in the "street" went home in anything but a cheerful frame of mind.

It was freely predicted that trouble even more serious was impending. From trustworthy sources it was learned that three or more commission houses had been "squeezed" almost to the bursting point. Contracts made yesterday hold over till Monday, which may enable embarrassed individuals to get their second wind.

The Stow failure was announced shortly before 2:30 p. m. and that of T. J. Taylor & Co. followed within less than 10 minutes. The stock exchange was crowded, as it had been all day, with brokers, many of whom in recent months had been more conspicuous by their absence from the board, but who were regular in their attendance this week because of the gathering financial storm.

The board room was the scene of wild excitement all day. A "tip" that something would "drop" before the close of the market had gone around. The hush that fell as the official announcements were made was broken only by the ill suppressed buzz of brokers who gathered in groups and listened intently to the words of the chairman perched in his little white marble balcony.

Then followed another wild scramble all over the room. A thousand telephone bells rang and almost as many uniformed messenger boys seemed to leap out on the floor and scurry in all directions. The excitement subsided only with the clang of the huge gong which marked the closing of the market. While many a sigh of relief went up there was also dread of today.

To those who were in the "know" the Stow failure caused little surprise, but the Taylor embarrassment was really unexpected. Much had been said about that firm's affairs in the last few years and its operations in Southern Pacific, Metropolitan Street Railway, and certain other stocks are still fresh in the minds of those who follow the market. The "street" and many visitors understood the Taylor-Keene connections. Talbot J. Taylor is James R. Keene's son-in-law. His brother, James B. Taylor, and Foxhall P. Keene, son of James R., constitute the firm. Young Keene, who is an international sportsman, is a special partner in the sum, it is said, of $250,000.

Taylor & Co. have been the principal "Keene" brokers for the last three years, that famous operator making the Taylor office his headquarters. Foxhall Keene is now abroad. His father was at the Taylor office yesterday but denied himself to all save a few close friends.

The effect of the Taylor failure upon James R. Keene's personal fortune is largely a matter of conjecture. According to some reports the veteran operator is heavily involved, and according to others scarcely at all.

There are many who believe that the Taylor failure is directly due to the bad blood stirred up by that firm and Mr. Keene in the Southern Pacific and Metropolitan suits. In fact it has frequently been said that the Harriman and Whitney interests would not be satisfied with anything less than the scalps of the Keenes and Taylors because of these episodes.

The firm of W. L. Stow & Co. (W. L. Collidge) was organized in 1899 and has been known almost ever since as the stock market representatives of the Mexican Central road. The firm's manipulation of Mexican Central securities was frequently a matter of general gossip.

No statement of Taylor & Co.'s assets and liabilities has been made, but from the president of a leading national bank it is learned that the liabilities may be well onto $6,000,000. Estimates of Stow & Co.'s liabilities range from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000.

GUARDIAN CRANES.

They Take the Place of Shepherd Dogs In Venezuela.

The natives of Venezuela and adjoining countries on the north side of the river Amazon often avail themselves of the services of a native crane to care for their poultry and also, in the place of collies or shepherd dogs, to guard and herd their domestic animals. This remarkable bird, which the Indians call yakamik, and the ornithologists Psophia crepitans, is found in a wild state in the great forests which lie between the northern coasts of South America and the Amazon river, particularly in Venezuela and British Guiana. The birds never leave the forests unless shot or captured. They may be trusted with the care of a flock of sheep or domestic fowls and every morning will drive the ducks and poultry to their feeding places and, carefully collecting any stragglers, bring them safely home at night. A yakamik soon learns to know and obey the voice of its master, follows him, when permitted, wherever he goes and appears delighted at receiving his caresses.

It pines at his absence and welcomes his return and is extremely jealous of any rival. Should any dog or cat approach it flies at it with the utmost fury and, attacking it with wing and beak, drives it away. It presents itself regularly during meals, from which it chases all domestic animals and even the negroes who wait on the table if it is not well acquainted with them, and only asks for a share of the eatables after it has driven away all who might aspire to a favorable notice from the family.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Where the Ladies Propose.

Between the mountains of India and Persia is a powerful tribe, among whom an extraordinary custom prevails. Woman's rights have apparently received full recognition, for the ladies of the tribe can choose their own husbands. All a single woman has to do when she wishes to change her state is to send a servant to pin a handkerchief to the hat of the man on whom her fancy lights, and he is obliged to marry her, unless he can show that he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires.

THE "WAVE MEKE."

Graceful and Refined Dance Performed by Fijian Maidens.

"The Fijian natives call their dances 'mekes,' and the best of them all is the 'wave meke,'" says a traveler who has witnessed these graceful evolutions. "A lot of pretty girls, in two or three rows, act the movements of the sea as it rolls in upon the reefs.

"First of all, they bend down in unison and sweep the ground slowly with their hands, waving their fingers in order to represent the little wavelets flecked by the wind. Then they sway their bodies to and fro to show the long roll of the tropical wave, and presently their figures rise and fall as do the breakers. The action of the dance becomes more and more violent. The wave is dashing up the barrier reef. The girls spring forward and clap their hands and then drop to the ground with a long musical cry. The wave has surmounted the reef and emptied itself into the glassy lagoon. The dance is over.

"Every movement of the 'wave meke' is graceful and refined. The best ballet girls in your American theaters are not better trained than these young Fijian maidens, who spend a good half of their happy, careless, lazy lives dancing their 'mekes' or playing in the surf. There are no finer dancers in the world. Nearly all their ballets describe the scenes around them or the incidents of their daily life. Other 'mekes' picture the palms swaying in the breeze, the canoes tossing in a gale and the clouds sailing across the sky."

BODY OF THE PONTIFF

Viewed by Thousands In the Basilica of St Peter's

PAPAL POLITICAL GOSSIP

Has It That Gotti's Chances of Succeeding Leo Have Improved—Oreglia Drives Through Vatican Garden and Comments Upon Its Neglect

Rome, July 25.—Again yesterday the body of Leo XIII lay in state in the basilica of St. Peter's and about 30,000 people passed before the catafalque. This is a slight increase over the number who viewed the remains Thursday and the augmentation was doubtless due to the widely circulated reports that Friday would be the last day upon which the public would have an opportunity of looking upon the body of the pontiff. These reports proved to be baseless and the body will remain in the chapel of the sacrament, at least during the greater part of today. The fears expressed by the Vatican authorities concerning decomposition appear to have been exaggerated.

With impressive ceremonies the body will be interred this evening in sarcophagus at St. Peter's, where it will remain until taken to its final resting place in the church of St. John Lateran.

Italian soldiers again preserved order inside St. Peter's, where there was a repetition of the scene and crowd which occurred Thursday. The day was notable for the solemn masses celebrated for the repose of the soul of the late pontiff at St. Peter's and other famous churches in Rome, which were largely attended despite the pathetic ceremony which was occurring at the basilica.

Interest is now largely engrossed with the coming conclave and its result. The gossip of the day may be summed up briefly by saying that Cardinal Gotti's chances of election seem to have improved in comparison with those of other cardinals who have been mentioned as likely to succeed the dead pontiff, although there still exists a strong feeling that some one, hitherto scarcely talked of, may wear the tiara.

Much comment was excited at the Vatican by a drive which Cardinal Oreglia took through the Vatican gardens. The workers in the more quiet precincts of the gardens were startled when they saw the well known papal carriage approaching, surrounded by Swiss and noble guards. Their hearts jumped as they saw the face of the cardinal looking out at them. The camerlengo did not appear to be satisfied with what he saw. He shook his head, exclaiming dismally, "What decay, what neglect. I could not remain shut up in this melancholy place. I should die in a year."

The gossips of the Vatican now wish to know if this means that the cardinal would not accept the papacy, which seems practically impossible, or accepting, would refuse to be a voluntary, traditional Vatican prisoner. It seems that the more probable interpretation of his remarks would be that, if made pope, he would institute great changes in the gardens.

The Italia sees alleged confirmation of the story that Cardinal Gibbons had succeeded in transforming Cardinal Richard, the archbishop of Paris, into an opponent of Cardinal Rampolla in the alleged fact that Cardinal Gibbons did not leave Cardinal Richard while in Paris; that they left together for Rome, travelling together, and will lodge together at the house of the order of St. Sulpice. As a matter of fact only the statement that they will lodge together is true. It is known that they did not start for Rome together. Cardinal Richard is coming via Modane and Cardinal Gibbons via St. Gothard pass. The latter is expected here Sunday evening or Monday morning.

Inside the Vatican the work of arranging the apartments for the conclave has been begun. The courtyards are choked with casts, bricks and building material for raising the walls where doors exist, making partitions there. The Palatine guards and gendarmes will be transferred elsewhere, as their barracks are needed by the conclave. Cardinal Oreglia, escorted by the Swiss guards, inspected the work, observing everything minutely.

Slandered the Dead

Rome, July 25.—The Socialist paper Avanti, having published a story to the effect that Leo XIII, while archbishop of Perugia, had had too intimate relations with the Countess Gallapa, a married woman, the latter has brought suit against the paper for libel. The attitude of The Avanti towards the Vatican is shown by the fact that on the day following the pope's death dispatches from Rome reported that the only discordant notes in the eulogies of the Roman papers was struck by the Socialist organ Avanti, which said: "We Socialists, without disdain, but with indifference, pass before this corpse and await the new enemy."

Salt Resuscitated Dying Girl

New York, July 25.—Declared to be unique in surgery is an operation performed in the Memorial hospital, Brooklyn, on Vera Stark, a delicate 11-year-old girl, who, after having her appendix and adhering tumorous growth as well as five inches of intestine removed, was, while practically dead, restored to life by the injection into her veins of a pint and a half of hot salt solution and the application into her stomach of a similar solution.

Worcester, Mass., July 25.—Seventy-eight passengers were in a rear-end collision on the Worcester Consolidated street railway a mile west of Northboro at 3:05 yesterday afternoon. Thirty-eight of them were in a list of injured made out by Dr. Guptil. Only four of these received serious injuries. They were Private J. E. Powers, Private D. J. Driscoll, Private S. J. Gorman and Private T. J. Clifford.

The accident was the result of a special car filled with members of Emmet Guards returning to Worcester from the state camp grounds at South Framingham running into the regular car, which had stopped to take on a passenger.

The special car was in charge of Conductor Landry and Motorman McCarthy. The collision was due to running the special too near the regular car, the wheels sliding when the air brakes were put on and the reverse and sand together being insufficient to stop the car in time.

The four men injured worst were brought to Worcester in a special car and taken to their homes in hacks. The others were able to wait for another car and to walk home after reaching Worcester.

Arbitrators Settle Dispute

Lynn, Mass., July 25.—The state board of conciliation and arbitration settled the strike and lockout of the building laborers that has been on in Lynn since Tuesday. The mortar mixers, who demanded pay for overtime to compensate them for the time required to temper the tubs before the masons began work, return to work under the old agreement, with the stipulation that the time for preparing the mortar is left to the men themselves. Six hundred men were idle in the building trades in consequence of the trouble, with a prospect of 3000 being unemployed by the first of next week.

Banks Explain Receivership

Worcester, Mass., July 25.—Expert accountants are still at work on the books of the Norcross Bros. company, and until they are ready to make their report nothing will be done by the receivers. None of the Worcester banks which held Norcross Bros. company paper and collateral, and which were among the petitioners for the appointment of receivers, express the slightest doubt that they will sustain anything more than delay through the failure. All agree that the step was taken, but to relieve it.

No Action on Scandal

Revere, Mass., July 25.—The Revere selectmen, ignoring the scandal which has grown out of the conditions at the beach and the crusade against gambling by the state police, have decided to "stand pat" until after the indignation meeting called for Monday night. The board met last night, but contrary to expectation, took no action in this matter. Neither was Chief Oakes' resignation considered. The usual practice is for the board to meet in private, but last night's session was public, only routine business being transacted.

Kanawha Defeats Noma

Newport, R. I., July 25.—Henry H. Rogers' steam yacht Kanawha defeated Noma, owned by William B. Leeds, by 4m. 56s. in a 60-mile race for the Lysistrata cup off here. The trophy, which was presented by James G. Bennett, must be won twice in succession before it becomes the permanent property of the yacht owner. Mr. Bennett added $2500 in cash for the winner of the first series. Mr. Rogers will divide this money among the crew of the Kanawha, numbering 43 men all told.

Stinson Has Another Tumble

Hartford, July 25.—Caldwell and Stinson were down for a 10-mile motor-paced match race in this city last night. Just before the fourth mile, when Stinson was slightly in the lead, he fell as the result of the tire of his front wheel slipping off. He struck on his head and was rendered unconscious. He had a bad cut on the chin, one under the eye and suffered a slight concussion. Stinson refused to go to a hospital, and after his wounds were stitched he went to his hotel.

Young Bread Winner Killed

Worcester, Mass., July 25.—A special to The Telegram from Southboro says: Anthony McHale, 14 years old, was found in a pool of blood on the roadside near his home in Southboro, dying shortly after with a fractured skull received either by a kick from his runaway horse or by falling under the heavily loaded wagon. Young McHale did the heavy work on his invalid father's farm and was the main support of a family of seven.

Weighed Twenty Pounds at Birth

Medford, Mass., July 25.—A boy weighing 20 pounds was born to Mrs. Frank L. Bowers of this city last evening. Doctors of long experience assert that this is a record on this side of the Atlantic for the weight of ababe at birth. Because the umbilical cord was wound thrice around the neck and lay across the shoulder blade of the child, circulation of the blood was momentarily cut off and the babe died at birth of strangulation.

Collided With Trolley Pole

Swansea, Mass., July 25.—An electric car was derailed near Sisson's corners and collided with a trolley pole. Charles Mason sustained fractured ribs and other injuries, Edward Mason was badly bruised about the legs and a man named Murphy was severely scratched by contact with a barbed wire fence.

Grand Circuit Events

The "Big Ring" Meetings Promise Rich Rewards For Light Harness Patrons. Enthusiastic Readville Promoters ⁘ The "Memphis Shoe."

The grand circuit of 1903 gives promise of ample reward, as in years past, for the speedy trotters and pacers that follow the "big ring." At the close of the Detroit meeting, the inaugural of the circuit, the owners take their strings to Cleveland, where from July 27 to July 31 stakes to the total value of $40,000 will be hung up. After the Cleveland races the grand circuit meetings, dates and total purse amount will be as follows:

Buffalo, Aug. 3-8, $30,000; New York (Empire City), Aug. 10-15, $40,000; Brooklyn (Brighton Beach), Aug. 17 22, $50,000; Boston (Readville), Aug. 24-29, $55,000; Providence, Aug. 31-Sept. 5, $45,000; Hartford, Sept. 7-12, $50,000; Syracuse, Sept. 14-19, $40,000; Columbus, Sept. 21-26, $40,000; Cincinnati, Sept. 28-Oct. 3, $40,000.

It will be seen that the circuit this year is probably the best in point of convenience for horses and owners that has ever been formed. The horse men will be able to save a great deal of money and time by reason of the arrangement of shipments, which does away with all need of "doubling" on the route.

The Cleveland enthusiasts anticipate a very successful meeting, and, according to Secretary Dietrich, the events which closed early in the spring are well filled. The early closing races include four $2,000 purses for trotters and four for pacers of the following classes: 2:23, 2:19, 2:14 and 2:11, trotting, and 2:23, 2:15, 2:11 and 2:06, pacing. This association never hangs up sensational purses, yet the racing is always of the highest order. All of the races at the Cleveland meeting will be best two heats in three, and the probable class races which will supplement the early closing events will be for 2:06, 2:08, 2:10, 2:12, 2:13, 2:15, 2:17, 2:21 and 2:25, trotters; 2:04, 2:05, 2:08, 2:10, 2:15, 2:18 and 2:21 class, pacers.

The Boston meeting at the Readville track last year was considered by many the most successful of the season. This year the New England Breeders' association, which conducts the races at Readville, hopes to earn a repetition of the verdict. To start the ball a-rolling in the right direction the association has decided to repeat the early closing events of 1902 for the coming grand circuit meeting. This means that the Massachusetts will be a $15,000 purse, to which 2:12 trotters are eligible. The Blue Hill is for 2:30 trotters and will be worth $5,000; the Norfolk also is a $5,000 event, but is for the 2:24 pacers; the Neponset is worth $3,000 and is for the 2:10 pacers; the 2:10 trotters have a $3,000 purse, and $200 has been set aside for the three-year-old trotters still eligible to the 2:25 class.

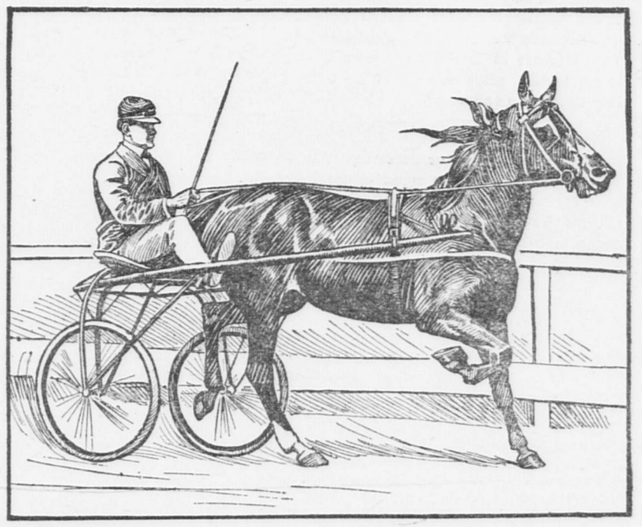

The much talked of "Memphis shoe" which was sprung on the light harness horsemen a few months ago by an Englishman, W. H. Lake, will be used this season by many trainers who operate strings on the grand circuit. They hope to improve the gait and increase the speed of their trotters thereby. This shoe is of a novel design [illegible] caused endless comment among horsemen and in turf publications.

It has two pieces of metal welded across the open part of the shoe, as shown in the accompanying illustration, and for that reason is sometimes referred to as the "stepladder shoe."

Lake had many trials and tribulations before he succeeded in attracting attention to the shoe. But being a man of wealth and leisure and not seeking material return from his discovery, he bided his time and let events take their own course.

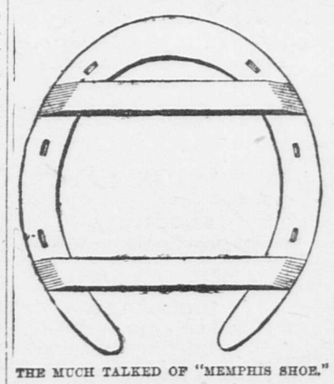

When Mr. Lake first sprung the shoes at Memphis the boys gave him the laugh, and when Trainer Murray told him that Mr. Geers on seeing his diagram of it said that if a man wanted a trotter to "rack" the shoe would be the thing to do it Mr. Lake made the unanswerable reply: "How does Mr. Geers know? Has he ever tried it?" Cope, the smith of Mr. Geers' stable, also thought the shoe useless, and for a time the diagram hung in his shop and caused no end of fun for the boys. Mr. Lake, however, was steadfast and after failing to secure a trial with them on other horses induced Murray to try it on his Red Heart—Jenny K., 2:15½, colt Fido, who was very badly mixed galted.

When Murray mounted the cart to give Fido his trial the wielders of the hammers on the knockers' bench prepared for a feast, but were not feasted. Fido began to step high and clean, and, as if trying to show his pleasure, he arched his neck and skimmed over the dirt like a real trotter. After this all the trainers were willing to give it a trial, and the result was that in each case the trial exceeded anticipations.

T. T. MAXFIELD OF BLOOMFIELD, N. J., DRIVING BELDIA, 2:09½, A PROMINENT GRAND CIRCUIT CANDIDATE.

Beldia, 2:09½, will be a leading factor in many fast grand circuit events again this year. She is now owned in New York and was driven to her record by Theodore T. Maxfield of Bloomfield, the successful owner and trainer who operates the Oakfield stable. Until being sold to a New York turfman Beldia was known as the fastest horse in New Jersey.

THE MUCH TALKED OF "MEMPHIS SHOE."

The Questor, 2:14¼, in Geers' stables, wore a lot of weight, but a few workouts with the bar shoes permitted the weight to be reduced to nine and a half ounces. They lengthened his stride a whole lot, and he stepped an easy mile in 2:14.

These are only a few of the cases reported which might be cited illustrating the remarkable effect the shoes have had on various defects in gait.

JOE KELLEY'S PLAINT.

Cincinnati Captain Says Umpires Have Too Much Power.

Captain-Manager Joe Kelley of the Cincinnati team is of the opinion that the officials of the National league have given their umpires too much power in the matter of disciplining players, and that the instructions to umpires should be modified a bit. "Some of these umpires on the National league staff are using the power given them by the magnates to cover up their shortcomings as judges of play," said Manager Kelley recently.

"It is a fact that in the old days many players would shift the blame for their bad plays on the umpires by objecting to decisions that were entirely correct, and if so accepted by the public would bring the wrath of the spectators down on the umpire involved in the play.

"Evidently the umpires have benefited by those early day practices, for they are now working them in a reversed form, with the result that the mistakes of the umpires are placed on the players. It is not natural for a man when he sees that he is getting the worst of it to submit tamely to being deprived of his prospects and rights through the shortsightedness or poor judgment of an umpire.

"Perhaps in some cases the language used is too severe, in which retirement from the game is a just punishment, but when a man objects in a mild way to a bad decision it is rather hard to have him sent to the bench or off the field."

McGraw's Opinion.

"Mugsy" McGraw of the New York Nationals believes Pittsburg will again win the National pennant. Says he: "The Pittsburg team is by far the strongest in either big league, much better balanced. You can't take a position on it but what you feel that you would like to have that man."

Those cities where there is an increase in the tax rate attribute it to the advance in the State tax. How about those places which report a decrease? The increase in State tax is really a small factor after all, but all would like to see it smaller.

There may be a difference of opinion as to whether Quincy or Barre has the best granite, but Barre manufacturers were forced to admit that Quincy has an up-to-date ship yard. They were much interested in the building of battleships.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Do you know where God's country is located? When we were out in the territories enduring hardships and privations, we used to talk of "back in the states" as "God's country." The early pioneers of the west looked toward the Atlantic sea-board and the country along the Ohio and think of "God's country." Now the poor devils who are compelled to remain for a time in the Philippine Islands know that any part of the United States is "God's country." Nearly all of them upon returning to American shores remark: "It is good to be back in God's country once more." It is not likely that Alaska is included in the good land, for men returning from the big territory of the Arctic circle upon landing at Tacoma declare they are again in "God's country." But since our colonial acquisitions, the sobriquet "God's country" is fast becoming recognized as meaning the United States. —Washington Post.

☞Taunton has joined the ranks of the cities that are protesting volubly against the city's tax rate. Says the Taunton Gazette: "Just think of it! A tax rate of over 2 per cent. on a thousand, when returns from stable investments at the present time are running from 5 per cent. down, and the average somewhere about 3 to 3 1-2 per cent! What is the reason of all this? There is but one. It is the great demand on the part of the general public for modern improvements out of proportion to the valuation of a city without stopping to conservatively count the cost. Taunton is not alone in this. There is hardly a city of moderate size in New England where the tax rate has not gradually climbed or the valuation been largely overestimated during the past quarter century. The stern municipal economy of former generations has been lost in the rapidity of modern way of life, and those who dance must pay the piper. As a matter of fact municipal affairs have certain demands nowadays that are deemed necessities, whereas years ago they would have been considered extravagances. The policy of the smaller cities appears to be to imitate a metropolis so far as is possible." The thing can not be done. The cities must keep down on the earth or pay heavily. We can't have all the fine things of a New York or a Boston and pay Brockton or Taunton prices. The sooner we make up our minds to this fact the better for us and for our tax rates.—Brockton Enterprise.

—Mr. Booker T. Washington, the well known colored orator, will speak at the Old church, Hingham, Sunday evening, Aug. 2. He will be accompanied by Mr. Harry T. Burleigh, soloist at the St. George church, New York.

OFF FOR OUTING.

Granite Manufactures Take Guests to Crescent Park.

Shipyard an Attraction Yesterday.

Business Matters Discussed at a Joint Meeting.

The visiting granite manufacturers from Barre and Montpelier had a fine day yesterday for their visit to Quincy, and they made the most of it. Just about half of the party found their way to Quincy during the day, the other half remained in Boston to do the town. The afternoon found the greater part of the Boston contingent on the ball grounds at the South End. The Barre people are very fond of the National game, and as they do not have an opportunity to see a professional game every day, this was an opportunity not to be lost. The greater part came to Quincy however late in the afternoon.

Those who were in Quincy during the day spent the morning in visiting friends at the sheds and works. Some of the manufactures left their offices for the day and gave their time to entertaining the guests. This was the rule with the general committee.

In the afternoon several of the party visited the Fore River Ship & Engine Co, plant. The main party went down on the 2.20 car. Others went earlier and alone. With the main party were President Harry S. Nicoll, William T. Spargo and Alfred O. Diack of the general committee.

The party arrived at the plant a little after 2.30 and two hours were quickly passed in roaming about the works. The visitors viewed everything with a critical eye and were greatly interested in what they saw. The party were without an official guide but as there were those with them from Quincy who had visited the works before, the different branches were explained.

They first visited the forge and saw the big hammer at work. Thence through the power house and machine shop. They then looked at the cruiser Des Moines, but were not permitted to go aboard.

The trip was then continued along the shore front where the battleships, six-masted schooner and Fall River line boats and car floats are being built.

They then entered the tool and steel shops. They were all familiar with the use of pneumatic tools, but they saw some pneumatic tools in operation that opened their eyes, and they saw what it was possible to do with compressed air.

Last evening a largely attended joint meeting was held at Malnati hall. This meeting was confined to granite manufacturers, newspaper men not being desired. The meeting was in a way informal and was given over to the discussion of topics of interest to the granite industry.

The visitors passed the night at various places. Some at the houses of friends. Some at the local hotels and some in Boston.

Those who remained in Quincy over night, took the 8.10 train from Quincy Adams this morning for Boston. Special cars were attached to the train for the convenience of the party.

The special train for Crescent Park, R. I., left the South Terminal at 9.05. There the day will be passed. There will be sports, a Rhode Island clambake, and other forms of amusement. At 7.45 the train will leave the Park for Boston.

Rescued by Folly Crew.

The yacht "Folly", flagship of the Quincy Yacht Club, started from Houghs Neck Wednesday on a cruise down Maine with Capt. Joel F. Sheppard, 2d, Carl R. Sheppard, F. Everett Winslow of Brockton and L. Raymond Wise of Attleboro on board. While laying off Winthrop Thursday, on account of fog, a small boat with four men on board, belonging at East Boston, was capsized. The boys heard their cries and put off to their rescue but before they could reach them one of the party sank. They succeeded however in rescuing the other occupants of the overturned boat, one of whom however had gone down for the second time, and but for the quick assistance rendered would have certainly succumbed. They were taken ashore at Winthrop and after being rendered every possible assistance left for East Boston.

Body Found.

The body of Abel W. Phinney of Dorchester, who committed suicide Wednesday afternoon by jumping off the Granite avenue bridge into the Neponset river, was found last night by the harbor police.

—With the completion of the cable to Manila, the world is surrounded with the electric wire and communication is established with all nations. The commercial importance attached to this achievement can never be estimated, but however great should not be allowed to exceed its moral valuation. The enlightened nations are the custodians of the whole system. They hold the power of universal government, and the darkest portions of the earth should suddenly feel the influence of this intelligence. The international relations of the combined powers of civilization should be extended with energy, and the whole earth become an open door to inter-relations of thought and commerce. The confederate governments, already in covenants, and represented by the appointed ministry of different nations, should come closer to each other in the interchange of thought and strengthen the purest elements of legislation, which are communicated by this close fellowship of clerical communion.—Whitman Times.

☞One may hope that out of Philadelphia's effort to train its school children in good citizenship and in self-government according to a high standard of conduct will come a class of citizens who shall be the little leaven to leaven the whole lump of Philadelphia's citizenship. In twenty-one schools in the city a system is in operation which, in theory, trains the pupils for the duties of citizens. Each school is a miniature city, each pupil a citizen; and these juvenile citizens elect mayor council, judge, and other officers and abide by their government, except that the principal of the school can be referred to as a court of appeal. In the higher grades the more perplexing questions of self-government, as the management of the caucus and convention, the intricacies of legislation, the initiative, referendum, etc., enter into the consideration. The children are being prepared for intelligent citizenship. But, better still, their moral, natures are being trained to know right and wrong, and they are learning self-control,—at least, in theory; and there is no reason to disbelieve that what is aimed at in theory is being actually accomplished in large numbers of cases. —New Bedford Standard.

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money, for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated sp cific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half arice. In addition to this large discount he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty-cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist Chas C. Hearn, that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment, for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr Howard's specific will cure. But if by any chance it should not, Chas. C. Hearn will return your money.

The specific is very pleasant to take, coming in the form of small granules, and there are sixty doses in every package. It is especially convenient when traveling, and no one should start on a journey without a bottle of this reliable medicine 18-22-25-29

CHOIR BOYS RETURN.

The Camp a Great Success—Some of the Attractions.

Forty-six boys, principally members of Christ church choir and St. Chrysostom's church choir, have returned from a two weeks and a half camping out on Mrs. Henry Norwell's "Stoney Beach Farm" in Scituate. The camp was in charge of Choirmaster Snyder and the boys who were in camp can be very easily distinguished by their nut-brown color.

The camp this year was a great success and the boys had a glorious time, every moment was utilized for games and sport, base ball, cricket, swimming, romps in the large barns during rainy weather. Good fellowship reigned everywhere.

There was one tragedy:—the soap fell into the well and was drowned. Archie Briggs recovered the body and was presented by the camp with a beautiful gold ring for his splendid work in cleaning out the well and restoring it to its original clearness and delicious refreshing purity.

Mr. Thomas C. Brown of Quincy Point put his experience obtained in the Spanish-American war as a cook to good account and pleased the camp greatly as a cook.

An afternoon was spent visiting Thomas W. Lawson's famous "Dreamwold," where the boys were very courteously treated by the attendants who care for the fine stable, horses, dogs, cows and poultry.

Another visit of great interest was made to the Natural History Museum on Scituate harbor, owned by Dr. Damon.

As the boys have camped along the shore four consecutive summers now, they hope to camp along one of New Hampshire's beautiful lakes next summer.

☞The Boston Herald on Sunday last inaugurated a series of prize puzzles for the children, which bids fair to become another Herald success. Some 20 prizes are offered each week, and they are so awarded that children all over New England have the same opportunity in the distribution as those who live in Boston. Like everything The Herald does, the puzzle is an interesting character and calculated to please the children without giving offence. The drawing of the pictures is good, and the details of the arrangements most admirable. The children's department of The Herald is of the highest standard; indeed, it is on the same high level of excellence which has made The Herald and given it the right to be called New England's greatest newspaper.

Curiosities of Color.

After any severe shock you will be very likely to find that you have become temporarily color blind.

Your perception of green light has probably gone, at least partially. White objects will then appear to you of a reddish purple and green objects to be very much duller in hue than ordinarily.

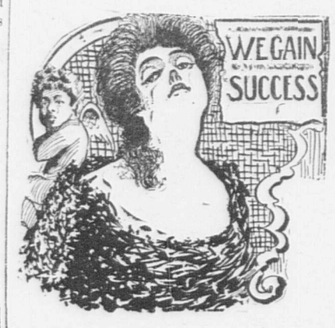

Any one can make himself or herself temporarily color blind by wearing a pair of ruby red glasses. The prolonged action of red light on the eyes ends by tiring out the nerves which receive red light. Consequently when the glasses are at last removed a rainbow appears to have only two colors—yellow and blue.

Self Convicted.

"Say, pa," queried small Bobby, "what is gossiping, anyway?"

"Gossiping, my son," replied the old man, "if we get right down to the plain, unvarnished facts, is lying. But why did you ask?"

"Because," answered the young investigator, "ma says you do a lot of gossiping every time your business keeps you late at the office."—Exchange.

THE RISE OF COREY.

HOW THE NEW HEAD OF THE STEEL TRUST WON HIS WAY.

Began at the Ladder's Lowest Round—His Success the Result of Study and Hard Work—Career Similar to That of C. M. Schwab.

With the recent retirement of C. M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, from the active duties of his position and the appointment of W. E. Corey as his assistant, with full powers, another of that group of young men who helped Andrew Carnegie build up the great steel works which bear his name became a commanding figure in the steel trade of the world.

The new executive head of the steel corporation, however, does not succeed to the title of president of the world's greatest trust, but will perform all the active duties of the position, Mr. Schwab still remaining the nominal head of the combination and acting in an advisory capacity. A year or so ago Mr. Schwab announced that it was his intention to find some relief from the responsibilities imposed upon him and is said to be the author of the plan of having an assistant who could take over most of the work of his office. Mr. Corey is his close friend—the pair have worked together for many years—and he was the man selected as best qualified by ability and training to fill the position. Associates of Mr. Corey regard him as the equal if not the superior of Mr. Schwab as a practical operating executive, and they predict success in every particular for his administration of the affairs of the steel corporation.

William Ellis Corey began the wonderful career which at the age of thirty-seven has placed him in the front rank of the world's captains of industry in the laboratory of the Edgar Thomson Steel works of the Carnegie Steel company. He is a native of Braddock, the son of a retired coal operator, and until he went to work at the age of sixteen attended the public schools. After going to work he attended Duff's college in the evening. He also studied chemistry at home and mastered the theory and practice of metallurgy. He was a hard worker, careful and studious, and his superiors soon advanced him to a more responsible position in the plate mills of the Homestead Steel works and subsequently to the order department of the plant.

Applying himself with all the energy at his command to each new duty assigned him, Mr. Corey, while still little more than a youth, held positions of great responsibility and trust, with an army of thousands of workmen under his control. That he succeeded in every position is a tribute to the wonderful power of organization and grasp of detail with which he is endowed.

At the age of twenty-two he was made superintendent of the plate mill of the Homestead Steel works. His next advance was to the position of superintendent of the armor plate plant, which he filled until 1895, when he succeeded C. M. Schwab as general superintendent of the Homestead Steel works, the latter becoming the president of the Carnegie Steel company. Notwithstanding that his predecessor was accounted one of the most remarkable men of his time, Mr. Corey did not suffer by comparison, and under his management the business of the Homestead Steel works grew greater year by year. While at Homestead Mr. Corey invented an improved process of manufacturing armor, which is known to ordnance engineers as the "Corey reforging process," by which the ballistic resistance of armor was greatly increased and the weight of plate carried by a ship considerably reduced.

Mr. Corey was the choice of Mr. Schwab as president of the Carnegie Steel company on April 16, 1901, when the latter was made president of the United States Steel corporation. His administration has been remarkably successful. During his term the National Steel Hoop companies were added to the Carnegie company, and since these two companies were taken in the scope of the concern has been much greater. Mr. Corey has held the confidence of the men with whom he worked, and his elevation to the higher office is looked upon as an honor wisely bestowed.

The careers of both Mr. Schwab and Mr. Corey have been almost identical. Both began at the lowest round of the ladder and by hard work with hand and head, neglecting no opportunity to add to their knowledge and usefulness, soon attracted the attention of Mr. Carnegie, who, like them, also began with his hands and an ambition to succeed as his only capital.

Doings In Drama.

Bertha Galland's Coming Appearance In Another Dramatized Novel ✣ Stage Talk

The dramatization of novels, popular and otherwise, is still going merrily on, and one of the latest additions to the already long list of books prepared for stage presentation is "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," written by Charles Major, author of "When Knighthood Was In Flower."

Miss Bertha Galland, well known to theater goers through her association with "The Forest Lovers" and other plays, is to be the star in the title role of the new play. Paul Kester, who dramatized "When Knighthood Was In Flower," was intrusted with the preparation of the book for stage purposes and is now busily at work on it at his Virginia home.

J. Fred Zimmerman will produce the play in the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, Sept. 28, and New York and other cities will see it during the season.

By arrangement with Daniel Frohman, with whose interests he has long been identified, John J. Donnelly will have business charge of the play's engagements.

MISS BERTHA GALLAND.

As has already been announced, William Lewers, formerly a member of Miss Julia Marlowe's "The Cavaliers" company, will be leading man for Miss Galland. He was to have appeared with Mrs. Langtry next season as her leading man, but she consented to release him. Mr. Lewers will have the part of Sir John Manners.

For the role of Sir George Vernon, Dorothy's father, a strong character part, Frank Losee has been engaged. It is the aim of the management to make the play one of the most elaborate productions of its kind to be presented during the coming season.

A recent dispatch from Paris says:

"Arrangements have been concluded at the Odeon theater for the production next season of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" in French. The part of Paula Tanqueray will be played by Berthe Bady. The translation of Pinero's play for the Odeon will not be the one presented by Mme. Hading at the Coronet theater in London, but by Vicomte Robert d'Humieres, who translated Kipling's stories. His mother, who was Nora Kelly, was the daughter of a prominent New Yorker.

"Albert Bresnard, probably the greatest decorative artist living, has finished a sketch of the ceiling for the Theatre Francais ordered by Chaumie, minister of fine arts, after the destruction of the interior by fire. It represents the sun typified by Apollo throwing rays on Cornelle, Racine, Moliere and Victor Hugo.

"In the foreground kneels the figure of Truth, indicating that everything is based on truth. Bresnard intends to paint and carry out the work with his own hands. He says the coloring will be sumptuous and daring. The key is bright blue, violet and yellow in Bresnard's typical style."

James A. Hackett has announced that the name of Victor Mapes' new play, in which he will next season be seen, will be "Alexander the Great" and will be based upon the life of that famous Greek. Mr. Hackett will appear in the title role and will surround himself with a company of more than 350 people. With this elaborate and costly production Mr. Hackett in the fall will open Weber & Fields' new Globe theater at Boston, a large and commodious theater of the best and most improved appointments, which will belong to the chain controlled by the Independent Booking agency.

Importance of Cup Races.

It is its history that makes the America's cup so important to us. It is incomparably the most interesting sporting trophy in existence. An American horse may win the Derby. There is glory in that, but it is hardly a national triumph. An American crew may some time win the Henley regatta. We shall be pleased, but not overexcited. But the British yacht that carried back the America's cup would take away something that we need to make us comfortable, and we would never rest easy until we got it back. It would be no bad thing for sport if the cup were lifted, for the scramble to recover it would be worth seeing. But for us Americans the cup affords thrills enough where it is.

THE SOUND OF THE SEA

By Zoe Anderson Norris

Copyright, 1902, by Zoe Anderson Norris

NEISHA, standing at the window of the room, held a seashell to her ear. By her on an onyx table was a vase, a sea gull with wings curved curiously under for the holding of flowers. Her left hand rested on the gull.

In the rear of the room among a laughing crowd sat Ernest. He was busily engaged in drawing caricatures.

A young girl drew near to Neisha.

"Why do you hold the shell to your ear so long?" she asked.

"I am listening," she explained, "to the sound of the sea. No matter how far inland you take it, a shell like this, it sings of the sea. It is like the soul singing of eternity."

"Neisha, Neisha!" voices came calling from the other end of the room. "Come! Have your caricature drawn. Look!

"A LITTLE THIS WAY!" HE COMMANDED.

Such ears, such noses, such mouths! Stand still for yours. There, Ernest, she poses. Commence."

Ernest took a fresh sheet of paper. He sharpened his pencil to a point.

"A little this way!" he commanded. "Now." And he scratched it swiftly over the paper, drawing.

The others gathered around him, some kneeling by his side, others leaning over.

"Splendid!" they cried. "Oh, Neisha, if you could only see! It is worse than ours. Those eyes!"

They laughed convulsively, one girl until she coughed.

By and by Ernest, rising, presented the picture to Neisha, with an elaborate bow in which the slim white of his fingers grotesquely swept the floor.

She looked at the sketch a moment, frowned almost imperceptibly and laid it back on the table.

Ernest reached out his hand for it.

"Shall I tear it up?" he asked.

"No," replied Neisha. "Leave it there. I want it for future reference."

The chill of her manner fell upon the rest. They dispersed in twos and threes, some going to the music room, where they played duets and sang snatches of song; others to the little Turkish parlor glimmering through the width of open doors crimsonly distant, and the two were left alone.

"I have offended you," said Ernest, adding, "It seems to me that here lately I am always offending you."

"It is hardly your fault," she returned gently. "It is the fault of our natures; that is all. They clash."

"Sit here," he begged, pushing forward a chair, "and let us talk about it."

She sat down and idly took up the caricature. He, opposite, watched her face as she studied it.

"And this is how you see me," she mused. "There is something abnormal about it. The artist nature is perforce peculiar, else it would not be artist. It is almost impossible. The nature of the caricaturist is impossible. To see people and things so distorted suggests distortion in the one who sees. It is as if your mind were a twisted X ray which fantastically reveals the skeleton."

Leaning back in the armchair he had taken, he regarded her out of amused eyes.

"Go on," he insisted. "Don't spare my feelings."

He said it laughingly, but there was a cynical look about his mouth that she had got to know.

"The picture is as I shall look ten years hence," she went on. "If you are always to see me ten years older than I am, all the saints and angels protect me! Such foresight is rife for the breeding of unhappiness."

"You cross bridges before you get to them, Neisha. You borrow trouble."

"Sometimes it is just as well. Ernest."

"Yes."

"We shall never be happy together."

"If it was the drawing of the picture, Neisha, that was a little thing. Let me tear it up and let it be as if it had never been drawn. Will you?"

"Life is made up of little things. They are the straws that show the way the wind is blowing. No; don't tear it up. I want it for future reference, as I said. I want to be reminded by it that if I should be married to you not only my face, but my every action, would be distorted thus."

"No, no!"

"Yes. And that is not all. We are too alike for happiness—both sensitive as flowers, both jealous. We quarrel now; we would quarrel then. After marriage the making up is not so sweet as before. It grows monotonous, and then come the sleepless nights and the tears—the tears. Already with me they have commenced. The night you kissed Mabel I waked at 4 o'clock and never closed my eyes again. I lay still, half heartbroken, watching the pattern of the paper on the wall grow out of dimness and take to itself its old fantastic shape in the light of the dawn."

"Mabel is hardly seventeen. She is only a child."

"Children grow to be women, and soon. Suppose we were married and two years from now she came to our house and you kissed her again."

She tapped trembling fingers on the arm of her chair.

"I should die of it," she faltered.

He drew up his chair nearer, and, taking the trembling fingers in his own, he caressed them.

"Somewhere or other in Grimm's fairy tales," he said, "there is just this sort of story. Isn't there a girl who goes down in the cellar and sits there weeping because some day she might marry and the storks might bring her a little child and the little child might fall down the steps to that cellar way and break its leg?"

"It is only when you love a man," she continued to muse, following up her own train of thought, "that you lose the blessed sleep that knits up the raveled sleeve of care."

"Didn't I come to you early the next morning and comfort you, Neisha?"

"Her kiss was on your lips," she answered.

With a shrug of his shoulders he laughed.

"You are ridiculous," he affirmed.

"Once you were mine," she resumed, as if he had not spoken, "I should want you to be all mine. So far as I have been able to judge, no man ever belonged solely to one woman. Therefore, since the thing is impossible, it is best to tear ourselves apart before it is too late."

He dropped her fingers.

"You speak very coldly of tearing ourselves apart, Neisha," he complained.

"I am not cold, but I scent unhappiness. Living alone is a negative unhappiness. Living together would be positive."

After a time:

"Besides, I am a rover," she sighed. "Already I have stayed in this one place too long. I begin to grow restless again."

"If you put your head on my shoulder a little while wouldn't that take away your restlessness?"

"For a little while, perhaps; but it would return, and then I should have to go back again to my Mother Nature for comfort. She comforts with flowers, with dew, with soft, sweet breezes, but most of all with the sea. The moan of it, the sob, the sometime sigh; its lights—rose lights, white lights, soft mellow lights of the setting sun—drifting while you look into the silver shimmer of a crescent moon. I long for the sea."

"Neisha, you make me sad, as sad, sitting there, as if you were alone, longing for the sea. You are not alone, my sweetheart. I am here."

She regarded him with a gaze that seemed not to see him.

"For months I have studied you," she began. "You have given me much happiness, but more unhappiness. If you had not overbalanced the happiness with the unhappiness, you would not have been a man."

"WE SHALL NEVER BE HAPPY TOGETHER."

There came a look about his mouth which was like that of a hurt child. She had grown to know that also.

"You have many lovable qualities," she soothed, "but with the exaggeration of the artistic temperament you possess an exaggerated power to hurt. This you make use of frequently. My life with you would be part ecstatic happiness and part acute despair. And the despair, I am afraid, would far outweigh the happiness."

The snatches of song drifted from the music room in upon the silence which had fallen between them.

"Alone we come into the world," she said slowly, "and alone we go out of it. But I, it seems, am one of those creatures born only to live alone from the cradle to the grave. I wish to be the only one. Few women in this old world have that happiness. I can hardly dare to hope that it will be meted out to me."

"You are the only one with me now, Neisha."

"Now!" she repeated. The 'now' is characteristic.

"I am your summer girl, but there are winters to come and other summer times. How will it be then? Others came before me. Others will follow."

He shook his head in dissent.

"I know your nature," she averred. "It is summed up in one word—'artist.'

"I MEAN IT!" ASSERTED SHE.

There are many synonyms for the word—volatile, ephemeral, vacillating, irresolute, weak. But the one word suffices. To turn it into an adjective, you are artist, and that describes you."

He rose.

"I will go," he said, "and come back by this way again when you are in better humor."

"If you are wise," said she, rising also, "you will never come back."

He stopped short.

"Do you mean that, Neisha?" he questioned, the words coming distinctly clear, with a touch of infinite sadness.

"I mean it," asserted she.

He made a step forward.

"Will you kiss me goodby, then?" he asked.

"If I kissed you I should want to keep you, and I am very sure that it is best for you to go."

He walked through the room, out into the hall to the door. He put his hand on the knob and looked back at her. Though her face had paled to the whiteness of her gown, she made no effort to recall him. He turned the knob and went out. The door shut on him.

She started forward with a sharp, quick cry as if she would have opened the door. Then, clasping one hand to her heart, she caught up the seashell and held it close to her ear, listening.

The group at the piano, rushing laughingly in, found her standing motionless as the statue of a woman with the shell to her ear.

"Are you still listening to the sound of the sea, Neisha?" they asked.

"Still listening," she answered, "to the sound of the sea."

"But why," they queried, "are your eyes so sad?"

"They look on life," she answered, "and life is sad."

Why "Romeo and Juliet" Is Popular.

It is natural that "Romeo and Juliet" should always have been a favorite with actors. It is full of pictures; it appeals to the most popular of the emotions; its poetry is only too well fitted for recitation. There never was an actress under fifty who did not feel herself a Juliet or an actor under sixty who did not see himself as Romeo. For once Shakespeare wrote great poetry which the mob could not but love, could not but find itself at home with. Juliet is the Englishman's symbol for Helen, and Shakespeare has made her the name for virtue in love, fatal indeed to herself and to Romeo, but innocently fatal. We are far from "the couple of unfortunate lovers," of Brooke's "Tragicall History of Romeus and Juliet," "written first in Italian by Bandell and nowe in Englishe by Ar. Br.," one of Shakespeare's sources, whom Brooke hastily shows us "finally, by all means of unhonest life, hasting to most unhappy death." "The two hours' traffic of our stage" was to Shakespeare concerned with "the misadventured piteous overthrows" of "a pair of star crossed lovers." He lays the blame on no one, not even on fate, giving us the story as it happened:

For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.

—Arthur Symons in Harper's Magazine.

Making It Plain.

"I am told, sir, that you said yesterday I ought to be placed in a lunatic asylum."

"A base slander, my dear sir, I assure you. What I did say, and I like to be exact, was that the keepers should never have allowed you to escape."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 26—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—A mission study of South America.—Luke ii, 25-32.

South America, the less important of the two continents of the western hemisphere, is triangular in shape and is over 4,700 miles long and 3,000 miles wide. Its area is 7,000,000 square miles, and it has a coast line of 18,000 miles. It is nearly twice as large as Europe and contains one-eighth of the land surface of the globe. It is divided into fourteen countries, Uruguay, the smallest, being twice the size of Ireland. The population is composed of a mixed people of Spanish, Portuguese, Indian and negro blood. It is remarkable for its lofty mountains and noble rivers. The Amazon is the greatest of rivers, and the Andes mountains, with peaks of extraordinary height, extend for 4,500 miles along the entire western coast. The continent possesses every variety of climate, varied and luxuriant vegetation and great mineral wealth.

Mission work is greatly needed in South America. The natives in the southern part form a fruitful field for missionary labors, and in the northern countries, such as Brazil and Chile, where the blight of Romanism has been felt for centuries, there is great need that the true Christ be preached, "a light to lighten the gentiles." Ignorance and superstition exist, the character of the people is fickle, and great opposition is manifested on the part of the Roman Catholic church to the propagation of evangelical Christian truth. Persecution at times has been very bitter, and as a result of it missionaries have even lost their lives. But South America is advancing. Its climate and industrial richness are more and more becoming recognized, and as the continent is populated with different classes of people the governments will become more stable and the opportunities for increased successful missionary work will be enlarged. And until such times prayer and patient toil must be exercised by all who are interested in winning this splendid continent for Christ.

The South American Missionary Society of London first established Protestant missions in South America. Captain Allen Gardner, the founder of the society first visited the continent for the purpose of establishing a Christian mission in 1838. He desired to work among the mountaineers of the north, but because of the opposition of the Roman Catholic priests he was compelled to go to the south. But his work was not very successful, and in 1850 he lost his life in fruitless attempts to establish a mission in Tierra del Fuego. Afterward the work was more successful, and missions were established on this island and among most of the countries of South America. In the last half century the Protestant churches of America have been engaged in mission work in the various parts of this vast continent. The work has been blessed of God, and in spite of the manifold difficulties in the way evangelical Christianity is making headway and will continue to do so under the blessing of God.

Denver Convention Chairman.

To successfully care for a great international Christian Endeavor convention is no "boy's play." It is work, genuine hard work, and on the shoulders of the chairman of the committee of arrangements rests a large burden of responsibility. The Endeavorers of Denver have been particularly fortunate in having so energetic a worker in the cause as Mr. William E. Sweet on whom to bestow the mantle of leadership. He is filling the high position with marked business ability and making it an assured fact that the delegates will be well cared for while they are in the Mountain City. Few Endeavorers in the world have served longer than he and none more faithfully or with more gratifying success. His state union has placed him over and over again in its leading offices and always he has measured up to the opportunity.

WILLIAM E. SWEET.

A "Christian Endeavor Rest."

Near the little town of Pierre, S. D., there has been established what is known in that section as a "Christian Endeavor Rest" for cowboys. This rest, or home, is sustained by the Congregational Christian Endeavorers of Pierre, consisting of but twelve members. It is a neat two story cottage, in which the Endeavorers maintain a reading room, dining room, bathrooms and laundry.

WORK OF A DETECTIVE

Results In Arrest of Defaulting Bank Cashier

WAS TRACED TO COLOMBIA.

Oliver T Sherwood, Whose Stealings Caused Closing of Southport, Conn, Bank, Is Said to Have Embezzled a Quarter of a Million of Dollars

Panama, July 25.—Oliver T. Sherwood, the missing cashier of the Southport, Conn., national bank, who is charged with embezzling the funds of that institution, was arrested here upon the request of United States Consul Gudger. He has agreed to return to the United States on the ship sailing next Tuesday and will be accompanied by the detective who discovered him here. Had he refused to return it would have been necessary to send extradition papers to Bogota and the alleged embezzler would have been obliged to remain here in a very uncomfortable jail for at least four months.

From Canada Sherwood went to Bocas del Toro, Colombia, where he posed as a physician, and here also he had patients under treatment. His office was in the most central part of the city.

The absence of Oliver T. Sherwood from the Southport National bank one morning about six weeks ago led to an examination of the missing cashier's books and the result was startling in the extreme. By cleverly manipulating the figures on the books Sherwood had been able to get away with an amount of money, without detection, that crippled the bank so badly that it became necessary for the bank officials to close the doors of the bank and to ask for the appointment of a receiver.

When Sherwood disappeared it was said that $45,000 was the amount of the defalcation, but the longer the expert accountants worked on the cashier's books the larger the amount of missing money grew, and a very conservative estimate now places the loss to the bank at $250,000.

One of Sherwood's schemes was to sell town bonds which had already been redeemed. The exact amount of money which he stole may never be known. Numerous depositors of the bank can show on their bank books credit for various amounts of money supposed to have been deposited in the bank, while the books of the bank fail to show the receipt of any such amount.

Sherwood, according to his friends and relatives, had been leading a double life for some time past and this led him on to become a defaulter.

Thinks He Saw Sherwood

New Haven, July 25.—In view of Oliver T. Sherwood's arrest in Panama an incident which occurred at the Hotel Garde in this city yesterday afternoon is rather peculiar. Dennis J. Manning, a railroad conductor, entered the lobby of the hotel shortly after 5 o'clock and was startled to see there a man whom he insists was Oliver T. Sherwood, the missing cashier of the Southport National bank. When he recovered from his surprie he went over to the man and, calling him by name, held a short conversation. The man conversed with the conductor as Sherwood and talked about personal matters which were known only to the two men. Even when informed that Sherwood had been arrested in Panama Manning said that the man he talked with at the hotel was Sherwood and insisted that it was impossible to make a mistake in the identity of a man he has known for 15 years.

Steeple Climber Killed

Fall River, Mass., July 25.—Olesine Thiberge, aged 23, was instantly killed by falling from the steeple of the St. Matthew's French Catholic church. Thiberge was using a staging with three other men. When work was finished last night he attempted to ascend by a rope to a window in the steeple, about 60 feet from the ground. When near the top he lost his hold, and fell on the stone steps in front of the church, at the feet of the congregation who were just coming from services.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Midsummer Business Reported to Be More Active Than Usual

New York, July 25.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The tenor of dispatches from nearly every section of the country indicates that there is less than the customary midsummer dullness in business, and collections are more prompt than usual.

Farm work still retards retail distribution of merchandise in western sections. Chicago reports trade very active for the season and manufacturing industries crowded with orders. Clothing sales have surpassed last year's at Baltimore and payments are unusually prompt. Woolen mills and shoe shops are busy at Boston, but Fall River spinners curtail output. Wool is firm at Philadelphia and clothing manufacturers are well employed.

Good news as to the progress being made toward settlement of labor disputes was neutralized by the decline in securities, in so far as the iron and steel industry is concerned.

The unexpected happened in the market for woolens. It was confidently believed that new lines of staple piece-dyed goods would be opened at fully maintained quotations, but the American Woolen company reduced prices to about the same level as existed a year ago, despite the material increase in raw wool and several other items in the cost of production. The cut was evidently made to secure business rather than because of any weakness in the market.

Shamrock III Squares Accounts

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 25.—Shamrock III more than squared accounts with her pacemaker Shamrock I for the beating the challenger suffered Thursday. Sailing over a 20-mile course the cup hunter beat the old boat 8m. 11s., running 10 miles to leeward, 5m. 10s., beating 10 miles to windward, and 7m. 19s. in a reach of nine miles, 20m. 40s. in all. The challenger's victory running to leeward was flawless. Beating back Shamrock I suffered a little of her loss in a calm streak and in reaching more heavily from the same cause. Nevertheless the victory was fairly earned.

Danish Treaty Is Dead

Washington, July 25.—The treaty providing for the acquisition by the United States of the Danish West India islands officially died yesterday. If Denmark should conclude to sell the islands to the United States it will be possible to revive the provisions of the treaty which has just failed; meantime the position of the state department is comfortable, for, having done its part toward completing the bargain, the American government of course could not sanction the sale of the islands by Denmark to any other government.

Automobiling.

Oldfield Challenged by Fournier ⁘ The Recent International Contest.

One of the most talked about automobilists in America of late has been Barney Oldfield of Detroit, who recently defeated Charles Ridgeway in a match race at the Empire City track, New York, for the five mile championship of the United States. In defeating Ridgeway Oldfield showed that he has the nerve and daring to drive an automobile to the full limit of its power, and his performance was made all the more notable by reason of the fact that during the early part of the race he lowered by several seconds the world's record for a mile on a circular track.

Oldfield has been challenged by Henry Fournier, the famous French auto demon, to ride a match race for the championship of America. Oldfield has accepted Fournier's defi, and the contest will probably take place on the Empire City track early in August.

Oldfield will race on the aforementioned track July 25, and it is possible that he will succeed in lowering another record or two.

"Upon seeing a motor do not attempt to cross the road. If you do you'll be dead before you get to the other side."

This warning, distributed in quantities to the peasantry living in the vicinity of the course of the recent Gordon Bennett International Automobile cup race, coupled perhaps with the efforts of the police and other guardians of the road, prevented any of those fatalities which, judging by the tone of the comments of some of the foreign papers, were regarded as inseparable from the contest in Ireland. The foreign man in the street after reading an account of the contest had a quiet fling at the alarmist expectations aroused by some writers when he said: "Call that a motor race? Nonsense. Nobody was killed."

All the same, there was a feeling of real relief when the race was over and it was seen that Mr. Jarrott's broken collar bone and a child run over and a litter of smashed cars were the worst that had happened.

A leading London daily paper says: "Now that the race is over, we hope all automobilists will see that this contest must be the last of its kind. In the future if races of this sort are to be persisted in they must be run upon specially prepared and inclosed tracks so as to avoid the elaborate precautions which seem the only alternative to terrible disaster."

Another English paper says: "We fancy this race will be the last of its kind on a public highway. What will take the place of a race like the recent one will be test races along a measured course in which allowance will be made for the amount of horse power—that is to say, racing will have a relative, not an absolute, standard." It expresses the hope that this will be the last motor road race in either Ireland or any other country, adding:

"The automobile that will work up to ninety miles an hour is only a costly toy. The racing automobile is a dangerous nuisance and is only impeding the development of touring and freight cars which may become useful servants of commerce and locomotion in the future."

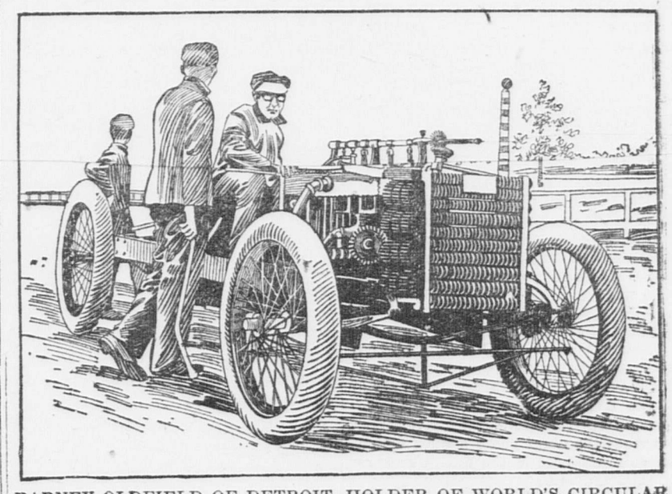

The Americans attribute their defeat in the international contest to the lightness of their cars. Percy Owens, who made the best showing of the American trio, completing five of the seven laps, laid blame on his car and not on the roads. Experienced motorists in both hemispheres frankly admit that the defeat of the Americans was due more to inexperience in automobile manufacturing than to any other cause. Conservative Frenchmen say that America is hardly on an equal footing with the older automobile manufacturers, but look forward to great improvement in automobile manufacturing in the United States, and in three years, or five at the most, see in America a dangerous competitor.

NOT LOOKING FOR WAR

But Russia Is Strengthening Her Position In the Orient

London, July 25.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company from St. Petersburg says: The attitude of Japan and the warlike tone of the majority of the Japanese press have attracted much attention in official circles here. It is declared by the best informed people that there is no likelihood of war, certainly not upon Russia's initiative. It is stated that Russia has every motive for desiring peace, chiefly for financial reasons, with which are wound up a desire for extensive domestic reforms which the government considers to be the most efficacious manner of disarming internal discontent and nipping the revolutionary propaganda in the bud.

It is believed to be impossible from the Russian viewpoint for Japan to embark in a contest with Russia single-handed and it is not thought she will secure the material support of Great Britain or the United States. Nevertheless, Russia is taking every precaution to strengthen her military and naval position in the Orient, believing this to be the surest means of discouraging Japanese aggression.

M. Lessar's Port Arthur conference is said to have dealt chiefly with these measures, though they are declared to be entirely precautionary, war being the farthest thing from the wishes of the Russian government.

The Manchurian Muddle

London, July 25.—The Times prints a long Pekin dispatch commenting on the Manchurian situation, which says that Russia's declaration to the powers on the subject of opening Manchurian ports, which Prince Ching asserts was not communicated to China, is interpreted in Pekin to mean that Russia will not permit China to enter into any engagements with other powers regarding Manchuria which may embarrass Russia in the future, when the territory finally becomes a Russian province.

Prince Hustling For Safety

Berlin, July 25.—Notwithstanding the semi-official denial that Prince Ferdinand's departure from Sofia amounts to a flight, well authenticated private information from Bulgaria shows that the rumors of the prince's flight have some basis and it is regarded as probable that he has left the country till the existing excitement subsides. A Vossische Zeitung dispatch from Sofia says that it is openly asserted there that an attempt against Prince Ferdinand's throne is not impossible. Servia's example having had a profound influence on the prince's enemies.

The court granted the request.

Loan Supervision Unnecessary

Havana, July 25.—In reference to the statement to the effect that the government at Washington, under the authority of the Platt amendment, would exercise supervision of the Cuban loan, President Palma declares that any such superivision would be considered odious by the people of Cuba and further that he anticipates none will be regarded as necessary.

A Famous New York Bank.

Early last century a charter was granted a company to set up a chemical works in New York, and in consideration of the boon these works would be a clause was added granting banking privileges. The astute men at the head of the concern saw possibilities of development on banking lines not apparent in the manufacture of chemicals and decided to make the business a banking one. To retain the privilege, however, it was necessary to manufacture chemicals, and so then, as today, an admirable pretense was made of doing this. In the fine establishment of the great Chemical National bank on Broadway a little shop is apportioned to a manufacturing chemist, who potters about mixing ingredients. He is not much troubled with business, but now and again a New York citizen will startle a visitor by taking him into this fine bank and asking for a dime's worth of castor oil—which is supplied. This was the only bank which did not suspend specie payments during the civil war.

Military Geese.

Even the geese in Germany march with military precision, which may be the reason why the famous drill style of the German infantry is called the "goose step." A writer in Travel thus describes the great goose armies which are so interesting to the health seekers at Bad-Nauheim:

"It is worth while to go to Ober-Moerlen at 6 o'clock in the afternoon to see these geese returning home from the fields. The village is white with them; hundreds and thousands, regiments and brigades of geese, marching along with military precision. As they near home they separate of their own accord; sixteen to the right, twelve to the left, a detachment up a lane, and so on—all quacking loudly, but bearing themselves with that keen sense of order and discipline which distinguishes the vaterland."

The House Spider.

While the common house spider is harmless and renders a positive service to mankind by killing flies and other insects, it is generally regarded with aversion if not with fright. The ordinary spider does not deserve its bad reputation. From time immemorial it has been called crafty and murderous, luring the poor fly to its death and then greedily devouring it, but really it only punishes trespassers.

One Failure.

"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband, who had just refused his wife a bonnet, in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well," replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."

Worse to Come.

Mr. Nag—Well, I won't dig up the past, Matilda, because it's disagreeable.

Mrs. Nag—No, and you'd better not look into the future either, or you'll find that a great deal more disagreeable.

August Magazines.

Lippincott's Magazine for August provides a feast of fiction for idle days. The opening novel, by Elizabeth Duer, is called "The Green Dragon," and possesses all the qualities desireable in a magazine novel. There is not a dull paragraph in it. Through an opportune spill out of his automobile the "Greek type" chauffeur is cast upon the hospitality of an engaging widow, who sees it her duty to take him in and do for his broken hip-bone until it mends. By that time lots of unexpected things happen, not the least of them being a bit of burglary, which is specially thrilling in the telling. Needless to say, the end is love.

The fiction number of McClure's for August is a triumph of editorial selection, and a clear case of the survival of the exceptionally fit. The leader is a delightful little story of child life by May Kelsey Champion. "The Method of Charles Stuart," with illustrations in color by Jessie Willcox Smith, of exquisite charm and feeling.

Country Life in America for August is a most refreshing number. The cover design and double page represents a most attractive marble swimming pool which makes one long to go a swimming. "The Race for the America's Cup" is an excellent historical and comprehensive article with thrilling illustrations. "The Fox Terrier" is of exceptional interest to dog fanciers. "Gardening With Thomas" is a most amusing story of a gardener from the "owld country" and practical withal. The photographs are unique and unusually beautiful, even for Country Life. "A Suburban Place of Four Acres," which describes a Brookline Home with the landscape art of a great estate with exquisite photographs, has many practical hints.

The Delineator for August is an excellent midsummer number. It presents a charming array of Fashions, as well as numerous other features of deep interest to women, and stories and articles of a high literary standard. In fiction, there are four storiettes that will furnish good reading for lazy Summer afternoons.

The August World's Work is the annual educational number containing a remarkable series of articles treating concetely the most important educational problems of the day. Mr. Booker T. Washington in his lavishly illustrated article on "The Successful Training of the Negro" tells for the first time the results of his work at Tuskegee Institute. President Eliot of Harvard explains "The New Definition of the Cultivated Man," President Hyde of Bowdoin recounts "The Educational Progress of the Year," and President Taylor of Vassar shows what is being done in his field of work in "The Education of Women." Three vital problems of common school education are discussed by experts and pointed with specific stories

GOING IN TO DINNER.

How the Methods Differ In France, England and America.

In France they walk into the dining room abreast, the lady and her lord, like two chums, equal one to the other. In England John Bull goes first, she following meek and demure. In America Mrs. Jonathan enters triumphantly, leading the way, while her dear old spouse follows.

In France men and women walk with equal assurance. When they meet on the street the men pay their respect to the women and the latter show their deference to the men by the way in which they salute one another. Your natural conclusion is that such men and women go through life on the same equal footing.

On the contrary, John Bull has the air of a lord of creation. He leads the way a little haughtily perhaps and not overpleasant looking. He is duly sensible of the fact that he is a master—the master. He is of course polite and deferential to women, but it is with a slightly patronizing air, a condescension of his lofty lordship. He feels his supposed superiority, and he cannot help showing it. Among the middle and lower class people the man is master and enters his house before his wife, mother or daughter.

In the United States the woman walks like a duchess. She is mistress of all she surveys. She stands erect and queenly, and her eyes are frank. For her, man exists. He pays her court. She is indeed a queen.—American Queen.

The Price of Slaves.

The prices of slaves varied very greatly in different parts of the south in antebellum days. In states like South Carolina or Louisiana, where slaves were always in demand, much more was paid for them than in the border states like Kentucky and Missouri, where they could easily run away. In New Orleans $1,800 to $2,500 was often paid for a good carpenter or blacksmith, who in Kentucky or Missouri would not have brought more than half as much. Many slave traders made a regular business of buying in the border states and selling in Mobile, New Orleans or Charleston, and there was always a handsome profit in the transaction. The most risky part of the business was the guarantee demanded that the slave would not run away. The time limit was commonly thirty days, and the matter was usually arranged with the slave himself by taking his promise and giving him $5 or $10 to stay until the guarantee had expired.—Exchange.

Buttermilk a Liquor Cure.

A buyer for one of the largest liquor houses in Philadelphia who is compelled to sample enough wine and spirits every day to put an ordinary man out of business says that buttermilk is his salvation. "I not only buy five or six glasses a day at the dairy restaurants or street stands," he says, "but I drink it all the time at home instead of tea or coffee. I never touch beer or anything like that. I keep a stone crock of buttermilk in the cellar and let it get just a little stale. It is better then than if taken fresh. A man who insists on drinking liquor will find very little trouble if he takes plenty of buttermilk. If he wants to swear off, buttermilk will help him. It is a splendid stomachic. Two quarts of good buttermilk a day will cure any case of nervous indigestion."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Ass and the Ladder.

"I came into possession of a Hebrew library the other day," said a student, "and in several of my new books is the sentence, 'May this volume not be damaged, neither this day nor forever, until the ass ascends the ladder. What does that mean—'till the ass ascends the ladder? Do you know?"

"Yes, I know," answered the student's preceptor. "The phrase is like that of Petronius, 'asinus in tegulis' (an ass on the house top). It signifies impossibility, a thing that will never take place. Books preserved, therefore, until the ass ascends the ladder are books forever preserved."—Philadelphia Record.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The charming play "A Poor Relation" is to be the Castle Square Theatre attraction next and Mr. Horace Lewis, an old time member of the organization, comes back to sustain the title part, in which he has appeared throughout the country during the past fall and winter season. This is the play written by Edward E. Kidder for Sol. Smith Russell and will be remembered as the leading success of that delightful comedian's repertoire. The "poor relation" is Noah Vale, an impecunious inventor, whose drawings for a machine that is to revolutionize labor and make his fortune, have been stolen by the villian of the play. The author has written some unusually good dialogue, much of it fairly flashing with humorous brilliancy, and has woven into his story a love romance of the real home life of the inventor and more melodramatic ones needed to supply the desired contrast.

The usual distribution of souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the most promising features of a really great bill announced for the week beginning July 27, at Keith's Boston house, is Irving Jones, who is said to be about the most strenuous of the many real coon singers who have made tremendous hits at this theatre. The Fadettes, however, will continue to be the big feature, with such surrounding acts as the DeLaskas in a new illusion; Tuochey and Lacey, the Irish dialect comedians; Al Coleman, who mimics celebrities; the Dillon Brothers in original parodies; the Westons in a musical sketch; Josie and Nellie Doner in comedy; Cushman, Holcombe and Curtis in a new school farce; Mason and Masett, comedy acrobats; William Cahill, entertainer, and Fuller and Rose in a farce called "Slick Dick."

—President Loubet of the French Republic is the descendant of an Irishman—at least, that's what the Irish say, and to sustain their theory they show that the name Loubet is a form of the name Loubett. That this is not altogether improbable is shown by history, which tells us that from Queen Elizabeth's day, thousands of Irish rebels located in France.—Weymouth Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF KEARSARGE.

The Battleship Averaged Over Thirteen Knots per Hour in Race Across the Atlantic.

Bar Harbor, Me., July 27.—The United States battleship Kearsarge arrived at Bar Harbor at 5:42 Sunday afternoon and dropped anchor in the upper harbor at 6:13. Captain Hemphill, in an interview, said: "We left the Needles at 1:25 p. m. on Friday, July 17, and Mt. Desert Rock at 12:30 today, covering the distance of 2900 miles in 9 days, 4 1-4 hours, an average speed of 13.16 miles an hour. The highest speed attained was a little over 15 knots an hour and the slowest was 10. Three times during the trip the ship was slowed down; once on account of being in the vicinity of an iceberg and twice on account of a very thick fog. Headwinds and thick weather retarded the speed of the ship, and, under favorable conditions, she would have covered the distance in less than nine days."

KEARSARGE AT ANCHOR.

Since the Kearsarge left New York, 53 days ago, she has steamed 8200 miles, has been at sea 24 days and in ports 29 days, and during all this time, there has not been a single accident to the machinery, not a break or a stop of any kind. She is ready for action.

When she left Portsmouth she carried 1640 tons of coal. She now has on board 410 tons, consuming 1230 tons on the voyage, an average of 135 tons daily. As her coal carrying capacity is but 1591 tons, some coal was taken on deck.

The trip of the Kearsarge has demonstrated that a ship of her class can maintain an average speed of over 13 knots on a long voyage without injury to her machinery; that her coal carrying capacity is adequate for a trip of 4000 miles under full speed; that in time of war, ships of her class can cross the ocean and engage an enemy at once.

Mystery at New York

New York, July 27.—A well dressed man, accompanied by a fine-looking and handsomely gowned woman about 23 years of age, registered at the Morton house as "C. Weiss and wife, Syracuse, N. Y." Late yesterday afternoon the woman was heard shrieking, three shots followed instantly and when the room was entered she and the man were found dead. The woman had a bullet in her heart and another in her left wrist. The man was shot in the heart. A pistol lay by the man's right hand and it is believed by the police that he shot the woman and then committed suicide. Not the slightest clue to the motive of the shooting could be found.

Bank Affairs Not Straightened

Southport, Conn., July 27.—There has been much rejoicing here over the announcement of the capture in Panama of Oliver T. Sherwood, the missing cashier of the Southport National bank, who has been indicted on several counts for embezzlement by the federal grand jury in Hartford. Meanwhile the affairs of the bank continue badly tangled. Receiver Pepper says that its affairs are still in such condition, notwithstanding his investigation has covered several weeks, that he can make no estimate of the total amount of the shortage.

Former Archduke Marries Dancer

Paris, July 27.—The civil and religious marriage ceremonies between Leopold Woelfling, formerly Archduke Leopold of Tuscany, and Mme. Iselle Adamovitch, a dancer, were celebrated at Veyrier, near this city. Woelfling is a brother of the former Crown Princess Louise of Saxony and, accompanied by Mlle. Adamovitch, went with the crown princess when she eloped with Giron from Dresden.

London Newspapers Handicapped

London, July 27.—Torrential rains Saturday night over the south of England caued serious floods and great damage in London. The underground railway was flooded and many printing rooms of London newspapers built in the underground district were flooded and unable to print Sunday editions until late in the afternoon.

Man, Wife and Child Killed

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 27.—Joshua Butler, wife and infant child were struck by an express train while driving across the tracks at Port Bowkley, and all three are dead. The horse was also killed and the carriage demolished.

Women Deliberately Cremated

London, July 27.—A St. Petersburg dispatch to The Daily Mail says that near the village of Schalajifka 30 female field laborers locked themselves in a barn to escape molestation by male laborers, who, in revenge, fired the barn and callously watched the burning and heared the shrieks of the women as they burned to death.

"Excesses" Were Unimportant

Mairid, July 27.—Reports were published here of excesses indulged in by sailors of the United States squadron at Lisbon. It is learned from Lisbon that the affair which gave rise to the report was quite unimportant and that it has been satisfactorily adjusted.

Miraculous Escape From Death

Boston, July 27.—Two-year-old Eddie Gatchell fell from a third-story window a 36 Yarmouth street. In falling the little fellow pitched far out from the building and fell among a maze of telephone and telegraph wires near the top of a pole, where he remained suspended. Attracted by cries from the boy's mother, a patrolman hurried to the scene and rescued the child, who suffered only slight injuries.

Hard Work Unbalanced Mind

Boston, July 27.—Crazed by overwork, Miss Anna E. Foster, aged 58, for 30 years a school teacher, threw herself from a third-story window at her home on Union Park street to the street below and was instantly killed. Miss Foster had been carefully watched under instructions from her doctor. During her sister's momentary absence she made the fatal leap.

Two Women and Man Drowned

New London, Conn., July 27.—Mrs. C. T. Thorpe, Miss Annabel Rogers and Samuel Gohel were drowned in the Thames river north of this city last evening by the capsizing of a pleasure boat while attempting to cross the river. Four other persons who were also occupants of the boat were saved.

Brothers Killed by Train

Kingston, R. I., July 27.—Nathaniel and Edward Jordan, aged 6 and 8 years, were killed by a train about a mile west of the Kingston station. The lads had picked berries and had started to walk home when they were struck by the train.

An Alleged Firebug

Northampton, Mass., July 27.—Alice H. Howell of Amherst was held in $1000 for the grand jury, in the district court here, on the charge of setting her buildings on fire with intent to defraud an insurance company.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Two trains met in a head-on collision on the Chicago Great Western railroad and four men were killed and about 25 passengers injured.

A mysterious fire that destroyed a vacant house at Bath, Me., leads to the belief that fire bugs are at work, it being the second suspicious fire within a week.

Clark's block, Keene, N. H., was partially destroyed by fire which started in the basement, causing a loss of about $5000.

The mill of the North Pownal Manufacturing company, at Pownal, Vt., and the mill at Williamstown, Mass., operated by the same concern, have shut down for an indefinite period, owing to the high prices of cotton and to avoid a shortage later on.

Eager to secure a specimen of a certain kind of marsh grass which he was seeking near a bathing beach at Cambridge, Mass., Theodore McCloskey, aged 12, attempted to jump across a four-foot ditch and was drowned.

Patrick Kane, a laborer, aged 65, committed suicide at Boston by hanging, his body being found suspended from a beam in his cellar.

Julia E. Rice, 13, was wading with other children at Jefferson, Mass., and slipped, falling into a deep hole. She went down and was drowned.

CARDINALS' MEETING

Express Displeasure at Conduct of Pope's Funeral

LOWERING OF ITALIAN FLAG

Because of Offense Taken by Consul at Chilian Capital Is Regretted—Thousands Pass Before Leo's Sarcophagus—No Changes In Will

Rome, July 27.—At the sixth meeting of the congregation of cardinals held yesterday 45 cardinals were present. Cardinal Della Volpe, voicing also the opinions of some of his colleagues, criticised the ceremonies in connection with the interment of Leo XIII Saturday night because the cardinals did not participate in the entire procession and complained generally of the lack of order. Cardinal Oreglia replied that he had already noticed this and that he would punish those who were responsible. Mgr. Merry del Val communicated to the cardinals the report from Santiago, Chili, of the incident which occurred there during the celebration of the requiem for the late pope which was attended by the president of the republic and all the authorities. According to the report Mgr. Uguarte, in delivering the eulogy upon the late pontiff, protested against the usurpation of papal territory by Italy, whereupon Consul Count Boasso left the church and lowered the Italian flag, which had been hoisted at the legation as a sign of mourning. The incident produced an unpleasant impression upon the sacred college, being the first discordant note in the universal mourning.

The ceremonial of the conclave established by Gregory XV is to be followed at the coming meeting. The cardinals have decided during the conclave to eat in common in order to facilitate their work. A local paper quotes the response of Cardinal Svampa to a question as to whether he believed the conclave would be of lengthy duration as follows: "On the contrary, I think it will be very short. I believe that two days will suffice to reach an agreement."

Another paper quotes Mgr. Francica Nava as to the possibility of the election of a pope who would reconcile the Vatican and with the arrangements for the conclave. Cardinal Gibbons arrived yesterday, but did not attend the meeting. A wall is being built around the apartments where the conclave will be held. It is already 10 feet high.

Several thousands of the faithful crowded St. Peter's yesterday to pay tribute before the sacophagus containing the remains of the late pontiff, on which is the following simple inscription in gilded letters: "Leo XIII Pont Max." Meanwhile requiem masses continued in the chapel of the sacrament as well as in many other Roman churches.

The will of Leo was read yesterday. While nominally leaving the estate of Carpineto to his nephew, Ludovico Pecci, it really makes no change, as the whole family property, amounting approximately to $120,000, has already been divided among the three nephews, Count Camillo having already sold his share.

Catholic Worshippers Out In Force

Boston, July 27.—Two hundred thousand worshippers assembled in the Roman Catholic churches of eastern Massachusetts yesterday to participate in services held in commemoration of the pope's funeral. At the cathedral of the Holy Cross in this city Archbishop Williams was present.

Unfit to Occupy Throne

St. Petersburg, July 27.—A government specialist in the treatment of backward children has examined and observed Prince George, the eldest son of King Peter of Servia, and has reported to the emperor that the boy is a degenerate.

Prince George is 16 years of age. He was reared practically under the direction of the Russian courts and was educated to occupy the throne of Servia. A recent dispatch to the London Times said that King Peter might abdicate in favor of his son.

Sensational Scene In Church

New York, July 27.—The congregation of 200 worshippers at vespers in St. Stanislaus Polish Roman Catholic church was wildly excited when Alexander Groeschick, standing in front of the altar, cursed Father Strzelecki for refusing to give him an accounting of an excursion the church had a few days ago. The police had to be sent for and Groeschick was arrested after a desperate struggle, during which he was severely beaten.

GRANITE MEN'S OUTING.

Quincy and Barre Manufacturers Have a Glorious Time.

Base Ball and Numerous Other Attractions at Crescent Park, Rhode Island.

A List of the Three Hundred Who Enjoyed the Pleasures of the Day.

The arrival of the special train from Crescent Park, R. I., at the South Terminal at 9 o'clock Saturday night brought to a close a day full of pleasant recollections, and the visit of the Granite Manufacturers' Association of Barre, Vt., to the Granite Manufacturers' Association of Quincy, Mass.

The visit was a memorable one as it afforded the members of the two associations, engaged in the same line of business an opportunity to become better acquainted with each other.

That the visitors enjoyed themselves during their visit no one can question. The committee of the Quincy Association, headed by President Harry S Nicol, worked diligently, and nothing that would add to the pleasure and comfort of the guests was left undone.

Saturday was the closing day of the visit, and this was passed at Crescent Park, R. I. A special train of six cars, containing upwards of 300, left the South Terminal at 9.05, and at 10.15 came to a stop at the entrance to the Park.

The morning hours did not drag heavily, for there were hundreds of side shows, shooting galleries, bowling and other things to keep the crowd busy.

A game of ball was proposed, and soon two nines representing the two associations were hard at work in the boiling sun battling for supremacy.

The line up of the two nines was as follows:

Barre.	Quincy.
Dubuc, s. s.	R. Prout, p.
Barcley, p.	White, 2 b.
Pitkin, c.	Shea, 1 b.
Caswell, 3 b.	Hughes, c. f.
Milne, r. f.	Hector, c.
Campbell, c. f.	Nicol, s. s.
Commoli, l. f.	Galvin, l. f.
Wood, 1. b.	Mannex, 3 b.
McDonnell, 2 b.	W. Prout, r. f.

Representative Peter T. Fallon umpired the game, and some of his decisions would make a professional turn green with envy. They were not made in accordance with the rules governing the professional games, but according to Peter's idea of what they should be, and they were delivered so quickly and sharply as to render the player speechless for a moment and when he recovered it was only to find that he was occupying a back seat.

Councilman Alfred O. Diack was the official scorekeeper. He started in to keep track of the errors made, but he soon run short of paper, and as the borrowed pencil he was using became dull he gave it up.

There was but two innings played and they were chiefly notable for the wild throws made and base stealing, and a home run by Hector.

Barre succeeded in making two runs and Quincy eight. Barre honors were divided between Dubuc and Caswell, while R. Prout, White, Shea, Hector and W. Prout won the runs for the Quincy team.

The nines had started in to play the third innings when the crowd became interested in a beauty show that had commenced in a tent near by. They made a run for the tent, the players followed and the game was over.

Dinner was served a little after 1 o'clock, and if there was anyone who went hungry it was his own fault, for there was plenty to eat for all. During the dinner there was continuous music by a band and an orchestra. While the band played the orchestra rested and while the orchestra played the band accumulated wind for the next time.

They played all the popular airs in which the party joined in singing, being led by F. B. Mudgett of Barre, who is a whole team in himself.

President Nicol made a brief address of welcome at the start, which few outside of those near him were able to hear on account of the noise. Everybody applauded, however, and said it was a good speech even if they did not hear it. It was intended to have a little speaking after the dinner, but the party left the hall before the speakers could be lined up.

Mr. Mudgett, however, did mount the table at one end of the hall and told what good fellows the Quincy boys were, and how much the Barre boys were enjoying themselves.

The menu which the party sat down to and did their best to get outside of was as follows:

Lewis' Cream Chowder.
Lettuce, Rareripes, Sliced Tomatoes.
Radishes, Sliced Cucumbers.
Steamed Kickemuit Clams, Drawn Butter.
Broiled Block Island Blue Fish, Maitre de Hotel.
Baked Sea Trout, Stuffed Tomato Sauce.
Fried Eels in Crumbs.
Sweet Potatoes, Green Corn.
String Beans, Lyonaise Potatoes.
Clam Cakes.
Steamed Lobster with Lemon.
Claret Punch.
Roast Fowl, Giblet Gravy.
Cranberry Sauce, Mashed Potatoes.
Chicken Salad.
Brown Bread, Vienna Rolls.
Assorted Cake, Lady Fingers.
Neapolitaine Ice Cream.
Watermelon, Cafe Noir.
Cigars.

There was no set program for the afternoon. Each individual did what his taste and desire prompted him to. They shot the chutes, looped the loop, took a boat ride on the river Jordan, danced and visited other attractions of which there were many.

Several took the trolley cars for Providence. This proved a pleasant trip and was much preferable to roasting in the boiling sun at the Park.

The hour for the special train to start for home was at 7.45, and it was but five minutes late in leaving.

All were thoroughly tired out after their day's outing, but happy for there were none who had not had a good time. No accident or mishap marred the pleasure of the day. The train made a quick run to Boston, arriving at 9 o'clock. They gathered near the gate, and the big terminal rang with the cheers that were given heartily.

Most of the Quincy party came home on the 9.25 train. Others remained in town to show the visitors Boston by lamp light. The special train for Barre left at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, and all but a few were on board. Some remained over until Sunday night.

CLASSES FOR ALL.

Sixteen Prizes Aggregating $155 for Q. Y. C. Open Race

The race of the Quincy Yacht club on Wednesday should be the most successful in recent years, as there are classes for M. Y. R. A. boats, and handicap classes for other boats, whether enrolled in a yacht club or not. There are sixteen prizes in all, and liberal ones too, as will be seen:

Class D,—25 footers,—$20 and $10.

Class E,—22 footers,—$20 and $10.

Class I,—18 footers,—$15 $10, $5, and $3.

Handicap Class A,—$15 silver cup, $10 field glasses, $8, $6, $4, and $2.

Handicap Class B,—$12 silver cup, and $5.

The handicap classes will give an old-fashioned open race open to all yachts in Massachusetts bay, whether they belong to any recognized yacht club or not, using the over all measurement for the racing length. Any boat measuring from 15 to 33 feet over all is eligible.

There will be music at the clubhouse by the Braintree Orchestral society from 1 to 4.30 and there should be a large attendance of the lady friends of the club.

The first signal will be given at 1.45 and Class D will start at the second signal five minutes later.

The other four classes will follow at five-minute intervals.

It will be the 191st race of the club.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The contractors are taking a little bit off the top of Westminster Chambers in Boston. Architectural skill will probably cover up the signs of the remodelling and make the building as attractive as ever, but if there should some scar remain upon its beauty it will only be a memorial to the dignity of the law in Massachusetts, and will be worth something if its reminder shall teach a lesson.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Under the influence of unwise leaders organized labor has apparently gone its length. It has put upon enterprise such trying conditions and so aroused the apprehension of capital that work is being reduced to a minimum and nothing is being done excepting what must be done. Word comes from Elizabeth, N. J., that "the Pennsylvania railroad will abandon all contemplated improvments on its road for the present, owing, it is said, to uncertainty regarding labor. The company says it is willing to pay for labor what it is fairly worth, but that it is not taking any chances of starting contracts and then having them held up by demands for more wages." Here is an anticipated expenditure of millions held up for the purpose of obtaining more assuring—more stable labor conditions. This is only one of many such examples in this great country of ours. Reliability, fair dealing, loyalty to contract are what will restore confidence and prompt capital to do a maximum instead of a minimum amount of work.—Norwich (Ct.) Bulletin.

A SECOND TIME.

West Quincys Defeat the Dorchesters.

Merrymounts Win an Uphill Game.

The Quincys Win and Copeland Club Lose.

Every man of the West Quincys found Connolly, who pitched for the Dorchesters on Saturday, and some two and three times, while McCabe and Donaher hit safely for two bases. In the presence of 5000 to 6000 people at Dorchester the West Quincys won 14 to 8. They excelled both in the field and at the bat. Two pretty double plays by the visitors helped greatly to victory.

The Merrymounts won from the Rexfords Saturday afternoon. The Rexfords were in the lead for six innings when the home team, by timely hitting and by taking advantage of their opponent's errors, obtained a good lead. Smith of the Rexfords struck out thirteen men but he was unable to prevent hits at critical times. Kolson pitched a steady game. Bennett's fielding, Baker's batting and Mullen's running catch in deep centre field were feattres.

Wollaston Park A. A. defeated the Websters of Cambridge on their home grounds by a score of 22-7. The features of the game were the batting of Kappler and Treadway.

The Jordan, Marsh Co. nine played the Houghs Neck nine and defeated the local team by a score of 21 to 2.

The South Quincy juniors whitewashed the Bigelow Park nine on Saturday 4 to 0. The winners desire games during August with teams whose players are 16 to 17 years of age. Address G. Robertson, 85 Columbia street.

TEN ARRESTED.

Cambridge and Quincy Men Clash at Sunday Picnic.

James Mullen and Simon Bennett, two well known Quincy men, got badly used Sunday at Quincy woods as a result of a mixup with a crowd of picnickers from East Cambridge, who were at the same place.

It appears that the Quincy branch of the Irish National League was holding it annual outing in the woods. A short distance away was a party of Cambridge toughs, who had come in a four-horse barge which contained among other things a large quantity of beer.

Shortly after 4 o'clock word was received at the police station that a row was in progress and that a man had been killed. Officers Hanson and Cahill started down in the ambulance. When near the residence of Mr. Dennen they met the barge coming toward them.

As soon as the occupants of the barge saw the patrol wagon they made haste to get out.

The officers however prevented some of the party from escaping, and held ten of them. The others scattered in all directions. The officers turned the patrol wagon over to Thomas Elcock while they came to Quincy with the prisoners.

After the prisoners had been booked Chief Hayden and Officers Cahill and Murray started back toward the scene of the affray. They met the ambulance in which was James Mullen and Simon Bennett. Mullen had a deep cut in his head and Bennett had a rib fractured. They were also badly bruised.

Mullen was taken to the City Hospital and Bennett was taken in charge by a friend and carried home.

The story is that the Cambridge party tried to get possession of a clam chowder that had been made for the members of the league. First there was an argument which grew hot. It is then said that the Cambridge party got their base ball bats and made a rush toward the camp of the Quincy party, some of whom had left to avoid trouble. Those who remained were roughly used by the Cambridge crowd and Mullen and Bennett were knocked into the bushes and left unconscious.

In the meantime a citizen who had witnessed the assault had gone to the office of the sewer contractor at the corner of Palmer and Sea streets and telephoned to the police.

Then the Cambridge fellows, realizing the serious outcome of the affair, made haste to make their escape, and had nearly succeeded in doing so when the police appeared.

At the City hospital this noon it was said that Mullen passed a comfortable night and was doing nicely.

CONFEDERATE BILL.

One for a Hundred Dollars Passed in This City.

It seems almost improbable that anyone of American parentage would take for legal money a bill issued by the Confederacy. Yet such a thing happened Saturday. Domenico Albandonato, of 66 Granite street, is the man who is alleged to have passed it.

Saturday afternoon Domenico entered the grocery store of Natali Fossati on Liberty street and offered a $100 bill in payment for a grocery bill. Fossati could not change the bill and he gave it to his son to go and get it changed. The boy tried several places but was unsuccessful until he reached the Quincy Adams depot when the agent changed it.

The boy had been gone but a few minutes before the agent discovered his mistake. He telephoned the police and Officer Goodhue was sent to investigate.

Officer Goodhue and Inspector McKay succeeded in locating Domenico and recovered $93 of the money.

Domenico said he found the bill in Boston and thought it was genuine. The bill was plainly marked "Confederate States of America." Both sides read alike, two bills being pasted together. It was not even a genuine bill, being one used for advertising purposes.

The wonder is that anyone could for a minute accept such a bill for money.

Domenico was arraigned in court for obtaining money by false pretenses.

This is East Weymouth's day of Old Home Week and is being celebrated by a firemen's muster and sports.

NO FURTHER DEATHS

Expected to Result From the Trolley Collision at Shrewsbury

Worcester, Mass., July 27.—The condition of the injured persons at the city hospital as a result of Saturday's head-on collision of trolleys in Shrewsbury shows a little improvement in each case. Mrs. Thomas H. Brown, who threw her infant out of the electric and thereby undoubtedly saved the little one's life, is resting well and will recover.

One dead and 48 injured was the result of the collision. The crew in charge of the west-bound car, Motorman Downs and Conductor Daly, had orders to wait at the Milk street siding for the car from Worcester, but disobeyed orders, and had not run half a mile over the single track before crashing into the car from Worcester as it rounded a sharp curve.

The cars telescoped, each smashing into the other the length of four or five seats. They then piled on end, forming an arch, while the passengers were thrown in all directions, some being tossed 25 feet from the cars. There were about 150 passengers on both cars and those on the front seats received the worst injuries.

Miss Frances Greer of Chicago died at the city hospital Saturday night. Her injuries were internal, with concussion of the brain. William H. Savage of Boston, an artist, has internal injuries and brain concussion, but is expected to recover.

Easily Gave Officer the Slip

Ayer, Mass., July 27.—Arthur M. Farmer, who is wanted in Newburyport on the charge of bigamy, and who was arrested in Denver on that charge a few days ago, was travelling to Boston in charge of Officer Hammond of the Massachusetts state police. When the train arrived at Ayer junction the arrested man was permitted to walk to the end of the car. A number of people were leaving and in the general commotion Farmr jumped, unnoticed, through an open window. He took to the woods immediately and disappeared.

Were Lying on Tracks

Haverhill, Mass., July 27.—Frank Follenbee and Duncan McMillan are at the Haverhill hospital suffering from injuries received by being run into by an electric car. The two men were visiting in Georgetown and took a late car home, going as far as Byfield Centre. They then started to walk down the tracks to their homes. They fell upon the track. Both suffered fractured skulls, besides other injuries. Follensbee will probably die, but McMillan, while in an extremely critical condition, has a chance for recovery.

Drowned In Shallow Water

Providence, July 27.—While canoeing on the Pawtuxet river, a mile above Pawtuxet, Harold E. Brown, 22, a member of the Pawtuxet Canoe club, was drowned by the overturning of his canoe, in which he was paddling with three others. Brown went down in five feet of water, four feet from shore. E. H. Leach swam ashore after going down twice, and T. M. Allen, who could swim, assisted W. H. Grant, who could not swim well, to a hold on the overturned canoe. They were finally rescued.

DANVILLE'S RACE WAR

A Bad State of Affairs In an Illinois Town

TWO ARE ALREADY DEAD

Over a Score Wounded and Police Station Wrecked as the Result of Murder of a White Man by a Negro, Who Is Hanged and Burned

Danville, Ills., July 27.—Two killed and 22 wounded, the police station wrecked, the county jail with few of its windows left unshattered, the city in the hands of the state troops and a feeling of uneasiness and dread prevailing everywhere is the situation left by the race riots of Saturday night and early Sunday morning.

Four companies of militia arrived from Springfield in reply to urgent requests sent to the state officials. The troops marched to the market house opposite the jail and there camped. The streets were cleared. There were sullen threats heard, but no attempt at an outbreak was manifested during the day. Last night 100 sentinels patrolled the streets in the immediate vicinity of the jail, each soldier carrying 40 rounds of ammunition.

Leading citizens say the outbreak has been expected by them for a long time, as a bitter feeling has existed for several years between the negroes and a certain class of white persons. A number of minor outbreaks have occurred during the past year.

After shooting Henry Gatterman to death in a saloon fight a negro named Metcalf was taken from the officers and hanged to a telegraph pole. After the body had been riddled with bullets it was cut down and burned.

The mob had been formed to take another negro, who was charged with attempting to assault a woman, from the jail. On its way to the jail word was received of the Gatterman killing, and the party delayed to lynch him. Later an attempt was made to break in the jail for the purpose of lynching the second negro.

Metcalf and Gatterman became involved in an argument in front of a saloon at 8:30, which ended in the negro shooting Gatterman dead. Metcalf was captured by the police and with much difficulty taken to police headquarters, followed by a constantly increasing crowd. The murderer was locked in the police records vault.

Some went for railroad irons and others for sledge hammers and in a short time the vault door was hammered down and the negro dragged forth. Metcalf made a desperate struggle, but blows were rained on him and in the midst of the fight some one shot him with a revolver. The mob dragged the dying man from the building, and, placing a rope about his neck, dragged him back to where he had killed Gatterman. There his body was strung up to a telegraph pole and riddled with bullets.

Cries of "burn him, burn him" were heard, and soon the leaders had the lifeless body cut down. After some consideration it was decided to take the body to the county jail and burn it in full view of the sheriff. Arriving at the jail, the body of the negro was placed in the centre of converging streets, where scores of frenzied men and boys kicked and spat upon it. Blood was flowing from a dozen bullet wounds, and the dead man's clothes had been stripped off. Bundles of hay were secured and piled over the corpse and a match was applied. The flames sprung high in the air and lighted up the ghastly scene. No attempt at disguise or concealment was made by members of the mob, which danced about the pyre in exultant glee.

After watching this gruesome spectre the mob leaders remembered the negro who attempted to outrage Mrs. Henry Burgess, a white woman, at Marshfield. Arriving at the jail demands were made upon Sheriff Whitlock that he should give them the prisoner. As the clamor for the second negro grew louder and more insistent, Sheriff Whitlock stepped out upon the veranda of his residence and asked the mob to allow the law to take its course. Similar appeals were made by other citizens, but the crowd only hooted in derision and demanded that the man be produced. Then several members of the mob appeared with a railroad iron, and a charge was made upon the door leading into the jail, behind which were gathered the officers. Three or four times was this improvised battering ram hurled against the street door, when the wicket was opened and the barrel of a Winchester thrust through, and another demand made that the mob disperse. No attention was given to the warning, and a shot was fired over the heads of the mob. The shot only further enraged the mob, and another charge was made with the battering ram upon the door, when the gun was again fired, this time into the dense crowd wielding the railroad iron, and several were seen to drop to the ground.

Several more shots were fired from the jail door and window by the officers inside, and the mob began to scatter, leaving one on the ground bleeding from bullet wounds. Others limped away, showing that many of the buckshot and bullets had taken effect. Ambulances were called and took the wounded to the hospitals, after which the mob vented its rage by throwing rocks and chunks of coal through the jail windows.

ATTACKED POLICEMAN

Soldiers at Fort Adams Guilty of Serious Act of Hoodlumism

Newport, R. I., July 27.—Police Officer Tobin was patrolling his beat in the lower part of the city at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when nine soldiers from Fort Adams, who were passing on their way to the fort, called him vile names and he went in pursuit of one of them. The crowd set upon him and he was knocked to the ground by a brick that struck him on the side of the head, and while in this position they all set upon him and pounded him terribly. As soon as he was able he called for assistance and the night officers who responded succeeded in capturing one of his alleged assailants, Private Rowell. The others made their escape. Rowell was arraigned in the police court, pleaded guilty to assault, and was fined $20 and costs. Later in the day Officer Tobin went to Fort Adams with other officers, looked over the men there and identified Privates Murphy and Miller as having taken part in the assault. The two men were brought to the police station here, where they are held for trial. It is believed the other six men will be apprehended later, as Colonel Ennis, in command at the fort, is aiding the police in every way possible to have the men punished.

Fantastical Story of Plot

Vienna, July 27.—The Universal Bucharest publishes a sensational story of a plot to bring about a union of Servia and Bulgaria which involves the deposition of Prince Ferdinand and the substitution of the Karageorgevitch dynasty and which would also incidentally result in the settlement of the Macedonian question. The plotters are reported to have argued that such a united kingdom could overthrow Turkey, end the Macedonian troubles and guarantee a greater future both for Servia and Bulgaria.

Suicide Was an Actress

New York, July 27.—It was Crissie Carlyle, a well known actress, who committed suicide by taking carbolic acid in the woods in the upper part of New York city about a week ago. The identity of the body has only just been established and members of the Actors' fund saved it from being sent to the potter's field. Crissie Carlyle was a handsome girl and was a favorite on the Rialto. She had been seen in several Casino productions.

Unsafe Place to Drive

Haverhill, Mass., July 27.—Louis G. Marcoux of Lawrence was driving home from this city and in the darkest part of Primrose street was following the car track. When a car from Haverhill came along Marcoux did not draw out to the side and was run into. The wagon was smashed to kindling, the horse thrown some distance and badly injured and Marcoux fell under the car. He was badly bruised and suffered severe injuries to his spine.

Flyer Plunged Through Freight

Wellington, O., July 27.—While rounding a sharp curve at a speed of 60 miles an hour, a flyer on the Big Four road crashed into the rear end of a freight train which was just pulling into a siding. The engine of the flyer ploughed through the caboose and 10 cars loaded with live stock and merchandise, finally landing on its side in the ditch. Three persons were injured, but none fatally.

Wanted to Lynch Detective

Scranton, Pa., July 27.—An unsuccessful attempt to lynch John Peel, a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company detective was made last night at Foster by a crowd of the villagers who were infuriated upon learning that he had gained evidence which would connect a score of the families of the village with wholesale thievery of brass and other junk from the company's property.

Across the Continent In Auto

New York, July 27.—Dr. H. N. Jackson of Burlington, Vt., and S. R. Crocker, his chauffeur, have completed an automobile trip across the continent, which began in San Francisco May 23. It is the first time that an automobile has made the trip from ocean to ocean. A bulldog named Bud, which Dr. Jackson picked up in Idaho, made the journey to New York with him.

Woman Victim of Lynchers

Shreveport, La., July 27.—The negress, Jennie Steer, who administered poison in a glass of lemonade to Lizzie Dolan, 16 years old, from the effects of which she died, was lynched by a mob last night. The lynching occurred near the spot where the crime was committed. The woman was stubborn to the last, denying her crime.

Youngsters Tunnelled to Freedom

New York, July 27.—More than a score of boys of the house of refuge on Randall's island tunnelled under and through the 35 feet high and two feet thick wall surrounding the building and five succeeded in escaping. A dozen others who were discovered in the act of escaping submitted and seven who tried to get away were captured.

Japs Not Easily Bluffed

Yokohama, July 27.—M. Pavloff, Russian minister to Corea, having objected to the Japanese telegraph line from Seoul to Fusan, which was constructed prior to the Russian line, the Corean government asked Japanese Minister Hayashi to remove the line. The latter firmly declined.

SEIZED A NEWSPAPER

Army Officers Start a New Row at Panama

SOLDIERS AFTER GOVERNOR

Latter Got a Friendly Tip and Took Refuge In British Consulate—Latest Trouble Expected to Lead to Conversion of Enemies of Canal Treaty

Panama, July 27.—Not since the days of the last revolution, when an attack upon the city by the Liberals was feared, has there been such a panic in Panama as occurred Saturday night. Shortly after 9 o'clock the office of El Lapiz, the organ of the Liberal party on the isthmus, was visited by some officers of the general staff of the army, who destroyed Saturday's edition of the newspaper.

One of the directors was slightly wounded, but managed to escape. As the office of the newspaper is situated in a very populous district, the news spread rapidly. In the Santa Anas neighborhood, where most of the Liberals reside, sentiment rose to a high pitch and a few of the prominent people counselled retaliation. They took no action, however.

The next event came like a bombshell. A company of soldiers, apparently under the orders of General Cobos, commander of the national forces, surrounded the residence of Governor Mutis, but the governor and his wife, who is an American, having been warned a few minutes before the arrival of the troops, succeeded in escaping.

General Huertas, commander of the battalion of Colombia, when he learned of the El Lapiz incident, repaired to headquarters where he found Cobos and, according to current reports, the latter ordered Huertas to remain in quarters. Exactly what has taken place is unknown, but it is said that Dr. Arjona, secretary of the government, Fernando Arrango, chief of police, and Efraim Navia, a member of the departmental superior tribunal of justice, are under arrest, the latter for trying to argue with Cobos the illegality of his action. An attempt is also said to have been made to arrest Secretary of Finance Guerra, but he refused to accompany the officer who went to his house to arrest him and when the officer returned with soldiers to effect his capture Guerra had departed. The only civil official on the street is Mayor Ossa.

Governor Mutis spent the night at the British consulate, but it is reported that he will take refuge in the American consulate. United States Consul Gudger made several unsuccessful attempts to secure an audience with Cobos, who is a brother of the minister of war. It is reported that Cobos offered the governorship to different conservatives, who refused to accept and that he himself will assume civil command.

There was little excitement on the street yesterday. The Colombian battalion attended church in a body as usual, but the condition of affairs is very serious. Governor Mutis is virtually a prisoner. Undoubtedly Cobos will issue a proclamation giving the reasons for his actions, which, up to this time, are unknown.

The national government in certain quarters is being held responsible for much of what has happened because the soldiers have not been paid for some time and Mutis declined to give more of the money of the department of Panama for national expenses, arguing that the central government owes the department over $2,000,000, besides having obligated the department by a recent decree to pay the salaries of all civil national employes. The refusal of Mutis is the origin of the discord between the civil and military authorities.

Violent articles written in El Lapis against what the Liberals call the assassination of General Lorenzo, the leader of the guerrillas during the recent revolution, who was court martialled and shot May 15, precipitated events. El Lapiz has also been publishing a series of articles openly advocating the autonomy of the isthmus.

The effect of what is now going on upon the Colombian congress, it is believed, will be favorable to the canal treaty, for the enemies of the treaty, it is now believed, will be easily convinced of the necessity of certain clauses which it contains in regard to the control of this zone.

General Cobos admits differences with Governor Mutis because of the latter's refusal to pay the soldiers who, he says, are hungry. He said that Governor Mutis had systematically opposed everything emanating from the military authorities, but denied that he had intended to arrest the governor.

Colon Is Undisturbed

Colon, July 27.—This city is perfectly quiet, as last night's coup on the part of General Cobos against Governor Mutis of the department of Panama is known only to a few here. Developments are expected tonight or tomorrow. General Luis Maria Gomez, governor of this province, has been called to Panama and left in haste on a train Sunday afternoon.

Ban on Sunday Excursions

Scranton, Pa., July 27.—Bishop Hoban yesterday vigorously denounced Sunday excursions and commanded all Catholic organizations to desist from conducting them in the future. The denunciation has caused much concern to a number of Catholic organizations.

Half-Sick If you feel run down, are easily tired, if your nerves are weak and your blood is thin, then begin to take the good old standard family medicine, Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If constipated, use Ayer's Pills. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

FREE OF CHARGE.

"If Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific Does not Cure You, it is Free." Says Chas. C. Hearn.

"Not only will I sell a 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia specific at half price, but I will agree to refund the money if my customer is not satisfied with the remedy," said Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, to a Ledger man. "In other words," he continued, "the specific is free if it does not cure."

Mr. Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles on his special half price introductory offer, and has a few left for those who are fortunate enough to call at his store before they are all gone. It is the regular 50 cent size, containing sixty doses, and is the one remedy for constipation and dyspepsia that makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia is not an ordinary tablet or powder that simply relieves. This remarkable discovery makes complete and permanent cures. Mrs. Charlotte W. Wallace of Manchester, N. H., writes: "A few years ago I had a very severe attack of dyspepsia. Water distressed me as much as food, and I could find no relief. My druggist recommended Dr. Howard's specific very highly. This great medicine gave me relief at once, and I have never had another attack of dyspepsia."

Many physicians prescribe Dr. Howard's specific, for they know it cures. N. D. Ross, M. D., East Middlebury, Vt., writes: "I prescribed Dr. Howard's specific in the case of a patient who for years had been in the constant practice of taking some kind of a cathartic daily. I saw him a few days since, and he said: 'Dr. Howard's specific is a perfect God send; my bowels are moving every day.' I shall certainly prescribe Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia when indicated."

If you cannot go to Druggist Chas. C. Hearn's store today, send him your order by mail, as he has only a limited amount left to sell at this special half price. 20-23-27-30

THE SPEEDY RELIANCE

Chosen by Challenge Committee to Defend the Cup

SHOWED HER SUPERIORITY

Over Columbia and Constitution In Series of Trial Races, Having Crossed Finish Line Ahead In Every Instance—Rivals Satisfied

Newport, R. I., July 28.—After a race between Reliance, Constitution and Columbia, in which the former boat again demonstrated her superiority over the other two, the challenge committee of the New York Yacht club selected Reliance as the defender of the America's cup. It was also decided to discontinue the trial races, as the committee did not feel that more were necessary. There were present at the meeting Commodore Bourne and Messrs. Forbes, Cormack and Robinson of the cup committee as well as C. O. Iselin, managing owner of Reliance, E. D. Morgan of Columbia and August Belmont of Constitution.

Messrs. Morgan and Belmont were perfectly satisfied with the choice of the committee. They are both of the opinion that Reliance is the fastest of the trio and after the committee had announced its selection congratulated Mr. Iselin and wished him the best of luck.

From the showing of the three boats during the season there was no doubt, it being the general opinion that Reliance was fairly entitled to be the defending vessel. In every race she has crossed the finish line ahead and has lost but few events on time allowance. It is probable that the defender will proceed to Bristol for a thorough overhauling and then go to New Rochelle. What will be done with Constitution and Columbia has not been learned.

The three yachts were sent over a leeward and windward course yesterday. There was a puffy northwester blowing of about 15 miles' strength when the starting signal was given at 11:30. All three boats carried their smallest club topsails and Reliance wore the mainsail that she carried in the early races along the sound. It was a poor fitting piece of canvas.

Reliance was first to cross the line. She broke out a small balloonet as the gun was fired and had a loom out wide to starboard. A small spinnaker was broken out to port at once but it did not draw. Constitution crossed soon after and Columbia followed. Columbia and Constitution gybed their mainsails over to port as they crossed and broke out spinnakers to starboard.

For once, better judgment was used on Constitution and Columbia in carrying spinnakers to starboard, for they drew beautifully and the ballooners also pulled the yachts along. Reliance seemed to be lying still, so swiftly did Constitution pull up by her, and Columbia also gained steadily, although starting almost two minutes behind her. Constitution ran by Reliance very quickly after the start and at 11:40, when the Columbia was almost on even terms with her, Reliance took in her spinnaker and, gybing her mainsail over to port, set the spinnaker flying on the starboard hand. The new boat felt the effect immediately and pulled up ahead of Columbia and slowly regained the stretch of water that separated her from Constitution. A mile from the turn Reliance got by Constitution and turned the mark just ahead of her. Meantime Columbia had fallen away in the rear.

Hauling sheets around the outer mark Reliance stood to the westward on the starboard tack with Constitution on her weather. Columbia came about immediately and split tacks with the other two. Reliance began eating out to the weather of Constitution as soon as she got fairly going. They went about on the port tack about 1:10 and after that the new boat drew ahead and to windward steadily. Columbia sailed a fast race to windward and by a fortunate slant of wind, close under the Newport shore, hauled up so much on Constitution that the latter barely beat her across the finish line. The summaries:

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time.
Reliance	11:30:26	3:04:09	3:33:43
Columbia	11:32:00	3:10:11	3:38:11
Consti'n	11:30:37	3:09:16	3:38:45

Short of Motive Power

St. Louis, July 28.—The Republic says: Almost without exception the railway systems in the south and southwest have placed large orders for locomotives, but even with the additional equipment it is believed that the enormous crop of wheat, corn and cotton will require much more motive power than is now available to get it to market.

HAD AWFUL EXPERIENCE

Death Relieves Little Girl Who Spent Hours In a Sewer

Wellesley, Mass., July 28.—For two hours and a half Mary Morgan, 13 years old, of South Natick, suffered a living death in the great sewer which runs between Natick and here. For three miles she stumbled along or was borne unconscious by the current, and when she was finally rescued she was still alive, but she died a short time afterward.

The record of her experience is considered more wondrous than fiction. Though for 2½ hours in the darkness and foul atmosphere of the great metropolitan sewer, and being carried about three miles underground, she was taken out alive, and at one time it was almost hoped that she would live.

The girl was sent out about 1 o'clock with her father's dinner. He is employed on the water works at South Natick, only a short distance from his home. Day after day Mary came with the dinner basket, and yesterday was there promptly. She sat around while her father ate and then started back for home.

On the way she met some companions and started playing with them. One of her child playmates said she wanted to explore the sewer. Mary volunteered to show them. Ten minutes away from where her father was working there is a big manhole. A wooden ladder is placed there, used by workmen. Mary volunteered to go down first. She went down and called for her companions to follow. They waited there for her to come up. Minute after minute they waited, but she failed to reappear. Alarmed, finally, they ran to her father and told him that Mary had "gone into the sewer through the manhole."

For a second or so the father was almost paralyzed, then the truth gradually burst on him. He knew that the first outlet was at Wellesley Hills, and immediately telephoned there to watch for her, and there 2½ hours after her disappearance she came floating along on the bosom of the murky waters unconscious but still alive.

Just what she suffered no one can tell. It is thought she must have blindly stumbled along for some time. She was probably finally overcome by the gas and sank into the current.

The King In Belfast

Belfast, July 28.—The welcome extended to King Edward and Queen Alexandra at the capital of Ulster was marked by the same enthusiasm which has followed their progress through Ireland. The city was elaborately decorated and thronged with sightseers, and the streets were lined by 10,000 troops, 2000 bluejackets and 5000 police. The lord mayor and corporation awaited their majesties at the railroad station and presented them with an address. Upwards of 50 other addresses were presented on the same occasion.

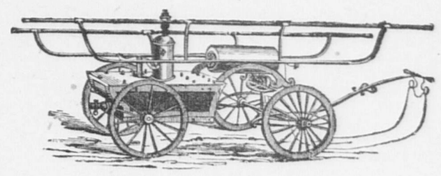

Thirteen Convicts Break Jail

Folsom, Cal., July 28.—Thirteen desperate prisoners confined in the Folsom penitentiary made a successful break for liberty. After a fierce fight in the captain's office, during which a turnkey was fatally stabbed, a guard killed and another officer was wounded, the convicts seized arms and ammunition and, using the warden and other officers as shields, escaped. It is believed they are making for the Bald mountains. State troops ordered out by Governor Pardee have gone to the scene.

PLAYOUT AT WEYMOUTH.

East Weymouth Day of Old Home Week Was Also Firemen's Day.

The people of Weymouth are holding today one of those good old-fashioned neighborhood picnics at New Downer Landing to celebrate Old Home Week. Sports, music, dancing, refreshments, etc., are on the program. Many also accepted an invitation of the Fore River Co. to visit the shipyard.

Monday was East Weymouth day, and 10,000 people witnessed the firemens parade and playout.

A base ball game between the Norfolks of South Weymouth and the East Weymouths was played. The former won in an up-hill game as will be seen:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Norfolk	0	0	0	3	3	1	3	2		—12
East Weymouth	0	0	3	5	0	2	0	0	0	—10

It was nearly 5 P. M. before the playout started, and the Active was the first on the list. There was a strong northerly wind which blew across the stream and made record playing out of the question. The captain of each tub waited for lulls in the wind but none came. A few Quincy men manned the brakes, but not as many were present as usual. All the Weymouth engines made the best records as will be seen by the result.

Name and location.	Ft.	In.
Active, Weymouth	147	1 1-2
Conqueror, South Weymouth	137	11 1-4
Defender, East Weymouth,	136	2 1 4
Butcher Boy, South Braintree	135	0 3 4
Cochato, Braintree	128	9 1-2
Hingham Vets, Hingham	128	5 1-2
Union, East Braintree	122	1

The first prize of $75 went to the Active, and the second prize of $25 to the Conqueror. The companies celebrated in the evening by keeping open house. The judges were banqueted by the East Weymouth committee.

Has No Official Report

Washington, July 28.—Dr. Herran, Colombian charge of affairs here, having received no official information from his government regarding the troubles at Panama, is not prepared to express an opinion as to the situation there.

An Appropriate Gift

Louisville, July 28.—The bronze bust of Edwin Booth as Brutus, which for 13 years has adorned the foyer of the Auditorium here, has been sent to the Players' club, New York city, in compliance with instructions in the will of its owner, the late Captain Norton. The bust was presented to Captain Norton by Lawrence Barrett.

Working on Manchurian Treaty

Washington, July 28.—While there has been a lull in the Manchurian negotiations, it is said that up to this point satisfactory progress has been made and there is reason to believe that before September a treaty will be ready for signature which will define the trade opportunities of the United States in Manchuria.

Good Afternoon

Many of the cities are reporting high tax rates this year, and those in the Metropolitan district, which try to outdo Boston, are feeling the heavy assessments levied by the State. The rate of Medford is just under $20, the assessors finding it necessary to assess $19.80, an increase of $1.60 per $1,000. The rate of Melrose is $18, an increase of eighty cents, while Everett with an increase of $700,000 in valuation, levies $17 per $1,000, an increase over last year. The assessed valuation of Medford is $19,738,600; of Melrose, $15,177,630, and of Everett, $20,966,230.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ No man is as worthy as the girl who loves him believes him to be, or as worthless as the girl who does not love him any longer knows him to be. —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

☞ Cassius M. Clay was a good specimen of the unterrified southerner. Nothing ever frightened him in all his life. Perhaps he did not always turn his courage to the best account, but he had courage and to spare.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The New York World suggests that there are stretches of valuable forest which rich men with more money than they know how to spend might buy and preserve for the public benefit. This would be quite as good a way of reducing a superfluous income as Mr. Carnegie's. The time is rapidly coming when we shall need trees more than we need books.—Providence Journal.

TO DUDLEY STREET.

Quincy Cars Will be Running Through in a Few Weeks.

Present indications are that before the first of September cars from Quincy Square will be running through to the Dudley street terminal of the Boston Elevated.

Arrangements between the officials of the Old Colony and Boston Elevated railway company, which have been underway for some time, are about completed. For the purpose of carrying out the arrangement between the two companies the Boston Elevated has obtained a location from the City of Boston at Neponset, between the present terminals of the two tracks for the purpose of connecting them.

All that now remains is to receive the approval of the Board of Railroad Commissioners for the right to cross the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford at grade. Then the connecting track will be built.

The length of new track that will have to be built to make the connection is but a few hundred feet, so that when once the necessary right is obtained it will be but a matter of a week or ten days before the job is completed.

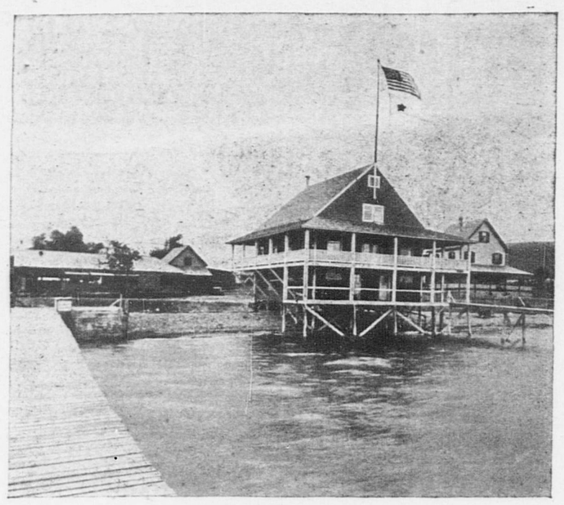

Unless something unforseen happens through cars will be in operation Sept. 1.

OLD HOME WEEK RACE.

An Old Fashioned Handicap Regatta Under Auspices of Quincy Yacht Club.

Clubhouse of Quincy Yacht Club.

"Tomorrow will be another gala day for the Quincy Yacht club, the annual open regatta, which is expected to be the largest and most successful in recent years. It will be a pretty sight from the shore and the broad verandas of the clubhouse, and music by the Braintree Orchestral Society will be an added attraction.

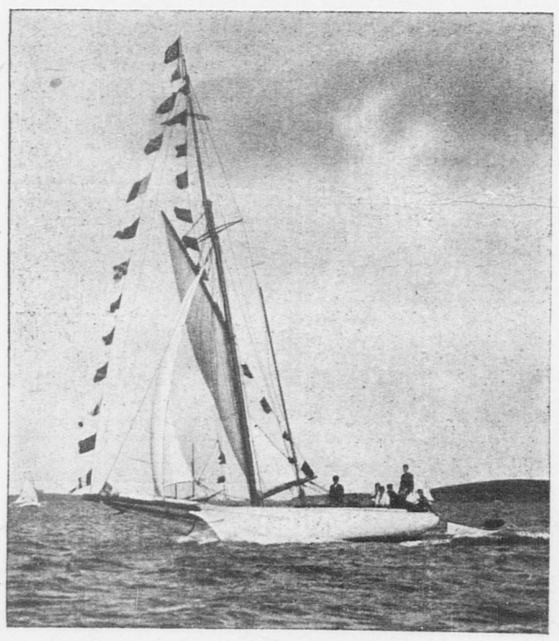

High water will be at 3.14, and the start will be at 1.50. There will be five clubs to send away at five minute intervals.

The judges will be ex-Commodore C. F. Pettengill, Charles C. Hearn, Dr. F. E. Jones, D. Cary Keith, ex-Commodore H. A. Keith, Dexter E. Wadsworth and Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Jr.

The courses for all classes are twice round a triangle, Class D, E, and Class A (handicap) of 12 miles; Class I and Class B (handicap), of 7 miles.

The enrolment of the Quincy Yacht club is now 201 members, 82 yachts and 25 launches.

An interesting illustration in the book for the annual race is the view of the Manchester Yacht clubhouse at Manchester-by-the-Sea, "the temporary home of the Quincy Yacht Club challenge cup."

Rear End Collision.

There came near being a bad accident on the Houghs Neck line Sunday afternoon, but fortunately no one was injured. Three cars left City Square for the beach about 3 o'clock. When on Coddington street near the corner of Newcomb street the second car stopped and the third car banged into it before the motorman could stop his car.

Passengers on the rear seat of the car that had stopped saw that a collision was unavoidable and jumped to the street and escaped injury. The rear car struck the standing car with sufficient force to smash the dasher and force it over into the rear seat which but a minute before was occupied by passengers. The fact that the second car was standing still prevented a serious accident.

The Daylight Thief.

The daylight sneak thief who has recently operated in Quincy and Braintree made his appearance in Holbrook again Monday, says the Herald. He first entered the residence of P. G. Pendleton on North Franklin street, where the family were away. A gold watch, earrings, breastpins and some children's jewelry were taken, also a small savings bank, a revolver and 80 cents was taken from a pocketbook.

The residence of Edward Dwyer on North Franklin street was also entered and a gold watch was taken. Several residents of the neighborhood saw the man as he came from the direction of Weymouth to Holbrook. The police have a good description of the man.

Fined for Assault.

It takes but little sometimes to start a row and land a man in jail. James Cassidy learned this Monday night. Cassidy was coming through Temple street when he passed a crowd of boys seated on a fence. One of the boys put out his feet and hit Cassidy. Upon that Cassidy turned and struck the first boy that came handy. This boy was John Keniley, who got two blows in the head. A crowd soon collected and Officer Murray gathered Cassidy in. The court imposed a fine of $3.

May not be all that is meant by dyspepsia now, but it will be if neglected.

LAWLESSNESS.

Lynchings Must be Stamped Out.

Rev. Mr. Barr Tells of Causes.

Criticises Public School System, the Home and Other Agencies.

Rev. Barr of the United Presbyterian Church preached last Sabbath evening to an appreciative audience on "Lynchings." In part he said: The American nation is confronted with a condition of internal disorders that threatens her peace, yea, and her life. It is fast becoming a question of whether we shall be ruled by the constituted civil authorities, or by the infuriated mob; by cool judgment, and deliberate trial, and even-handed justice, or by frenzied men fired by lawless elements; of whether the majesty of law shall be trampled down or the mob locked up.

We are so busy making money and enjoying our wealth and boasting of power and prosperity as a nation, that we fail to see the dangers that threaten us.

A hunter once noticed an eagle soar from a very high rock. As he watched it rise higher and higher he noticed that the bird became agitated and finally its movements became unsteady and it fell. On examination he found that a little serpent had fastened itself upon the great bird and struck its poisonous pangs into it and killed it.

The American eagle is soaring, but the serpent that is sapping its life blood is the violence and lawlessness of infuriated and unreasonable men, which interferes with human rights and destroys the safety of the citizen.

Lynching has become epidemic, and its frequency and shocking violence and atrocity should alarm every patriotic citizen who loves law and order. It is not confined to the southern states, the home of the black man, or the wild and woolly West, but in our oldest states and most conservative and orderly cities, such as Oxford, Ohio, with its two seminaries for ladies and its State university; Urbana, Ohio; Wilmington, Delaware; Evansville, Indiana; New York City, and elsewhere also.

It was almost wholly confined to the southern states a few years ago and the subjects were black men, for the most atrocious crimes, but now it is North as well as South, white as well as black, and for criminal offences that would not be regarded unworthy of the death penalty in any court of justice.

Such disorders must be stamped out, such inhumanity and injustice must be stopped, the pulpit and the press must join hands in arousing public sentiment and educate the people on Christian self control, civic righteouness, the importance of national honor, the sacredness of human life, and the necessity of respecting the majesty of law if ever we are to be a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Nothing can result in wholesale anarchy and tyranny and national dissolution and disgrace quicker than a disregard of these things.

The disgusting spectacle, the horrid injustice, the highly murderous spirit manifested in many of the recent lynchings, in which the jail authorities or police officers are overpowered and the person hung by a rope to a lamp post and the lifeless body shot through and through; or bound to a tree and roasted by a slow fire, is a burlesque on 20th century civilization, as it puts to shame the Indian savages of our own country or of heathendom. It is a backward step toward the Medieval ages of darkness, ignorance and blood curdling deeds. Shall it be tolerated?

Has the gospel of love and gentleness and justice and righteousness preached in all our churches lost its power?

Is the spirit of brotherhood dead? Or is it simply a nice sentiment to be set aside when occasion offers for the spirit of revenge?

We have been rebuking Spain for her inhuman conduct. We have sent a large petition to Russia concerning her treatment of the Jews instigated by the Kishineff Massacre. Lest they may in justice retaliate by saying "Physician heal thyself"—clean up before your own door before you find fault with your neighbor.

Some short-sighted preachers and newspaper editors—because the jail authorities have attempted to defend the rights of the prisoner by shooting some of the mob—have cried "It is a shame that the authorities should shoot down some of our best citizens for the sake of the life of a criminal that ought to die."

But that is not the point at issue. The point is shall human rights be maintained? shall the majesty of law be preserved, or shall brute force and mob violence take the place of civil investigations and judicial proceedings? Shall we have order and justice or shall we put ourselves on the level of the criminal by turning criminal?

Chief Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme court recently said at Milwaukee: "Every man who participates in the lynching or the burning of a Negro is a murderer pure and simple, and can be held by any court in the land for murder in the same degree as if the crime were committed by an individual."

"Murder is murder," said the ministerial union of Los Angeles on this subject, "whether the victim be a white man or a black man, accused of crime or innocent, and whether the perpetrator be an individual or a band of citizens. To assume the execution of the death penalty without due process, whereby the guilt of the accused is first established, beyond all question, is anarchy in its worst form and a most dangerous precedent."

It must be stamped out even if scores of self respecting citizens turn murderers, and we are shot down for the protection of the innocent and the justice of the land.

Some of the causes leading up to and resulting in our present epidemic of lawlessness and disregard for authority, as we see it, are, first, our public school system, educating the intellectual side and neglecting the moral character of the child. The Bible ruled out of our schools, prayer and moral training largely if not wholly neglected.

We are teaching the children patriotism and have enrolled the nation's flag above the banner of the cross. There is no book in existence that teaches a better patriotism and makes more sturdy, loyal citizens than the Bible. I should rather see a boy with a New Testament in his pocket than the nation's flag in his hand.

Another thing that attributes to our present condition is the lack of home discipline and training. The children rule instead of being ruled. There is no "must" in the authority and command of the parent, and no religious instructions in thousands of homes.

The third thing mentioned was saloons and beer. The headquarters of anarchists and school of vice is the saloon. The saloons are ordered to be closed after the riot is on and the city is aflame. Shut them up before and you will not have a riot.

Fourth. Lax enforcement of the first table of the moral law, which relates to our duty to God, and is fundamental. Profanity, Sabbath desecration, etc. The man that respects not God and his laws will not regard man.

Fifth. Miscarriage of justice through influence of money or favoritism, political, social, through club, lodge or other agencies. The delays of trials and expense of courts (justice is a very expensive thing sometimes) has tended to undermine public confidence and hence communities are tempted to take the law in their own hand.

Lastly, a want of due appreciation of the sacredness and value of human life.

Let us call upon the officers to enforce the law, and back them up no matter what the consequences.

Let the pulpit and press join hands in educating the people and arouse a righteous public sentiment on the question. This disgrace must be stamped out, and the church should take the lead in doing it.

The Q. Y. C. Cruise.

The Quincy Yacht club will start on its annual cruise on Friday of next week, leaving the club house at Houghs Neck at 7 A. M. Marblehead will be the objective point, and the fleet expect to arrive in time to witness the races of the Corinthian club on Friday as well as Saturday. Sailing directions will be announced by Fleet Captain Wilkins before the start. M. for a run to Salem Willows.

Why Corn Pops.

Finally a scientific sharp comes to our rescue and in science explains the phenomenon of the popping of popcorn in an extremely lucid and interesting manner. The learned gentleman says:

"The starch polygons are of such nature and construction as to facilitate expansion and render it explosive in character. There is a fracture of a particle along its two radii, the endosperm swelling very considerably, the peripheral portions cohering with the hull, but the fractured quarters turning back to meet below the embryo."

And there you are. Deliciously simple, isn't it?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CAPTURED TWO.

Police Break Up a Bad Gang at Faxon Park.

Word was received at Police headquarters early Monday evening that a gang of hoodlums were bombarding, with rocks, the house near Faxon Park in which Henry H. Faxon was born, but now occupied by Mrs. Frieburg and Mrs. Anderson.

Chief Hayden accompanied by Officers Barry, Holloran, Goodhue and Larkin went to the scene in the patrol wagon. As they approached the park they saw a gang of young men running away. The officers gave chase and captured two of the number, John McAuliffe William Clifford.

While Chief Hayden was taking McAuliffe to the wagon he broke away, but was almost immediately captured by Officer Goodhue. While chasing the gang Chief Hayden fell over a wire fence and the officers nearly got lost in the woods.

The two fellows were arraigned in court.

THE CHINESE CARPENTER.

His Method of Mending a Hole In a Floor Amazed a Caucasian.

"Did you ever get a Chinese carpenter to stop up a hole in the floor?" asked one flat dweller of another. The other had to admit that he had not. Then the first proceeded to tell his wonderful tale, which the listener would not believe until he tried an oriental for the same purpose the next month.

"There was a worn place in the floor that needed patching, and I thought I'd show my wife what a carpenter I was, so I sawed a square section of the planks out. But I cut my hand the first minute and had to send for the Chinaman who has a shop right around the corner. When he got to the door he grunted something that sounded as if it might mean 'Where?' and I pointed to the square hole over in a dark corner.

"'Wow,' he said as he squinted at it a minute. Then he turned around and walked out. I thought—well, I didn't know what to think, I was so amazed. I couldn't understand his giving up such a simple job. I was still puzzling over it half an hour later when I heard a knock. He said 'Wow,' or some other word like it, and held up a square board. Then he walked over to the dark corner of the room and—what do you think? He put the square in, and it fitted just as if it had grown there. And he had just taken a peep at the hole from where he was standing in the door."

The flat dweller's tale is no fairy story. That's the way a Chinese carpenter stops a hole in the floor.—New York Times.

Smoke Farthings.

Smoke farthings were offerings paid in olden days in England at Whitsuntide to the priest, according to the number of chimneys in the parish. Sometimes these dues were demanded by the bishop of the diocese, as an old manuscript records: "The bishop of Elie hath out of everie parish in Cambridgeshire a certain tribute called smoke farthings, which the churchwardens do levie according to the number of chimneys that be in a parish."

We learn from Notes and Queries that Peter's pence or smoke money was still paid at the end of the sixteenth century in many English parishes.

Similar to this was a chimney tax levied from time to time to raise funds. This was most obnoxious to the people, and Pepys in his diary notes, "Much clamor against chimney money, and the people say they will not pay it without force." It was abolished in the reign of William and Mary.

An Auction Incident.

A Japanese vase had been brought forward, and a German in the crowd offered $2. A second bid not being heard the vase was withdrawn, the auctioneer stating that he could not sell on one bid.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," the auctioneer cried out, spreading a large rug on the floor, "here is a piece of goods worth $60. Do I hear $50? Do I hear $40?"

"Ten dollars," shouted the German who had bid on the vase.

"Ten dollars—gone! Sold to my friend there," the auctioneer replied, jotting down the price on a pad.

"Hold on a minute," cried out the purchaser, "you can't sell on vun pid."

"Oh, that's optional with the auctioneer," stammered out the former.

"Yell, den," the German called back, with a parting nod, "keep your rug if its obtional on a rug und unobtional on a vase."—New York Post.

Chas. C. Hearn the popular druggist, who introduced in Quincy Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia with such wonderful success, says that he is hearing from druggists in other parts of the country, where the plan that he urged the Dr. Howard Co. to adopt (introducing their specific by selling at half price) had been followed.

Chas. C. Hearn showed the Ledger man a letter he recently received from C. S. Ingraham of Elmira, one of the best known druggists in New York state. Mr. Ingraham writes: "I have never undertaken the introduction of a new remedy with such satisfactory results, both to myself and to my trade. My average sales have been nearly a hundred bottles per week, and I have every reason to think this will be doubled within a short time.

"The specific gives remarkable results in the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia and constipation, and although every package has been sold under my personal guarantee to refund the money if it did not give satisfaction, not one has been returned."

"My experience has been a duplicate of my Elmira friend's," said Chas. C. Hearn, "except that I have had one customer ask for her money back, which I returned without any questions. However, I do not think she could have given the remedy a fair trial. I am still selling the specific at half price, a fifty cent bottle of sixty doses for 25 cents, although I do not know how long I shall be able to do so, and your readers had better take advantage of this chance before it is too late." 21-24-28-31

TORTURE AND ROBBERY

Practiced Upon Women by Masked Men In a Connecticut Town

Gosnen, Conn., July 28.—Bound hand and foot to her bed between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Morse, an aged woman, who resides in this place, gazed fearlessly at two masked men and absolutely refused to give them any information which might lead to the discovery of plunder. The men gained access to Mrs. Morse's room without awakening her, and before she could make any movement they secured her to the bedposts with ropes. Then one drew a pistol and threatened to shoot her unless she gave them the desired information. When this threat failed the robbers made preparations to torture Mrs. Morse by burning the soles of her feet, but the discovery of $50, a gold watch and a ring on a dresser in the room turned them from their purpose.

In another part of the house they found Mrs. Patrick Turner. They bound her also as they did Mrs. Morse and threatened her with a revolver. Thoroughly frightened, the woman gave information which led to the discovery of $23. This the men evidently believed was all that could be secured and leaving the woman helplessly bound they went away.

Judge Blames Gate Tender

Boston, July 28.—In his report on the Freeport street crossing accident, when Driver Duffy of the Boston protective department was killed, Judge Churchill finds that Gate Tender James F. Cleary, who was on duty at the crossing, neglected to have the gates down and notified the protective wagon and its crew that the coast was clear. Cleary was arrested last night upon a warrant charging him with manslaughter. Cleary is 60 years old and has been in the company's employ for over 25 years.

A Midsummer Snowstorm

Mt. Washington, July 28.—While a windstorm was at its height yesterday three inches of snow fell on the mountain. Telephone and telegraph wires were disabled and the carriage road through Crawford notch was made impassable by fallen trees. Telegraph and telephone communication to Jackson was cut off by several poles being blown down between the railroad station and the village, three miles distant.

Aldermen Turn Over Graft Charges

Chicopee, Mass., July 28.—The aldermen last evening passed a vote to compile all the evidence at hand in the matter of "junk licenses, liquor licenses and other licenses" and turn the same over to the district attorney, with the understanding that he present the same, if warranted, to the grand jury. This closes the investigation proceedings as far as the board of aldermen is concerned.

Bold Daylight Robberies

Holbrook, Mass., July 28.—Four houses were robbed in broad daylight here while the occupants were absent. The police have a good description of the suspected parties and it is believed that the thieves are members of the gang which has been operating in towns in this vicinity of late. Three houses were broken into here about a week ago and valuables taken.

Paper Strike May Soon End

Holyoke, Mass., July 28.—Eagle lodge of papermaker last night gave the grievance committee of five full authority to act for the union in all matters pertaining to the strike. The committee, it is said, may even declare the strike off if that should seem in its judgment the best thing to do. The action of the meeting is considered a step toward ending the strike.

Seven Thousand Operatives Idle

Fall River, Mass., July 28.—Eight hundred thousand spindles and 7050 operatives are idle on account of the situation in the cotton market. A strike of doffers in the carding room of the Flint mills, caused by a trivial dispute about wages, led to a total shut down for an indefinite period. About 51,000 spindles and 525 employes are affected.

Hard on Newspaper Men

Shanghai, July 28.—Counsel have appealed to the foreign ministers for advice on the subject of the request of the Chinese officials that Chinese editors arrested on charges of sedition should be turned over to Chinese jurisdiction. Several reformers have been arrested at Pekin, the most prominent of whom is the correspondent of a Japanese newspaper.

GIBBONS VERY POPULAR

But Stands No Show of Becoming Next Pope

DI PIETRO AS A COMPROMISE

In the Event of Avowed Candidates Failing to Secure Necessary Votes—Members of Sacred College Will Not Roll In Luxury at Conclave

Rome, July 28.—Almost all the cardinals of the conclave have now arrived. Their time yesterday was mainly occupied with a lengthy meeting of the congregation, which was notable for the cordiality with which Cardinal Gibbons was received. After the meeting the cardinals received numerous visitors at their various residences.

In well-informed circles Cardinal Angelo di Pietro, pro-datary of the late pope, is being talked of as a compromise candidate in the event that Cardinals Oreglia, Gotti, Rampolla or Serafino Vannuelli are unable to secure the necessary votes. Should Di Pietro be elected pope he would, it is said, be the representative of the Rampolla-Gotti faction and yet would be fairly acceptable to all.

Cardinal Logue, archbishop of Armagh, who, with the exception of Cardinal Gibbons, will be the only English-speaking cardinal in the conclave, has arrived from Ireland. He said he believed that the successor to Leo would be quickly chosen. In his case perhaps the hope is father to the thought, as he said he did not look forward with a great degree of pleasure to being shut up in the Vatican during the present hot weather.

Speaking of Cardinal Gibbons, the Irish cardinal paid him a glowing tribute, though, like all the prelates here, he holds out no hope that the American cardinal has the remotest chance of election. "Indeed," said Cardinal Logue, "I think Cardinal Gibbons would be a subject for commiseration if the selection should devolve upon him, for no American would care to spend the rest of his life confined within the precincts of the Vatican."

Each of the cardinals during the conclave will have a suite of apartments comprising four rooms, made up of three bedrooms, one for the cardinal, one for his conclavist and the third for his servant. The fourth room will be used as a salon or dining room, according to circumstances.

Several of the cardinals proposed, in view of the extreme heat, to celebrate mass during the conclave in the Pauline chapel early enough every morning to complete the morning balloting in the Sistine chapel by 11 o'clock. This proposition was agreed to. The cardinals may, however, if they desire, celebrate mass in their own cells, for which purpose small portable wood altars have been constructed.

When the lots for apartments were drawn Cardinal Gibbons drew No. 5, the modest apartment of Commendatore Puccinelli, the master of the house. It is a few steps above the ground floor on the left of the noble staircase entering from the court of San Damaso. The bedroom of the cardinal is decorated with paper of an ordinary yellowish gray and it contains a small iron bed, a marble top dressing table, a small writing desk, an armchair, an iron clothes stand, a little, high movable mirror, framed in iron and wood, and a prie dieu at the side of the bed. Over the bed hangs a Madonna. Adjoining this is the room of the conclavist, which is smaller, with about the same furniture. A smaller room, with a camp-bed, is for the use of the servant. The fourth room will be of little use, as it is without a window. The apartment is lighted with electricity. It will probably be very warm, as it has a full southern exposure. The bedroom of the cardinal measures 14 feet by 11 feet.

Part of Train Went Into River

Phillipsburg, N. J., July 28.—At Harmony, five miles north of here, a heavy ice train, drawn by two locomotives, ran into a freight which had stopped on account of a hot box. Two engines and 16 cars were wrecked. One locomotive and nine cars went over an embankment into the Delaware river. The train crews escaped injury by jumping.

Deaths on the Rail

Washington, July 28.—The report of the interstate commerce commission on railroad accidents in the United States for the three months ending March 31 last shows that during that quarter the aggregate casualties were 827 killed and 11,481 injured. There were 1659 collisions and 1181 derailments.

Swedish Labor Trouble Settled

Stockholm, July 28.—Delegates appointed by the employers and workmen, representing the two sides to the controversy over wages which resulted in a lockout of about 15,000 machinists and foundrymen in Sweden July 6, have reached an agreement to terminate the lockout Aug. 3.

Constructed by Americans

New York, July 28.—The first locomotive has arrived at Junin over the new railway from Oraya to Cerropasco, cables the Lima, Peru, correspondent of The Herald. The railway was constructed by American capitalists.

Fined $1000 For Peonage

Montgomery, Ala., July 28.—In the United States circuit court here James H. Todd and Anderson Hardy pleaded guilty to charges of peonage against them and were fined $1000 each.

TWO MORE FAILURES

Because of the General Decline In the Security Market

New York, July 28.—In spite of, or probably because of two additional failures on the Stock Exchange—E. S. Hooley & Co. of this city and William Basset of Boston—the stock market has showed general improvement and the situation as a whole is viewed with more cheerfulness.

The market displayed a hesitating tone at the outset, many of the railroad stocks showing fractional declines. Slight improvement soon followed, but prices fell off from 1 to 3 points in the active list with even greater declines in the specialties as soon as the Hooley failure came out. Evansville and Terre Haute, a Hooley specialty, declined 9½ points, and the entire list reflected considerable confusion.

The assignee of Hooley & Co. would make no statement for publication and it was impossible to learn the extent of the firm's obligations. In conservative circles its liabilities are placed at about $3,000,000.

Roughly estimated, the Basset liabilities, secured and unsecured, will amount to about $750,000.

Suspected of Killing Wife

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 28.—Martin Ebelt, husband of the young woman whose body was found in a sewer on the outskirts of the city, where it had been thrown after she had been strangled to death, has been arrested. Ebelt is a lineman and was at work when arrested. The police have traced Ebelt and his wife almost to the spot where the body was found and have evidence that they were lost sight of within 300 yards of the place. The man returned alone and was perspiring freely. This evidence was brought out from a younger brother of the prisoner.

Murphy Convicted of Larceny

New York, July 28.—The jury in the trial of Lawrence Murphy, former treasurer of the Stone Cutters' union, after being out 20 minutes, returned a verdict of guilty of grand larceny in the first degree. This is the first case in which a conviction has been obtained in a "labor graft" case. The defense tried to maintain that the $10,000 stolen from the union was not the union's money, but was extorted from employers by individual members of the union for their own pockets.

To Resume Building Operations

New York, July 28.—The board of governors of the Building Trades Employers' association has ordered all members of the association to start work on buildings at once, using any housesmiths, hoisting engineers and shorers who will individually sign their plan of arbitration. This means that work will be started on the greater part of the building operations throughout the city and that men will be employed on them irrespective of whether they are union or not.

Big Corporation Hard Pushed

Philadelphia, July 28.—President Shields of the Consolidated Lake Superior company has made another appeal to the stockholders of the company for financial assistance. In a circular letter sent to the stockholders he announces that unless the proposed $12,500,000 bond issue is taken the whole property must pass into the hands of the creditors. The Lake Superior company is capitalized at $102,000,000.

Wheat Exports Shut Off

Pekin, July 28.—The Russian administration of New Chwang has stopped the exportation of wheat to Japan. The export of grain from Chinese ports is illegal, but the Russians, heretofore, have ignored the law. In the past week the Japanese obtained many shiploads from New Chwang, apparently preparing for war contingencies.

Newspapers Tied Up by Strike

Spokane, Wash., July 28.—Every printer employed by the Spokane Review has quit work. As The Chronicle and Bulletin use the same composing room under contract, both these papers are equally involved. The trouble arose from a disagreement as to wages submitted to arbitration. The arbitrators decided in favor of the publishers.

Quite a Pile In Interest

Washington, July 28.—The annual report of the auditor for the war department shows that during the year enlisted men of the army made 121,709 deposits under the act of May 15, 1872, amounting to $3,751,416, and that 158,179 deposits were withdrawn, amounting to $4,802,190, upon which the depositors received $262,373 in interest.

Majority In Favor of Canal Treaty

Bogota, July 28.—Following the procedure of the house of representatives, which referred the canal treaty to a committee, the senate has referred the treaty to a commission for study and investigation. It is reported that six members of this commission favor the ratification of the treaty, two are opposed to it and two are undecided.

Prince Chimay In a Smashup

Mezieres, France, July 28.—Prince Joseph of Chimay, whose former wife, the Princess of Chimay (Clara Ward of Detroit), eloped with Rigo, a Hungarian musician, in 1893, met with a serious automobile accident near the village of Roeroi while trying to avoid a cyclist. The mechanician was killed.

CANDIDACY OF DEVERY

Will Enliven Mayoralty Campaign In New York

HAS FIVE THOUSAND NAMES

On His Nomination Petition and Will Continue to Pile Them Up—Tammany Hall Likely to Have the Shivers Over Word Coining

New York, July 28.—"Big Chief" Devery has already secured more than enough signatures to his petition as an independent candidate for mayor to entitle him to a place on the official ballot, although his canvassers have been at work only a week. More than 5000 voters have signed, and but 2000 are necessary. He has instructed his men to go on circulating the petition. It is his intention to get from 10,000 to 20,000 signatures before sending the petition to the secretary of state, just to show that there is something in the Devery movement. Of course all those who sign are not bound to vote for Devery, but the success of his canvassers so far indicates that he will be an interesting figure in the municipal campaign.

Devery is also preparing for the primaries, which will take place in September. The speaking part of the primary campaign will not begin till August, but Devery is not idle. He spends most of his time these days at his cottage at Rockaway beach preparing speeches. Somebody told him that Demosthenes used to walk along a beach and try his voice against the war of the waves. "Don't know the man," Devery commented, "but I want you to understand that I don't copy after nobody. I'm nothin' if not original."

If Devery is as successful in word-coining during the coming campaign as he has been in the past he will be a terror to Tammany hall. Some of his products seem to have passed permanently into the English language, because they express ideas which no other words exactly convey. When he spoke of a certain police captain, noted for his lofty opinion of himself, as being "chesty," all New York adopted the term. Later he made another hit by describing Daniel F. McMahon of last year's Tammany triumvirate as "two spot." McMahon is very small physically and politically, and no other term could fit him so well. Devery was equally happy in his remark to the effect that Edward M. Shepard, if he had been elected mayor, would have attacked Tammany corruption with a feather duster. Shepard is still spoken of as a "feather duster reformer." With a word Devery killed off Louis F. Haffen, president of the Bronx borough, as a possible mayoralty candidate by calling him the "joke" of the Tammany triumvirate. The word described Haffen's position exactly. Haffen had mayoralty aspirations, but he could not live down the name Devery fixed on him.

The "big chief" will do most of his speaking in the tenement districts, particularly on the East side, where he had a long experience as a police captain. He will first invade the Sullivan territory. If he cares to, he can tell some interesting tales about that territory and the rule of the Sullivans. He and "Dry Dollar" Sullivan, the boss of the Bowery, were once close friends. As Sullivan is now the power behind the throne in Tammany hall, Devery is in a position to hit the organization hard through him, if he cares or dares. It was freely charged during Van Wyck's administration, that Sullivan had a monopoly of the poolrooms south of Fourteenth street, and that Devery, then chief of police, was a silent partner.

Devery also intends to give particular attention to Charles F. Murphy's district, the 18th; in which there is a large tenement house population. "I'm goin' to show the people there what a good thing Murphy has made out of politics," he said last night. "A few years ago Murphy lived among the tenements and didn't mind drawin' a can of beer in his saloon for a constituent. Now he lives in Stuyvesant square, hobnobs with J. Pierpont Morgan in front of St. George's church on Sundays and shudders with disgust when he passes a tenement."

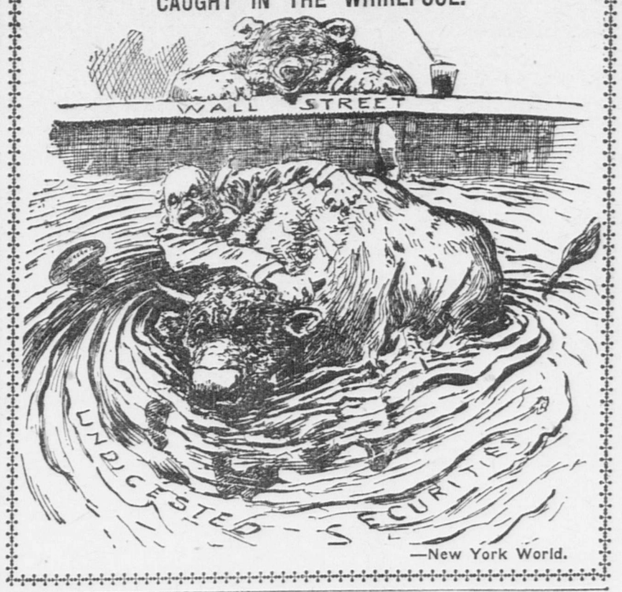

Devery has planned a campaign feature that resembles the plan of the Citizens' union to send parties of citizens to see the city departments and institutions. He intends to take parties to docks leased by the Tammany dock board, of which Murphy was treasurer, and point out the "good things" Murphy gave his relatives and friends.

"I'll take a crowd over to the Seventy-ninth street dock," he explained, "and say to them: 'Charlie Murphy's brother and his alderman, Jim Gaffney, got this dock with dumping privileges for a song. Their receipts are $200 a day; expenses, almost nothin.' Then I'll take them to another dock and say: 'Murphy leased this dock to his friend Cunningham for $14,000 a year. The next week, Cunningham sublet it for $34,000; profit in one week, $20,000.' And so on all down the North river. Don't you think that will open the eyes of the people?"

Steamer Monterey Breaking Up

St. Johns, July 28.—Steamer Monterey, which went ashore near St. Pierre, Miq., July 15, is going to pieces, owing to a fierce gale which is raging. Two steamers have left here to assist in salving the cargo and freighting the cattle aboard to Sydney.

Rampolla's Opponents May Vote For Foreign Pope

AN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Cardinals, Diplomats and Nobility Attend Mass For Repose of Soul of Pope Leo—Seasoned Churchmen Spellbound by Perfection of Chant

Rome, July 29.—That there is a conviction at the Vatican that the conclave will be of short duration is proved by the fact that all those who are to enter the conclave to minister to the wants of the cardinals have been engaged for only three days.

The two camps into which the sacred college is divided appear to be becoming daily more irreconcilable and it is said that the anti-Rampolla faction has declared that, if necessary to defeat the opposition, they will even go to the length of supporting a foreign cardinal. The name of Cardinal Kopp, bishop of Breslau, was mentioned in this connection, but was hardly considered seriously, owing to the belief that under present conditions the elevation of a German to the papacy might mean the irreparable loss of France to the holy see.

The first of the three great requiem masses under the auspices of the sacred college, for the repose of the soul of Pope Leo, was celebrated in the Sistine chapel. All the cardinals now in Rome, the diplomatic corps, the Roman nobility and many other distinguished persons were present. No such mass has been seen in Rome since the death of Pius IX.

In the Sistine chapel stood a huge white catafalque, 30 feet high, and on it, upon two scarlet cushions, rested a triple crown of gold, shining brightly in the light of 100 candles. The catafalque completely hid the altar. Flanking the catafalque, on benches specially constructed, sat almost all the members of the sacred college, wearing scarlet capes over their violet robes. At their feet, on stools, were the conclavists, or secretaries, in violet. In the narrow aisle behind, between the benches and the wall, the heads of the religious orders, archbishops, patriarchs, monsignors, and monks, knelt or stood in picturesque confusion.

At the four corners of the catafalque burned candles 10 feet high. Beside those stood noble guards, motionless, with drawn swords. Other noble guards were posted at the chancel entrance. Immediately beyond, in reserved places, were all the diplomats. Beneath the galleries the priests and laymen who had been fortunate enough to secure tickets were packed in dire seclusion. Swiss and noble guards, chamberlains and other Vatican officials lined the aisle. Michael Angelo's frescoes on ceiling and walls seemed merely faint reflections of the brilliant maze of color that stretched below from door to altar.

Abbe Perosi, Italy's famous oratorio composer, waved his baton and the silence was broken with the notes of "Dies Irae." Those who know the Vatican well say the matchless Sistine choir never sang so well before. Through the historic chapel the voices of boys and men rose and fell and swelled triumphantly as if with songs of paradise, the voices dying away almost to a whisper at the mention of death. Even the cardinals sat spellbound by this perfection of the Gregorian chant. Not a note of instrumental music was heard throughout the mass. At the altar Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli was assisted by Cardinals Agliardi, Vincenzo Vannutelli, Satolli and Richard, wearing white mitres and glistening vestments.

As the 50 cardinals and 50 conclavists gathered around the catafalque and alternately knelt and rose, their movements resembeled an amazing kaleidoscope of crimson and violet, with colors so bright as to be most trying to the eyes.

Then came the singing of the Sanctus, modulated almost into a whisper. All present knelt as the choir ceased the intonation of its grand chant and the dead silence of the consecration which followed was suddenly broken by the clash of arms as the noble guards presented swords. Then there was another clatter of arms as the soldiers' scabbards clashed on the marble flooring, when they dropped on one knee, lowered their swords and brought their left hands to their helmets in rigid salute.

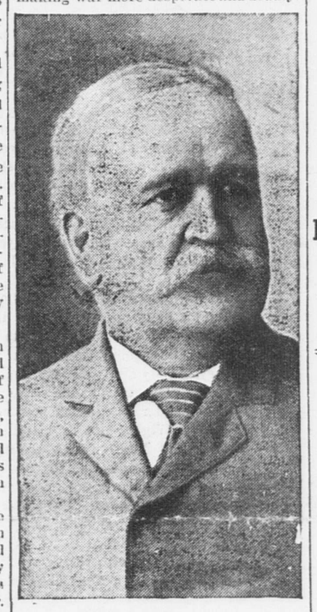

Clouds of incense rose from the censers until Michael Angelo's famous "Last Judgment" was almost hidden from view. Suddenly the sharp tinkling of a bell rang through the edifice and told the worshippers that the host had been elevated. At the conclusion of the mass the choir again burst into song, and Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, preceded by the cross-bearer, passed solemnly around the catafalque, after sprinkling it with holy water. Each of the officiating cardinals followed in turn, and the ceremony was concluded with the chanting of the Oremus.

The Tribuna says that as the fisherman's ring, which could not be found after the death of the pope, may be discovered in some drawer which was sealed up and cannot be opened until after the election of the new pope, the camerlengo, Cardinal Oreglia, has ordered a new one for use in the symbolic ceremony which occurs immediately after the successor to Leo is chosen.

WARS OF THE FUTURE

Discussed by Two Former Governors of the Old Bay State

Boston, July 29.—The Massachusetts club held its annual midsummer outing at Hotel Pemberton, ex-Governor Long presiding, and although no formal speech-making had been planned there were some very interesting remarks. Ex-Governor Boutwell, in the course of his remarks, said: "I look forward to a condition of general peace among the nations of the world, and I have almost reached the conviction that this condition is to be hastened by the process of making war more desperate and deadly.

HON. JOHN D. LONG.

I am almost convinced, moreover, that, if property can be made as liable to be taken for purposes of war as are your sons and brothers, war will be less likely, for when the destruction of property as well as life becomes certain and comprehensive, nations will not want to engage in war."

Mr. Long later commented upon Mr. Boutwell's remarks and endorsed what he had said relative to the influence for peace of the methods rapidly being adopted by the nations of the world, due to the skill of the inventor, which make for the certain destruction of life. He was almost prepared to say that the time toward which Mr. Boutwell was looking was already here. He called attention to Germany's great military establishment. It had been a long time since Germany had had a war and he doubted if she would ever have another with a European nation, while as for any foreign nation ever attempting to invade the United States with an army, such an army, even if it should, would, he asserted, be utterly annihilated. He predicted that "there will never again be a pitched battle in the field," on account of the deadliness of modern artillery equipment.

The bill will also provide that the state police enforce the speed regulations.

Hampton Beach, N. H., July 29.—Two spearback whales, 50 feet long, were sighted about a quarter of a mile off here. They spouted streams 20 feet high and were watched by crowds of spectators from the shore. The whales left the harbor after about two hours.

Caldwell Makes a New Record

Boston, July 29.—In the "golden wheel" motor-paced race at Charles River park last night, in which Harry Caldwell, De Guichard, Benny Munroe and Gus Lawson competed, Caldwell made a new world's record for one hour's riding in competition, covering 47 miles, 454 yards; Munroe was second, De Guichard third, and Lawson last.

Fatal Burning Accident

Fall River, Mass., July 29.—Elizabeth Donald, 7 years old, with other children, was roasting potatoes at a bonfire in a field, when her dress caught fire. She ran about the field, the wind fanning the flames, when she was noticed by two men passing by, who extinguished the fire. She was attended by two doctors, but died last night.

Judge Imposes Severe Sentence

Bath, Me., July 29.—Judge Fogg fined Edward Robinson $200 and costs and sentenced him to six months in jail for a single sale of liquor. In default of payment of the fine jail sentence was to be increased to one year. Robinson appealed and was committed to jail in default of bail to await the August term of the supreme court.

Perhaps Fatally Hurt by Bicycle

Leominster, Mass., July 29.—Henry A. Russell was run down by a bicyclist here as he was crossing a street, sustaining a fracture of the skull besides internal injuries which are regarded as fatal. The bicyclist had his nose broken. Russell was thrown headlong 12 feet by the force of the collision. An arrest may follow.

Accident on Race Track

Saugus, Mass., July 29.—Trailer J. T. fell in the stretch in the 2:25 trot at Old Saugus track and his driver, Wilbur Duntley, was seriously injured. That Duntley was not trampled upon by the other horses in the field was due only to the quick action of the other drivers. Duntley suffered from bruises on his face and head and will be laid up for several weeks.

Alleged Hazers Acquitted

Barton, Vt., July 29.—The hearing at Barton landing before Justice Guild in the case of the two Brownington boys, charged with hazing a young companion and inflicting injuries from which he died two weeks later, ended in the discharge of the defendants. The justice deemed the evidence against them insufficient to warrant their being held for the grand jury.

A Dynamite Scare

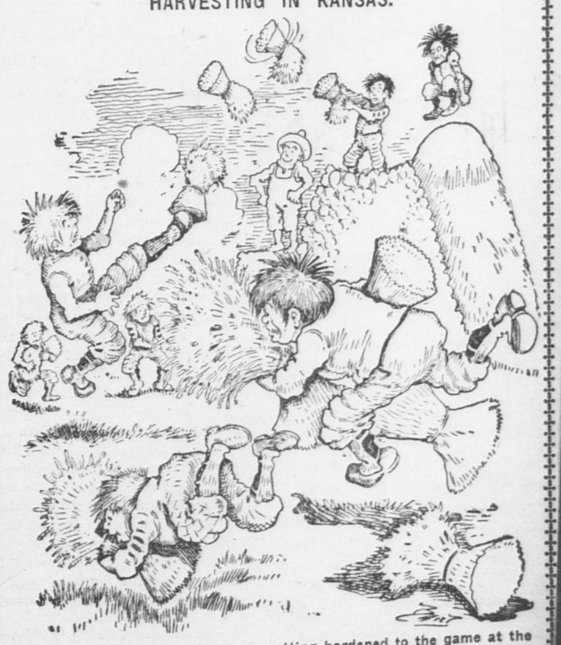

Salonica, July 29.—Dispatches received here say that 18 Bulgarian officers have left Sofia for Salonica, for the purpose of renewing the dynamite outrages. The population is anxious.

L. M. Pratt & Son—German Frankfurts.

Good Afternoon

They say those half tone cuts of yatchts appearing in the Daily Ledger are printed better than in the official pamphlets issued.

Now is the time to start a movement for an Old Home Week celebration in Quincy next July. It will take a year to obtain the addresses of former residents.

While adults are familiar with hand engines a majority of the children in cities do not know what they are. Soon the common pumps will be a thing of the past. Thus the world is progressing.

The good people of Quincy can greatly assist the police in apprehending that daylight burglar, if they will report promptly by telephone all suspicious characters, and at the same time keep watch of them. Neighbors, keep a look out for him.

The freight track at Neponset, used by one train a day, just to keep the location, has too long been a bugaboo and an excuse for not giving Quincy through street cars to Boston. While cars from Marblehead, Lynn, Chelsea, Somerville, Cambridge, Arlington, Newton and Brookline enter the subway, Quincy would be content if its people were taken to the Dudley street terminal, so that but one change would be necessary. This now seems assured, so that but one change will be necessary, and the waits at Neponset will be obviated.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Above all things, keep your tax rate down. We all like good things, but we must not forget to count the cost. Don't push your tax rate up, as we have in Taunton. If they keep on shoving it up down there, the good Lord only knows what will become of us. We have taken time down there to pitch into the board of aldermen and the councilmen, and now they don't dare to spend a cent. A high tax rate is the curse of any community, and retards its growth."—Judge H. J. Fuller of Taunton at Mansfield Old-Home Week exercises.

☞Pharaoh's order to kill every male child in the land applied to the youngest infants. The law of custom which requires every boy of about a dozen years of age to celebrate the Fourth of July with toy pistols means the destruction of a good part of the male children of the land, after they are half grown, every year, and by one of the most agonizing forms of death known. It is a sort of votive offering of the youth of the land on the altar of Independance. More boys of 10 to 15 years of age, have died of lockjaw in the past three weeks than the numbers of deaths resulting from all the riotous disturbances in this country in at least a year; and, judging from the last war, the United States navy would annihilate half the navies of the world with less loss of life than has resulted from the annual carnival of insane folly with pistols of the toy kind and the other kinds.—Woonsocket Reporter.

—L. A. Gibson of Rockland was killed in that town Tuesday evening, while crossing Water street, being struck by a bicycle.

TWO MORE BREAKS

By the Daring Daylight Burglar.

Successful at Both Places.

A Description of the Valuables Taken.

Two more daylight robberies in the Quincy Point district were reported to the police Tuesday evening, and from the descriptions of the man seen about the houses, the job was evidently done by the same party who made the breaks last week at Quincy Point, and the party who did similar work at Braintree and Holbrook.

The houses entered Tuesday were those of Peter Delorey at No. 2 Broadway, and Mrs. John Wightman at No. 8 Broadway. Both families were at Nantasket all day on an outing and the breaks were not discovered until their return late in the afternoon. Entrance to the Delorey house was made by skeleton keys which the party left in the door.

At Mrs. Wightman's the party gained entrance by forcing the back door.

Carpenters and plasterers at work on a new house near by saw a stranger about the place just before noon and it is thought he did the job. He is discribed as being 5 feet, 8 inches tall, stout, and apparently about 25 years of age. He wore dark clothes and a straw hat.

At the Delorey house the fellow secured an Elgin silver watch, $3 in cash and two of the National Granite Bank home banks containing about $5 in money. They also took fifty panoramic views. The two banks were found smashed under a wagon off South street.

At Mrs. Wightman's the articles taken were: Gold hunting case watch, with letter "M" engraved on the face cover; on the back cover was a crescent with four small diamonds and a star with the diamond missing; a lady's long gold chain, attached to which was a gold sovereign with the letters "M L" stamped on it; a New York standard watch and gold chain; on the chain was a $2 Newfoundland gold piece dated 1865, and an American gold dollar dated 1854; also a single stone diamond ring.

TODAY THE BIG DAY.

All Weymouth Unites Today in Old Home Week Exercises.

Today is the big day of Old Home Week at Weymouth, and the whole town unites in exercises on the High school grounds this afternoon, and inside the building this evening.

Tuesday there were throngs at New Downer Landing when North Weymouth celebrated. Shaw's band of Boston furnished music and there were addresses by Selectman George L. Newton, president of the day; Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell, Editor Hawes of the Weymouth Transcript, Henry B. Reed, and Herbert A. Newton.

There was an interesting series of sports, and the North Weymouths defeated the South Weymouths at base ball 12 to 7. Dancing was also enjoyed, and many accepted the invitation to visit the Fore River shipyard in Quincy.

☞No one doubts that the directors of the United States Steel corporation were acting in entire good faith when they presented a plan to dispose of a lot of preferred stock among employes at 82 1-2. That is to say, they wanted to interest employes in the prosperity of the concern, and they believed that was a rock-bottom price for the shares. Quite a quantity of stock was disposed of in that way, but the price now hangs around 70. It is as good for 7 percent a year now as it ever was to all appearances, and buying employes have not lost anything except an opportunity to buy much more cheaply than they did. That, however, is enough to put them in a discontented frame of mind, and it is a question whether the corporation has gained much in feeding employes with a stock of so highly speculative a character as this. It may have the effect rather of drawing their attention from work or business to speculation. Springfield Republican.

—London is said to possess at present no less than 313 parks and open spaces, while in 1884 their number was only 103. They are reckoned to have cost $10,995,000. On a rough calculation there is an acre to 752 persons, reckoning to London a little more than 4,500,000 souls.

EXCELLENT TRIP.

Barre Manufacturers Report They Were "Superbly Entertained."

The Barre Daily Times of Monday says in part: The visit of Barre Granite Manufacturers' Association with the Quincy, (Mass.) Association closed Saturday evening, and nearly all the members of the local association returned home Sunday morning, although a few decided to make a little longer stop, returning this morning. The party reports an excellent trip throughout, being superbly entertained by their Quincy friends who spared no efforts to make the trip enjoyable.

The closing feature of the two days' entertainment was a clam-bake given by the Quincy manufacturers at Crescent Park, R. I., Saturday. Over 300 were present, and the occasion was very much enjoyed. One of the most interesting features of the day was a ball game between the Vermonters and the Quincy men. The latter won by a score of 8 to 2, although the game was quite exciting. The umpire was Representative Peter T. Fallon of Quincy, and it was said he showed some partiality, to the Vermonters in close decisions. But, notwithstanding that aid, the visitors were unable to tally enough times to win. Several elaborate plays are reported.

A fine dinner was served in a large pavilion after which the remainder of the day was spent in various ways, and for once shop talk was not allowed.

—The St. Louis fair appropriations for the states and territories amount to $6,107,500, or $707,969 more than the total from similar sources at the Chicago exposition.

BOY RESCUED.

Fell from a Raft at Houghs Neck.

Was Under Water When Reached.

Henry P. Kittredge the Candidate for a Medal.

But for the prompt action of Henry P. Kittredge at Houghs Neck, Tuesday afternoon, Arthur McCarthy, aged about 14 years, would have found a watery grave.

Mr. Kittredge was on his way across the breakwater near the Fensmere when he saw the boy struggling in the water, and heard the shouts of women in the cottages along the shore. He saw that if the boy was to be saved that he must act promptly.

Without waiting to take off any of his clothing he plunged in and struck out for the boy. When he reached him the boy was under water. Mr. Kittredge brought him ashore where the people in the cottages worked over him and resuscitated him.

It seems that the boy had gone out on a raft and either jumped or fell off into the water and was unable to help himself.

Broke It to Him Gently.

A north Missouri editor received a note the other day telling him that one of his subscribers was dead and asking that his paper be discontinued. A few days later the editor met the "deceased" subscriber on the street and told him about the note. "I wrote that note myself," returned the subscriber. "What for?" asked the editor. "Well, I wanted to stop yer paper," said the subscriber candidly, "an', knowin' how bad you need the money, I didn't have the heart to come right out an' do it. So I jes' wrote you the note about bein' dead. You wouldn't send a paper to a corpse, would you?"—Kansas City Star.

An Odd Bequest.

The following is one of the oddest bequests ever recorded in a last testament. It appeared in the will of a Bristol mariner proved in 1795. The old gentleman ordered his executors to "pay out of the first moneys collected, to my beloved wife, if living, 1 shilling, which I have given as a token of my love, that she may buy hazelnuts, as I know that she is better pleased with cracking them than she is with mending the holes in her stockings."

Wants and Wishes.

"There's a strange man at the door, sir," announced the new servant from Boston.

"What does he want?" asked the master of the house impatiently.

"Begging your pardon, sir," replied the servant, a shade of disapproval manifest in his voice, "he wants a bath, but what he is asking for is something to eat."—Syracuse Herald.

Consolatory, but Not Helpful.

"De rich will have a hard time gittin' inter heaven."

"Yes," said Brother Williams, "dat's a comfortin' thought; but it don't help de po' man when rent's due!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Vain.

"Did you find the Chinese a vain people?"

"Very. To hear a Chinese brag you could almost believe an American was talking."—Detroit Free Press.

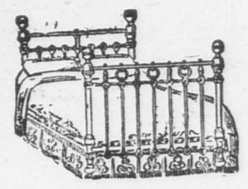

—A good way to peel ripe tomatoes is to put them into a frying basket and plunge the basket for a second into boiling water to loosen the skins. This is particularly the best way when one is preparing a quantity of tomatoes and wishes to keep them all firm and hard. If the boiling water is poured over them in a pan, the tomatoes at the bottom are quite sure to become soft before they are peeled.

REUNION AT P. E. I.

Dr. Gordon Speaks at Dedication of a Monument.

A number of our Quincy citizens have just been down to their old home and to that of their ancestors to attend the ceremonies of dedicating a fine monument which is put up in the little cemetery upon a beautiful island near the main land at Brudenelle island, Prince Edward Island.

For a century, since the first burial was made upon a then lonely island covered with forest trees, until today, no special memorial has been placed there.

One hundred years ago this summer two Scottish families and their children left their homes to find a new one in North America.

These pioneers were James MacLaren and Donald Gordon and their families. Our veteran physician, Dr. John A. Gordon, is a grandson and he has two sisters, two nephews, a niece and a grand nephew, all descendants of the pioneer Donald Gordon who are residents of our city.

Then there are the MacDonalds and many others whose ancestors were among those early settlers who have, during thirty years come to make their homes in Quincy. Many of these joined in this home coming. There were eight hundred there and one gentleman came from New Zealand after an absence of fifty years.

Dr. Gordon gave the opening address, which included a history of the families from the earliest to later times. We have in our city, many of these, including the families of Gordon, MacDonald, Burke, Drake and others.

With slight exception, these families gathered with hundreds from far and near, and upon an ideal summer day, unveiled a handsome monument upon the beautiful island which has been a resting place for one hundred years of the first one who was buried there, and whose descendants have for more than one quarter of a century honored our town and city.

The monument of New Brunswick gray granite rests upon a base of granite rock and cement and is of generous dimensions.

A century is but a short time in the world's history, but it is sufficient to paint great changes in human events. Now as we look about us we see the shores of this beautiful river lined with well tilled farms, marked with fine houses, large barns, and all the evidences of wealth and comfort. One hundred years ago when our ancestors landed here, it was a primeval forest, and the home of the bear and wild cat and the fox.

There was no habitation to give them shelter; no friendly hand to welcome them; no kindly human voice to give them greeting. Very beautiful must have been the prospect, the esthetic sense of the pioneers in the early October days of 1803. The beautiful peaceful river with its blue waters and red banks; the broad expanse of bay stretching away in ever widening shores to the well wooded Boughton and Panmure Islands, and about and around them everywhere the deep dark forests lighted up here and there with the red and yellow of the changing foliage of the early autumn.

But the pioneers had more arduous work before them than observing the beauties of nature. They had to cut down these fine old trees, the growth of hundreds of years, to build their cabins, to clear their farms, and prepare the ground for seed time in the coming spring, work that required courage, energy and endurance to contemplate and to perform.

The closing words, are, with dauntless courage and hopeful animation, characteristic of their race. They steadily and patiently baffled with every opposing element; with implements unhandy and crude they gradually converted the silent grandeur that surrounded them into the utility of industrial life. By their industry and that faith inspired by confidence of success they left us a heritage which we prize an example one should emulate.

Let us not forget that we also are "architects of fate" building in these "walls of time," and let us so order our lives as to be worthy of such a noble heritage and of the esteem of those who will follow us.

These reunions, these home comings which are being organized in so many places, are a forerunner for good as they are a touching of hands and a communion of a spirit that unites and concentrates high emotions and that defy narrow selfish interests; an uplifting into something better that stimulates to high character, that may, should, overcome the spirit of grasping commercial interest that is a threat to the best citizenship.

☞ The number of things that the small force of state police is called upon to do is something that would be funny were it not a pathetic example of the fact that many, many of the city and town police forces in the state are either wretchedly incompetent or worse. —Brockton Enterprise.

Anticipation.

What a Relief.

"Who's there?" called the poet.

"I am the wolf at the door," came the dire reply.

"Come in, come in!" cried the poet. "I thought at first you might be a man with a bill."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Not in your case," replied Miss Biffington in a tone redolent with acrimony.

STREET CAR SPEED.

How Wellesley Proposes to Regulate Electric Cars.

The selectmen of Wellesley filed with the railroad commissioners on Tuesday, says the Globe, a set of regulations relative to the speed of electric cars operated within that town. The selectmen seek the board's approval of their action.

At the last sitting of the general court a law was passed compelling the local authorities in towns to pass regulations governing the speed of street railway cars. A long list of accidents had caused the commissioners to ask for the passage of such compulsory legislation. The law provided that the local authorities "shall" make regulations, the same to be subject to the approval, alteration or amendment of the state board.

Up to the present time only four towns have responded—Middleboro, Lee, Great Barrington and Wellesley—have submitted their speed schedules. The board has issued an order in the Middleboro case, and in that instance formulated general rules. The petitions of Lee and Great Barrington are scheduled for hearing on Friday next.

It is being remarked generally in the vicinity of the railroad commission that the towns are extremely dilatory in regard to this matter. The law says that they shall make regulations "from time to time," but did not say when they should first begin.

The petition of the Wellesley selectmen is rendered the more interesting because the Boston & Worcester runs through the town. The selectmen have decided on the following regulations, and ask the board to approve the same:

"No whistles shall be operated on street cars within the limits of the town of Wellesley.

"Speed of cars on Washington and Central streets, Wellesley and Great Plain avenues, shall not exceed 12 miles an hour; on Worcester street, between the Newton line and Oakland street, where the street is properly lighted, not to exceed 25 miles an hour, where the street is not properly lighted not to exceed 20 miles an hour; between Oakland and Kingsbury streets not to exceed 12 miles an hour; between Kingsbury street and the Natick line, where street is properly lighted not to exceed 25 miles an hour, where street is not properly lighted not to exceed 20 miles an hour.

"All street cars shall come to a full stop before crossing another street railway at grade.

"At public and private crossings all cars shall slow down to a speed not exceeding six miles an hour.

"The rules issued June 16, 1903, by the board of railroad commissioners are appended to and made part of these regulations."

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money, for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price. In addition to this large discount he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty-cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist Chas C. Hearn, that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment, for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr. Howard's specific will cure. But if by any chance it should not, Chas. C. Hearn will return your money.

The specific is very pleasant to take, coming in the form of small granules, and there are sixty doses in every package. It is especially convenient when traveling, and no one should start on a journey without a bottle of this reliable medicine. 18-22-25-29

Flowers That Harm the Sick.

Botanists and others who have made a life study of flowers have recently discovered that the perfume of blossoms is often increased by growing them under colored glass. They state also that some plants are fragrant only at night and others only in the hot sunshine, that the season affects the odors and that some perfumes powerfully affect the human organization, sometimes giving rise to serious nervous troubles. Flowers of delicate perfume quiet the nerves of invalids, it is asserted, but the violet, lily of the valley and carnations are really harmful to the sick.

THE SEWER MYSTERY

Explained by Confession of Husband of the Murdered Woman

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 29.—Martin Ebelt was held last night for the grand jury for the murder of his wife, Augusta, whose body was found in a sewer on Sunday. He confessed freely and without the least tremor or fear. Ebelt was examined by the coroner and Chief of Police Foley and then was led to the morgue where lay the body of the murdered woman. Ebelt gazed upon the corpse with an indifferent air and admitted that it was that of his wife. In response to further questions, he suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, I did it."

After this admission he went on to say that he had been tired to death by her demands for money and had decided to get rid of her. A week before, he said, he had noted the break in the sewer pipe which he calculated would serve him to hide the body. He then prepared the way for the murder by telling his wife he had found a place for her to work and requested her to get ready and he would take her to the place.

On the way, he said, they quarrelled, and after choking her to death with his hands, he tied a shoestring around her neck and lowered the body into the sewer, expecting that it would be swept down into the sound. This confession was signed by the prisoner, who was then formally committed.

Sheriffs on Convicts' Tracks

Placerville, Cal., July 29.—Of the 13 convicts who escaped from the state penitentiary at Folsom 12 are still at large. Joe Murphy, who was serving a 14 years' sentence for robbery, was shot dead at Pilot hill. S. H. Gordon, the reported leader of the gang, who had been sentenced to 45 years for robbery, deserted his followers soon after they left the prison. The 11 outlaws who remain together are making for the Sierra Nevada mountains, closely pursued by sheriffs.

Turkey's New Minister of Marine

Constantinople, July 29.—Djelal Bey, minister of public instruction, has been promoted to the position of minister of marine, which was occupied for 23 years by Hassan Pasha, who died on Sunday. The latter was reputed to be the richest man in the Turkish empire. He was credited with the possession of state secrets, which, it is said, enabled him to commit acts which nobody else would have dared to contemplate.

Hedges Wanted Leave of Absence

Washington, July 29.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has held up the undrawn salary of Charles Hedges, the recently dismissed superintendent of the city delivery service, for the last week of his service, pending the settlement of his expense accounts. Hedges had asked for leave of absence for 16 days, to begin on the day of his leave, but Bristow would not grant leave.

Mr. Smith is one of Geneva's largest benefactors.

RECORD OF RELIANCE

Warranted Her Being Chosen to Defend the Cup

HER BEATING OF RIVALS

Make Her Appear to Be Limited by No Particular Brand of Weather—But One Simple Accident In Two Months of Racing by New Boat

Newport, R. I., July 29.—Sudden as was the determination arrived at by the challenge committee of the New York Yacht club, to hold no more trial races and designate Reliance at once as America's cup defender, it was by no means unexpected. What the decision would be had long been common knowledge, and the wonder was that its formal announcement was delayed so long. The week of racing, ended so abruptly after its first day, was known as the "official test," but as a matter of fact the three competing yachts had been under watchful official eyes ever since their first contest, May 21. The 19 races which succeeded have shown, by steady cumulative evidence, the superiority of Reliance over both Constitution and Columbia under nearly all conditions.

This superiority may be very briefly and simply stated. An expert might go into long and technical explanations concerning various details of the new yacht's construction, but in terms that any man may understand, she is better than her rivals, largely because of her great spread of sail, and what is more, her ability to stand up under them. Constitution also has a great spread of sail, but when the wind blows above the ordinary there is trouble ahead for her, and she does not quite make the showing one would expect. Columbia, on the other hand, has a smaller sail area, but her best work is done in a strong wind and heavy sea.

In contrast to both these boats, Reliance seems to be limited by no particular brand of weather. Of course, she does her best work in a fair sailing breeze and smooth sea; but she has beaten Constitution in what was almost a drifting match, and four times has sailed away from Columbia in a fairly stiff, heavy blow. She combines, in fact, what both the other boats lack, or, stated another way, what both have.

If there were any racing condition under which she has not been well tested it would be that of a long sea roll and a light breeze. Here her tendency to plunge might prove to her disadvantage, and a boat like Constitution, or possibly Shamrock III, which behaves well in bad water and uses every puff of wind, might walk away from her. This, however, is only guess work. Reliance's record for 18 races is satisfactory enough to warrant all the confidence that people place in her. Out of the whole she has won 15 victories, and of her three defeats, two races were given Constitution on time allowance and one Reliance did not finish on account of a broken topmast.

In passing, it may be added that this was the only accident to the new boat during the whole two months of racing—certainly a remarkable record in itself, and one that speaks volumes for her strength and endurance in every vital part. The first of her races, held at Glen Cove in uncertain and fickle winds, showed the committee what the new boat coud do under unfavorable racing conditions, such as are found so often at Sandy Hook. In the Newport contests, however, with the steady southwesterly breeze that a yachtsman is practically sure of finding off Brenton reef, the boat was given many opportunities of doing her best, and every time she more than came up to expectations. She was hardly able to sail without breaking a record.

It is announced that Columbia will go out of commission and will be laid up at City island. Constitution will be held in reserve and kept in perfect racing trim in case Reliance should meet with an accident.

Easy Victory For Ingomar

Highlands of Navesink, N. J., July 29.—In the Atlantic Yacht club's ocean race from Brenton's reef lightship, off Newport, R. I., to the Scotland lightship, off New York harbor, M. F. Plant's schooner yacht Ingomar finished first, turning the Scotland lightship at 6:45 o'clock last evening. The vessel's time over the course, which is a distance of 200 miles, was approximately 32 hours and 28 minutes, making an hourly average speed of almost nine knots. The two other vessels which started in the race, the Thistle and the Lasca, were not in sight when the Ingomar finished.

Clearing Out Policy Writers

THE DOVE OF PEACE

Has Settled Upon Far East and Will Remain Throughout the Winter

London, July 29.—The Daily Chronicle this morning, on the authority of a "usually well informed correspondent," hears that peace will certainly be preserved in the far east throughout the coming winter. The correspondent says that Russia has made important concessions to the United States and Japan, while Great Britain, which has conducted her negotiations on more sober lines, also has obtained her desires.

The Chronicle adds that an important Russian declaration will be issued shortly. Meanwhile, the paper says, it is significant that two British warships have just left Wei Hai Wei. "It is understood," says The Chronicle, "that the strained situation in the far east was discussed at a cabinet council in London last week and that present happy issues of the negotiations were announced at yesterday's council."

Pekin, July 29.—Ratifications of the Anglo-Chinese commercial treaty have been exchanged. This treaty was signed last September. It provides for the abolition of likin barriers, while native custom houses enumerated in the government records are retained. By the terms of the treaty a list of the custom houses, concerning whose number there is a great divergency of opinion, must be furnished to Great Britain.

Hawaiians Want Home Rule

Honolulu, July 29.—At the session of the home rule convention ex-Delegate Wilcox urged that congress be memoralized to grant Hawaiian independence. He also strongly favored the establishment of a government for the islands similar to that of Cuba. It is probable that a petition embodying the views expressed by Wilcox will be prepared for presentation to congress. Such an appeal would doubtless receive the signatures of many natives.

Russia Resumes Expulsions

DIFFERENCES BURIED

People's Party Factions Decide to Work Together

OPPOSED TO OLD PARTIES

Because of "Futility of Attempt to Secure Enactment of Truth" Through Them—Holding to Omaha Platform, Which Is Outlined For Uninformed

Denver, July 29.—Amalgamation into one party was effected by the two factions of the People's party in national conference. The following was reported by the committee on resolutions and was adopted:

"The manifest unrest which everywhere appears in the nation demonstrates the dissatisfaction of the American people with the present management of government and argues the necessity of the reform forces coming together in united action at the ballot box to obtain proper legislation whereby the right of the people to self government may be had for themselves and their posterity.

"Therefore, we, the populists of the United States, having this day at the city of Denver united forces with the distinct understanding that all past differences as to policy shall be and now are permanently settled, and experience having demonstrated the futility of any attempt to secure the enactment of our truth either through he Republican or Democratic parties, we believe the time is now at hand when the United People's party should declare itself emphatically opposed to any affiliation with either of these parties and unqualifiedly in favor of national political action.

"Our fundamental principles are known to all populists and are nowhere better stated than in that immortal document enunciated at Omaha July 4, 1898. However, for the benefit of the uninformed, we declare our unyielding adherence to the demands for (a) a money whether stamped on gold, silver or paper, to be coined and issued exclusively by the government and made a full legal tender for all debts, both public and private; (b) a system of transportation and the transmission of intelligence, owned by the public and operated by the government at the cost of service; (c) land for use rather than for speculation and abolition of alien ownership of land; (d) American ships for American foreign commerce without a cent of subsidy.

"And as an open door for all economic reforms we urge the rule of the people through the optional referendum and initiative and the recall of derelict officials.

"Confident in the justice of the principles here set forth, firmly confident that their triumph in government would be for the best interests of the people, we call upon the patriotic citizens of this country to join with us in bringing about their enactment into law. With these principles firmly established, equal justice would prevail, special privileges would be eliminated and ours would be, as patriots everywhere desire, a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

Dr. Gray has accepted the task and will devote his entire time during the coming fall and winter to this work.

FIVE SECONDS.

Sufficed to Sweep Surrounding Property Out of Existence—Noble Work of Rescue by Firemen—Militia Called Out to Aid Police—Accident Said to Have Been Caused by Workman Pouring Nitric Acid on Nitro-Glycerine by Mistake

Lowell, Mass., July 30.—Two small gunpowder magazines, situated in the very midst of the humble residences of 50 mill operatives, mostly of French extraction, exploded with a frightful concussion and the resultant wave of death cut off the lives of more than a score of human beings and injured more or less seriously nearly 50 others.

Half a dozen men who were loading kegs of powder from one of the magazines were blown to pieces, four boys 200 yards away were killed by the force of the explosion, and 14 frame houses within a radius of 400 yards went down as if they had been built of cards. Seven of these houses immediately caught fire, probably from the kitchen stoves, and were completely consumed. At least three persons were caught in the ruins and burned to death, while seven or eight others, who were rescued, died subsequently of their injuries.

It is estimated that 70 separate pieces of property, including those already mentioned, were destroyed, while the force of the explosion wrecked windows for five or six miles around, and its thunder could be heard distinctly more than 50 miles away.

The magazines were the property of the United States Cartridge company of this city, but were situated more than a mile away from the factory itself. Each was built of brick, being about 10 feet high with a rounded roof of corrugated iron. They were constructed 30 years ago, in what was then a broad, open field on the banks of the Concord river. During the last decade small wooden dwelling houses have gradually sprung up in the vicinity, crowding nearer and nearer, with fancied security, to the two innocent-looking little buildings until they almost completely surrounded them, except on the river side, the nearest house being scarcely 50 feet away. How any person could rest comfortably in such a neighborhood, and practically over two sleeping volcanoes, cannot easily be imagined.

Both magazines ordinarily contained two or three tons of gunpowder in tin kegs, each keg being about 18 inches high and a foot in diameter. The company has for some time been desirous of strengthening the floor of the magazine nearest the street, and eight men, three of them employes of the company, three expressmen and two carpenters, were sent down there yesterday with three large express teams to take out the powder and mend the floor. Two of the teams had been loaded, and the other was almost full when the explosion occurred.

To those who heard the crash it seemed as if there were two distinct explosions, with a continuous roar between them. There are, however, five holes in the ground, which seem to clearly indicate five explosions.

The entire catastrophe, however, occupied the space of scarcely five seconds, but in that time the surrounding property was swept as if a small Mt. Pelee had broken forth in its midst. Every house within 200 yards collapsed. Trees were blown down, the grass within 100 yards mowed as if by a lawnmower, while bricks from the two magazines were hurled far across the river and all over the neighborhood.

For several minutes afterwards the air was completely filled with smoke and dust, illuminated by the glare from the already burning houses. Those who survived dragged themselves to what seemed a place of safety, only to be recalled by the shrieks of those less fortunate.

The work of rescue at once began, but in many cases the flames had already gained full sway over the crumbling ruins, and despite the energetic efforts of those who were not seriously hurt several persons were consumed before the debris which covered them could be removed. The property is situated just over the Lowell line in Tewksbury, but the Lowell fire department at once responded and cared for the wounded. Before a stream of water was started from the engines the hose from all the wagons was flung to the ground and the bleeding bodies of the wounded were placed tenderly in the wagons and hurried to the hospital. Ambulances soon appeared on the scene and assisted the firemen, and all sorts of vehicles were pressed into the service. Nearly two score of persons were conveyed to the two hospitals within half an hour.

The thunder of the explosion shook the city and naturally drew a tremendous crowd to the scene of the catastrophe, badly hindering the work of caring for the wounded. The acting mayor of Lowell sent out a call for the militia to assist the local police. Three companies responded and soon had thrown a cordon of troops around the entire district and cleared the place of every one except those immediately engaged in quenching the flames and searching for other victims of the explosion.

When the firemen first arrived immediately after the explosion, confusion reigned. People were rushing about bleeding from many wounds, others were lying on the ground, frightfully mutilated, while the shrieks from frantic women and half-crazed men in their endeavor to regain their lost ones were agonizing in the extreme.

After the wounded had been cared for and the dead removed to undertaking rooms, the work of searching for fragmentary remains of the unfortunate victims was begun. A hundred yards away was found a boy's heart, not far off was the shoulder evidently of the same person, while bits of human flesh and small pieces of bone were picked up in all parts of the field, and carefully placed in baskets.

It was a long time before the actual cause of the explosion could be ascertained. It was thought at first that everyone within a radius of 50 feet of the magazines had been killed, but later it was found that Mr. Goodwin, the foreman of the men who were loading the powder on the teams, had survived, together with one of his assistants, Amadee Boulanger.

The latter was seen in the hospital. To a reporter he said that the men went down to the magazine nearest the street to fix the floor, and after the teams had been loaded with the powder which was in the magazine it was discovered that a can of nitro-glycerine which was stored in the magazine was leaking. Mr. Goodwin, the foreman, picked up what he thought was a jug of water, and began pouring it on the nitro-glycerine with the idea of diluting it and washing it up. As soon as the fluid from the jug struck the floor, he found that it was nitric acid. The floor at once began to smoke, and when the men saw it they rushed from the building, but had not gone 10 feet when the explosion occurred. Boulanger had a brick blown completely through his body. The explosion of the first magazine extended to the gunpowder in the three teams, and they in turn passed it on to the second magazine on the river-bank. Hence the five holes in the ground.

Most of the property which was destroyed consisted of small buildings constructed of wood, and at a comparatively small cost. The property loss will therefore be rather small. The selectmen of the town of Tewksbury think that $75,000 will cover the entire loss.

It is thought that town may possibly make an appeal for the relief of its unfortunate citizens, as more than 20 families were made homeless by the complete destruction of their habitations.

Weighel, a postal contractor, and the Fidelity Trust and Deposit company of Baltimore, for approximately $200,000, which the postoffice department has been compelled to expend above the amount of a contract for carrying the mails in wagons in New York city. George G. Travis, who was awarded the contract, to fill the unexpired term of a month less than two years, will begin the service Aug. 1.

—The aged Chinese dowager Empress has evidently made up her mind to live many years more. It is said that ten millions of dollars will be spent in November in the celebration of her 70th birthday. With China's present heavy indebtedness one is compelled to wonder how the Chinese officials are going to manage it.—Havana Post.

LAUNCH AUGUST 25.

Schooner W. L. Douglas at the Fore River.

A Big Steel Six Master.

Progress Reported on all the Vessels Building.

The date of the launching of the six-masted schooner William L. Douglas at the Fore River shipyard has been set for noon, August 25. This date was chosen because there will be especially high tides then, but the vessel will be ready for launching some days before that time. The timbers for the launching ways are being placed under the hull and the plating is almost completed.

Preparations are being made at the Fore River shipyard for the addition of 100 feet to the westerly end of the forge shop. This addition will be the same width and height as the present structure, and when completed will give room for a number of additional furnaces for heating large forgings, the limit of the capacity of the larger hammer not being reached at present. A brick coal pocket is also being built near the power house.

Work on the battleships New Jersey and Rhode Island is progressing rapidly at the Fore River shipyard. Between 25 and 30 tons of steel a day is being incorporated in each hull. The New Jersey's interior is a little in advance of the Rhode Island's though the latter's hull is farther advanced outside. The compartments of the New Jersey are receiving the water-test in succession.

Beside the contract work now on hand at the Fore River shipyard, which is employing an unusually large force of men, the machine shop is getting out a 10-inch shaft for the Stanley Manufacturing Company of Lawrence, and a number of forgings are to be made for the steam yacht Nushka which was injured recently in Narragansett bay by the breaking of the propeller shaft. The damaged parts will be sent to the yard and duplicates made.

The Fore River Ship & Engine Company has placed an order for 2,000,000 pounds of steel shapes for the frame and keel parts of the 16,000-ton battleship Vermont.

Progress on the Fall River line freight steamer now building at Fore River is so rapid that in a few days the stem and the stern post will be set, and the few remaining frames raised. All the principal side and bottom frames are up as far as the forward and after bulkheads and the main deck beams are in place.

The other United States vessel at the yard, the cruiser Des Moines, is approaching completion rapidly. The top masts have been set up and the standing rigging is practically all in place. The steam test of the boilers and pipes, made recently, was an unqualified success, the pressure of 325 pounds to the square inch being sustained without trouble. The government dock-trial, which will be a four-hour run at a steam pressure of about 90 pounds takes place this week.

A Forty-foot Channel.

The sum of $7,500 is available for dredging at the mouth of Sachem brook in Quincy bay at Norfolk Downs, so that the water will be at least three feet deep at mean low water. The channel will be forty feet wide. The Harbor and Land Commissioners will have the work done.

BOTH SERIOUS.

Simon Bennett and James Mullen May Not Recover.

The condition of Simon Bennett and James Mullens the two victims of the assault at Quincy woods last Sunday is most serious and grave doubts are entertained for their recovery. Mr. Bennett is suffering from pneumonia as the result of his fractured rib and is very sick. Mr. Mullens, who had a deep gash cut in his head, is also hovering between life and death, although he is conscious at times.

Wednesday after Riley had been arrested on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon he was taken to the City Hospital where he was fully identified by Mullens as the party who made the assault upon him.

It appears that several of the gang arrested did not give their own names but the names of respected people in East Cambridge who are very indignant at having been brought into the affair. It is now said that the gang did not come from East Cambridge as reported but from Cambridgeport.

On the Watch.

The Quincy Point district is overrun with peddlers and agents of all kinds, but since the appearance of the daylight burglar all pedlers are being given the cold shoulder.

This morning word was sent to Officer Burrell that a man answering the description of the mysterious man was about Quincy Point. Officers Burrell and Goodhue in citizen dress went to the scene and every peddler and agent found was overhauled and made to give an account of himself.

When the officers had satisfied themselves that their story was true they were permitted to go. Several of them, however, said that people seemed to be afraid of them and that their sales were small. No arrests were made.

TODAY'S COURT.

James P. Riley was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on Simon Bennett and James Mullen, at Quincy Woods. He was held in $5,000 until August 12 for hearing.

Edward Colligan was sent to the State farm for being a tramp.

—John Quincy Adams of Pennsylvania passed both physical and mental examinations to the naval academy, at Annapolis and was sworn in as a midshipman on Wednesday.

VERY SUCCESSFUL OPEN RACE.

The Calypso, Opitsah, Chance, Stay King and Thelma Get the Gun in Their Classes.

The one hundred and ninety-first race and the annual open regatta of the Quincy Yacht club was held Wednesday.

It was most successful in every way. A large number of yachts participated and there was plenty of wind. If anything, the wind was too strong. It came from the south-west and was puffy and squally. All of the yachts went away under reef and not a few double reefed. Mixups and mishaps were numerous.

The Alpha, Capt. Ezekiel Sargent, in class B of the handicap racers, was capsized when she had the second money well in hand. Her capsizing was due to the sheet getting caught in the block when she was jibbing. She went over easy and her crew, consisting of Mr. Sargent, City Engineer Hamilton Flood, Walter Sampson and Louis N. Chapman were given a ducking.

The launches Aleppo and Marjorie went to the rescue, the former taking the boys off and the latter with the assistance of the Veader launch towing the Alpha to the clubhouse. There she was righted and found to be undamaged.

The Argestes fouled a flag stake and had a hole punched in her and was also obliged to withdraw.

The Hustler had her main sail ripped at the start and withdrew. She was coming about when the boom flew up and the sail caught in the top lift.

The Early Dawn one of the twenty-five footers fouled the flag boat at the start. Her rudder was too small and the skipper could not steer her, so that she also withdrew.

The preparatory gun was sounded at 1.45 and the course numbers 2 and 4 displayed from the judges stand. Class 2 was for Classes D, E and Class A handicap, and course 4 for Class I and Class B handicap.

The first class got away at 1.50. There were but three starters, the Calypso, the Chewink III, and Early Dawn. The latter boat withdrew after fouling the flag boat, leaving the other flyers to fight it out alone.

The Chewink had the best of the race at the start, the Calypso having been handicapped by the Early Dawn fouling the flag boat. The Chewink gained very little on the first reach but gained more on the second leg. After turning the mark off Peddocks both went to starboard tack, and the Calypso begun to show what speed she had. When half of this leg had been sailed the Calypso had crossed her rival's bow, and she crossed the line with a lead of twenty-seven seconds.

On the second round the Chewink picked up a few seconds on the first leg and seemed to be overhauling the Calypso on the second leg. She passed her at Sheep Island and had five seconds lead at the second turn. After turning the mark off Peddocks the Calypso again sailed wide and soon reduced the Chewink's lead. After they were inside the beacon both boats were put on the starboard tack. Then there was a series of short hitches by both boats and as they bore down for the mark it was a grand fight. The Calypso crossed first and won the race by 18 seconds.

In Class E there were but two starters, Opitsah V and Chief, and they crossed in that order. They sailed in this order during the race.

There was a great deal of interest in Class I, the 18 foot class and there were fourteen starters. They made a pretty sight as they went away toward Sheep island.

The Chance was the first to cross and was closely followed by the Gertrude with the Yo-San third. The two leaders had it hot to the first mark where the Chance led by five seconds, Miss Modesty being third. All set spinakers and came flying before the wind. The Gertrude sailed wide of the course, which allowed the Chance to again take first place.

The time of the leaders at the first round was;

Chance	2	39	16
Gertrude	2	39	38
Miss Modesty	2	40	59
Question	2	41	13

The second leg did not materially change the relative positions of the fleet. After turning the mark for the windward leg the Gertrude began to cut the Chance lead, the Chance rounded the mark with a lead of 18 seconds with the Question third.

The Chance held her lead to the finish and crossed 28 seconds ahead of the Gertrude, and the Question was third.

In Class A of the handicap classes there were eleven starters and they got away well together.

The Hustler tore her main sail and withdrew. The Stay King took the lead and held it during the race, but the Marvel took first money on corrected time, with Omeme second and Stay King third.

There were five starter in Class B of the handicap boats and the Thelma and Alpha were fighting it out for first place when the latter was capsized. The Thelma finished first.

Liberal prizes were offered as follows:

Class D,—25 footers,—$20 and $10.
Class E,—22 footers,—$20 and $10.
Class I,—18 footers,—$15 $10, $5, and $3.

Dumas the Prolific.

"As a rule, I do not begin a book until it is finished," the elder Dumas used often to say. And certainly the pace at which he put his works on paper seems to bear out the statement. No fewer than sixty volumes of his appeared within a single year, a record probably never equaled before or since.

On one occasion he made a wager of £100 that he would write the first volume of a new book he had planned within seventy-two hours, including the time for meals and sleep. The work was to occupy seventy-five large foolscap pages, each page containing forty-five lines and each line fifty letters—a total of 3,875 lines. He won the bet with ridiculous ease, accomplishing the task in six hours less than the specified time.

BAIL OF $5000.

Required of J. P. Riley for Sunday Assault.

Cases are Continued to August 12.

Valentine Balcolm Also Arraigned for Assault.

Another chapter in the mixup at Quincy woods last Sunday between the gang of picknickers from East Cambridge and the members of the Irish National Land League who were holding an outing at the same place, was enacted in the district court this morning before Judge Avery.

The first move was to arraign James P. Riley, one of the gang arrested Sunday, upon two new complaints. These charged him with assault with a dangerous weapon on Simon Bennett and James Mullens. City Solicitor Paul R. Blackmur represented the government and asked for a continuance until Aug. 12, as the two assaulted men are now in the Hospital. James F. Aylward, counsel for the defendants, offered no objection.

The court held Riley in $3000 on the Bennett case, and $2000 in the Mullens case.

In the cases of the ten men arrested at that time who were charged with disturbing the peace, the government also asked for a continuance until Aug. 12, which was granted.

John H. Dinegan, bondsman for Riley and James Brogan, bondsman for Valentine Balcolm in the disturbing the peace cases, surrendered their bail and other surety was asked.

A complaint was also issued against Valentine Balcolm charging him with an assault on Peter McConarty. This case was also continued until the same date.

Veterans.

Edward and Thomas Hogan of Fort Scott, Kansas, are visiting their brother Joseph Hogan of 27 Cottage street, Quincy. They came from Kansas to attend a dinner given at Young's hotel, Boston, by General Charles H. Taylor, to twenty-two survivors of Company F, thirty-eighth Massachusetts regiment, his old comrades.

The guest of honor was Edward Hogan of Fort Scott, Kansas, who travelled half way across the continent to be at the reunion. Comrade Hogan had not met the members of the company since it was mustered out in 1865. It was Hogan who helped General Taylor from the field at the battle of Port Hudson, June 14, 1863, where he was desperately wounded, and gave him the aid which probably saved his life.

The nestor of the company, George W. Robbins of Somerville, who is 88 years old, was as alert as the youngest member, who happened to be General Taylor himself, with only 57 cycles behind him. Most of the others were over 60.

The man who led the company in its many fights, Captain Taylor P. Rundlett of North Scituate, was at the reunion. He and each of the others had their chance to speak of the days of peril that all shared together.

It is 20 years since the company held such a reunion, and as the men had changed much since the war each comrade who could brought with him a photograph of himself taken about the time of his enlistment.

THE HOME LIFE.

Booker Washington an Interesting Speaker at Weymouth.

The High School grounds at Weymouth were the scene of the Old Home Week celebration on Wednesday, and many former residents were on hand to mingle in the festivities which were unusually interesting.

There was a concert by the Weymouth band, at 2 P. M. singing of patriotic airs by 200 children of the public schools, under the direction of A. J. Sidelinger, and addresses by Congressman Powers, Booker T. Washington and Charles J. Lincoln of Dorchester, a native of Weymouth.

John J. Loud, president of the Old Home Week committee, called the meeting to order and delivered an address of welcome. The school children then sang "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts," during which each one waved a small flag. Another selection later was "The Men of Harleck," and finally "America."

The noble address of Mr. Washington is worthy of a wide publication and is reproduced below:

"It is rather embarrassing to me, almost a stranger in your midst, and having been here only a few brief months each year, to be assigned so important a task in the celebration of Old Home Week. As I have witnessed during the past few days the deep interest manifested by the citizens of Weymouth and by those who have returned to visit their old homes, I have not been able to rid myself of the almost constant thought that I belong to a race which, until very recently, has not had opportunity to make homes for itself. In fact, the family life among a large proportion of my race is a comparatively new growth.

But in nothing in its history do I gain more encouragement for its future than in the strong desire and activity manifest on all hands for the securing of homes, and I predict that the years will not be many before my race in the southland will add to its other festivals that of the celebration of Old Home Week.

"In studying the history of the town of Weymouth, I find that my race is indebted to it for much; that perhaps no other community displayed a stronger interest in its freedom from bondage, and that we are not only indebted to you for the way in which you supported Garrison and Phillips and Douglass, but also for sending so many brave men to the front during the civil war to give their services in behalf of the Union and of freedom.

"In a large and more potent sense, my people in the South are indebted to these New England villages for the constant stream of strong, brave, conscientious and efficient teachers sent into the South after the war, who, in the midst of many difficulties, laid the foundations, in the schoolroom and in the church, for the elevation of a newly freed people. The school system which exists today among my people is largely modelled after that found in the New England villages.

"My race is again indebted to you very largely for the idea of a pure, intelligent home life, and for the ideas of cleanliness, beauty and culture, which are realized so universally in the homes of these typical New England villages, and which, through the efforts of the teachers you have sent into the South, have been transplanted and reproduced in scores of centres in the black belt. Also, in a large degree, we have gained our ideas of religious life from New England.

"At the present time, when many communities have injured their civilization by permitting riots and other forms of lawlessness to become supreme, it is a pleasing spectacle to note that in the New England villages the law is respected, and all men are secure at all times in the enjoyment of their life and property. Every New England village and home is an object lesson in civilization; each village and home is a teacher whose influence is far from being local. In California, in Colorado, in Alabama and Texas. I have found the influence of your civilization powerfully at work.

"I may add in this connection, that when the history of this country is written in the future by an unbiased pen, it will be made manifest that the generous part taken by churches of every denomination in the North in the educational and religious elevation of my race constitutes one of the brightest and rarest chapters. The constant generosity and profound interest displayed by the various missionary organizations with regard to the Negro form an example of unselfish patriotism which has not been duplicated in the history of the world, and my race has never been tardy in manifesting its gratitnde.

"In these days of difficulty and anxiety over many national questions there is a duty incumbent upon those who remain at home in these New England villages and upon those who have returned hither to refresh the memories and renew the vigor of their youth. We should always bear in mind that we make ourselves powerful, progressive and happy just in proportion as we resolve at all times and in all places—wherever our lot may be cast—to stand up strongly and bravely in defence of that which is right and just.

"You will make yourselves strong just in proportion as you resolve to protect in his rights, and encourage in his life, the weakest member of the community in which you live—regardless of race, color or nationality; in the same proportion as we lift up the weakest member of our community, in that same proportion shall we ourselves be strengthened.

"Let us resolve from this day forth to render the spirit of the community in which our influence is exerted more unselfish and more helpful in all that makes for a strong, spiritual, national life."

A TESTIMONIAL.

Granite City Club Give Mr. John Wood a Send-off.

John Wood, who leaves today for Portland, O., where he is to make his residence, was given an impromptu farewell reception Wednesday evening at the Granite City club.

During the evening Vice President Field called the members to order and requested their attention for a few minutes.

John P. Bainbridge then read an elaborate set of resolutions setting forth the high esteem in which John was held by the members and how much they regretted that he was to go from them and make his home in another state far away. It closed by wishing him all the good things possible in his new home, and that sometime he would again return to the fold.

At the conclusion of the reading of the resolutions he was presented with a box of "leaves" as a gentle reminder of the esteem in which he was held by all the members.

Mr. Wood was deeply touched by this expression of good will, and could hardly find words to express his thanks.

He then shook hands with all present and turned his back upon the rooms wherein he has spent many happy hours, not only to himself but to those with whom he came in contact.

A FREAK OF NATURE.

Wonderful Traveling Sand Hills That Are Found In Peru.

After passing another "town" of three or four mud huts we enter the famous desert of Islay, on which are what I consider the most remarkable natural curiosities to be seen on this globe, for we are now among hundreds—nay, thousands—of pure white sand crescents on a plateau of 4,500 feet above the level of the sea and fifty-four miles from the coast, where all else is of a dark red or chocolate color. Whence comes this sand and why always in a crescent shape? Professor Bailey told me that scientific men do not agree as to the reason why the sand always forms the same crescent shape, although it is generally believed that the whirling eddies hereabout are responsible. Some, however, argue that such is not the case since each of these crescents has an opening toward the northeast. At any rate, the inner circle is an almost perpendicular wall of the finest pure white sand, and from the upper edges the crescents slope gradually away on the outside. They average about twenty feet in height, the inner circle having a diameter of some fifty feet, although I have seen one at least a mile and a half in diameter, which was, however, not much higher than the average. These crescents move, it is estimated, at the rate of three inches every twenty-four hours, and when on the slow journey one comes near the railroad it becomes necessary to shovel the sand across the tracks, after which it travels on, forming new crescents or mingling with some of the others.—Ernest C. Rost in Harper's Magazine.

Dwellers In the Ice.

The Etahyans, or "arctic highlanders" of Ross, live in ice caves within the vast glacier cap which covers all northern Greenland. Theirs is perhaps the most wretched and isolated existence it is possible to conceive.

Their "dwellings" are always wet, owing to the melting of the ice walls and floor. For full six months of the year the darkness of the arctic night envelops them. The ice is around them, beneath them, above them. In nine cases out of ten if they venture abroad they breathe the frozen particles, and the sensation is akin to that which comes from inhaling the blast of a furnace.

Nevertheless they refuse to move farther south with the approach of winter, as do all the other Eskimo tribes. They take a sort of perverted pride in their loneliness as in their misery. "What matter," they say, "if we are cold and hungry? We are the last of all peoples. We dwell literally at the end of the world. To the north of us there is snow, there is ice, but there is no land, and there is nothing that lives, breathes or has independent movement."—Pearson's.

MANY MILLS CLOSE

Scarcity and High Price of Cotton Makes It Unprofitable to Run

Fall River, Mass., July 30.—The Hargraves and Parker mills, 190,000 spindles, have given notice that until further notice they will run but four days a week. This makes an idleness of over a million spindles in this city this week. The shutdown is due to high cotton and dull trade in fine and fancy cottons.

Middletown, Conn., July 30.—Two of the mills of the Russell Manufacturing company closed last night for an indefinite time, on account of the scarcity and the high price of cotton. About 300 hands are thrown out of work.

Webster, Mass., July 30.—Owing to inability to purchase cotton at reasonable prices the North Village works of S. Slater & Sons, incorporated, will curtail production by running only the first three days of the week. This means idleness for 90,000 spindles and 800 hands.

Children Had Powerful Explosive

New Haven, July 30.—Several children playing on Munson street found a bottle almost filled with a gray powder. A little girl of Mrs. Nellie Holmes was among the children. Mrs. Holmes went to bring her child into the house and she accidentally kicked the bottle, knocking some of the powder out on the ground. An explosion followed, which shattered her foot badly. The police searched for and found the bottle. It was examined by an expert and found to contain fulminate and in quantity sufficient to do terrible damage. The children who had the bottle say that they found it under the front steps of a private nursery.

Old Home Week Celebrations

Boston, July 30.—The third day of old home week was celebrated in many towns and cities of the commonwealth. Manchester held a notable series of exercises; Melrose had an out-door fete, despite the threatening weather; Deerfield combined her observance with the bi-centennial of the massacre of Bloody brook; and in many other places parades, speech-making, picnics, sports and fireworks stirred the hospitable and patriotic sentiments of the Massachusetts people. A novel feature of Weymouth's celebration was a display of the work of her local artists.

Confronted by Two Wives

Woonsocket, R. I., July 30.—George T. Bonar, overseer in the American Woolen company's Saranac mill at Waterford, was arrested in Blackstone, Mass., on a bigamy charge. Two women showed marriage certificates to Judge Putnam before the warrant was issued, each claiming to have been married to him. Bonar refused to talk to reporters, but said to a friend that when he married the second time he believed the first wife to be dead.

Much Damage by Cloudburst

Lenox, Mass., July 30.—A cloudburst caused quite extensive damage to the highways of this town last night. The water undermined the trolley road and the tracks of the New Haven so that it was necessary to transfer passengers. George Butler, a farmer, was prostrated by lightning, and when revived it was found that his tongue had been paralyzed.

Wrecked Off African Coast

Boston, July 30.—John S. Emery & Co. have received a cablegram from Dix Cove, coast of Africa, reporting that the bark Hiram Emery has been wrecked near that place and is a total loss. No details are given. The Emery was commanded by Captain Carlson of this city and was of 800 tons.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

To Be Brought to an End by Chinese Authorities

CRY OF SEDITION RAISED

Against Editors Who Were Guilty Only of Legitimate Criticism of Government and Urging Reforms—Endorsed by Empress Dowager

Pekin, July 30.—The Chinese who are advocating government reforms have been terrorized by the readoption of the old policy of repression, as instanced by the recent arrest at Shanghai of Chinese editors on charges of sedition. These arrests are interpreted here as indicating that the extreme conservatives are in the ascendancy and that the government has determined to suppress the comparative freedom of speech which has prevailed since the upheaval of 1900.

The names of 40 residents of Pekin, who are accused of liberal tendencies, were presented to the dowager empress yesterday by the reactionary officials, who recommended that they be severely punished. Those accused are considered guilty of only what in enlightened countries would be termed legitimate criticism of the government. This is said also to be true of the native journalists imprisoned at Shanghai, except in the case of two of them who suggested the assassination of the Manchurian rulers as a remedy for China's troubles.

All foreigners and progressive Chinese are deeply interested in the decision which the ministers will make on the question of turning over the native editors arrested at Shanghai to Chinese jurisdiction, and they express the hope that technicalities concerning the jurisdiction of the mixed court will be ignored, if necessary, and that the ministers will refuse, on the ground of humanity, to deliver prisoners to the Chinese for probable torture and execution, as happened in the case of the Chinese spies who were turned over to the Chinese officials at Shanghai during the Japanese war.

Chang Chi Tung, viceroy of Nankin, is credited with the leadership of the reactionary policy, advising such a course to the empress dowager, who willingly acquiesced. Prince Ching is reported to favor leniency.

At the examinations recently held at Pekin for the selection of officials many of the candidates departed from the usual custom of writing merely scholarly essays and submitted papers favoring improvements in the government. All who pursued this course were refused offices on the advice of Chang Chi Tung. The dowager empress is said to blame the reformers and the increasing freedom of speech for the disorders in the south, hence the repressive measures.

Chang Chi Tung has been considered one of the progressive viceroys. He was appointed on the joint ministry of education and was recently ordered to revise the constitution of the Pekin university and frame a uniform system for the provincial universities.

Taking In Sights of Ireland

Dublin, July 30.—The royal yacht Victoria and Albert, with King Edward and Queen Alexandra aboard, has arrived at Killary bay, on the west coast. Despite the inclement weather they landed on the Mayo side of the bay and afterwards proceeded in a motor car through the picturesque scenery of that portion of Ireland. Queen Alexandra has given the Earl of Dudley $2500 for distribution among the poorest people of Ireland.

Accountant Has a Heavy Job

New York, July 30.—The committee of three appointed by the stockholders of the American Ice company to investigate the affairs of that corporation, met last night and conferred with the expert accountant who has been going over the books of the company since last Monday. He reported to the committee that it would be some weeks before he could arrive at the true condition of affairs.

A Mother's Sad Burden

Rochester, July 30.—When a train pulled in from the east here a woman poorly clad stepped from a car, followed by four small children. In her arms she carried the body of a 6-months-old infant, which had died on the train of cholera infantum. The woman's name was Pearson and she was on the way from Boston to Chicago to meet her husband.

Shamrock Has Another Mainsail

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 30.—Shamrock III had only a sail-stretching trial yesterday. Another new mainsail, the fourth that she had worn since coming across the Atlantic, had been bent on and Captain Wringe wanted to get it "ironed out" before resuming racing.

Powder Works Blown Up

Baltimore, July 30.—A dispatch from New Freedom says the works of the Rockdale Powder company at Hoffmansville, blew up last night. It is reported that two persons were killed. Particulars are meagre.

A Parisian Duel

Paris, July 30.—A quarrel between Viscount Antoine de Contades and Tuoni Bey, second secretary of the Turkish embassy, resulted in a duel with swords in which Tuoni Bey was wounded in the arm.

PRIESTS LED RIOTERS

Religious Reformers Meet a Terrible Fate In a Persian City

London, July 30.—The Times this morning describes a serious religious riot in the city and province of Yezd, in central Persia, which lasted more than a fortnight and culminated at the end of June. The outbreak was directed against religious reformers called Babis. In the city for two days every Babi found was butchered by the rabble and the mutilated bodies were dragged through the streets, followed by exultant crowds.

Houses were looted, women beaten and killed, and finally the priestly leaders of the riot enjoined the populace to bring all the remaining Babis before them or the governor for judgment. The governor refused at first to yield to the threats of the mob, but his palace was surrounded by menacing men and the following day he consented. One Babi taken before him was blown from the mouth of a cannon and another was killed and dragged through the town. Order, it is reported, has been restored, but the Babis who escaped are in hiding.

Yezd has a population of 40,000. It is a walled city, surrounded by a deep trench and is famous for its bazaars. Among the population are many Parsees (fire worshippers), this being nearly the only place in Persia which they inhabit.

Driver Attacked by Strikers

New York, July 30.—The police reserves last night battled with a mob of striking drivers who began their fight for shorter hours against the New York Transfer company. The trouble was precipitated when one of the drivers who refused to join them made his appearance on Seventh avenue. The mob cut the traces from the horse, dumped the contents of the wagon into the gutter and then attacked the offending driver with knives. The driver beat his assailants off with the butt end of his whip. He had just been struck on the head with a brick when the reserves arrived.

Retrenchment In Philippines

Manila, July 30.—The United States Philippine commission has been conducting a detailed examination of the heads of the various departments of the government, forcing on them a general policy of retrenchment. As a result of the commission's action it is estimated that the budget for the half year will be reduced from $5,209,408 to $4,216,165 for the insular departments and for the city of Manila from $1,407,034 to $969,015, exclusive of permanent improvements, which will be made a separate charge.

Break In Philadelphia Strike

Philadelphia, July 30.—Eight hundred plush and velvet weavers, employed in the John and James Dobson's mill, at the falls of Schuylkill, who have been idle since the inauguration, nine weeks ago, of the textile strike in this city, reported for work without their demand for shorter hours or increased pay being granted. The firm, however, was compelled to send home 600 of the workers, because the 50 loomfixers employed at the mill have decided to remain out until the demands are granted.

No Enroachment

Havana, July 30.—Information in the possession of Minister Squiers to the effect that the Cuba and Eastern railroad, which is being constructed from Guantanamo bay northward, had broken ground within the area covered by the coaling stations treaty, caused the issuance of a peremptory order to stop the encroachment. The company's attorney says that the road will be constructed outside of the area to be used by the United States.

Mikado Friendly Toward Czar

St. Petersburg, July 30.—General Kuropatkin, minister of war, who has just returned from the Port Arthur conference, expresses himself as pleased with the results of his tour, and has communicated to the czar the opinion that although a fairly strong party in Japan wants war with Russia, the bulk of the nation is too sensible to yield to such "jingoism" and that the mikado is well disposed towards Russia.

Preferred Collision to Grounding

Washington, July 30.—The naval board which investigated the recent collision in Newport harbor between the torpedo boat Winslow and the yacht Clytie has reported to the navy department that the commander of the torpedo boat was obliged to choose between grounding his vessel or striking the Clytie. The government will pay the damages. No further proceedings are recommended.

Danville, Ills., July 30.—Eleven arrests have been made for participation in the lawless outbreak of Saturday night, when the jail was attacked in an effort to lynch James Wilson, a negro. A guard has been placed around the hospital where five men who were members of the mob are receiving treatment for their wounds.

Allowing El Valle 45 minutes from quarantine to her dock would make her time 4 days, 7 hours and 5 minutes, which is 3 hours and 55 minutes better than the best previous time.

BY THE COMMISSIONS

Policy of Vatican Will Continue to Be Directed

PERSONALITY OF THE POPE

Not the Chief Factor In Considering International and Internal Questions at the Vatican—All In Readiness For Beginning of Conclave

Rome, July 30.—Cardinal Logue, archbishop of Armagh, when asked what he thought of the objections frequently mentioned against Cardinal Gotti being elected pope on the ground that his being a member of a religious order would prevent him from dealing in a broad spirit with Catholic problems in America and Great Britain, said:

"It is absurd. Cardinal Gotti was formerly an internuncio and has mixed with the representatives of the various powers. He knows the prevailing conditions as well as anybody. Just because he is a Carmelite it does not follow that he is narrow-minded. Moreover, it is unreasonable to attribute too much weight to the personality of the new pope. International matters and internal policy are now almost invariably settled by commissions of cardinals who, certainly under the late Pope Leo, have directed their departments just as much as the heads of departments of a civil government do direct their departments. Whoever may be pope, it is not likely that he will attempt to make any changes in policy without being careful to take the advice of those commissions which have heretofore directed the policy of the Vatican.

During yesterday's meeting of the congregation the forms to be used in voting at the conclave were distributed among the cardinals in order that each might be able to learn how to employ his ballot. After the meeting Cardinal Oreglia requested the cardinals to visit their cells and be prepared at today's meeting to present any complaint which they might have.

Superstitious people here find an omen in the fact that Cardinal Rampolla drew apartments No. 58, which, in the book of the lottery, stands for pope, and, consequently, they come to the conclusion that fate has marked him to be the next pope.

Cardinal Agliardi has relinquished his cell, near the Sistine chapel, to Cardinal Cretoni, on account of the latter's illness. Over the door of each of the cells has been placed the coat of arms of the cardinal who is to occupy it. Should all the 62 cardinals now in Rome enter the conclave, it will be the most numerously attended in history. The conclave which elected Leo was attended by 61 cardinals. In the past popes have been elected by as low as nine.

The ecclesiastics who are to watch the sliding doors, which will be the only means of communication between the conclave and the outside world, have been requested to be present at the Vatican at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon to assume their duties.

Making Law a Little Lighter

Washington, July 30.—Taking note of the criticisms that have been passed at home and abroad on the application of the Chinese exclusion laws to the incoming of Chinese who are to set up the Chinese exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, the president has directed a considerable change in the existing rules which will make the entry of Chinese who are not attempting to evade the exclusion laws easy.

Had Unvoluntary Ducking

Mattituck, L. I., July 30.—Bishop Burgess of the Episcopal diocese of Long Island is a guest of Rev. W. A. Wasson at his cottage on Peconic bay. Wasson took the bishop out on the bay in a boat, when suddenly a violent gust of wind struck the boat and the craft capsized and both men were thrown into the water. A sailing party saw the accident and rescued the two men.

Locomotive Engineers' New Head

Meadville, Pa., July 30.—Grand Assistant Chief Engineer Youngson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who is lying at the point of death in Meadville city hospital, and who, by the recent sudden death of Chief Arthur, became the executive head of the brotherhood, has named M. H. Shay of Youngstown, O., as his successor to act in case of his death.

Counterfeiters Made Changes

Washington, July 30.—A new issue of the counterfeit United States (Buffalo) note, described in the press dispatches of Oct. 17, 1902, has been discovered. The check letter has been changed from "C" to "B" and the plate number from 57 to 52. Otherwise the notes are the same.

Posse Had Brush With Convicts

Folsom, Cal., July 30.—The sheriff's posse had a brush with the fugitive Folsom convicts on Greenwood creek and a number of shots were exchanged, but so far as can be learned nobody was shot. The convicts are supposed now to be working back in the direction of Coloma.

Lightning Kills Two Men

Pittsburg, July 30.—During an electrical storm a number of Italians took refuge in a building in Kelly street. The building was struck by lightning and two men were killed instantly. Three others were injured, but will recover.

"If Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia Specific Does not Cure You, it is Free." Says Chas. C. Hearn.

"Not only will I sell a 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's Dyspepsia specific at half price, but I will agree to refund the money if my customer is not satisfied with the remedy," said Chas. C. Hearn, the popular druggist, to a Ledger man. "In other words," he continued, "the specific is free if it does not cure."

Mr. Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles on his special half price introductory offer, and has a few left for those who are fortunate enough to call at his store before they are all gone. It is the regular 50 cent size, containing sixty doses, and is the one remedy for constipation and dyspepsia that makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia is not an ordinary tablet or powder that simply relieves. This remarkable discovery makes complete and permanent cures. Mrs. Charlotte W. Wallace of Manchester, N. H., writes: "A few years ago I had a very severe attack of dyspepsia. Water distressed me as much as food, and I could find no relief. My druggist recommended Dr. Howard's specific very highly. This great medicine gave me relief at once, and I have never had another attack of dyspepsia."

Many physicians prescribe Dr. Howard's specific, for they know it cures N. D. Ross, M. D., East Middlebury, Vt., writes: "I prescribed Dr. Howard's specific in the case of a patient who for years had been in the constant practice of taking some kind of a cathartic daily. I saw him a few days since, and he said: 'Dr. Howard's specific is a perfect God send; my bowels are moving every day.' I shall certainly prescribe Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia when indicated."

If you cannot go to Druggist Chas. C. Hearn's store today, send him your order by mail, as he has only a limited amount left to sell at this special half price. 20-23-27-30

FIRST REPORTS OF WEDNESDAY'S CATASTROPHE NOT EXAGGERATED.

NINETEEN KNOWN DEAD

Two Others May Die as Result of Explosion

MANY LOWELL FUNERALS

Property Loss Placed at Over $100,000, Falling Mostly Upon Laboring Men, Whose Insurance Covers Fire Only—Responsibility Not Placed

Lowell, Mass., July 31.—A long line of hearses moving slowly through the city streets was a pathetic reminder of Wednesday's terrible catastrophe at Wigginsville when an explosion of tons of nitro-glycerine, dynamite and gunpowder snuffed out nearly a score of lives in an instant, painfully injured more than double that number of persons, and scattered half a hundred buildings over a space of several acres.

The number of dead stands at 19, but it may be increased to 21 at any moment by the death of two of the 10 victims now in a hospital.

All day searchers prowled through the debris of the stricken section for any traces of possible unknown victims of the tragedy, but nothing was brought to light which would indicate that the number will be greater than already reported. A small bit of cloth, later identified as the lapel of a coat worn by one of the victims already known, and a human eye were the only gruesome reminders unearthed. Every portion of the ruined territory has been carefully covered.

Among the few persons allowed within the cordon of militia which has guarded the spot were a party of insurance adjusters investigating the liability of their companies. As a result of their investigations they state that the loss to them will be comparatively light, as only the loss resulting from fire will fall upon them. This will mean that many of the householders, nearly all of them laboring men of small means, will lose everything they had in the world. The official report of the Tewksbury selectmen places the loss in the immediate vicinity of the powder magazines at more than $100,000, and as this will fall largely upon the householders much hardship will result. Already the selectmen have taken steps to relieve the suffering, and in addition a number of army tents have been supplied by Adjutant General Dalton to be used as temporary shelters. A relief fund started by the local papers has reached the $2000 mark.

While no official investigation into the cause and responsibility for the tragedy has yet been begun, officials who will take a prominent part in the proceedings have made a careful inspection of the scene. After going over the ruins Judge Hadley of the local municipal court stated that he would insist upon the presence of the district attorney at the inquest which will soon be held. He added that the inquest would look into the matter in a most thorough way, and that no efforts would be spared to place the full responsibility.

There is much discussion among property owners and others regarding the institution of damage suits. It is expected that a large number of suits will be taken ultimately into court to recover damages on account of the property and personal injuries. No competent authority can be found to express an opinion as to who is responsible for the disaster, and in legal circles it is freely predicted that the problem will be a knotty one for the courts.

No one disturbed either the owners of the storehouses or the occupants of the cottages, and no one seemed to hold the least fear that such a frightful disaster as that of Wednesday was possible. The residents of the locality became accustomed to the magazine and gave no more attention to it apparently than they would to an icehouse. According to the statutes, the powder storage was too near the dwellings, and it is understood the inquiry will be extended to bring out the reasons for this alleged infringment of the laws.

The fire marshal's representative will first make an effort to determine the specific cause of the explosion. The accounts of the few surviving employes are at variance, and it is expected that no little difficulty will be encountered in the attempt to bring out the exact facts.

As previously stated the storehouses, two small brick buildings, were long on the ground before the dwellings were built. The land was syndicated by companies, parcelled up and sold to workingmen, mostly French Canadians, nearly 10 years ago. Little heed was ever given to their nearness to tons of explosive of the highest power.

Grand Jury's Report Ready

Washington, July 31.—Holmes Conrad and C. J. Bonaparte, special counsel to assist the government in the prosecutions growing out of the post-office investigation, were in conference here with Messrs. Bristow and Robb, familiarizing themselves with the situation. The federal grand jury is ready to report on the postal cases.

Dynamite Used on Street Car

Richmond, July 31.—A Broad street electric car was dynamited last night near the western limits of the city. It ran over the explosive and the latter tore a big hole in the ground and damaged the car to a considerable extent. There were 12 passengers on the car. None of these was hurt nor was either the motorman or the conductor injured.

Rich Strikes In Klondike

Victoria, B. C., July 31.—Steamer Cottage City brought down $300,000 in gold from Dawson and news of rich placer fields near the head waters of the Stikin. There is great excitement at White Horse caused by three men who came out of the new field for supplies with stories of the richness of the placer workings.

The Great Russian Strike

Baku, Russia, July 31.—The fires in the exessive petroleum works at Balakhamy, which are believed to have been of incendiary origin, are still raging. The military are unable to cope with the strikers. Matters are so threatening in Balakhamy district that foreigners are fleeing to the coast for safety.

Becoming Modernized

Washington, July 31.—King Menelik of Abyssinia is to have his own mint and it will be in full operation at his capital by the first of the coming year, according to a report from Consul Masterson at Aden. Hitherto King Menelik has had a limited silver coinage, the minting being done in France.

Littauer Exonerated

Crack Horses In Slow Race

Albany, July 31.—The much advertised trotting race between Major Delmar and The Abbot at Island park for a purse of $2500 was in all respects disappointing. It was about the slowest race of the day and the result was a foregone conclusion. Major Delmar won two straight heats and the race. There was very little money on The Abbot.

DOUBTED AT HAVANA

Report of a New Uprising In the Eastern Portion of Cuba

Havana, July 31.—The reported uprising in the province of Santiago has not been confirmed either by government or other reports. General Lora, commanding the rural guard of the eastern district, has telegraphed that he proceeded from Bayamo to Cauto del Paso and returned without seeing or hearing anything of the reported uprising. The mayor of Victoria de Las Tunas wires that diligent inquiries in the surrounding villages disclose no sign of revolutionists. The mayor says the existence of the band is doubted.

Secretary of the Interior Yero and other government officials now are inclined to believe that the Santiago authorities were misled by persistent rumors. General Rodriguez, commander-in-chief of the rural guard, who is in Havana, says he believes the stories originated through the confusion of reports of minor peaceful demonstrations with those concerning the four bandits who were recently killed.

Mounted rural guards to the number of 300 and many volunteers are now engaged in a search for the reported revolutionists in the provinces of Santiago and Puerto Principe. There are ample arms and ammunition at Santiago and at Puerto Principe for the arming of volunteers in the event that such a step is deemed necessary.

Effort to Foreclose on $16,000,000

Trenton, July 31.—A summons was served in Newark on James Smith, receiver for the United States Shipbuilding company, in proceedings instituted by the Mercantile Trust company of New York, to foreclose a $16,000,000 mortgage on the shipbuilding company's property. The suit is similar to a suit instituted in Maine and is designed to reach the company's property is that state. The summons is returnable Sept. 17.

Admits Attempted Bribery

Budapest, July 31.—Count Szapary, governor of Fiume, has resigned and will appear before the parliamentary commission which is to inquire into the charges that he furnished the money for the attempt to bribe Deputy Papp. Count Szapary declares his readiness to inform the commission that he alone was responsible for the attempt at bribery, having been led astray by political adventurers.

Fortune For Elevator Conductor

Chicago, July 31.—Walter W. CONCLAVE TO MEET TODAY.

BUSY IN THE VATICAN

Completing Preparations For Election of Pope

CAMPAIGNING ON OUTSIDE

Leo Enjoined Choice of New Head of Church According to Conscience of Cardinals—Latter Not Enthusiastic Over the Quarters Assigned Them

Rome, July 31.—The Vatican is the scene of great activity, both inside and outside. Within the last preparations are being made for the conclave and everything is in the utmost confusion. Workmen and servants are hurrying hither and thither, some hanging curtains, others putting in extra furniture, while porters are staggering along under immense trunks as if some of the cardinals expected to remain in their cells for months. Other cardinals sent practically nothing, as if they expected to be released within a day or two. In the Sistine chapel work went on throughout the night. The catafalque erected for the funeral services was pulled down and the galleries which were built for the accommodation of special personages were replaced by stalls for the cardinals. These are ranged on both sides and surmounted by canopies, all in violet, except that of the camerlengo, Cardinal Oreglia, which is green, as he is the only cardinal of the congregation who was created under the reign of Pius IX.

Outside the Vatican the work is of a different character, the quiet work of the supporters of the different candidates marshalling their strength for the contest which is to come when the doors of the conclave are closed. No one candidate stands out prominently as did Cardinal Pecci in the conclave of 1878, and the discussion here is not so much concerning the superior qualities of the candidates as of the strength with which they are credited.

Those who know the sacred college best consider it certain that Cardinal Rampolla will command the largest number of votes on the first ballot. His strength, it is believed, will be about 25 votes, but even with this large number to start with it is thought he will have difficulty in making headway. His strongest opponents now appear to be Cardinals Serafino Vannutelli, with about 12 votes; Gotti, with 10, and Oreglia with 8. The remainder of the votes will be scattered among the lesser candidates, more as marks of personal favor than with much idea of ultimate success. Forty-two votes (two-thirds) are necessary to elect.

The Italia says that the constitution left by Leo to the conclave has been distributed among the cardinals. According to this authority it was written in Latin in 1882 and recalls former constitutions and conclaves, especially that of Pius IX, and then complains of the condition of the holy see "under hostile domination" and recommends the quick election of a new pope. It advises the holding of the conclave in Rome unless the sacred college should not be in the enjoyment of full liberty, and recommends the maintenance of the rights of the pontiff. It enjoins the election of a new pope, not according to the personal preferences of the cardinals, but according to the dictation of their consciences, inspired only by the welfare of the church. On the cover of the pamphlet containing the of $400,000 annually. He insists that with most absolute secrecy and with the duty of returning it."

The cardinals have visited the cells which they are to occupy during the conclave and it cannot be said that they returned very enthusiastic over the idea of being confined in what are rightly termed "cells" which are without running water and necessary ventilation. Perhaps the most dissatisfied is Cardinal Vaszary, who, as primate of Hungary, is the wealthiest of the cardinals. He is credited with an income of $400,000 annually. He insists that he cannot eat with the others and must have his meals outside.

Experiments were made last night with the kitchens, the working of which is considered quite important, as about 500 people must be fed thrice daily for an indefinite period. The trials were completely successful. The revolving dumb waiters were also tested. They are characteristically Roman and consist of wheels with shelves on which things are laid and they are made to revolve, carrying things in or out, but making it quite impossible for persons on either side to see each other.

It is reported that Count Soderini, whose position at the Vatican is that of bearer of the "golden rose." The greatest gift which a pope can confer upon women of royal families, was entrusted by Leo with the task of writing the history of his pontificate, enjoining upon him the fact that he wished a true history and not a eulogy. Count Soderini was furnished with abundant documents for his work.

OUR PORTUGUESE FRIENDS

Doing All They Can to Promote Pleasure of American Officers

Lisbon, July 31.—Admiral Cotton and several officers of the United States European squadron, accompanied by United States Minister Bryan, paid a visit to the royal palace at Cintra, 14 miles from Lisbon. They were received by Prince Alfonso Henriques, the Duke of Oporto and brother of the king, who presented them to the queen, and the queen mother. They received a cordial reception.

Favored by superb weather the American officers continued making excursions into the country. The band of the Brooklyn played on the public square here and was loudly applauded by an enormous crowd of people.

The Portuguese newspapers are referring approvingly to the speech made by King Charles when he received Admiral Cotton and the other American officers. His majesty expressed himself in such sympathetic terms in regard to President Roosevelt and the people of the United States that Minister Bryan, Admiral Cotton and the other Americans present were really affected by the king's remarks. The papers are also mentioning gratefully the speech delivered by Admiral Cotton at the banquet, his eulogistic references to Portugal being much appreciated by the press.

To Enforce Pure Food Act

Washington, July 31.—The agricultural department yesterday took its first action under the amended pure food act by requesting authority from the treasury department to take samples and make a chemical analysis of certain food products shipped to this country from abroad. The permission asked for was granted and an official examination of these products will be made to determine whether their use is deleterious to health and also to determine whether their use is prohibited in the country of their origin. In either of these contingencies their entry and sale in this country will be prohibited.

Irish People Loyal to King

Galway, July 31.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra continued by motor yesterday their inspection of some of the wildest and most picturesque regions of Ireland. The start was made from the little town of Leenane on the shore of Killary bay. They drove off in motors through the beautiful lake and mountain country, everywhere greeted loyally by the inhabitants, many of whom journeyed leagues across the mountains to catch a sight of the royal party. The motor journey ended at Recess, where the party had luncheon and took a train for Galway.

Seventeen Rioters In Jail

Danville, Ills., July 31.—The police have arrested Winnifred Baker, who, it is said, led the mob in its attack on the jail last Saturday night. Baker was found working in a coal mine. Seventeen arrests have been made in all. More warrants are still out and by Saturday night the officers expect to have 25 members of the mob in jail. The city council last night passed resolutions commending Sheriff Whitlock for firing into the mob that attacked the jail.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Business men and others who think that they are business men must learn not to overwork a dollar any more than you would a horse. Three per cent. is a small load for it to draw; six, a safe one; when it pulls at 10 for you, it's likely working out west and you've got to watch to see that it doesn't buck. When it makes 20 you own a blame good critter or a mighty foolish one and you want to make dead sure which, but if it draws 100 it is playing the races or something just as hard on horses, and dollars and the first thing you know, you won't even have a carcass to haul to the glue factory.—Gloucester Times.

☞ We shouldn't be in too great a hurry to copy all of the socialistic schemes of the Australians which have been from time to time touted as such great successes. Already there has come a considerable reaction against them in Australia, and in the coming elections this question will form the chief issue, the protestants calling for action which shall protect industries from undue taxation, which is imposed upon them by the socialistic element in the government. It looks as if even the Australian Utopia was awakening from its dream.—Haverhill Gazette.

Miss Underwood.

Miss Annie E. Underwood passed away Thursday night about 10 o'clock. For many years, unknown to her friends, she must have been a great sufferer, but she was uncomplaining and cheerful. For years she has been connected with the Quincy post office and as dispatcher of mails and showed an aptitude which was appreciated. She was 60 years of age and resided at No. 48 Washington street near the Public Library.

Civil War Veteran.

Thomas Brady, a veteran of the Civil war, died at Atlantic Thursday evening. He served as a private in Co. F. 24th Mass. Vol. Infantry, from Nov. 7, 1861, being discharged Jan. 1866. Age 83 years. Burial services will be performed by the comrades of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy, Saturday, Aug. 1, at 10 A. M.

—When any public official has served one term well, he deserves another. In an interview with Senator Albert A. Brackett of the First Norfolk district of which Hyde Park is a part, we learn that he is desirous of again representing his district. We have yet to hear any reason given, why he should not have a second term. He has ably represented the district, and made a fine record. Return Senator Brackett with a handsome vote at the next election. Hyde Park Times.

THE COST OF SHIPS.

Why It Is More Here Than in Great Britain.

Alexander R. Smith in the current issue of the Maritime Review, says:

A great many people wonder why it is that it cost more to build a ship in the United States than it costs to build one in Great Britian, for instance, and a letter published in the London Times of July 7, over the name of "An Ulster Workingman," and written from Belfast, Ireland, where the great shipbuilding plant of the Harland & Wolff Company is located, may shed some light on the subject. Permit me to quote from the letter in question:

"A fellow workman and I were in receipt of 30 shillings per week each some time ago. My fellow-workman decided that he would abandon his country and the flag and go to a country that would do better for him, so he went to the United States of America and received 60 shillings per week right off. When he was in this country, at the wage of 30 shillings weekly, his expenditure was 27 shillings, which left 3 shillings of a margin; now, while his wages have increased by double the amount he received when in this country, he assures me that his expenditure has increased by only one-third, thus:

	In England.	In America.
Weekly receipts,	30s	60s
Weekly expenditure,	27s	36s
Margin of saving power,	3s	24s

"Or, in other words, for every shilling he used to save in this country, he can now save eight shillings in the States, besides having better educational facilities provided for his children."

There is much more of interest in the letter quoted, the writer asserting that British workmen "are without doubt, the finest and most intelligent men in the world," on which account he says "they should receive the highest wages," and he asks free-traders to tell him why British workmen don't receive the highest wages.

The wages the Ulsterman gets, however, explains why it is that Great Britian is able to build ships from 25 to 30 per cent. cheaper than this country can build them. Free-traders in the United States desire that the economic conditions prevailing in Great Britian, as explained by the "Ulster Workingman," shall obtain here, so that we can build ships here that will enable their owners to compete with British ships in the foreign carrying trade of the United States.

American protectionist, on the other hand, are willing that wages in the United States shall remain double those in Great Britain, but those interested in shipping ask that the protection which our industries enjoy upon the land shall be extended to our ships in the foreign trade, so that our workingmen, both on land and on sea, shall enjoy the American standard of wages.

This difference in the wages paid to American workingmen in our shipyards and on board our ships, as compared with the wages paid in British shipyards and on board British ships, fully explains the need in the United States of protection if American workingmen are to build and American citizens are to run the ships our foreign commerce employs.

If we wait for free trade and wages for American workingmen on a level with those paid to the "Ulster Workingman," instead of holding fast to the wages his former chum, now an American citizen receives, some day in the dim future we may build our our own ships. But the American people, and especially the American workingman, should know what it is that holds us back from building our own ships.

AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Will There Be an Exhibit of Quincy Granite?

The preliminary steps for a Quincy granite exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair should no longer be delayed. Mayor Bryant has received communications from the Board of Managers for Massachusetts which announce that it has opened headquarters at No. 6 Beacon street, Room 501, Boston.

It is the purpose of the board to give special attention to the interests of the proposed exhibitors. Any possible service in securing information or accommodations in any way will be cheerfully given. Correspondence is solicited.

Exhibitors, who can do so, will find it to their advantage to visit the office personally. Space at the Exposition is free. The applications of foreign exhibitors are unprecedented in number. To secure good locations attention should be given at once to the matter.

The authorities at Saint Louis are anxious to have the Manufacturers of New England in a prominent position, especially those of Massachusetts, and every inducement is offered to secure this end. This Board invites your cooperation in making a creditable display of the manufacturing industries of the State.

Chas. C. Hearn the popular druggist, who introduced in Quincy Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia with such wonderful success, says that he is hearing from druggists in other parts of the country, where the plan that he urged the Dr. Howard Co. to adopt (introducing their specific by selling at half price) had been followed.

Chas. C. Hearn showed the Ledger man a letter he recently received from C. S. Ingraham of Elmira, one of the best known druggists in New York state. Mr. Ingraham writes: "I have never undertaken the introduction of a new remedy with such satisfactory results, both to myself and to my trade. My average sales have been nearly a hundred bottles per week, and I have every reason to think this will be doubled within a short time.

"The specific gives remarkable results in the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia and constipation, and although every package has been sold under my personal guarantee to refund the money if it did not give satisfaction, not one has been returned."

"My experience has been a duplicate of my Elmira friend's," said Chas. C. Hearn, "except that I have had one customer ask for her money back, which I returned without any questions. However, I do not think she could have given the remedy a fair trial. I am still selling the specific at half price, a fifty cent bottle of sixty doses for 25 cents, although I do not know how long I shall be able to do so, and your readers had better take advantage of this chance before it is too late." 21-24-28-31

MILTON.

There was a very pleasant gathering at the East Milton Baptist church Monday evening when the young people gave their pastor a reception and wished him a pleasant trip abroad. The affair was in charge of the young men, each of whom was accompanied by a lady. There was vocal and instrumental music and refreshments.

Miss M. Fannie Kemp and Miss Elizabeth Hebbard go to York Beach, Me., Saturday.

The East Milton Congregational church will be closed during the month of August.

Rev. George E. Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Brown and Miss Pearl Beck sailed Tuesday on the Saxonia for a two months European trip.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clements have returned from a trip to New Hampshire.

Miss Alice Choat and Miss Marion McLeod returned Wednesday from a visit at Danville, N. H.

Rev. Mr. Brigham will supply the pulpit of the East Milton Baptist church during the absence of the pastor.

Rev. Charles Hutchinson of the Church of the Ascension, Boston, will preach at the Mission of Our Savior Sunday evening.

The sixth annual picnic of the Sunday school of the Mission of Our Savior will be held next Thursday at Nantasket.

Some Pygmy Animals.

A species of dwarf elephant used to live on the island of Malta and in various parts of Italy. Judging from the bones which remain, these animals, about the size of a large sheep, were somewhat numerous. A dwarf elephant is a rarity now and no longer forms a distinct species, but is considered rather a freak.

A very beautiful species of pygmy deer is found on the Sunda islands. These little creatures are not much larger than a cat, but have all the points of a "well bred" deer.

Among horses Shetland ponies are the pygmies. The ordinary musk of central Africa is a pygmy, or dwarf, of only about twenty inches in height at the shoulder and three feet in length.

Making Sure of Him.

"I think," said the thoughtful mother, "that you ought to object to young Brown paying so much attention to our daughter."

"Why?" demanded the thoughtless father. "He impresses me very favorably."

"That's just it," returned the thoughtful mother. "We must do something to make his ambitious mother think we regard ourselves a little above them socially if we are to make sure of him."

A Hint to Go.

"I have something to tell you before I go," he finally said.

"Is it a long story?" she hastily asked.

"No; it is a very short one."

"Then I think you will just have time," she sweetly said.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her References.

"I don't like these references," said the housewife.

"Well, mum," returned the applicant for a position, "I didn't write 'em, so it ain't my fault. If you don't like 'em jest you go to the people as gave 'em to me an' tell 'em so."—Chicago Post.

WILL QUINCY HEED LESSON?

Tons of Powder and Dynamite Stored at West Quincy.

Three Magazines Located Near Willard Street and Houses.

An Application for License is Pending But City Ordinances Do Not Regulate Storage.

There are so many places in West Quincy where large quantities of gunpowder and dynamite are kept, that the people have become somewhat alarmed since the catastrophe at Lowell.

There are in the vicinity of Willard street, near houses, at least three magazines, and all the quarry owners have more or less explosives about.

How many pounds can be kept in one place, and what are the regulations?

The City Council has adopted an ordinance concerning gunpowder and explosive compounds, but adds to the section (No. 16)—"Provided, that this section shall not apply to magazines for the storage of powder at quarries."

The three magazines above referred to near Willard street are used by R. J. Teasdale, J. E. Sprague and Harold L. Bond & Co. Whether these come under the exception may be a question, but there seems to be no limit to the amount of explosive which may be kept as will be seen by these extracts from the ordinance:

Sec. 16. No person shall keep or deposit any gunpowder within the city, unless it is well secured in tight casks or canisters;

Or keep or deposit more than fifty pounds of gunpowder in any shop, store or other building which is within the distance of twenty-five rods from any other building or wharves;

Or keep or deposit more than twenty-five pounds of gunpowder in any shop, store or other building which is within the distance of ten rods from any other building;

Or keep or deposit more than one pound of gunpowder in any shop, store or other building which is within ten rods of any other building, unless it is well secured in copper, tin or brass canisters, holding not exceeding five pounds each, and closely covered with copper, brass or tin covers.

Provided, That this section shall not apply to magazines for the storage of powder at quarries.

Sec. 17. The City Council may license persons to sell gunpowder. Every such license shall continue in force one year from the date thereof, unless sooner revoked, and shall set forth the name of the person licensed, and the building or place in the city where the business may be carried on, and shall have the provisions of this ordinance relating thereto printed thereon, and there shall be paid therefor to the Clerk for the use of the city the sum of one dollar. The City Clerk shall record all such licenses, and the place of business named therein shal not be changed without the consent of the City Council.

It will also be observed that the fee for licenses is but $1, and the penalty for violation of the city ordinances is but $20.

A license has not yet been granted to Harold L. Bond Co. but said firm has made an application and forwarded a check in payment. Their business is said to be almost wholly out of town. Should Quincy for $1 place its residents in danger to accommodate an outside firm?

The following order amending the City Ordinance is pending in the City Council. Perhaps it was waiting for just such a catastrophe as has occurred in Lowell. It was intoduced by Councilman Hughes April 27 and reads:

Ordered—That Ordinance, No. 12, an ordinance concerning licenses, be amended by adding to section 16 the following:

"No person shall keep or deposit any dynamite within the city to an amount exceeding one ton, nor without first obtaining from the City Council, a license for the same. Said dynamite shall be kept in a fire and bullet proof house and shall not be located within one thousand feet of any dwelling house."

LOWELL INVESTIGATION.

The investigation of the State Police at Lowell, says the Globe, has suggested the theory that loose powder grains on the floor of the cartridge company's section ignited, flamed, exploded and the concussion ignited the dynamite stored beyond the partition.

There was nothing about the condition of that dynamite, inaccessible to the powder men on the ground, that could have released its contracted energy unless the powder in the outer part of the storehouse had started to burn first.

Somebody and something ignited that loose powder on the floor of the cartridge company's two-thirds of the little brick building. This is what the state police have arrived at today.

To substantiate this theory, which is partly based upon Gen. Whitney's knowledge of explosives, it is understood, is the statement of Almeda Berlanger. Twice Mr. Berlanger has told to Globe reporters that Clarendon Goodwin the foreman, in his presence, poured something on the floor to clean it of dirt preparatory to laying the new boards on top of the old ones.

Today, lying on his cot at St. John's hospital, he reiterated the statement that Mr. Goodwin poured some liquid on the floor right among the white slippery streaks of nitroglycerin.

Fearing that he might be mistaken, the question was put several times, and in each instance Mr. Berlanger said some fluid was dropped on the blackened wood.

Soon after, according to his story, smoke was seen. No one denies that there were loose grains of powder in abundance on the floor.

Yet He Loved the Sea.

It is said that Bryan Waller Procter, known as Barry Cornwall, who wrote the well known poem—

I'm on the sea! I'm on the sea!
I am where I would ever be!—

was the very worst of sailors. When we read that he was so seasick that he could scarcely bear the sound of a human voice it becomes apparent that his wife's conduct during his affliction could scarcely have been reassuring.

As he lay on the deck of a channel boat, covered with shawls and a tarpaulin, she had the pleasing habit of humming a strain of his jovial sea song. The poet who loved the sea, but loved it best at a distance, had very little life just then, but what force he had was used in the entreaty:

"Don't, my dear! Oh, don't!"

Yet no doubt he loved the sea.

A Rude Awakening.

The Centerview (Mo.) Record tells of a young man who had been writing a girl in Minneapolis for three years, intending some day to ask her to marry him. The other day he received a letter and a picture from her. The letter announced that she had been married two years, and the picture was of her baby. "My husband and I have enjoyed your letters very much," she wrote, "but I guess you'd better stop writing now, as I have to spend all my time caring for the baby." The Record says the words the young man used after reading the letter would shock a field of oats.

Snakes.

Mr. Rolker in McClure's robs us of some misconceptions as to snakes. When a snake is decapitated it is dead. The tail will remain sensitive for some hours without reference to sundown. The rattlesnake does not suicide by biting itself. No snake is susceptible to the poison of its own kind. That the black snake will swallow its young in time of danger is true, and they are then digested, making the mother a cannibal of the worst sort.

FORGERY CHARGED.

But Asa W. Sullivan Will Be Tried for Larceny.

Inspector Mckay returned rom Bath, Me., Thursday, having in custody Asa W. Sullivan, who is wanted in Quincy for passing a forged order upon the Fore River Ship and Engine Co.

Until recently Sullivan has been employed at the works. Some days ago he called at the company's office and presented to the paymaster an order purporting to be signed by Alexander Stewart, authorizing the company to pay to Asa W. Sullivan the amount due Stewart. Upon this order the clerk in the paymaster's office handed over Stewarts pay, amounting to $22.75.

The matter, when found to be a forgery, was reported to Inspector McKay, who located Sullivan in Bath, Me.

Sullivan says that on the Saturday before the Fourth, Stewart and others were in his room drinking. He was going to the works to draw money for the other parties and he asked Stewart if he should draw his. Stewart said yes. He was not in condition to write the order so Sullivan wrote it and got the money.

As Stewart was drinking he did not give him the money as he thought it better to keep it for him. When he went away he had not returned the money and since that time he had spent it.

After hearing the evidence the court ordered the forgery case nol prossed, and ordered a new complaint issued for larceny.

BOOTH'S DRAWING POWERS.

The Famous Tragedian Was a Star Money Maker.

A retired theater manager said the other day: "It is not generally known that Edwin Booth received 50 per cent of the gross receipts of his performances while under the management of Messrs. Brooks & Dixon. There never was a star on the stage who could draw the money that Booth could to a theater. There were no spasms about his business. It was as steady as Gibraltar. We could bank on it. Out of their half of the receipts Brooks & Dixon paid the rent for theaters, paid the salaries of the company, the railroad and hotel bills and the advertising throughout the country and made big profits, which they shared with Horace McVicker, to whom Booth intrusted his affairs at the start and who afterward associated himself with Brooks & Dixon.

"Booth's agreement with Henry E. Abbey was this: After all expenses of every description were paid Booth got 85 per cent and Abbey 15. Booth lost a week in Philadelphia owing to the death of his wife. The company was put in there without him, and we had to indemnify the local manager. Our loss that week was $4,000. Deducting that, Abbey's profits on the season were $30,000. I do not know any star, save Booth, who ever commanded 50 per cent of the gross receipts."—New York Press.

Where Blood Tells.

It was in one of the farming districts of New England. The young folks had banded themselves together for monthly jollifications during the winter and were about to celebrate the last dance of the season as well as a couple of engagements which had resulted from the assemblies. Ben Hawkins, the local Paganini, and his Stradivarius had been engaged to lead them through the mazes of the country dance, and all were looking forward to the "time of their life."

But death inconsiderately claimed Mrs. Hawkins for his own on the afternoon of the eventful party. The young people gathered as arranged, but bemoaned the absence of Old Ben, and games were being substituted for the dancing when, lo, Hawkins and his fiddle appeared on the scene.

Great astonishment and many questions greeted the old man, but he calmly slipped his fiddle out of its green bag and as he meditatively rubbed the rosin on the bow said:

"Waal, yes; Maria's gone; died this afternoon. But I reckon 'tain't no sin for me to play for you tonight, seein' she wa'n't no blood relation."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ZERO AN ANCIENT TERM.

It Was In Use In Babylon Thirty-six Centuries Ago.

The term zero, which is used to designate a cipher and in meteorology the entire absence of heat in the atmosphere, was, according to a mathematical historian, Moritz Cantor, used by the Babylonians about the year 1700 B. C. This, however, is merely a supposition. It has not been definitely established that zero was in use any earlier than 400 A. D. About this time it was used in India, and several centuries later the Arabs began to employ it. Through the Arabs its use became known to Europeans during the twelfth century. It was not generally adopted in Europe until several centuries later, notwithstanding its great advantages. For a considerable time there were two parties among the European educators. One party, known as the algorists, favored the adoption of the Hindoo system of notation (falsely called Arabic), with its position values, while the other, known as the abacists, favored the Roman notation, without zero or position value.

The general adoption of the Hindoo system was greatly facilitated by the facts that it was explained in most of the calendars for more than a century, beginning with 1300, and that the mediæval universities frequently offered courses devoted to the use of this notation.—Chicago Tribune.

An American Waterloo.

Wellington at Waterloo and Meade at Gettysburg each held the highlands against his antagonist. Wellington on Mont Saint Jean and Meade on Cemetery Ridge had the birdseye view of the forces of attack. The English batteries on the plateau and the Union batteries on Cemetery Heights commanded alike the intervening undulations across which the charging columns must advance. Behind Mont Saint Jean, to conceal Wellington's movements from Napoleon's eyes, were the woodlands of Soignes. Behind Cemetery Ridge, to conceal Meade's movements from the field glasses of Lee, was a sharp declivity, a protecting and helpful depression. As the French under Napoleon at Waterloo, so the Confederates under Lee at Gettysburg held the weaker position. In both cases the assailants sought to expel their opponents from the stronger lines. I might add another resemblance in the results which followed. Waterloo decreed the destiny of France, of England, of Europe. Gettysburg, not so directly or immediately, but practically, decided the fate of the Confederacy.—General John B. Gordon in Scribner's.

Ladies Who Wore Knives.

In early English days knives were worn by Englishwomen in imitation of the anelace, a dagger carried at the girdle. Chaucer speaks of them in the prologue to his "Canterbury Tales:"

Hir knives were y-chaped not with brass,
But all with silver wrought, full clean and well.

In Ross church, Herefordshire, is a monument to a lady of the Ruddle family, temp. Henry VIII., who wears a purse and a knife. Brand tells us that knives were formerly part of the accouterments of a bride. In a play, temp. "Edward III.," occurs the passage:

In the "Archæologia" Mr. Douce, the antiquary, wrote a paper on this practice of wearing knives by European ladies in the sixteenth century, and an engraving shows a specimen of a case of these wedding knives, dated 1610, which are described as having amber handles and cases of purple velvet embroidered with gold.

SURPRISE TO ADMIRERS

Shamrock Three Gives an Unexpected Performance

FINE WORK TO WINDWARD

In the Roughest Sea She Has Encountered—Beats Shamrock I In Weather Which Was Considered Favorable to the Older Boat

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., July 31.—In a sea rougher than any she had ever raced in before, and with a wind which at times blew more than 12 knots an hour, Shamrock III experienced her most severe racing trial and acquitted herself as became a candidate for the America's cup. Her performance in eight miles of windward work, in which it was estimated that she beat her elder sister by six minutes, was a surprise even to some who have watched her for weeks. Hitherto Shamrock I has always given the challenger a rather close rub whenever the wind has been high, but she could not do it yesterday.

As Mr. Fife wanted to finish stretching the challenger's new mainsail no course was set when the fleet reached Sandy Hook lightship. Mr. Fife sent the two boats away for a close reach southeasterly in a wind from west by south and about 10 knots in velocity. They started at 11:08, Shamrock III hugging the lee quarter of the other boat. With sheets eased and every stitch of canvas drawing the boats went tearing off shore at a 12-knot pace and right into the teeth of a short, sharp sea.

They made a stirring spectacle, leaning until their leerails were hidden in froth, the water often up to their hatchways. Occasionally both would jump into a sharp sea, bury their bowsprits and send the lather spurting from under their bows for yards sidewise and in little clouds over their decks.

Once it looked to those on the Erin as though the challenger buried her whole bow clear to the mast in the brine. Even the tall-bowed Erin dipped her bowsprit once. Steadily the challenger drew away a few hundred yards and to leeward. It was dangerous racing in such rough water and after half an hour, when Shamrock III had a comfortable lead over Shamrock I, they went about and ran back to Sandy Hook lightship. They started nearly even for the run back.

At the turn of the lightship at 11:35 Shamrock III was 30 seconds ahead. Both boats were fairly flying. Hauling on the wind for a beat down the Jersey coast, Shamrock III surprised even her admirers. Shamrock I, which usually held close to the challenger in a smart wind, quickly dropped away to leeward, while the challenger gained minutes on her by outpointing her.

For an hour and seven minutes they worked to windward, the sea becoming smoother as they got in the lee of the land. At 1 p. m. when off Seabright, eight miles from Sandy Hook lightship, the challenger was six minutes ahead of the old boat and straight to windward of her. In a puff a split about two feet long occurred near the peak of the mainsail of Shamrock I and the trial was abandoned.

Chelsea, Mass., July 31.—Two negroes walking along Park street, Revere, saw a murder committed in a nearby field. Thomas Pope and Joseph Munroe, who were then not far from Woodlawn cemetery, saw two Italians in a duel with knives. Finally one ran and the other chased him and stabbed him. The negroes saw one of the men drop and the knife fall to the ground. Before they had reached the spot the other Italian had picked up the knife and had placed it in the hand of the fallen man and then had run. The body was taken in charge by Chief Oakes of the Revere police. In court Muntanio was arraigned on the charge of murder. He pleaded not guilty and was held without bail for a hearing.

The trivial matter of the dropping of the end of a plank while at work was the cause of the duel, which the men had agreed to fight to the death, quarter neither to be asked or granted.
